THE TRIAL

OF

KENITH MACKENZIE, Esq.

FOR THE

WILFUL MURDER

OF

KENITH MURRAY MACKENZIE,

At FORT MOREA, on the Coast of AFRICA,

On the FOURTH of AUGUST, 1782:

Who was TRIED by a Special Commission at

JUSTICE HALL, in the OLD BAILEY,

On FRIDAY the 10th of DECEMBER, 1784.

And received Sentence of Death.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR of SHORT-HAND.

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER I. PART I.

(Of the SESSIONS PAPER.)

MVSEVM BRITAN NICVM

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noster Row.

M DCC LXXXIV.

[PRICE NINE-PENCE.]

THE TRIAL

OF

BEFORE the Right Honourable RICHARD CLARKE, Esq; Lord Mayor of the City of London; the Honourable EDWARD WILLES, Esq; one of the Justice of his Majesty's Court of King's Bench; the Honourable Sir BEAUMONT HOTHAM, Knt. one of the Barons of his Majesty's Court of Exchequer; the Honourable JAMES ADAIR, Serjeant at Law, Recorder of the said City; JOHN WILLIAM ROSE, Esq; and others his Majesty's Justices of Oyer and Terminer of the City of London, and Justices of Gaol Delivery of Newgate, holden for the said City and County of Middlesex.

INDICTMENT.

1. KENITH MACKENZIE was indicted by the name of Kenith Mackenzie, late of London, Esquire, for that he, not having the fear of God before his eyes, but being moved and seduced by the instigation of the devil, on the 4th day of August, in the 22d year of his present Majesty's reign, with force and arms, at Fort Morea on the Coast of Africa, in parts beyond the seas, in and upon Kenith Murray Mackenzie, feloniously, wilfully, and of his malice aforethought did make an assault, and that he a certain great gun, called a cannon, value 20s. then and there charged with gunpowder and one iron ball, did discharge and shoot off, to, against, and upon the said Kenith Murray Mackenzie, and by the said iron ball so shot off and discharged from the said cannon as aforesaid, wilfully and of his malice aforethought, did strike, penetrate, and wound the said Kenith Murray Mackenzie, giving to him on the left side of the belly one mortal wound of the length of six inches and of the breadth of three inches, of which he then and there instantly died, and so the Jurors say, that he in manner and form aforesaid, then and there did kill and murder him the said Kenith Murray Mackenzie.

JURY.

James Hanmer, Robert Nash,
Richard Marsh, John Mackenzie,
William Hailstone, Daniel Stewart,
Samuel Piggot, John Monk,
John Bailey, Abraham Jackson,
Thomas Whieldon, John Brook.

Council for the Prosecution.

MR. ATTORNEY GENERAL,
MR. LEE,
MR. WILSON,
MR. FIELDING.

Attornies.

Messrs. CHAMBERLAYNE and WHITE.

Council for the Prisoner.

MR. SILVESTER, MR. ADAM.

Attorney.

HENRY DAGGE, Esq.

Mr.

Mr. Fielding opened the Indictment, and Mr. Attorney General opened the Case as follows:

May it please your Lordship, and you, Gentlemen of the Jury, the prisoner at the bar, Captain Kenith Mackenzie, as you have heard, stands indicted for the wilful murder of Kenith Murray Mackenzie, on the coast of Africa, without this realm; and, Gentlemen, in a case like this, it would very ill become me to do more (and I am sure I shall very sufficiently discharge my duty in doing that) than state to you the facts, without endeavouring to excite your passions, or aggravate the offence of the prisoner; I shall, therefore, content myself with stating those facts, but you are to make observations on the nature of the defence. The prisoner at the bar, who is a man of some rank, went out in the beginning of the year 1782, Captain of an independent company, in the Leander, to attack some of the Dutch settlements on the coast of Africa; the Leander returned, and he was left commander of this company, and also commander of a fort, called Fort Moreau, after he had been there some time, this unfortunate man, whose death was undoubtedly owing to the act of the prisoner, for some offence or other, was by him made prisoner, and fearing the consequence of the discipline that the prisoner might inflict, he did prevail on the sentry to let him escape to Black Town: the prisoner, as soon as he heard of it, was violently enraged, and immediately ordered the guns of the fort to be pointed towards that town, declaring that if they did not immediately restore the deceased, he would lay the town in ashes: by those threats, the inhabitants of that town, who were chiefly blacks, did the next morning bring back the deceased, and deliver him into the custody of Captain Mackenzie, who immediately ordered him to prepare for instant death; and very soon afterwards you will find had him brought out before the fort, and had his hands tied to a handspike, and in that situation he placed him to the mouth of a great gun, and then with a pistol which he held at the head of one of the men, he ordered him instantly to discharge the cannon, and blow the deceased into the air; the poor man, standing in this situation, turned round and said, Plunket, you will not kill me! yes, said he, I will, if my master bids me. Gentlemen, this very circumstance, in my opinion, shews a very great degree of power indeed, which this Gentleman must have over his garrison, who could see an execution performed in a manner totally unheard of in any country, and by a mode of military execution, if it is to be called so, which I trust never will be adopted. Gentlemen, this is all the observation I shall make; I shall proceed now only to state what evidence has appeared with respect to the prisoner's motives for this act; and it will appear to you, he himself has declared what passed on that occasion to one or two persons, to whom he made no scruple to declare what he had done, and the manner in which he had done it: and these declarations were made in terms which I am surprised that any man who ever thought proper to make such an example should ever use; for he did not think proper merely to relate the fact and the manner in which he made this example, and which, I suppose, he will alledge to day, he did by necessity, but in relating this transaction he said, he sent him out of the world eagle fashion! Gentlemen, what defence the prisoner can make, and in what manner he can justify so very violent and so very extraordinary an act on the life of his fellow subject, I cannot possibly imagine; I cannot at all figure to my mind any legal excuse for such an act as this; however, I will lay before you those facts which I have stated, and you will, I am sure, under my Lord's direction, pass that judgment on those facts, which is to decide the fate of the prisoner at the bar: you will determine whether or no it was maliciously done. Gentlemen, it is not at all necessary for me to add more on this case, I shall confine myself to the facts alone, and I doubt not but you will on this occasion

occasion to plead to your country, in the exercise of that humanity, which shall ever distinguish Britons.

The witnesses examined apart at the request of the Prisoner's Counsel.

Court. Is Plunket to be examined as a witness on either side?—Plunket is dead.

JOHN JONES sworn.

Examined by Mr. Lee.

Was you a passenger on board an Ordnance store-ship at any time on the coast of Africa?—I was.

Was you there at the time which gave rise to this prosecution?—Yes.

When was that?—I think the latter end of July.

In what year?——In the year 1782.

What part of the coast of Africa was you at?—From one end to the other; from Goree down to the Brazills, St. Thomas's, &c.

Where was you at the time that the unfortunate deceased was put to death?—At Fort Morea, to leeward of Cape Coast.

Relate to my Lord and the Jury what you know of that transaction, without my leading you particularly to it?—On Saturday the 8th of June 1782, I went passenger on board the Active, ordnance store-ship, Captain Malton, Commander; during the time that I was passenger on board the ship, I had no connections with ship duty, I frequently used to go on shore; on Sunday morning, I think it was the latter end of July, I went on shore in a canoe, the aforesaid canoe carried me to Fort Morea, where I was landed; on my landing I found the black people in a great confusion, I asked them the reason, and they told me that Captain Mackenzie had pointed two great guns to their town, and threatened to level it to the ground in case they did not deliver up his nephew.

That is not evidence what the people told you; did you see any guns at all?—I did.

Where were they pointed to?——I did not examine that. In the course of ten minutes or a quarter of an hour after that, I came to the fort, and I found that the deceased had been delivered up; I there saw the deceased Kibbith Murray Mackenzie.

Court. Did you know him?——I never saw him, to my knowledge before.

Mr. Lee. When you saw him, was he at liberty, or was he in custody?—In custody of soldiers.

What passed on this?——I went to Fort Morea, on my entrance to the fort I saw Captain Mackenzie coming out of a house in the fort, with a brace of pistols, one in each hand; they appeared to me like pistols; in a short time after that, two men followed him which I did not know; but they were white people, they were two soldiers that followed Captain Mackenzie.

Mr. Lee. You said you saw Captain Mackenzie come out, did you know him before?——Perfectly well, I saw him on board the Active, and at Cape Coast several times; I knew him through his coming at Lieutenant Clarke.

Who is that Gentleman?——That is the Gentleman [illegible] of a fort, command[illegible]

Proceed in your story?——I saw those two men, Captain Mackenzie halted a little, they passed him, and he followed them at some little distance, they went towards the platform; coming there, the deceased was put before the mouth of a gun.

Who put the deceased there?——A soldier, one of the two men that I saw in company with him there, there was one soldier and the deceased.

Was the deceased one of the two men that you saw passing by the prisoner now at the bar, while he was halting?——Yes; after the deceased was put before the mouth of a gun, his hands were extended out in this manner, to a handspike, or something of that sort.

Do you know how he came to be put in that posture, by whose directions; did you hear any orders given for that purpose by any person?——I was not near enough to hear any orders, I was crouded among the blacks, equally the same as a croud in England; the men who fixed him there withdrew drew and came abreaſt of the gun; I ſaw the flaſh, I heard the report, and that is all; ſhe came to the hole where the touch-hole is, with a match, or ſomething like that, and I ſaw the flaſh, heard the report, and ſaw nothing more of the deceaſed.

Pray, crouded as you was amongſt the blacks, could you ſee at the time that this report was made and the flaſh preceeded, that there was anybody ſtanding at the mouth of a gun?—It appeared to me like a man, there was a body at the muzzle of the gun at the time; I ſaw the flaſh, and heard the report.

Do you know where Captain Mackenzie, the priſoner, was at that time?——Abreaſt of the gun, on the oppoſite ſide of the man who fired the gun; one man ſtood on one ſide the gun, and he on the other.

How far might you be off at the time this happened?—About one hundred yards or better. I do not know whether it was or not, being confuſed I had not an opportunity of making any remarks; it was between the hours of ſeven and eight, it might be eight, quite day-light, I had no watch at that time.

Was it broad day-light?——Broad day-light.

As it now, I ſuppoſe?——Equally the ſame.

Do you recollect when this happened?—On Sunday morning, about the latter end of July I think; not having connections with any ſhip's duty, I ſeldom or ever looked at a log-book, therefore I did not know the day of the month.

You do not know, I ſuppoſe, what became of the body?—I do not.

Croſs-examined by Mr. Silveſter.

What are you?——I belong to the navy, ſix years.

What do you mean by that?—His Majeſty's ſervice, I was a Captain's ſteward.

How came you to go to Africa?—I was Captain's ſteward.

How came you juſt now to tell us, you went out as paſſenger, on board his Majeſty's ſhip Argo, how came you to leave your ſtation?——Becauſe the Captain and I had a diſpute.

Then the Captain turned you off, and you came home in another ſhip?——He gave me a certificate.

Have you that certificate about you?—No.

I thought not?——I can ſoon ſend for it; I was in that ſituation as Captain's ſteward, till Saturday the 8th of June; at which time the Captain gave me a certificate, and ſent me on board of his own ſhip, to the coaſt of Africa, the other ſhip was bound to England.

Where was this veſſel ſtationed?——In Cape Coaſt roads.

How far is that from Morea?——About three miles.

You made uſe of a very odd expreſſion for a ſeafaring man, the aforeſaid canoe, where did you learn that term aforeſaid?—I learned it at ſchool, I am not accompliſhed with abilities as well as you are.

Do you think that behaviour will get you any credit with the Jury, you muſt conſider, though that man is ſtanding here for his life, it may be your caſe ſometime or other?——I hope not.

Then do not be ſo flippant?——I will anſwer you every queſtion.

You know nobody at the fort?—Only Captain Mackenzie.

Then you did not know the number of men that were there?—No.

Nor the ſituation of the coaſt?——I was deprived of that, the ſituation that I ſaw the culprit blown from the mouth of a gun, it was not a time for me to make any remarks; I never had been there before to my knowledge, I never ſaw the deceaſed before.

Had you been ever on ſhore before?—I was always on ſhore at Sanſedeus, I lodged there; I never was at Morea before this day, I do not recollect the day of the month, I marked it down immediately, when I came on board, I made remarks immediately upon what I had ſeen; but the day of the month I never thought to look into.

But the hour, you remarked?——It was about eight.

How came you to recollect the hour so well, and not the day?—Having no connections with ship's duty, I never looked at the log board.

Then you only put down the hour, you did not put down the the day at all?——I know it was of a Sunday morning, because of the Catamoran.

I will give you a reason why you do not chuse to mention the day?——Why, Sir?

Because you will be contradicted by your own witnesses?—I never thought it would be brought to this pitch, I only inadvertently spoke of it.

Was not you the man that gave the information?—I was, I inadvertently spoke of it in Charles-street, Berkley-square.

Then how came you to make a remark of the business?——In order for the satisfaction of my friends in England, or any person I corresponded with.

What had your friends in England, to do with this man abroad?—They did not know the man abroad.

Mr. Jones, then you put it down by way of information for your friends particularly, of the transaction when you came to England?——That was my motive.

How came you to particularise the day and the hour?—I did, I had no other motive than I have told you, in order to acquaint my friends in England, and myself, of the cruelty that was acted, I did not know the day of the month, I am positive of that.

Have you got that paper, did you put it down at the time?——I will send for the book if you please, it is over at the Rose Tavern.

You never saw the man that was shot?——No.

You do not know his name of your own knowledge?——No, I never had any acquaintance with him in my life, to my knowledge.

The situation the garrison was in at that time, you do not know?—No.

You had never been at the fort before nor since?——No.

Only by meer accident and chance you went there?—Inadvertently, in order to see the fort.

What was your business on shore?—A party of pleasure.

What amongst the black people?—Yes.

No business at all, but merely to go amongst these black people?——I went on shore in order to see Fort Morea, I went from Cape Coast merely on a party of pleasure.

Then how came you to be every day on shore?—I was on shore every day at Cape Coast, but not at Fort Morea.

Did you know any person in the fort?—I knew those people that traded on board.

If you was ever there, you know, that is not an answer, did you know any of the white people?——I knew Captain Mackenzie, I knew another white man, that was assistant to Captain Mackenzie; he was pilot to take the Argo up to the Dutch Commander, he was the pilot stationed at the quarter deck, he was not at the Fort at that time, I knew nobody there but Captain Mackenzie.

Will you describe the situation the fort was in?——I cannot.

Can you describe the extent of it?——I cannot presume to say, I would not say beyond my oath on any occasion.

Can you describe the size of it?—Larger than this hall a great deal, it was a Dutch Fort taken by the Leander, Captain Shirley.

Did you keep a journal?—Not on board the Active, on board the Argo I kept a journal.

You went on shore that morning?——Yes, in a canoe, about six or a little after.

Never before?——No, Sir, it is not allowed.

Prisoner. You say you came from Captain Malton's ship in a canoe?——Yes.

At what o'clock do the canoes come off?

off?—Not before gun firing, a little after they come.

Is that at day light?—At day light.

At what o'clock is it day light in that country, at that time of the year?—It is day light at five in the morning, and before.

Did the canoe carry you back to Cape Coast, Sir?—Yes.

Whose canoe was it?—Captain Caffrey Badrou, a black fellow.

Did the canoes regularly come to your ship as a trading ship, to trade with them before day light, or at day light; or at what period did they come to trade?—At day light.

They always came by day light to trade?—Yes, always, and always after, till we came to Coast roads.

How many hours did it take to work down?—You know that as well as I do.

I am not asking you what I know, but what you know; what time do you imagine you could paddle down there?—In the course of thirty minutes.

How many paddles had the canoe?—I believe there were four, you know Caffrey Badrou very well, I think it was a four paddle canoe.

Be sure, Sir, that is not a trading canoe?—It is.

How many miles is it by sea?—Three.

Could you come three miles in that period?—In about twenty or thirty minutes at furthest; we always can paddle down, because it is always to leeward.

Was there a sentry at the fort at the fort?—I do not recollect seeing a sentinel.

Pray did you scale the walls then, Sir, or come through the walls?—I came through the door.

Are you positive there was no sentinel at the door?—There might, I did not perceive him; there was a vast number of people.

In a word, were the gates open or shut?—Open.

And you saw no sentry?—No.

Then I must be very deficient in my duty, did no person challenge you on your coming in?—No.

And yet you knew nobody in the fort?—Only Captain Mackenzie.

You did not speak to him?—No, I stood from the platform a hundred yards.

Court. Were the blacks in the fort, or on the outside?—In the fort, the platform goes round.

Where was you standing?—About a hundred yards distant from the platform, upon the entrance of the gate within.

You recollect seeing a number of black people there?—I do not recollect the number.

Prisoner. Stop! stop! Sir, I will make you recollect, are there not steps to the platform; truth must come out, my friend, for you never was there Mr. Jones, any more than his Lordship?—No man can dispute it.

What breadth was the platform?—I do not know, do I know the breath of this table now.

Prisoner. My Lord, the fort is a continued platform, there is no other ground to go upon, not an inch, so that he must have been on the platform, or else not at all in that fort.

Court. What do you take to be the breadth of the fort, in any one part?—I really cannot tell you.

Because you say you was at the entrance?—The blacks were along with me, and I was in the middle of them; so far as this, my attention was too great to see the man blown from the mouth of a gun, that I had not time.

Then you cannot speak to the distance you was off, when the cannon was fired?—I cannot, it might be a hundred yards, more or less, I cannot be positive.

Prisoner. My Lord, please to let the witness describe the fort to the Court, and the way of the entrance?—Much the same as Cape Coast.

Describe it to the Court?—Equally the same as Cape Coast; you go up steps, and then you turn to the left at Cape Coast, and in the room of that, at Morea you turn to the right.

Prisoner. When you enter the gate, what is the next object that ſtrikes your eye?—I do not recollect.

How can you poſſibly go over a draw bridge, and not recollect it; is there a draw-bridge in that fort?—There are a ſort of boards.

There is a draw-bridge there; I will refreſh your memory, young man?—You cannot refreſh my memory.

Another queſtion, I wiſh to confute this witneſs, my Lord, for he never was there; you croſs a draw-bridge, what is the next object you ſee?—As I have told my Lord before, never being in the fort but once, and ſeeing the object I ſaw, put before the mouth of a cannon, it was impoſſible for me to make any remarks on the fort.

You know there is a ſerjeant's room for a guard room, where there is always a guard to receive and turn out ſtrangers?—At this time you was afraid to truſt your ſoldiers with any amunition, therefore there could be no guard; and you kept the keys of the fort yourſelf.

Priſoner. Aye! and how came you in then?

Mr. Silveſter. How do you know that?—I undoubtedly muſt have ſeen ſoldiers, if there was a guard; I heard of it afterwards.

Mr. Attorney General. Who told you this, the natives?—Yes.

That is not evidence.

Priſoner. You ſay I had the key of the fort in my pocket?—I only go by hearſay, I have related all I knew, and the truth.

Court. You ſaid, you was in the inſide of the fort, and the blacks were at the outſide of the fort?——I was in the middle.

Were the blacks in the fort?——All the blacks.

I think you ſaid, nobody was in the fort but yourſelf, and the blacks were outſide the fort?—I never ſaid it, I did not ſay it, I was in the middle of the blacks as nigh as I can gueſs.

Was you in the fort, or out of the fort?—I was in the fort.

And were all the blacks in the fort a that time?—In the fort.

Court. Did you relate this fact to any perſon on board your ſhip?—As ſoon as I went on board I related it.

Is there any body here to whom you made that relation?—I ſaw a man at the Roſe-tavern, a little while ago, that can relate the ſame, he took a copy from my journal that I made at the time.

Priſoner. I wiſh the witneſs to account to this Honourable Court, how theſe three hundred blacks and himſelf came in, if I had the key in my pocket?

Court. How was it poſſible that you and the three hundred people got into the fort, at the time you ſay, if the priſoner had the key in his pocket? (to the priſoner) that is your queſtion?

Priſoner. It is my Lord, the ſenſe of it?—The reaſon is, theſe blacks ſurrendered this man, who is the deceaſed, that was the reaſon they were admitted into the fort.

JOHN MORTIMER ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Wilſon.

What are you?—I belonged to Captain Mackenzie's company; I enliſted with him for three years, during the war.

Was you with him on the coaſt of Africa?—Yes, I was with him till he was taken a priſoner.

Did you know Kenith Murray Mackenzie?——Yes.

Was he too on the coaſt of Africa?—Yes.

Where was it that Captain Mackenzie was with you and the ſoldiers at the fort?—At a place called Morea, five miles beyond Cape Coaſt; it is in the latitude of three.

Relate now what paſſed about Murray Mackenzie?—I heard that Captain Mackenzie and this Murray ſhould have ſome falling out, I do not know what it was, I was at Cape Coaſt, and Murray came up to Cape Coaſt; I cannot tell what time that was, I never thought to live a minute, I was very bad.

Court. Tell us what you know of your own knowledge; you ſay you was under Captain Mackenzie's command at Morea?—Yes.

And

And ſo was Murray?—Yes.

Were you and he in the fort of Morea together with Captain Mackenzie?—Yes.

When you came back to Morea, did you ſee any thing that paſſed between Murray and Captain Mackenzie?—Murray was there before me, and one morning he got out of the garriſon, I was then in the fort.

That was after your illneſs?—Yes.

Mr. Wilſon. Can you at all tell what time that was?—I cannot tell what month, or what day of the month it was.

Do you know any thing of your own knowledge what Captain Mackenzie did?—One Brooks let him out of the garriſon, and Captain Mackenzie came and called Brooks up to flog him; I heard Captain Mackenzie ſay to ſerjeant Andrews, go and fetch up that old raſcal, for I will flog him to death, by God.

You heard him ſay that?—I did: then Captain Mackenzie ordered the ſerjeant to write a paſs for me, and one William Coupland, and John Jarvis, to go and look after him.

—Did you in conſequence of this go and look after him?—We did; we did not go quite ſo far as we were ſent, or elſe we ſhould have been taken priſoners; we came back again to Captain Mackenzie, and told him we could not find Murray Mackenzie; we had orders to go to the Dutch mines, and Captain Crawford ſaid, here is a paſs; I never ſaw ſuch a thing in my life: we went to Cape Coaſt to look after him, we had orders to go further.

Is there a town near Morea, called the Black Town?—It is cloſe to it, we went through the town to go to Cape Coaſt, we did not ſearch for him there; we came back about three in the afternoon; the Captain ſaid, if you cannot find him, you muſt load two ſix-pounders, and fire into the town, meaning the Black town; the black men came round to the back of the fort, but many of them ran out of the town; the two ſix-pounders were fired into the town, ſome of the blacks came out, and others came to the back of the fort, to know the reaſon why they fired into the town.

Alderman Watſon. Were the guns ſhotted, or only with powder to give them notice?—They were loaded with ſhot, I ſaw the hole where one of the balls had hit, which knocked down a piece of a houſe; the blacks came to know the reaſon.

Was Murray Mackenzie afterwards brought from the town?—Next morning we heard a noiſe a little after five, coming to look about, we ſaw this man and a matter of three thouſand blacks, (if ever there was a man in the world) and the deceaſed was in the middle.

What day of the week was that?—It was on a Sunday morning.

Where was it that you ſaw him?—I ſaw him at the garriſon gate.

When you firſt ſaw him, where were the blacks?—They were without the fort, the gates were not opened at that time; then Captain Mackenzie hearing they had brought in the deceaſed, he got up, and went and looked at Murray Mackenzie; but before that, a little while after five, between five and ſix, Captain Mackenzie ordered the men to get two ſponges and one worm, or two worms and one ſponge, I am not quite ſure which, and to waſh them acroſs the embraſures.

Did you hear Captain Mackenzie order what was to be done with them?—Yes; preſently after that a gun was hauled in, we could not get any ropes for a good while, at laſt we cut the enſign halliards, what we hoiſt the colours with, we cut them into three parts, then I heard Captain Mackenzie tell Coupland to take a file of men, and go down and fetch Murray Mackenzie from the blacks; accordingly he went down with the file of men; I ſaw him brought back, and as he was coming paſt his own door where he uſed to lay, this man ſays, now do not let me go any further till I alter my ſtation, if I am going to be ſhot like a dog, let me be ſhot like a man; he pulled off his gentleman's coat, and put on a grenadier's coat, a private ſoldier's coat on; his coat that he had on was a ſort of a ſnuff-colour coat; he acted as Adjutant. Then he came upon the battlements; when he came there, Captain Mackenzie ſaw him, I was there, and I ſaw him then, I followed him up to the battlements for all I was not one of the file of men.

What paſſed then?—Then this Murray wanted to ſpeak to Captain Mackenzie; Captain Mackenzie ſaid no, I will not hear a word from you.

Mr. Baron Hotham. What was he, a private ſoldier?—He was one of the convicts, reſpites, came out of the Savoy; they came ironed two and two when we came board: Captain Mackenzie told him he would not hear a word from him, for he was a traitor to his King and country; accordingly ſays he to all the men that was there, ſoldiers, lay hold and do your duty; the men laid hold.

How many ſoldiers were there?—About thirty I think, to the beſt of my knowledge, I will not be punctual to a man or ſo; they laid hold of him, tie him up there, ſays he, to that gun.

Do you know who it was in particular that laid hold of him?—No, Sir, I do not, I ſtood by, and they laid hold of him; then Captain Mackenzie ſays again, why do not more of you lay hold of him; then I laid hold of him: then Captain Mackenzie told us to tie one of theſe ropes that were cut into three parts, round both his hands together, the other rope was to tie his right leg juſt above his knee, and another rope was tied round his left leg, accordingly he was ordered to ſit down upon the embraſure, that is where the gun goes level with the ſort, he could juſt get in to ſit down, when he ſat down his hands were ordered to be tied up to thoſe two ſponges and a worm, or the two worms and one ſponge, I cannot ſay which with certainty; then his leg was tied in two round turns round the muzzle of the gun, then the other leg was tied the ſame; when the legs were tied, Captain Mackenzie ſaid, has any of you got a night-cap? no, Sir, ſays they; then, ſays he, if none of you has got a night-cap, I will go and fetch my own; he went into the hall and fetched his own night-cap out, and, ſays he, here, ſoldiers, one of you put it on his head, I cannot rightly ſay who the ſoldier was; it was pulled over his eyes accordingly; juſt then Murray Mackenzie ſays to William Coupland, do, for God's ſake, ask for half an hour to ſay my prayers; accordingly Coupland went to Captain Mackenzie, and ſaid ſomething to him, I do not know what; I heard Captain Mackenzie anſwer Coupland, no, you raſcal, if any man ſpeaks a word in his favour, I will blow his brains out immediately, he had a piſtol in his hands at the time; accordingly he did grant him a little time to ſay his prayers, there was a little of the burial ſervice of the dead read to him, and the Lord's prayer; accordingly when he had read a little of the burial of the dead and the Lord's prayer, Captain Mackenzie ſays, he ſhall not have any more time, pull the Prayer Book away directly.

Court. How long might the reſpite laſt from the time Coupland applied for it?—To the beſt of my knowledge about twenty minutes, when the Prayer Book was pulled away: there was a man ſtood with a lighted ſtick, his name was John Plunket, he ſtood right facing, almoſt by the hall door, he ſtood away from the cannon, the deceaſed could not ſee him; there is a little bit of a corner runs in, and he ſtood behind that, and Captain Mackenzie ſaid, Plunket, when I give you the haufer, fire the gun; the haufer is a ſignal with the hand.

Count. How near was Captain Mackenzie at that time, was he the ſame ſide as Plunket, or the other ſide?——He was behind the gun like, it was more to the left of the gun.

Was Plunket to the right or to the left?—He was to the left of the gun, the priſoner ſtood almoſt oppoſite to Plunket; ſays Captain Mackenzie, pull the cap over his eyes, I could not tell who pulled the cap over his eyes, and the deceaſed ſays, O tyrant! tyrant! now you are going to have your will

will of me, what you wanted many a long day ago. Accordingly, the cap was pulled over the eyes of the deceased, and as the man was pulling the cap over his eyes, which took up some time, as his head was too big for the night-cap, the deceased said, O for God's sake have mercy upon me! Then he said, good bye to you all, comrades, and God bless you all. Another word, he said, remember the very last syllable I am going to speak, I only went down to the black fellow, the black man at the gate, to buy a little brandy; I went to his house and bought some, and drank it, and I went to the garden to take a walk after that, and not having been out of the garrison for so long a time, I sat down in the garden in such a place, and when I sat down, I fell fast asleep, when I awaked, it was just at duskish last night; when I awaked, I was coming up to the fort, and the blacks laid hold of me and took me into their huts, and kept me there all night, and brought me here in the morning: he said he had no more intent to desert than he had to eat and drink that minute; then Captain Mackenzie waved his hand, and Plunkett came with a lighted stick and touched the touch-hole, and the gun went off; there was no more to see of the man upon the battlements, he was blown over the wall: I had two round turns round the muzzle of the gun, and the other end was round his leg, and it took off the skin of my hand; he was killed, he was tore all to pieces, all but his head, and his shoulders, and legs, and he had his arms on him, I saw him after, there was his kidnies, and his liver and lights, as plain to be seen as ever any thing was in the world; I went down and looked at his remains, and the men went and picked up his remains and buried them.

Cross-examined by Mr. Adam.

When you got to Africa, after you was settled in those garrisons that were taken from the Dutch, were there still hostilities between you and the Dutch; were the Dutch in arms there?—Yes, Sir, we were put against our enemy, directly.

But after you had taken possession of the fort?——At St. George de la Mayne, we were three or four days there, that is seventeen miles from Morea, that was the nearest Dutch fort to us; it was twelve miles from Cape Coast, and seventeen miles from Morea.

Did you ever hear any conversation relative to the deceased's connection with this fort?—No, Sir.

How far is it by water from Morea to the nearest Dutch fort?—I do not know, it is that by land.

Does the land there make a bay?—You go round a parcel of rocks and things; I never heard Murray the deceased had any connection at those Dutch settlements.

I think you said, that the deceased Murray Mackenzie had been in the fort of Morea for some time after his return from Cape Coast?—Yes.

In what situation was he there for some time?—He was a sort of prisoner at large, he was not confined, only that he must not go out of the garrison gate.

Do you know why he was kept a prisoner at large?—No, Sir, only as I heard, and that will not do.

Had he any irons on him?——No, Sir.

Did he do any duty as a soldier?——No, Sir, or else he could not be a prisoner.

How long had he been so confined?—I cannot tell rightly, Sir, when he left Cape Coast, I was there about three weeks, he was there before me.

You mentioned I think the particular time of the morning of the day when he went out of the fort to go to the Black Town, at what time of the morning was it that he went out of the fort?—On Saturday morning, between six and seven.

And the sentinel let him pass?—Yes.

In consequence of the sentinel's letting him pass, he being a prisoner at large, Captain Mackenzie sent for the sentry?—Yes.

He afterwards had a pass made out to you and two other persons to go in search for Murray Mackenzie?——Yes.

At what time was this pass made out?—About a quarter after seven.

Tell the Court and Jury where the black man's house is, where he went to drink branay, as he said in his dying speech?—His name is Peter; I cannot tell you how far it is from the fort, it is not half a quarter of a mile.

Did you go immediately in search of him?—Yes the centry was a flogging when I went away.

When you went in search of him, was you obliged to pass by this black man's house?——Very near it, but we did not know he went there then.

It was very customary for the soldiers to go there and get drunk, it was a kind of a public house?——No, Sir, no such thing.

How far was the Black Town that was fired upon from the fort?——Close to the fort, or very near.

Did you enquire after Murray Mackenzie when you went to the Black Town?—As we went down through the town along to Cape Coast, if we met anybody we enquired; we asked one, and he said he had not seen a white man since he left Cape Coast, we went to Cape Coast, we were afraid of going further, for fear of being taken prisoners by the Dutch.

You said the deceased acted as Adjutant?——Yes, when he did act at all; he was Governor of Cormontee, he was one of the convicts, but was made a serjeant.

Who appointed him to the place of serjeant, who was the commanding officer at Morea?——Captain Mackenzie, he broke our serjeants and corporals, and made these serjeants and corporals over our heads, I had never done any thing in my life, that was very hard, I was only a private; Murray Mackenzie used to exercise us at Cape Coast once or twice before.

What had Mackenzie been convicted of?——I cannot say.

Court. That is nothing of one side or the other.

Did you ever hear any converfation between the deceased Murray Mackenzie and any of the other soldiers in the garrison?—I never did no otherwise than this, I was in a room that had a great hole in it, he being a gentleman, he thought himself above me, so if anybody came to him, I used to walk out and leave them to talk to themselves; a day or two after this man was shot, Captain Mackenzie came below, off from the battlements, there was a good many men of us below in the yard, he says, well, my men, if I had not done this, what I have done, you and all of us would have been dead long enough before this.

Mr. Adam. How many black men were there about at this time?——Plenty of men and women, a vast many, there is no counting them, it is impossible; there was no white men in the fort at the time the man was shot, that I saw or ever heard of, but Lieutenant Massie, and Captain Mackenzie, and the soldiers; and Lieutenant Massie died the next day.

Do you happen to know what his disease was?——No, he always used to be a mighty man for playing the flute, he was always at that from morning to night.

How long did you reside on the coast altogether?——About eighteen or nineteen months to the best of my knowledge.

What is the size of the Fort of Morea?—I cannot tell you how far it is round, I never measured it, it mounts about twenty guns, it is bigger than this place here, a good deal bigger than this place, about once and a half, or it may be twice, it is a very large place.

How many soldiers were there in this place when this man was shot?——About thirty who saw this affair done.

Jones called in again. Do you know Jones?

Jones. I know him perfectly well.

To Mortimer. Did you ever see that man on the coast of Africa?——Not to my knowledge, I might see him, but not to my knowledge, I never saw him in Fort Morea to my knowledge.

How many black men were there in Fort Morea the morning of this execution?——I do not know, I said about two, or three, or four, inside the fort, the outside gate is nothing at all, because there is a little bit of a place, a draw-bridge it has been, there might might be a good many black people I believe there.

Is it within any pales?—It is, but there is a little bolt to that gate, and then there are bars and bolts to the other great gates, there is about five ſteps to come into the place to the beſt of my knowledge.

Court to Jones. Where did you and the blacks ſtand at the time this man was blown away?——The inſide of the outer gate. I was in the entrance of the fort.

Mortimer. I will take my oath if he was there, that no man in the world could ſee any thing of the affair, becauſe there is all the garriſon all upon you, that you cannot without you come in ten or a dozen ſteps, or twenty ſteps; if he was inſide the ſecond gate, I am ſure he could not ſee any thing.

Court to Jones. Where was you?—I was in through two gateways.

Mr. Baron Hotham. That is the firſt time you have ſaid that, Mr. Jones.——I never was aſked before.

Mortimer. I am ſure he could not, without he came through three more doors, then he muſt go up twenty ſteps to come into the battlements, for you could not ſee in the yard; he could ſee if he came inſide the firſt gate, becauſe there it is all clear, and there is a draw-bridge, and you can loll upon the rail, and ſee the man tied to the gun, if he was only through the firſt little gate he might, but if he was through two, it is impoſſible for any body to ſee; if he ſtood through the firſt little gate, he might ſee him, and there might be ſome people there.

Mr. Silveſter. Could he ſee the houſe of the fort?——No, Sir, he could not ſee the hall, but there is a corner runs out, he might ſee the man there.

Could he ſee people walking backwards and forwards?——He might through one of the gun holes, if he was in the firſt gate, but not if he was in the ſecond; if he was through two gates he could not ſee any thing.

Mr. Adam to Mortimer. Were thoſe thirty or thirty-five that you mentioned, ſoldiers of Captain Mackenzie's company?—There were ſome of all ſorts, ſome from the Savoy, ſome from the hulks, and ſome volunteers; I never wronged or robbed a man of a halfpenny in my life, but there is two come home now that you might find out, two old offenders; they were all made alike when we got there.

Mr. Wilſon. What garriſon was there at Cape Coaſt Caſtle?——They have two and forty pounders now there, and eighteens: I cannot tell how many men there were in the garriſon, I cannot form any judgment on the ſubject.

What number of officers were there?—There was a good many officers there, but without officers and the doctors, and one thing or another, there might be about fifteen or near twenty.

Could there have been any danger or difficulty in keeping a man priſoner in Morea Caſtle?——When this man was ſhot, there were two men in the ſlave hole, but there was room for more than that, there was the men that let this man out of the garriſon, that was Brooks and Thomas Maples, one of theſe men that is come home now.

Mr. Adam. What ſort of place is the ſlave hole?——A place with iron bars, and a good ſtrong door, they might put on a ſentry, but if they did not it would be ſafe enough; in Cape Coaſt caſtle which was larger, you might keep a man any where.

Court. How many laſhes had Brooks that morning?——It was computed, but nobody could count them, that he had fifteen hundred at once.

Might not the priſoner have ſent the deceaſed to priſon at Cape Coaſt?——Yes.

Were there officers enough at Cape Coaſt to have held a Court Martial?——I do not know whether the Company could have done that, there was no King's officers there, but he might have been confined at the ſlave hole, or ſent to Cape Coaſt, and a white man to take care of him to guard him.

Mr. Silveſter. How is the ſlave hole ſaſ-toned?—There is one door when you are in, that shuts after you, then there is another door that has a common lock and key, then the other door has an iron bar, and padlock.

How many convicts had you at that time?——A good many.

There was no strong gaol?—There were iron bars across, as thick as your three fingers, on the outside door; there was a great iron bar came across and a padlock, the other had a padlock and staple, I do not doubt, but a person might open it, if they chose it on the outside.

Court. Those that were inside could not have opened the padlock?——No, we had between thirty and forty in all.

The greatest part of them were convicts?——There might be two convicts for one volunteer, I will not be sure.

Mr. Silvester to Jones. When you was on the coast, you, I suppose, made some inquiry about the matter; you heard, did not you, of the fort being delivered up by the Dutch?—I did, by some of the natives; I was not there at the time present.

Did not you hear, they meant to murder Captain Mackenzie?——I will tell you something about that, as I have already spoken, I am able to speak again, I did hear that.

Mr. Silvester. What do you know of any conspiracy?—I never heard, so help me God, only since I have been in England.

Mr. Silvester to Jones. At the time the man was flogged for letting Murray escape, was there any discovery made at that time?——A little after, before the man was executed, and after this man received his punishment.

What was the discovery?——I heard it by the natives, that Captain Mackenzie——

Mr. Attorney General. When did you hear it, and from whom?——I heard it the morning following, or in the course of two or three mornings after I was on board, a native told me.

Court. We certainly cannot hear any of this hearsay conversation, because you have Brooks here himself.

JOB COOPER sworn.

Prisoner. I wish Mortimer may retire till he is wanted again, as I may have some questions to ask.

Examined by Mr. Fielding.

Was you under the command of Captain Mackenzie, at fort Morea, on the coast of Africa?——Yes.

You remember the morning of the execution of Murray Mackenzie?—I do, I saw him brought and delivered to Captain Mackenzie.

How many blacks might accompany him?—About three hundred, there were a great number.

Did they get to the inside fort or only beyond the outward gate?——Beyond the outward gate, between the trees and the gate.

Where was it that Murray Mackenzie was delivered to the hands of the parties that went for him?——I did not see him.

Did you see Captain Mackenzie, when Murray Mackenzie first came within the inside gate?——I did not.

Where did you see Captain Mackenzie and the deceased first together?——Upon the battlements, the deceased was in a red coat then, and Captain Mackenzie ordered him to be tied up, and he begged leave for some time to say his prayers, and I was the man, that went and fetched a prayer book for him.

Court. Did he read himself, or did any body read to him?——Another man read to him.

Mr. Fielding. How long was he allowed to go through this ceremony?——About twenty minutes.

What followed?——Captain Mackenzie made a signal for the man to fire the gun, one John Plunkett fired the gun, he was standing in the hall door upon the steps, I saw the man tied up at the muzzle of the gun, I did not assist in helping him; I was between the hall door and the gun, where he was fired away from; I was not employed in any thing, I saw the carcase after it was shot away, I helped to gather it up, the legs and head were left, but the middle part of the body was tore to pieces.

the

Mr. Silveſter. Then the Captain at the time the gun was fired ſtood at the hall door?——Yes, upon the upper ſteps.

How far was that from the cannon?——Further than from you to me, I knew the man that was ſhot, I was very little in his company, I was not under his command.

Had you given any information to Captain Mackenzie of any tranſactions, or any plan formed by Mackenzie and the other convicts?——I did, Sir, in the garden I heard it, it was a couple of days before this affair happened; I was come out of the garden, it was a very hot day, I laid myſelf down on a mat, I was very ſick and poorly, and I heard Murray Mackenzie come out of his room door, and he ſaid now is the time, let us do him out and out.

Who was he then talking to?—He was talking to one ſerjeant Andrews, that was with him.

Was Andrews a convict?—Yes, I heard no more that I can recollect.

What did you underſtand by that?——I cannot tell what they meant by that, they had an expreſſion by doing out and out, they meant killing, but I was very uneaſy about it, I thought it my duty to tell the Captain.

What was the ſituation of the fort at that time, how many convicts and how many volunteers?——The greateſt number was the convicts, I cannot tell the number.

Do you know of your own knowledge of Murray Mackenzie having ſent his property to the Dutch fort?——I ſaw him ſend a bundle of clothes out of the fort by black men, I did not know where it was ſent to.

Had you heard of any other plan?—No, not that I can recollect, I heard ſeveral threatening words amongſt them, but I cannot recollect them, threatening words of doing us out and out, if we ſaid any thing, or any thing of that.

What do you mean?——To any one that offended them.

When you told the Captain of this converſation that you had overheard, did not you tell it him as if it applied to himſelf, as if they meant to deſtroy him?——I did, and I ſaid, Sir, I hope you will ſend us away, for I ſhould be very loth to have any misfortune happen amongſt us.

Was there any expectations of the Dutch, or did you expect any mutiny?——I cannot ſay I ever did, I was always ſick, and had the fever, I worked in the garden, I never took any notice of any body ſcarce.

Was there any danger, either of a mutiny or deſertion?——There was a great many of them deſerted, both convicts and volunteers.

If this man and others had deſerted, would not the fort have been in danger?—It certainly would, had it been an enemy's fort, but it was peaceable times, and we were pretty well united together.

Mr. Attorney General. Was not you examined on this buſineſs, with reſpect to what you knew as to this accuſation of Captain Mackenzie?——Yes.

Did you mention any one word of what you heard, at the time you was examined?—I never did mention it, becauſe I never was aſked.

Why did not you tell what you have now told, to the gentleman that examined you, for I never heard one word of it before?—I ſpeak nothing but the truth, I never was aſked that queſtion, I did not think of it at that time.

Had you forgot it?—I did not think there ever would be any more about it.

Why did not you ſpeak of it at that time?—I did not think of it at that time.

Had you forgot it?—No, I had not forgot it, but it was not in my thoughts.

Mr. Silveſter. Was you ever aſked the queſtion before I aſked it you?—We were examined at Cape Coaſt, and here.

Mr. Attorney General. And in neither of thoſe examinations, you did not mention one ſingle word of this converſation?—No, Sir, I did not.

What was your reaſon for not telling that as well as the reſt?—I do not know, I did not recollect it at that time.

When

When did you firſt recollect it?—I have conſidered of it, and peruſed it over ſince.

When was the firſt time after you had peruſed this in your mind, you told it to any body?---I cannot recollect the time.

Two or three days ago?---A long while ago.

Who have you mentioned it to?---I mentioned it to nobody, I told Mr. Monro of it ſeveral times, but I did not think it was material to mention.

PHILIP BROOKS ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Lee.

I was ſentinel at the gate of this Fort of Morea in Africa, I let Murray Mackenzie go out of the fort to ſpeak to a black man, to get him half a gallon of brandy.

Did he return the ſame day?——No, he never returned till he was brought back.

Did he promiſe you to return the ſame day?—He ſaid nothing to me, I ſaid to him, make you haſte in again, before Captain Mackenzie gets up; I was a priſoner when he was brought back, for letting him out of the fort; the Captain fired two ſix pounders upon the black people, I heard the gun fire, but I was in priſon, I ſaw no more.

What puniſhment had you?——It was computed by the men, that I got near fifteen hundred laſhes, I was tied up at ſeven bells, and was there till our bell ſtruck one, this was after I heard the guns fired at the Port.

This was before the death of Mackenzie?——Mackenzie was brought in the morning after, about ſix o clock, I was flogged the morning I let Mackenzie out.

Mr. Adam. You was ſentinel at the gate on the Saturday morning?—Yes.

At the time you let Murray Mackenzie out, did not you know he was a priſoner at large?—Yes, I knew he was, but I did not think he would run away, becauſe if he did, I expected to be puniſhed.

Did you ever hear any converſation among the ſoldiers about Captain Mackenzie?—I was not in the fort when he was confined, I was on board the brig, I never heard any thing at all, only what Thomas Mapley and me had a great deal of converſation together about.

Court. Did you hear any thing before Murray Mackenzie was ſhot?—No.

Mr. Adam. Did you follow the deceaſed after you let him out of the gate?—Yes, I gave another man my firelock, I took off the bayonet; ſays I, take hold of my firelock, Murray has run away, I could not find him, he went into the Black Town, and there he concealed himſelf.

Do you remember any paper that was ſigned by the ſoldiers, at any time relative to the execution of Murray Mackenzie?—Never at that time, there was a paper ſigned after Captain Mackenzie was taken priſoner, but what was in it I do not know.

Court. You received fifteen hundred laſhes; did not you at that time ſay you knew there was a conſpiracy to ſeize the Captain?—Never, but afterwards Captain Mackenzie aſked me the reaſon I let this man out, whether I had any bribe for it? I told him no, Sir; there was one Farthing Tyde, a little fellow, and Captain Mackenzie went to ſee this fellow, after Murray was dead.

But before he was ſhot?—I heard the convicts ſay, who were in a cluſter together, now is the time, let us huſtle him, now is the time, let us do him.

How long was this before Mackenzie was ſhot?——I cannot tell, it might be three weeks or a month before.

Did you tell the Captain of it before ſuch time as Mackenzie was ſhot?—No.

Did you tell any thing of this converſation which you heard three weeks before Mackenzie was ſhot?—I never ſaid, nor ever thought any thing about it.

When did you firſt diſcloſe this converſation?—This was after Mackenzie was ſhot, I did not tell him of it before.

Mr. Lee. When did you firſt tell the priſoner at the bar after this?—Some time after the death of Murray Mackenzie.

You

You never mentioned a word of it to the prisoner at the bar before?—No.

How long after his death?——About a month.

Did you ever mention it to any other man in the world, till long after the death of Murray Mackenzie?—No I did not.

Never at all?—No, I did not.

Was ever Captain Mackenzie disobeyed by the garrison in any orders he gave?—Never that I saw, they all obeyed him very well, though to be sure there were bad men among them.

Suppose Captain Mackenzie had ordered this man to be carried any where else, would there have been any difficulty?—I cannot tell what others would have done.

Mr. Adam. When you pursued the deceased, was your firelock loaded?—No, it was not, if it had I cannot swear whether I should have shot him or no, but I would have shot very near him if I could, I should have thought myself justified in so doing.

And you had a right to shoot at him as a deserter?—Yes.

Mr. Justice Willes. What without orders, that is new martial law.

Mr. Adam. Were there any officers in the garrison at that time, besides Captain Mackenzie?—Yes, there were officers belonging to the marines at this time, one Massey, he was very sick, there was no officer in the garrison besides Captain Mackenzie.

Mr. Alderman Watson. Pray tell me Brooks, when you heard this conversation amongst the group of convicts, "let us hustle him," was Murray Mackenzie amongst them?—He was to be sure.

Mr Attorney General to Cooper. Has any body called on you since you came to town here to give evidence?—No, I went to the public-house with some gentleman, I do not know who he was, there was me and my comrade, one Reeves, went with the gentleman to the public-house to drink.

What did he want with you?—We went to drink.

How long ago?—It was the day before yesterday.

Where did this gentleman find you?—I was at the White Horse.

You came up as a witness here against Captain Mackenzie, you was brought up by this Gentleman, Mr. White?—Yes.

Who was the Gentleman that called on you?

Mr. Silvester. I object to this?——I do not know his name, I have seen him backwards and forwards.

Mr. Attorney. Who did you meet with there?—Some Gentlemen I do not know, I went along with Coupland and Maples, and another Gentleman, they were at the White Horse with us, there was Mr. Monro.

Was that the time that you told them?——Yes, I did tell them, they asked me if I remembered it.

Oh! they did ask you?——Yes.

Mr. Silvester. You told Mr. Monro on the Coast?——Yes.

Court to Prisoner. Your council, except in point of law, are not allowed to speak for you, therefore now is the time for you to make your defence.

Prisoner. My Lords, I leave my defence intirely in the hands of my Council.

DANIEL MONRO sworn.

Examined by Mr. Silvester.

You have been at Cape Coast Castle I think?——Yes.

Do you know the Fort of Morea?—Yes.

Will you describe the kind of Fort?——Yes, Sir, I had the charge of it for upwards of seven weeks under Captain Mackenzie, there is a gate before you enter the main Fort, with a wooden bridge between this gate and the main Fort, when you go over the bridge, there is an arch goes into the yard, then there is a turning that goes up upon the battlements, and as near as I can remember, or guess, the garrison is about, but not quite, a hundred yards square.

Court. It does not rest upon Jones's evidence.

Mr. Silvester. Then we will not go into that.

Was you there ſoon after, or at the time the man was executed?—It was ſome time after.

Had you any converſation with a man of the name of Job Cooper?——I had, I was ſitting upon a gun looking over the wall, Job Cooper came to me.

Court. How ſoon after Mackenzie's execution was you at Morea?——It might be three, four, or five months, I cannot be ſure, Cooper came to me; Sir, ſays he, do you know what gun you are ſitting upon, No, ſays I, Cooper, what gun is it? Says he, this is the gun that Murray Mackenzie was executed from; ſo I ſays to him, well Cooper, what is that to me; I will be glad if you will tell me whether you think he deſerved it? Yes, deſerved it, yes he did, ſays he, and it is a pity he ſhould have lived ſo long as he has done, for if he had not been made an example of, what would have become of his Majeſty's Fort, and all that was in it; I ſaid, well Cooper, proceed, what did you hear? ſays he, I was laying down at the Serjeant's door upon a mat, and I heard Serjeant Murray, and Serjeant Andrews ſay, damn him, I have a brace of piſtols that will do for him; and if they will not do for him ſays the other, I have got a ſword.

I believe Andrews is dead ſince?—Yes, I ſaw him buried, ſays Cooper, I was frightened at the words, and I went and acquainted the Captain with it, and Captain Mackenzie, out of bodily fear, walked all night on the ramparts with a piſtol in his hand; the firſt time I ever ſaw Murray Mackenzie in diſgrace, was for deſerting, I ſaw him twice taken up for a deſerter.

Had the deceaſed Murray Mackenzie made any declarations in your preſence, concerning the priſoner?——Yes, when Governor Myles ordered him in irons at Cape Coaſt, that was five or ſix months before I was told he was executed.

Was Captain Mackenzie then commanding officer?—Yes, Governor Myles was Governor of Cape Coaſt Caſtle of the company's fort, Governor Myles and Governor Reeves were walking along the ſide of the garriſon, and Murray Mackenzie was walking on the other ſide, and Governor Myles called to him, and aſked him what he was doing there, what he wanted there; Murray made little reply, then the Governor ſent Corporal Reynolds, a militia man, to put him in irons, I ſaw him in irons, and I ſays to him, Murray, what in the name of God have you been about? ſays he, by God if Captain Mackenzie does not ſee me righted, I will have his life; he was diſcharged that evening.

Did you acquaint Captain Mackenzie that his life was threatened?——I had very little acquaintance with Captain Mackenzie then, I hardly ſpoke to him; when Murray deſerted the ſecond time, I ſaw three privates and a corporal take him by force out of Job Garden's houſe in the Black-Town; Captain Mackenzie then ſent word by the Corporal, that if ever he went into that town again, he would hang him like a raſcal as he was.

You know the ſlave hole at Morea Caſtle?——When I was there, it was a common deal wooden door, and a common padlock; any of the convicts that were there could open it with a nail; I have ſeen them do it, there was no other place of confinement there.

Were there any officers there?——There was not a king's officer that I knew on the coaſt, and there was only one Gentleman at Morea, one Lieutenant Maſſey, and he died that morning when I was there, there were twenty-one ſoldiers, freemen and convicts together.

Do you know the proportion between them?——I believe there were five or ſix freemen, and the reſt convicts.

Mr. Attorney General. Where was you at the time of the execution?——I was at Cape Coaſt.

Mr. Silveſter. How ſoon after might you go to Morea Fort?——About ſix or ſeven months, or thereabouts.

Mr. Attorney General. Call Job Cooper before this witneſs goes.

Mr. Attorney General. Are not you the gentleman that took Cooper to a public houſe?

house?—I saw him there, I happened to go there to meet Maples and Coupland, they were in one room, and Cooper and the rest of the men were in another room.

Did not you ask him then, whether he recollected this conversation that passed between you and him?—I believe I did speak something of it, perhaps I did, that is about two days ago.

Do you mean to swear, that Cooper at that time told you that he heard him say he had got a brace of pistols, and if that would not do, the other had a sword?——I swear he did say so then, and I did not ask him the question two days ago, but I asked him if he remembered what he said at Morea, says he, I will tell you that when I come into Court.

Did not he tell you at the tine what you have now told, did he tell you any of the particulars?—He did not, he had not time, because I was in a hurry, I could not stop to speak to him.

Did not you go to examine him on the part of Captain Mackenzie, to know what he could say?——I did not indeed, I went to look for Maples and Coupland, they were Captain Mackenzie's witnesses, and Cooper came and shook hands with me, and I said to him, do not you remember what passed at Morea; then I went back to the parlour, and we had some punch, Coupland, Maples, and us, there was no attorney with me.

Did nobody examine Cooper?——Not in the public house.

Was he examined any where else by this attorney?—I did not employ any attorney, nor I did not ask Cooper to go to any attorney, I saw him at Mr. Dagge's house. He said he would stand true to what he knew, I do not know what he said to Mr. Dagge.

Did not you remind him of it yourself?——I believe I did.

What did he say?—He told Mr. Dagge, as far as I can understand or remember, hat he would tell every thing he knew, he aid he would remember as far as he could, and tell every word, he said no more; the question about the sword and the pistol was mentioned to him, but I did not hear his answer.

Cross-examined by Mr. Silvester.

What are you?——A private trader to the coast of Africa when I am there.

Job Cooper called up again.

Mr. Lee. Now Cooper, the question I ask you is this, you know Mr. Monro, as you said: what was it you said to Mr. Monro that you overheard?—The words were these, Sir, I told him I was lying on a mat, and I came out of the door into the arch-way, and I heard him say these words, now is the time, I will do him out and out.

Did you ever say to him, that Murray said, damn him, I have a brace of pistols, and that Andrews said, if they will not do for him, I have a sword?——No, Sir, I never said such a word to Mr. Monro; to the best of my remembrance I never did.

Did you ever hear any such words delivered while you was at Morea?—Not about the pistols I did not, but I heard him say, damn him, I will do him out and out.

Did you ever hear Andrews say to Murray, or Murray to Andrews, I have a brace of pistols, and if they will not do for him, I have a sword, or any thing like that?—To the best of my knowledge I did not.

Then you could not tell him that you had heard them?—I never did tell him so, nor ever heard such words to the best of my knowledge.

It is but two days ago that you met him at this White Horse; had you any conversation there relative to these words, or any of them?——He said to me, do you remember what you said to me at Fort Morea; I said, yes, I do, vastly well.

But he says, you told him at Fort Morea, that Murray said, I have a brace of pistols, and if they will not do for him, I have a sword?——I do not recollect ever saying any thing about them.

Are not you quite sure that you never heard heard any such thing?—I never heard any such thing about the pistols, but I heard the other words.

Mr. Silvester. Did you see Mr. Monro at Morea Fort?——Yes.

Do you mean to say that you remember every thing that was said?——My memory is really so bad, I have had the fever in my head; what I told him then was truth, but it is so long since, that I cannot recollect, as my memory is so bad, but I could have told him then.

Mr. Silvester to Monro. Did these words pass at Morea that you have mentioned?—They did, upon the oath I have taken before God.

SERJEANT COUPLAND sworn.

Mr. Adam. You served at Fort Morea?——I did.

Did you know the deceased Murray Mackenzie?——I did.

Did you embark on board a ship at Portsmouth and elsewhere?——Yes.

Was you privy to any conspiracy formed by Murray?——I was not.

Was you at Fort Morea at the time Murray escaped?——I was, I was sent out after him to bring him back; I searched for him in Black Town, and there I could not find him.

Do you know the situation of the fort at that time, with respect to the number of men?——Some were well, and some were sick.

Had you overheard any conversation that tended to mutiny, or any thing else?—I did not.

Do you know any attempt of Murray Mackenzie of your own knowledge, or otherwise, against the life of the prisoner?—I heard of it after the execution.

Mr. Silvester. What was the opinion of the garrison with respect to the conduct of Captain Mackenzie?—They all approved of Captain Mackenzie's conduct in shooting the deceased.

How do you know that?—Because they signed a paper. (The paper shewn him.) There is my name at the top, it is my own hand writing, it was signed just before Captain Mackenzie went on board the Rotterdam; I was not there when it was signed.

Court. It can be of no evidence.

Was he in custody then?——He was.

Alderman Watson. When was Murray dismissed from his employment of Adjutant?——Before his deserting, he never acted afterwards.

Court. You see at this time he was under a sort of an arrest, he was a prisoner at large.

Prisoner. After his first desertion he was sent to Fort Cormantine, but he deserted three times in the whole.

THOMAS MAPLES sworn.

Examined by Mr. Silvester.

I was Adjutant at Fort Morea, I knew Murray Mackenzie, I lived in the same room with Serjeant Murray, and he wished many times to desert and go to the mines, and wanted me and most of the people to go with him; the mines is a Dutch fort: he frequently asked me to go with him, he said there was a gentleman at Cape Coast that would give us an exceeding good character, and I should go there as a writer.

Court. How long was this before his being shot?——It was before his second desertion.

Did you hear him make any declarations when he was a prisoner at large?——Yes, after he deserted from Cormantine, he came up to Cape Coast, Captain Mackenzie frequently told him to go back to his fort, he would not, he had lodgings in Cape Coast Town, and I went several times to tell him to go down to Morea, he would not go; Captain Mackenzie ordered me and four men to take him down a prisoner, I took him down, and I heard him say he would destroy the prisoner at the bar, he said so at Morea, in the same room I lived in.

How long was this declaration before he was shot?——Two or three days.

Had he made any other declaration in regard gard of delivering up the fort or any thing? ——He wanted every man to desert out of the fort.

Did he say he wished or meant to destroy him?—He has frequently said he would destroy Captain Mackenzie if he could conveniently.

What other declarations did you hear him make; had he made any propositions to go to the Dutch settlement?——Yes, Sir, he had, he had taken all his clothes out of his chest, and given them to the black man that came in and out of the fort, he was to take them to a Dutch settlement; I have heard him apply to Andrews who is dead, and many a time he has desired me to acquaint the men, to let them know that he wished to go, and he would do something for them there.

Mr. Attorney General. How did you go there?——As a soldier in the Mackarel transport; I was sent there one of the convicts.

How long after you had heard this attempt to get away, and this conversation, was it you told Captain Mackenzie?—A short time.

You did not acquaint Captain Mackenzie with it before the execution?——No.

How came you not to do that?—I persuaded this Murray not to desert, I begged of him not; I never acquainted Captain Mackenzie of it till after his execution.

You had once carried him down a prisoner?——Yes.

Could not you have carried him a prisoner to Cape Coast Castle that day, and delivered him up, if necessary?——I could have gone with him.

Mr. Silvester. Was any application made to you, or the rest of the Serjeants and the soldiers, about their opinion of the matter at the time?——Not that I recollect.

Court. You say he had sent all his clothes into Black Town, how do you know that?——Perfectly well, being in the same room with him; he sent all his clothes.

Then how came his regimentals to be left in his room immediately before his execution?

Mr. Attorney General. Was it his own coat or another man's coat he was shot in?—I was below, I was confined in the slave hole; I believe Captain Mackenzie thought I was going to desert; Murray Mackenzie went off the next morning.

Prisoner. I believe I can explain that in one word, the blacks who carried off Murray Mackenzie's clothes, and the other clothes, came and gave me the information of the mutiny and desertion, and if it had not been for that, I should not have been here to day.

GENERAL TOWNSEND sworn.

Mr. Silvester. How long have you known Captain Mackenzie, Sir?—About eight or nine months before he embarked for Africa, his character whilst under my command was very unexceptionable.

Court. Was he in the same regiment?—No, the company was raised a volunteer company by Captain Mackenzie, I drafted privates from his company, and incorporated them with other corps, his company was chiefly made out of those convicts, owing to the necessity of the service, and also another company; the ship remained in the river for some time, and he made me constant reports of the manner of his command, which were very much to my satisfaction; I have every reason to think he behaved himself very well on board, it was a very desperate crew as ever any man had to deal with.

CAPTAIN LANE sworn.

I have known Captain Mackenzie between six and eight months, he was under my immediate command at Chatham barracks, he was sent down by General Townsend's order to me, to be under my command, where he remained for six months; four months after that, I established that company, during which time he behaved perfectly well and satisfactorily to me, and doing his duty as an officer.

Were you on board this ſhip?——I was repeatedly, I ſaw his conduct there, I ſent him ſome powder and ball, in order to keep peace on board the ſhip.

Court. Was it not a very deſperate crew?——It was the opinion of every one of the officers, that there never was a more deſperate ſet of men: I often mentioned that to General Townſhend, that it was my opinion, they would not let Captain Mackenzie go to Africa, General Townſhend ordered a ſufficient number to complete the company that were to be embarked.

Mr. Silveſter. My Lord, after the evidence of General Townſhend and Captain Lane, I ſhall not trouble your Lordſhip with any more witneſſes.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, Kenith Mackenzie, Eſq; is indicted, for that he on the 4th of Auguſt, 1783, at Fort Morea, on the coaſt of Africa, in parts beyond the ſeas without England, feloniouſly made an aſſault on Kenith Murray Mackenzie, and by fixing him to the mouth of a cannon, was the cauſe of his death:—by the act of parliament of the 33d of Henry the Eighth, a power is given to try this offence by ſpecial Commiſſion: Gentlemen, in ſumming up the evidence to you, I ſhall omit the teſtimony of John Jones the firſt witneſs, for this reaſon, becauſe his evidence is excepted to on ſeveral particulars, and becauſe I did not admit them to prove he was not in in the fort, and becauſe the fact of ſhooting is proved beyond a doubt, by the reſt of the witneſſes; I ſhall begin with the evidence of the other witneſſes, the firſt is John Mortimer (Here the learned Judge ſummed up the evidence on both ſides, and then added) I think it is highly probable, that the account of Job Cooper, which he gave to the Captain two days before the fact was done, is true——

Priſoner. My Lord, there are two of the evidences againſt me, I think it was the 4th of September laſt, they came up from Portſmouth as they told me; they came into Newgate, into the room where I was, and frightened me, or attempted to frighten me, and bully me, and told me if I did not give them a hundred pounds apiece, there was Cooper for one, and Mortimer for another, I wiſh to tell what was really the caſe, at that time there was no perſon in the priſon, that I could immediately get to hear them; I was perfectly unhappy in my own mind, but upon going to my fellow priſoner, he ſays, good God, Captain Mackenzie, what wretches were thoſe that have been with you? he ſays, Almighty God! what people or evidences muſt they be, thus to expreſs themſelves; the words of Mortimer to me were, might he be damned, and might God damn him, if he did not hang me unleſs I gave him a hundred pounds: there is a gentleman preſent, a fellow priſoner, a man that was rather unfortunate, in falling into a matter of ſmall conſequence, which was attempting to go to France, to acquire a better fortune than he could in his own country, he overheard it; and another gentleman who happened to call in, one Mr. Philpot ſaw the men, and can ſwear to them; and in a word, it would be a ſatisfaction to this Court and the Jury, that thoſe two gentlemen ſhould be examined, they are both here.

Mr. Attorney General. Who are theſe witneſſes?

Priſoner. One of the Gentlemen is a clerk in the ſick and hurt office, I had not the moſt diſtant idea that my trial was cloſing, or I ſhould have mentioned it before.

Court. The moſt material evidence for you is Cooper.

HUMPHRY BUSTLE ſworn.

I am clerk in the ſick and wounded office, I have frequently viſited Captain Mackenzie the priſoner at the bar, and another perſon confined in Newgate, for two or three months paſt; one evening in particular, the beginning of Auguſt, as I was ſitting with Captain Mackenzie and Mr. Philpot, the ſervant came in and informed him, two perſons wanted to ſpeak to him, Mr. Philpot went out after Captain Mackenzie, in a little while after I went into the yard, to which the priſoners confined to the rooms in which Captain Mackenzie was have acceſs; I had taken a few turns in the yard and the Captain came out with men who ſoon parted with him; I perceived the priſoner rather agitated, I aſked him the reaſon.

What had you heard theſe two men ſay to the priſoner?——I did not hear them ſay any thing, I heard a noiſe as I was paſſing the Captain's window.

Priſoner. Mr. Philpot was the witneſs that heard them, this gentleman only can identify the people.

Mr. Silveſter. Can you identify the people?——I cannot ſay I can, I do not recollect the perſons of either of them.

FRANCIS PHILPOT ſworn.

Mr. Silveſter. Was you preſent with Mr. Mackenzie at any time when two men came to him?—Yes.

Do you know theſe two men?—I ſhould know one, I believe one was taller than the other, but my ſight is bad.

Look at that man Mortimer?——I believe this man was in yeſterday with Captain Mackenzie.

Jury to Mortimer. Was you the perſon yeſterday?—I will tell you what a Gentleman, Mr. Burke, told me, Captain Mackenzie wanted to ſpeak to me, he gave me his coat to put on, and I went in and ſpoke to him, but nothing more paſſed, ſo help me Jeſus God; I have never received any money, Captain Mackenzie ſays to me, he ſays, Mortimer, ſays he, I want you for one thing, how much money will do for you? ſays I, I ſhall not be off Captain Mackenzie, if you will give me a hundred pounds I will take it, but I will ſpeak the truth afterwards; Mr. Lutwyche took me to him, he lives at No. 14, in New Inn, and he lent me his great coat, I went in with my own cloaths, and put on that to come out.

Priſoner. I beg that Mr. Philpot may explain what words paſſed between that young man and me, I wiſh the truth to appear to this Court in the pureſt light.

Mr. Silveſter. Did you ſee that man with the ſpectacles on?—I do not know, I ſaw him yeſterday, he came in, and we had a pot of beer together, and Captain Mackenzie ſaid to Philpot, Sir, I ſhould like to ſpeak to Mortimer.

Mr. Philpot. Oh fie! fie! fie! he came in, and Captain Mackenzie had his barber a dreſſing his hair; he ſays Mortimer, well, how do they go on at Portſmouth? why, ſays he, I have led a hell of a life amongſt them, they do nothing but abuſe me, they ſay that I was no further than Farnham, I never let them know I came up to London: Captain Mackenzie never mentioned a word about giving him money in September; this man as I believe, I heard this man ſwear, that if he did not give him money, by God he would hang him; one Cooper was with him.

Priſoner. This is truth, or may I never have any exiſtence here, or hereafter.

Mortimer. Here I am, and as I am a ſinner to Almighty God, Sir, here I am; I told him if he gave it me, well and good, I ſaid I would ſpeak the truth; he ſaid he would get it up for me ready, and his brother was the man that came down to Portſmouth, and fetched me up, and an attorney, they made us both drunk, and brought us both here, and I never knew where I was, till they brought me into Newgate.

Mr. Attorney General. Where do you lodge?—At the White Horſe.

JOHN PATTEN ſworn.

I went to dreſs Captain Mackenzie's hair yeſterday morning, there was Mr. Philpot and the witneſs Mortimer in the room, this man here; Mr. Mackenzie aſked Mortimer how they went on, he ſaid he led a damned life amongſt them, that they thought he had a ſhare of the money.

Mr. Silveſter. Was any offer made by Captain Mackenzie?—No.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, if you believe Mortimer and Cooper, whoſe evidence is not materially impeached——

Priſoner. I beg to interfere, Mr. King and another man is here, and will prove that John Jones was on board a ſhip when he ſwore he was at Fort Morea.

Court.

Court. That is not material, as I do not ſum up his evidence.—You ſee, Gentlemen, Murray Mackenzie was executed by order of the priſoner, in the manner that has been deſcribed; therefore, of the fact of his giving directions for his execution there is no doubt: there will therefore, be two points for your conſideration, how far thoſe orders of Captain Mackenzie for the execution of Murray Mackenzie, can either be juſtified or excuſed; and I can find but two grounds upon which he can put his defence; either this was an execution agreeable to martial law, and therefore that he was juſtified; or that it was an execution neceſſary for his own defence, and for the protection of his Majeſty's fort and garriſon, that were there; as for the firſt part of the defence, I do not ſee it poſſible to juſtify his conduct by martial law, I do not know, that the life of any one can be taken away by martial law, except in the heat of action, but by a Court Martial being held on him; it is ſaid here, that there was no opportunity of holding a Court Martial, and that the ſingle officer was the priſoner, but it is alſo proved, if you ſhould doubt that the ſlaves hole was not ſufficiently ſecure, yet there was a ſufficient priſon at Cape Coaſt, where he might be ſecured, he might have been afterwards tried or ſent home in irons, in order to be duly tried according to martial law; but even ſuppoſing you ſhould think that ſuch a power was lodged in this ſingle officer, that he had a power himſelf to ſentence him, yet in this power he has not obſerved one legal ſtep that he ought to have taken; the man was never ſummoned, nor ſuffered to make any defence; he was immediately tied to the mouth of a cannon, and though we may have heard of ſuch a kind of puniſhment in Aſia, I am afraid it will not be warrantted by any law exiſting in this country; this was a power which he exerciſed without permitting the man to be heard; I ſhould have thought if a Court Martial duly conſtituted had aſſumed ſuch a power, it could not be juſtified, for Court Martials, though their power is greater than other Courts, they never condemn a perſon unheard therefore he cannot juſtify himſelf by the martial law, becauſe he has not obſerved one ſingle requiſite neceſſary to juſtify him, there was no Court Martial; there was a priſon where he might have been kept; therefore, with reſpect to that part of the conduct of the priſoner, it deſerves a ſevere condemnation: the other part of his defence has more probability in it; and that is, that this act of his was neceſſary for his ſelf-defence, and for the protection of his perſon and the ſafety of the garriſon; if you think that is true, it may in ſome degree juſtify the act itſelf; his ſituation is this, a moſt deſperate crew he certainly had, his garriſon conſiſted of twenty-one, and at the time of the execution it conſiſted of more; his crew conſiſted of ſixty deſperate convicts, and five freemen and volunteers; and in the account you have from General Townſend and Captain Lane, they both agree, there never was a more deſperate ſet of fellows, and that it was even thought the priſoner would never be able to compleat the voyage to Africa: that there was a combination amongſt theſe men to do the priſoner, or to do him out and out, is proved by three witneſſes; but then the communication of this fact to the priſoner is only proved by Job Cooper, and he ſays he did give information to Captain Mackenzie, that Andrews and Murray had ſaid, they would do him out and out; and if you believe what Monro ſays, that evidence is carried a little farther; he ſays that Murray Mackenzie ſhould ſay to Andrews, damn him, I have a brace of piſtols that ſhould do him, and that the other ſaid, I have a ſword: this was a kind of alarm, which might have an effect on a man of courage and conſtancy, when he ſaw an intention to take away his life. I will put a caſe, which might have happened ſomething like the preſent: ſuppoſing this Captain, ſailing to the coaſt of Africa, had heard of an insurrection amongst the slaves, and one of them, more desperate than the rest, had threatened to take away his life; if he had sent for the man up, and if upon deck he had taken a pistol and shot him, perhaps it would have been thought self-defence; therefore, that is the only ground upon which you can acquit the prisoner. The act itself has the appearance of a very severe punishment, but it is, perhaps, the most easy punishment of death that is possible, as the mortal frame is dissolved in a moment. I have given my opinion in point of law, that this is an act which cannot possibly be justified by martial law, and that the only excuse of the prisoner is, whether you think the act he did was absolutely necessary for his self-defence: if you find him guilty, I am afraid he must be guilty of the murder, you cannot find him guilty of a less crime.

an

Prisoner. My Lord, and Gentlemen of the Jury———

Court. You must certainly conform yourself to the laws of your country.

Prisoner. I take leave to ask pardon of this Court, it was from a perfect ignorance or I should not have done it.

Court. Gentlemen, you see there were two witnesses proved declarations communicated to the Captain afterwards, that they intended to take away his life, but these were not communicated previous to the execution of Murray Mackenzie.

The Jury retired for near two hours and returned with a verdict,

GUILTY of the wilful Murder:

But in consideration of the desperate crew the Captain had to command, we wish to recommend him to his Majesty's mercy.

Edward Reynolds, Esq; Clerk of the Arraigns, then addressed the Prisoner as follows:

Captain Kenith Mackenzie, you stand convicted of wilful murder, what have you to say why this Court should not give you judgment to die according to law?

Proclamation being made, Mr. Recorder passed sentence as follows:

Kenith Mackenzie, you have been, after a trial conducted with the utmost patience and indulgence, convicted of the crime of Wilful murder! a crime of the greatest magnitude that is known to the law! a crime for which the laws of all civilized countries have thought it necessary to inflict the punishment of death: the law of God, as well as the law of man, decides, that whoso wilfully and maliciously sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed! You have availed yourself of the authority with which you were invested, as an officer in his Majesty's service, by a new and extraordinary execution, to deprive an unfortunate man of his life; you have done it under circumstances, that clearly can derive no justification from any authority with which you were invested, and the manner of it bears no resemblance to the just exercise of any lawful authority, and the laws of this country have intrusted the power of life in the hands of no one man whatever: you have taken upon yourself to do that, which even your Royal Master could not lawfully have done; for you have, of your ownself, without a trial, and without a hearing, by a violent and hasty order, in a most new and unprecedented manner, hurried an unfortunate wretch into eternity, untried, unheard, and unprepared: the circumstances under which this crime was committed were such, as have not appeared, in the eyes of a very attentive and merciful Jury, sufficient to justify your defence, under the idea of its being a necessary act for the preservation of yourself, and the others under your command; that point has been fully left to your Jury, and they by their verdict have decided upon it; it therefore can only remain for me to pronounce upon you the sentence of the law. The sentence of the law is, and this Court doth adjudge, that you, Kenith Mackenzie, be hanged by the neck until you are dead, and afterwards your body be dissected and anatomized, according to the statute, and the Lord have mercy upon your soul!

HODGSON,

PROFESSOR of SHORT-HAND, and SHORT-HAND WRITER to the OLD-BAILEY,

At No. 35, CHANCERY-LANE,

Respectfully thanks the Gentlemen of the learned Professions, and others, for their flattering Partiality to his Compendious SYSTEM of SHORT-HAND, which is Taught, as usual, in FOUR LESSONS ONLY, at 10s. 6d. each.

Trials, Arguments, &c. taken with Precision and Care, and expeditiously transcribed, on reasonable Terms.

A new Impression of his Second Edition of Short-hand, Price 2s. 6d. to be had as above; also of BLADON, Paternoster-row, and CLARKE, Portugal-street.

In the Press, and speedily will be published, Price only 2s. 6d. A Collection of CHARACTERS, Arbitrary and Symbolical, for the Benefit of SHORT-HAND WRITERS, and adapted to every System; with a comparative Table of Short-hand Alphabets, by E. HODGSON.

N. B. The Table may then be had separate, Price 6d.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the City of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 8th of DECEMBER, 1784, and the following Days;

Being the FIRST SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER I. PART II.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXIV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE PROCEEDINGS UPON THE KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the City of LONDON, &c.

BEFORE the Right Honourable RICHARD CLARK, Lord Mayor of the City of London; the Right Honourable Alexander Lord Loughborough, Lord Chief Juſtice of his Majeſty's Court of Common Pleas, the Honourable Edward Willes Eſq; one of the Juſtices of his Majeſty's Court of King's Bench; the Honourable Sir George Nares, Knt. one of the Juſtices of his Majeſty's Court of Common Pleas; the Honourable Sir Beaumont Hotham, Knt. one of the Barons of his Majeſty's Court of Exchequer; the Honourable James Adair, Serjeant at Law, Recorder of the ſaid City; John William Rose, Eſq; and others his Majeſty's Juſtices of Oyer and Terminer of the City of London, and Juſtices of Gaol Delivery of Newgate, holden for the ſaid City and County of Middleſex,

First London Jury.	Second London Jury.	First Middleſex Jury.	Second Middleſex Jury.
James Hanmer	Benjamin Trantham	James Showell	George James Sower
Richard Marſh	William Richardſon	William Robinſon	John Jves
William Hailſtone	Philip Beben	*Thomas Stewart	John Hand
Samuel Piggot	John Bolton	John Hall	Richard Reader
John Bailey	William Dean	Robert Hair	Thomas Preſton
Thomas Whieldon	James Elworth	John Aſtley	Henry Turner
Robert Naſh	Samuel Weſt	James Gibbs	George Lockitt
John Mackenzie	Craiton Hand	John Auſtin	Thomas Dawes
Daniel Stewart	John Waite	† Cor. Vanderſtop	John Alliſon
John Monk	Benjamin Cock	John Bodenham	William Milbourne
Abraham Jackſon	Abra. Deſormeaux	John Allen	James Barber
John Brook	John Deſhous	William Braithwate	John Pool

* William Butt ſerved ſome time in the room of Thomas Stewart.
† Timothy Birchmore ſerved ſome time in the room of Cornelius Vanderſtop.

---

2. JAMES HAMILTON otherwiſe SMITH and MARGARET CHESSER, otherwiſe MARGARET wife of JAMES HAMILTON were indicted for breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Thomas Reed, between the hours of three and five in the afternoon, on the 12th day of September laſt, one Elizabeth Faulkner, ner, ſpinſter, then being therein, and feloniouſly ſtealing therein, ſixteen callico ſhirts, value 8l. ſixteen linen ſtocks, value 8s. ſix linen handkerchiefs, value 12s. two ſattin waiſtcoats, value 20s. four cloath coats, value 6l. two ſtriped ſilk waiſtcoats value 20s. two dimity waiſtcoats, value 15s. two pair of black ſattin breeches, value 20s. ſix pair of ſilk ſtockings, value 20s. ten pair of ſilk and cotton ſtockings, value 50s. three table cloths, value 20s. one pair of ſilver ſhoe buckles, value 20s. one pair of ſtone knee buckles, value 20s. one ſilver table ſpoon, value 10s. ſix tea ſpoons, value 12s. the property of the ſaid Thomas Read; one ſilver tea ſpoon, value 2s. two lawn handkerchiefs, value 5s. the property of Mary Langley, widow.

A Second Count for ſtealing the ſame goods in the dwelling houſe of the ſaid Thomas Read.

Mr. Macnally, Council for the Proſecution opened the Caſe.

May it pleaſe your Lordſhip, and you Gentlemen of the Jury, I am Council on behalf of this Proſecution, and I cannot but expreſs my feelings on this occaſion, as it is the firſt time I ever led in a buſineſs of this nature; I muſt however do my duty in ſtating the facts, which I am inſtructed will appear in evidence, and if they do, there will be no doubt of the guilt of one of the priſoners, James Hamilton; it appears by my inſtructions, that Thomas Read is a hair dreſſer, he had diſcharged a maid ſervant, and taken in to do the office of that maid ſervant, a woman named Langley, and in her abſence, ſhe left a woman named Faulkner in the houſe: on the 20th of September, a perſon, whom I am inſtructed will be proved to be the woman priſoner, called at Mr. Read's houſe, and enquired if Mr. Read was at home, being anſwered in the negative, ſhe then enquired whether the former ſervant was in the houſe, ſhe was told no ſuch perſon reſided there; upon which ſhe retired, and ſoon after the priſoner James Hamilton, with another man who has eſcaped, came to the houſe and made ſimilar enquiries after Mr. Read, being informed he was out, they went into the parlour and called for a pen and ink, they then ſeized the girl, tied her, gagged her, and blindfolded her, put a piſtol to her head, and threatened to blow her brains out; they then broke open the eſcritoir, and they robbed the proſecutor of the articles mentioned in the indictment; and alſo robbed the houſe of other articles; they then left the houſe; and it will appear to you in evidence, that the articles taken from the houſe, were found in the poſſeſſion of the priſoner; as to the woman, I have only to ſtate this to you, that ſhe was the firſt perſon that went to the houſe, and that ſhe was afterwards found in company with the perſons, who were taken with the goods upon them: I ſhall not take upon me to ſtate to you the law on the caſe, but will leave that to the Court, in whoſe wiſdom the Conſtitution has repoſed the power of directing the Jury in ſuch caſes. Gentlemen, if theſe facts are made out in evidence, it will be your duty to find the priſoners, or one of them, guilty of the charge in the indictment.

The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the Priſoners.

ELIZABETH FAULKNER ſworn.

I know Thomas Read, he lives in St. James's-ſquare, he is a hair dreſſer; on the 12th of September, I was at Mr. Read's, Mrs. Langley was ſervant at that time in the abſence of Mr. Read, and I was a ſervant to her; and Mrs. Langley was gone out, and a woman came and knocked at the door, that was the priſoner at the bar; I opened the door, ſhe aſked me for the ſervant that lately lived there, I told her ſhe was gone away, ſhe then aſked who kept the houſe, I told her it was a gentlewoman, Mr. Read had got to take care of the houſe in his abſence; ſhe then ſaid, we ſhas an acquaintance of the maid's, and was come to drink tea with her; I ſaid, the late ſervant's name was Banniſter, ſhe ſaid, ſhe was an intimate acquaintance of Mr. Read's, then ſhe ſet down; ſhe went to the door, and aſked to go down ſtairs to a convenient place, I told her it was very dark, and ſhe could not go, then ſhe ſet down a bit, and ſaid again, ſhe was an intimate acquaintance of the maid's, and went away; about ten minutes after ſhe went away, that day, the priſoner James Hamilton came, and another man, I was ſitting at the widow, they aſked if Mr. Read was at home, I told them he was not in town, it was the priſoner that came up to me to the window; I aſked him his meſſage, he ſaid, he could not leave it with me; he aſked for a pen and ink and paper, I immediately opened the door and let them into the parlour, and reached the ink, and was looking for a piece of paper; I ſet the ink on the table, then the priſoner at the bar ſaid to the other, come in Will, and Will came in and ſhut the door; then the priſoner held a piſtol to my face, and he bid me not ſay a word, if I did he would blow my brains out immediately, and Will as he called him, the other perſon, came in and ſhut too the windows, and put up the iron bar.

Court. Did this room look into the ſquare? —Yes, I then begged to go out of the room, they ſaid no, no, and the priſoner pulled me down on the floor; then he blinded me with a handkerchief, and thruſt a large pear into my mouth, and tied the handkerchief over my mouth, and he tied my legs together, and my hands behind me, and ſat upon me, while Will the other man, went out of the room, as I ſuppoſe up ſtairs; there was a dog in the houſe which barked very much, and the priſoner at the bar ſaid take care of the dog, and the other man took the dog and cut his throat directly; I know nothing of what was done up ſtairs, as I was blinded; they then carried me up ſtairs, and laid me on the ſopha, and told me to be ſtill while they were gone away, for they would take the key of the ſtreet door and go away, they ſaid, they were only going to take the things to the coach.

Did you hear them go about the houſe? ——Yes.

What time in the afternoon was this? —At three o'clock when the woman came.

Did they come back again?——No.

How did you get releaſed?——They cut the tape off me three times, with which I was tied, as I ſuppoſe to tie up their bundles with, ſo they looſened one of my hands, there was a table with a green handled knife upon it, and I took the knife and cut the ſtring, the priſoner was dreſſed in a green coat, with a black collar.

Had you ever ſeen him before?——No.

How long might he be with you, before you was blindfolded?——I ſuppoſe he was in the houſe about a quarter of an hour.

Did you take notice of him at that time, to be ſure he was the ſame man?——Yes, Sir, I know him perfectly.

When was he taken up?—I think it was two days after, it was Monday or Tueſday.

Did you know the other man?——No.

How was he dreſſed?—In brown cloaths.

THOMAS SHUTE ſworn.

I am a hackney coachman; on the 12th of September, I was going along Pall Mall a quarter before four or thereabout, and the priſoner James Hamilton called coach, I was empty, I turned about, and he told me to croſs the ſtreet, he had a large bundle under his arm, and he ſaid there was another to take up acroſs the ſtreet; another man had the other bundle, I helped with the two bundles into the coach, and they got in and ordered me to Temple-bar; at Charing Croſs they pulled the ſtring, and the gentlewoman at the bar got in, then they ordered me to Temple-bar, they ſtopped there and had a pot of beer, they aſked me to drink; then they ordered me to Berwick-ſtreet.

Court. Where had they beer?—Facing Chancery-lane, they ſtaid there about five minutes, while they got the beer, then they bid me go to Berwick-ſtreet, I ſat them down at the corner of Chapel-ſtreet, and they went there and paid me.

Did the woman go from Charing-croſs to Berwick-ſtreet, and into the houſe? ——Yes, they all three went into the houſe, I left them there with all the things, I carried one bundle and they took the other.

Mr.

Mr. Silveſter, Priſoners Council. You did not know this man before?——No.

Nor the woman?——No.

Did you take ſuch particular notice of your paſſengers to know them again?——I did take ſuch notice of that gentleman and the lady.

Is it uſual for you to take notice of your paſſengers in the day-time?——I never ſaw them afterwards or before.

Court. How was he dreſſed?——This gentleman had a green coat on I recollect.

—Had he a collar to it?——I did not take particular notice of any thing of that ſort.

Was it near the opening of St. James's ſquare into Pall-mall?—Very near, I did not go into the ſquare.

Court to Elizabeth Faulkner. Mr. Read's houſe, I ſuppoſe, is on that ſide of the ſquare which is next to Pall-mall?—Yes.

Has he a door into Pall-mall as well as into the ſquare?——No.

Then any body that comes to that houſe muſt come into the ſquare?—Yes.

Court to Coachman. Did you happen to ſee whether he came from the ſquare?——I did not.

CHARLES JEALOUS ſworn.

On the 13th of September I apprehended the priſoner; I believe about ſeven in the evening an information came to the office, we went immediately on hearing it to No. 1, Church-yard-alley, Curſitor-ſtreet; I went and knocked at the door, as ſoon as the door was open I went up ſtairs, I ſaw the priſoner James Hamilton, and two more men, and the woman at the bar; I looked at the priſoner, and told him he muſt go along with me.

Court. Had you information of him?—Yes; the priſoner at that time, with one of the other men was ſitting without his coat, and they had a gooſe for ſupper; he ſays to me, Sir, I hope you will let me pu on my coat; if you pleaſe, Sir, ſays I; ſays he, I ſhall go into the other room, my partner went with him, in a minute I heard a ſcuffle, and I went in directly, and ſaw a piſtol at my partner's head, I immediately turned round; my partner's name is Beamiſh, and he turned round and clapped the piſtol to my head, and pulled the cock, and drew the pan up, upon that I got hold of his hand, and took the piſtol from him, it was loaded, but no prime in it, as luck would have it; he had two piſtols, one in each hand, we got them from him, then he got hold of a hanger.

Court. Where did he get the hanger?—He got it in a moment, he muſt have got it off the bed; we got that from him, and the candles were knocked out, I immediately took the piſtol and cut him over the head, we got him out of that room, and brought him into the other room, and I ſays to my partners, Croſby and one Lebar, good God! what is become of the other man! ſays he, he is gone, ſays I, what did you let him go for? The other man eſcaped; the woman priſoner put the candles out.

Court. What ſort of a coat did the priſoner put on afterwards?—A brown coat.

Did you ſee any other coloured coat he had there?——No; I brought him away immediately as faſt as I could; I did not ſearch for any thing.

Mr. Silveſter. You found no goods there?——No, I had enough to do to take care of him.

Do you know whether theſe people are married or not?——I believe there is a certificate; but I cannot ſay in my own opinion I really think they are.

Court to Elizabeth Faulkner. Was that the ſort of piſtol that the priſoner held to your head?——No, Sir, I think it is not, there was more wood about that piſtol that the priſoner held to me.

Mr. Silveſter to Jealous. Did you ſee the certificate?——Yes.

ROBERT GREGORY ſworn.

I went to ſearch the lodgings the ſame evening the priſoner was taken; I have two coats, five pair of ſtockings, a ſilk handkerchief, and a ſpoon.

Court. Where were theſe lodgings?——In Church-yard-alley, ſomewhere near Holborn, near Caſtle-yard.

(A green coat with a black collar produced.)

Court to Falkner. Look at this coat?—This is the coat the prisoner at the bar had on when he came to Mr. Read's house.

Mr. Macnally. Is there any blood on that coat?——I believe there is; I found this blue coat, five pair of stockings, and two silk handkerchiefs.

THOMAS READ sworn.

(Deposes to the blue coat.)

I know it from the particular buttons and stile of making, if you observe, it is peculiar half lappelled, and the sleeves a size peculiar to myself, neither lady's nor man's size; these are stockings with my mark, T. R. here are five pair, here is a silver salt spoon, the fellow of which I have brought.

Court. Now, upon your oath, what do you take to be the value of those things?—The six pair of stockings cost me six shillings a pair, I think I might say one pound one shilling for them and the coat.

Court. Then you state the whole at a guinea?——I state the whole at a guinea, the six pair of stockings and the coat, the coat cost me three guineas.

Mr. Justice Willes. What do you value your stockings at, and what do you value your coat at?——I value the stockings at half a guinea, and the coat at half a guinea.

Court. Were these things, the coat and stockings, at your house the 12th of September?—They were, I double locked the door where they were before I went.

Mr. Silvester. When had you left them there?—The 30th of July last.

Then from July to the 13th of September, you do not know whether they were there or no?—I do not, I was abroad at the German Spa.

Court. You left them the 30th of July, in the escrutoir, in your house?—Yes.

What room was that in?—In the front room up one pair of stairs.

Court to Falkner. Do you know the escrutoir that Mr. Read speaks of, in which the things were, in the front room up one pair of stairs?—Yes.

Before these people came into the house, were the locks of that escrutoir safe?—I do not know, I never was in that room before then.

Before these people came in, was the door of that room safe?—Yes.

Not broke?——No.

Did you find it broke after they went away?—Yes.

Mr. Justice Willes. How soon after they went away did you find the door broke?—When the people came to my assistance, they searched the house.

How soon did you yourself see the door open?——After the people came into the house to my assistance I saw it.

Did you see it open at the time when they first came into the house?——I did.

——— DICKSON sworn.

I found these things at Smith's, at the lodgings of the prisoner, in Church-yard-alley, on the 13th, the day after the robbery.

Court to Read. Look at a few of the things of the most value that you can swear to?——Here is nothing here but stockings.

Dickson. This petticoat and gown were brought here, because the girl said the woman prisoner had it on at the time she came to the house.

Mr. Read. Here are five pair more.

What do you value them at?—At half a guinea more.

Court. Is there any more of your property found?——No, my Lord.

MARY LANGLEY sworn.

Mr. Macnally. Was you employed by Mr. Read to take care of his house?—Yes; I lost this spoon and handkerchief.

Court. What is the value of them?——About half a crown.

Mr. Silvester. My Lord, as to the capital part, there seems to be no breaking, it is not like a burglary in the night, there must be an actual breaking of the house.

Mr.

Mr. Macnally. My Lord, they got into the houſe with a felonious intent.

Court to Folkner. Was there any other room in the houſe broke open beſides that?—No.

Mr. Silveſter. Did the people come firſt to you, or did they go up ſtairs before they carried you?—They came firſt to me.

Mr. Silveſter. I have always underſtood, that to conſtitute this particular offence, there muſt be an actual breaking into the houſe, not afterwards a breaking when in the houſe, and that is the diſtinction between this and burglary, becauſe in burglary they may firſt get in by fraud.

Court to Read. You have ſwore to the value of theſe things that were found, you have ſworn very tenderly as to the value; you have loſt a great many other things, can you name any of the other things?—Yes, I loſt ſixteen callico ſhirts, and about twelve or more linen ones, I loſt ſeveral coats, and nine ſilver ſpoons; the callico ſhirts I value at eight guineas, four coats at a guinea a piece, and divers other things.

Court. Who had the key of this room?—An acquaintance of mine in York-ſtreet.

Court. You need not call any people to the woman's character, there ſeems to be ſufficient evidence before you to induce you to believe ſhe is the man's wife.

The priſoner James called four witneſſes to his character.

Court to Jury. It is for your conſideration, whether this priſoner is not guilty of ſtealing the reſt of the things which the proſecutor loſt, as well as thoſe which are produced.

JAMES HAMILTON, GUILTY

Of ſtealing goods in the dwelling houſe above the value of 40s. Death.

MARGARET CHESSER, otherwiſe HAMILTON, NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

3. The ſaid JAMES HAMILTON was again indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Richard Holland, Eſq. about the hour of eight in the night, on the 9th day of Auguſt, and ſtealing therein one ſilver tea urn, value 15l. one ſilver coffee pot, value 6l. one ſilver bread baſket, value 6l. twenty four caſe knives and forks with ſilver handles, value 8l. twelve deſert knives value 40s. twelve table ſpoons, value 4l. two ſilver tea ſpoons, value 4s. one ſilver tea canniſter, value 6l. one ſilver ſugar canniſter, value 3l. two pair of ſilver ſhoe buckles, value 40s. one pair of ſtone knee buckles, value 10s. one man's linen neck handkerchief, value 12d. one other handkerchief, value 12d. the property of the ſaid Richard Holland.

And the ſaid MARGARET CHESSER, otherwiſe MARGARET, wife of the ſaid JAMES HAMILTON, was again indicted for feloniouſly and maliciouſly inciting, moving, procuring and abetting the ſaid James Hamilton to do and commit the ſaid felony and burglary aforeſaid.

DOROTHY MACKENZIE ſworn.

I live with Richard Holland, Eſq. No. 18, Orchard Street, on the 9th of Auguſt his houſe was broke open between the hours of ſeven and eight in the evening, a woman came and knocked at the door, and inquired for Mrs. Holland, I told her ſhe was not at home, ſhe bid me good night and I ſhut the door; then two men came and knock'd at the door, one of them had a letter in his hand and ſaid he brought it from America for Mr. Holland, I told him Mr. Holland was not at home, he ſaid it muſt be ſent to him, he aſked me for his addreſs which I gave him, he aſked me for a pen and ink, I went to fetch it and he walked after me, and puſh'd me backwards in the hall, and preſented a piſtol, and told me if I made any noiſe he would blow my brains out that inſtant, ſo then he took me into the back parlour, the prisoner at the bar was the person, and he asked me for the keys of the parlour door, I told him I had never seen any, he went to Mr. Holland's book case and brought the keys from some where about the book case, he told me he was informed Mr. Holland was a man of great fortune and property, and he was come to rob the house, my husband's sister came and knocked at the door, he ask'd her to walk in, and she came in, and then he took hold of her and said she was his prisoner, she is not here, so then he tied our hands, then my husband came and knock'd at the door and he let him in and they brought him in and tied him hand and foot, and locked us all in the back parlour, I believe they were about an hour and three quarters after they were gone my husband's sister got her hand into my husband's pocket and got a knife and untied him, none of the property has been found since, but a couple of handkerchiefs.

into

When you got loose what did you find in the house? ——The drawers were broke open and the book cases, they got the key of the plate chest and opened it, none of the property has been recovered but the handkerchiefs, I do not know what Mr. Holland lost.

GEORGE MACKEZE sworn.

About eight on Monday evening I was let in by the prisoners to the house of Mr. Holland, which my wife and I at that time took care of, when immediately as I got in the door was shut, and I was surprized by the prisoner presenting a pistol to my head and swearing he would blow my brains out if I made any resistance, at that instant his partner who was in the back parlour rushed out with a drawn cutlass in his hand, they secured me and conducted me into the parlour, and tied my hands behind my back, and made me follow them all over the house, leaving my wife and sister lock'd in the parlour, till such time as they had plundered the house of every think they thought of value, I saw them break the locks of Mr. Holland's book case and from it take gold, bank notes, table and tea spoons, buckles and many other things; from a plate chest below, I saw them take a silver tea urn, three silver tea canisters, some table spoons, knives and forks, and other things, but I could not tell what, they strove to prevent my seeing, as much as lay in their power, they put them into a long handbox which they brought with them for the purpose of carrying them away; after that they made me go where my wife and sister were, they took my garters off my legs, and with one they tied my hands and the other my legs, they then lock'd the door, they made strong threats against our lives if we made any noise or appeared against them; and then in about ten minutes after they left the house.

Of what value might these things be? ——About eighty pounds.

None of these things were found again? ——Not to my knowledge.

CHARLES JEALOUS sworn.

I know nothing more than apprehending him, as I have mentioned, the other people found something on him.

—— DIXON sworn.

These two handkerchiefs were found in the prisoner's lodgings.

RICHARD HOLLAND, Esq. sworn.

This handkerchief I am sure of, I have had it so many years, and I have only one of that sort which I lost that night, I have had it ever since the year 1776. It is a muslin handkerchief, I lost another, it has my mark upon it, and I have little doubt of it; I have obtained no other part of my property, the instruments they made use of in breaking open the place were taken on them, and a cutlass, a pistol, and an iron crow, they were taken afterwards.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

My Lord, I have nothing particular to say, these handkerchiefs that were found, belonged to the man that made his escape without his coat, one of these handkerchiefs chiefs was round his neck, and the other was found in the inner room, which has been attributed to me, and the ſtockings, and all the things that were mentioned in the former proſecution he brought to me, being a ſhipmate of mine; I leave it entirely to your Lordſhip.

Court to Jury. In reſpect of the burglary, it was between ſeven and eight in the evening, on the 8th of Auguſt, when you know it is by no means dark: as for the woman, though the law does certainly protect her, yet as ſhe was ſo principal an actreſs in theſe robberies, if her huſband is executed, probably if ſhe has any ſort of feeling for him, ſhe will recollect that ſhe has been very inſtrumental in having his life taken away.

NOT GUILTY of the Burglary, but GUILTY of ſtealing the goods in the dwelling houſe. Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before MR. BARON HOTHAM.

---

4. THOMAS WOOD and GEORGE BROWN were indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Sir Thomas Davenport, Knt. on the King's highway, on the 11th of October laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon, and againſt his will, one watch, with the outſide caſe and inſide caſe made of gold, value 10l. one ſteel watch chain, value 3d. two ſtone ſeals ſet in gold, value 50s. and two guineas, value 2l 2s. and one ſhilling in monies numbered, the property of the ſaid Sir Thomas.

The witneſſes (except Sir Thomas) ordered to go out of Court by the deſire of Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council.

The Indictment was opened by Mr. Shepherd, and the Caſe by Mr. Silveſter, as follows.

May it pleaſe your Lordſhip and Gentlemen of the Jury, I am likewiſe of council in this proſecution againſt the two priſoners at the bar; the charge has been opened to you, it is for a highway robbery on Sir Thomas Davenport; the priſoner Wood, keeps a houſe at Kentiſh Town; the priſoner Brown, is a man I believe of no employment whatever, the account he gave of himſelf was, that he got a ſhilling as he could; the circumſtances on which this charge againſt the priſoners is founded are theſe; on the 11th of October laſt, about five o'clock, as Sir Thomas was riding from Marlow, where he had been ſome time, his coach with poſt horſes, and ſome of his ſervants being gone before, he followed in his chariot, attended by only one ſervant on horſeback, and as he came along the Edgware road, about five miles from his own houſe, two men rode paſt the carriage, and the coachman thought from their appearance, that they meant to rob his maſter, he particularly looked at them as they paſſed the carriage, and at that time there was not any thing over their faces, nor any diſguiſe, they were dreſſed in round hats, one a very good one, the other a common felt hat; they ordered the ſervant to alight and hold his horſe, then they took their two handkerchiefs and tied them tolerably looſe, and pulled them up at the bottom of their faces, then they went to the carriage, the ſhort man to the right ſide, where Lady Davenport ſat, and the ſhort man called out to the tall one, damn you, if you flinch I will blow your brains out, he ſeemed to be the commanding officer, he ordered the coachman to ſtop, the tall one put in his piſtol, and aſked Sir Thomas for his money, which he gave him, the ſhort one attacked Lady Davenport, and aſked her for her money, which ſhe gave; at this time being five o'clock the ſun was ſetting, and ſhone full in the face of the ſhort man, his face was directly oppoſite to Lady Davenport and Sir Thomas; after they had taken their money, they aſked for their watches, and they perceived that Lady Davenport was in the act of concealing her watch, upon which the ſhort one ſwore if ſhe concealed any thing, he would get off his horſe, ſearch the carriage, and if he found any thing concealed, by God he would blow her braine out, and he called out to the tall one to come and hold his horſe; he ſtood upon his ſtirrups as if going to get off his horſe; this threat had its deſired effect, the tall one then ſaid, your pocket books, aye, ſays the ſhort one, that is right, your pocket books; while he was threatening Lady Davenport, the handkerchief fell from his face, Sir Thomas, whoſe attention was more to that man, becauſe he thought his lady was in danger, obſerved him, and ſaw his face very plain, the robbery was ten minutes committing, they were in no hurry, they very deliberately rode away, and rode up to the ſervant who was ſome diſtance behind; Sir Thomas then looked through the back of the carriage and obſerved their ſize, their height, and their manner of riding; when they came up to the ſervant, ſays the tall one to the ſhort one, give the man half a guinea; the tall man then, as the ſervant of the other, gave him, in the preſence of the footman, the watches he had received, and he looked at the purſe, ſays he, what is this, here is not much money in this, and he put it into his pocket, they then took off their handkerchiefs, and very deliberately rode away; Sir Thomas went home, and ſent a deſcription of the robbery and of their perſons to Bow-ſtreet, but no information of any thing was received at the office: on the 10th of November, as Sir Thomas was walking from Weſtminſter to his own houſe in Bloomſbery, going up St. Martin's Lane he obſerved theſe two men; their dreſs, their ſize, and one of the horſes manner of going, every thing ſtruck him that theſe were the two men that had committed the robbery, upon which he followed them, and got before them, and the inſtant he ſaw their faces, he had no doubt in his own mind that theſe were the two men, upon which he followed them till he came to the ſtable yard in Chaple ſtreet; having this clue to go by, the priſoner Brown was apprehended by the officers in Bow ſtreet, and as the two men had got the ſame coloured great coats, he was deſired to bring his great coat with him, but that could not be, for he declared he had no great coat, a note was ſent by the magiſtrates to Wood, to deſire him to attend, Wood made ſome excuſe and could not attend, upon which Sir Thomas, with the officers, went to Kentiſh Town, where they ſuppoſed this man was; Macmanus, who underſtands his buſineſs very well, ſays, if I go in, it may create ſuſpicion, let the ſervant go in; the ſervant went in, and as ſoon as ever he went in, he ſaw the priſoner Wood in the bar; as ſoon as he ſaw him, he turned round and went to Macmanus, why ſays he, the man that robbed my miſtreſs is in the bar now, I am ſure of it; well ſays Macmanus, go in, the man went in; how do you do Mr. Wood, I hope you are very well; Wood heſitated a little, ſays he, how do you do Mr. Coachman, will you have ſomething to drink, he wanted to go and make ſome punch, no, ſays the man, you muſt not go away, a ſignal was given, and Macmanus came in, ſays he you muſt go to Bow ſtreet, ſays the coachman, take your hat with you, ſays he to the maid, give me ſuch a hat, mentioning a particular hat; ſays the coachman, that is not the hat you ſtopped my maſter in, ſays he, I have but this one, then ſays the coachman, put your great coat on? ſays he, I have no great coat, I chuſe to go without one; ſo without the great coat he came, and was taken to Bow ſtreet; Sir Thomas was examined, and he, in his own mind, had no doubt but theſe were the two men that robbed him, that Wood was the man that robbed Lady Davenport, and that Brown was the perſon that ſtood on his ſide the carriage and robbed him, one of the horſes was ſeen to ride up St. Martin's Lane, and ſhewn to Sir Thomas and the ſervants; Sir Thomas ſaid as much as a man can ſwear to a horſe, that is the horſe, the coachman who had a better opportunity, immediately identified the horſe, and ſaid, that was the horſe the man rode on the day his maſter was robbed; upon application to Mr. Wood,

Wood, says he, this is my horse, it is a blood horse, he has won a plate, I have had it some time, therefore the question is, whether the man who rode that horse on that day, was Wood or not, because that horse is identified to be the horse on which the robbery was committed; another circumstance that will appear, is this, a few minutes before the robbery was committed on Sir Thomas Davenport, these two men were seen on that road; you will therefore be to judge, whether or no these are, or are not the men that committed the robbery, you will judge by the situation of the place; for it is not above forty minutes ride from the place where Sir Thomas was robbed, to the house of Wood, it is exactly seven miles, therefore it is possible he might have gone from his house at four, and returned at six; therefore the only question for him to account for will be between the hours of four and six; you will confine your attention to that part of the defence, from the hour of four to six, and if he does not account for that time, you will conceive they are the persons: Gentlemen, it is a little remarkable, they should not chuse to produce the great coats: however as for Sir Thomas, he only wishes the whole circumstance of the case should be laid before you in evidence, in order that you may judge of the guilt, or innocence of these men; and if it can be made out, that they were not the men that actually committed the robbery, I am sure he will rejoice with me and with you; but if they are the men, it is a justice he owes his country, to bring them in before you: Gentlemen, these are the circumstances I have shortly opened to you, if upon the whole of the testimony they satisfy your minds these are the men that committed the robbery, you will find no difficulty in pronouncing the prisoners guilty.

Court. Where is Brown's house?—— Somewhere in Chapel-street, it is an equal distance from each house.

Sir THOMAS DAVENPORT sworn.

I was coming from Marlow at Cranford, I staid while the horses baited, I had a coach and four horses, and my own chariot, the coach went on before, when we came to Uxbridge road, we turned to Acton, I looked at my watch at Acton, and it was near five, we were just observing we should be at home in very good time, we had gone as near as I can guess, about a mile or a very little more or less, which might have taken up about a quarter of an hour, we were going at the rate of six miles an hour, or something thereabouts; the sun was set at this time, it was a very light fine afternoon, it was Monday the 11th of October; the passing and meeting and all that, I cannot speak to; I made no observations whatever on that, but the first thing I observed was, as I was going from Acton to Willsdon, going about east-north-east, so that the sun was pretty nearly on my left hand, the prisoner Brown was the first person I saw, with a long horse pistol, he presented it to the coachman, and bid him stop, which he did immediately, the lesser man which they call Wood, came to the window where my wife sat, the window was up and they ordered me to let it down, and Brown passed between the side window and the front window of the chariot, I saw him in that light he had a handkerchief over his face, the upper part of his face to his nose, the hat was a little up, then pretty nearly together they demanded our money, Wood's face had a handkerchief over it, pretty nearly the same, but it laid flatter a good deal than it did upon Brown, it projected more upon Brown; I had my money loose in my pocket, two guineas and two or three shillings which I gave to Brown into his hand, then his face was pretty near mine, I looked at him as attentively as I could, when I gave him the money, then my wife gave the other man Wood her money, in a small mixed purse; then they asked for our watches, I observed my wife was putting hers behind her upon the seat, upon which Wood the lesser man arose up upon the stirrups, then he had his horse's face pretty near to the window, as he arose up, his handkerchief dropped a little, and he pulled it up,

it

it ſeemed to me as if he held it at a little diſtance from his mouth, that he might ſpeak plainer; he kept ſo fronting me in ſuch a poſition as to ſee whether any thing was concealed or not, therefore I ſuppoſe he had obſerved my wife attempting to conceal the watch, he then held the handkerchief at a little diſtance and ſaid you are going to conceal ſomething, and he called to the other, and ſaid, come here and hold my horſe, and then lifted the off leg from me, out of the ſtirrup, he did not get of, but ſaid to me, I ſhall ſearch the charriot, and if I find any thing concealed, by God I will blow your brains out; I looked very erneſtly at him, and he made a very conſiderable impreſſion on me, ſo that I think I cannot be miſtaken; I ſaid, he ſeems a very firm, determined man, for God's ſake give him your watch; the other man did not come round as he was bid, it appeared ſo as if Brown, who was on my ſide, was under ſome ſort of command from the other, he to me appeared frightened a good deal, on my ſaying ſo, the other was very deliberate as I think he could be in any act, I gave my watch to Brown juſt before I gave it he ſaid damn you, you have more money and felt my right hand pocket, my wife gave her watch alſo, hers was a gold watch that had a chaſed outſide caſe, but then had a ſhagreen or ſeal ſkin, a ſteel chain, two ſeals and ſome other little ornaments I did not know, her ſeal was a family ſeal and one ſeal ſmaller; my watch was a gold watch, made by Mudge and Dutton, it had a gold cap upon it, a gold inſide and outſide caſe it was very heavy, I think I paid thirty three guineas for it, a plain ſteel chain and two ſeals, all this while the light of the ſun was very ſtrong in both their faces, ſo that I ſuppoſe the whole time, as near as I can gueſs in ſuch a ſituation, could not be leſs then ſix or ſeven minutes, during which time I had made ſuch obſervations that I was convinced in my own mind I ſhould know the perſons of both of them, any where: after a little pauſe, the taller man with a low ſoftiſh voice ſays your pocket book, I told them I had no pocket book, the leſſer man on my wife's ſide ſaid aye, right, your pocket book, with a ſharper voice and a rougher one; my wife ſaid ſhe had not one, after being ſo frightened and alarmed by their threats about the watch, ſhe ſaid I have none upon my honour Sir, and was making excuſes, the leſſer man ſaid do not be frightened Lady, you ſhall not be hurt, there was ſome little deliberation, I ſat in my ſeat very quietly, and my eyes almoſt intirely fixed on Wood, after he had made theſe threats, thinking if he put in his piſtol or any thing of that ſort, that I would give what aſſiſtance I could in warding it, or ſnatching it, the men went behind and I immediately looked thro' the back glaſſes, and there I ſaw, about the diſtance of twenty or thirty yards, my footman diſmounted, ſtanding and holding his horſe, the two men were not then come up to him, as to the horſe I only ſaw it was a bay or between a bay and a brown, and white on his face; the other appeared to me much darker, whether it was dark brown or black I could not tell, it ſtood in ſuch a ſituation to me, there was a hedge directly behind him ſo that there was a ſhade, the other was in an open ſpot, but as to his marks I could not ſee at all; the two men before they got up to my footman met in the middle of the road and there ſeemed to me ſome ſtop, I could not tell what they did there, my footman muſt have ſeen it and poſſibly can deſcribe it; then they went up, and ſeemed to ſay ſomething, and went on with their head towards Acton, I ſhould think if it was five mile to Paddington, it muſt be the outſide, it ſeemed to be a good trotting horſe, and he he could go in leſs than forty minutes to London, acroſs the new Road; where I was, I was ſix miles from home and we were about an hour going home, and there were two hills that would delay five or ten minutes, if I had been going a level road, I was going at the rate of ſix miles an hour, I ſent to town that night, but there was nobody at the office, and the next morning my ſervant gave intelligence and the watches were put into the hue and cry,

theſe

but I heard nothing of them or the men until Wedneſday the 10th of November, on a mizzling ſort of a day, it was dirty, I was coming from Weſtminſter towards the upper end of St. Martin's Lane, I ſaw theſe two men very diſtinctly and the moment I ſaw them I had the ſame impreſſion I had at the time of the robbery, the leſſer man had then on a brown coat, his hair round not powdered, a handkerchief tied round his neck which appeared to me to be of the ſame ſort as the one about his face, the coat he had on was a darkiſh drab colour, and an old hat of the ſort and kind he had on at the robbery.

Court. How were they dreſſed at the time of the robbery?——They had both great coats on of the drab kind, one dirtier than the other, two large horſeman's coats buttoned, ſo that I never ſaw their under dreſs, nor did I know till I came to Bow Street, what dreſs they had on, but your lordſhip will hear what dreſs they had on when their coats were ſeen unbuttoned; having made theſe obſervations and being perfectly convinced in my own mind and having no doubt about them, I took the pains to follow them through ſeveral ſtreets; at that time my recollection ſeemed perfectly freſh about them, I followed them till they turned down what appeared to me to be a ſtable yard, it was wrote over Green Street, coming from Theobald's Road, and in a ſmall paſſage leading into Chapel Street nearly oppoſite the Chapel, I ſaw them alight and put up their horſes, I did not know either of their ſituations in life, but I thought my duty to the public required me as ſoon as poſſible to give information at the public office, there I met with three people, I deſired they would make enquiry into the relative ſituations in life of theſe men; it ſtruck me ſo forcibly at the time I had obſerved their height, one was about five foot ſix or ſeven, and the other five foot nine or nine and a half, that ſeemed to be exactly at the time the proportion of the relative height that they bore to one another, the taller man ſtooped a little on his horſe, more of a lounging, and the other was erect; the next morning Carpmeal came to me and we went to Bow Street about three, and I looked at Brown, and I thought then as I do now that he is one of the men; a meſſage was ſent to Wood to Kentiſh Town to come to Bow Street, and the purport of his anſwer was that his wife was in Town and he could not come, however he was fetched to Bow Street, and the next day I ſaw him, and then and now, and at the former time, I did and do believe him to be the man: it ſtruck me exactly with the ſame impreſſion it does now and did at firſt, he was afterwards fully committed, and from the conviction I had, I thought it my duty to the public, that they ſhould clear themſelves.

Mr. Silveſter. How many miles is it from Kentiſh Town to the place where you was robbed?——I ſhould gueſs ſix or ſeven miles, I think I could ride it in three quarters of an hour, I very often ride ſeven or eight miles an hour.

Mr. Garrow. Sir Thomas I believe I underſtand you correctly, that the whole tranſaction was about ſeven or eight minutes in performing?——Yes.

And you have deſcribed that the faces of the men were covered up to the noſe?——Yes.

They had alſo round hats, which did not tend to give information of their features?——Flapped hats.

You loſt watches of peculiar good makers, and ſeals with arms, and they were immediately inſerted in the hue and cry?—Yes.

From the time the robbery was committed to this hour, you have never recovered any part of your property?——No Sir, nor heard of it.

At the time you ſaw theſe two perſons in St. Martin's Lane, was you attended by any of your ſervants?——No Sir, I was quite alone.

You would naturally mention the circumſtance of having ſeen it?——Yes.

So that previous to the examination in Bow Street, your ſervants were apprized that you had ſeen perſons that you ſuſpected?——They had.

You had probably expreſſed yourſelf ſtrongly?——Yes.

And your ſervants had probably heard you?——Probably they had, but I would not have proſecuted if I had not the fulleſt conviction in my own mind, that they were the two men; and I wiſhed my ſervants to ſee them, becauſe if they had not been as ſure as myſelf I ſhould have thought it too much to have proſecuted them; I underſtood Brown was to remain, whether voluntarily or in cuſtody I do not know, for this Mr. Wood to come and clear him.

Did Brown refer to Wood of Kentiſh Town?—Yes.

Did you ſee the note that was ſent to Wood?——I did not.

ABRAHAM RILEY ſworn.

Priſoner Wood. I beg Sir Thomas might withdraw while his ſervant is examined.

Riley. My maſter was ſtopped by two men, who paſſed us and did not ſay a word, they rode to the footman and made him get off his horſe, they pulled their handkerchiefs over their faces, one on one ſide and the other on the other, they ordered me to ſtop, I did not pull up directly, they began to be enraged with me and ſwore and called me an impudent fellow for not ſtopping, they ſaid if I did not ſtop they would blow my brains out and I ſtopped, immediately one came on each ſide, Wood came on my Lady's ſide and they demanded the watches and money, my Lady gave him her purſe and he demanded her watch and pocket book, ſhe told him ſhe had none, and he threatened very much, and I ſaw the watch and purſe in Wood's hand, then they demanded the pocket books, my Lady ſaid they had neither of them pocket books, then he threatened to get off his horſe and told the other to hold his horſe, while he got off, and if he found any thing in the coach he would blow their brains out; as ſoon as ſhe began to ſcream he puſhed too the door, and told her not to be frightned ſhe ſhould not be hurt, ſo they rode off, they told me to drive on, they went to the footman and made him get down.

Did you make obſervation either on the perſons or horſes of the two men?——Not ſo much when they firſt came up as after I leaned on that ſide that the perſon robbed my Lady on, I took more notice of Wood, than the other.

How was he dreſſed?——He had a kind of drabbiſh great coat on, and round hat and his hair hanging down about his ears, and his handkerchief tied round his face, I did ſee him as I turned my head, it hung down before; information was given at Bow Street, I obſerved the horſe, it was a mare about fifteen hands and a half high, or thereabouts, I have ſeen her ſince at Bow Street, ſhe looks to be the ſame mare.

Court. What colour?——It was a bay mare with a ſwitch tail, a kind of blood mare, two white feet, with a kind of a white ſlit and ſtar, ſhe ſeemed to be rather low in fleſh.

Is that the mare that the man rode who robbed your miſtreſs?—To the beſt of my knowledge it is.

Did you take any notice of the other man Brown?——Nothing that I could be ſo ſure of him as the other, I looked behind me, and I took him to be the perſon, but not ſo poſitive to him as to Wood who robbed my Lady; he had the ſame ſort of great coat on as the other, his horſe was rather darker, but they ſweat ſo.

Mr. Silveſter. Did they look as if they had been rode hard?——Yes, very hard; after this I went with Macmanus, or ſome of the officers, to Kentiſh Town, on Thurſday the 11th of November, and Macmanus told me to go in firſt, and ſee if I ſaw ſuch a perſon there as was on the road, and I went to the door, and ſaw Wood in the bar, I went back and told Macmanus that was the perſon, ſo I went up ſtairs and called for ſixpennyworth of rum and water, we drank it, and he was ſixpence; when we got into the room, we began talking to one another about the weather, we aſked him if he had not a note from Bow-ſtreet; he ſaid he had, he could not come, his houſe was full of company, and there was no name to the note; Macmanus ſaid there was the ſitting Magiſtrate's name; he ſaid if he had known ſuch a thing as that, he would have come at firſt, ſo we had a ſhillings-worth and came away; nothing paſſed at that time: he ſaid if he could do any good, he would come directly. I aſked him for ſixpenny-worth at firſt, and told him to be quick; I aſked him for a room, he ſaid he believed he had not one above or below; he was not reſolute at all, he came with us freely.

he

Did you ſay any thing to him, or he to you?—Not the leaſt word in the world, he began to ſay that Brown was a very honeſt young man, and all that, ſpeaking in behalf of Brown; we did not mention to him any thing that we were about: he was dreſſed in a brown coat.

Did you make any obſervations to him about his dreſs?—We aſked him if he had never a great coat, he ſaid he had lent his great coat out that day.

Mr. Garrow. Now, coachman, firſt, as to Mr. Brown being in cuſtody; he was juſt as much in cuſtody as I am, or any of the Jury are.—If Macmanus was the conſtable, he muſt be in cuſtody.

Was this the note that was ſent by Mr. Gilbert? (Shews him a note.)——I never ſaw the note.

When was the firſt meſſage ſent to Wood?—It was about ſix or ſeven, I cannot rightly tell which, an old man went with it.

When did you and Macmanus go to him?——The very ſame night, about half after nine.

So that at any rate he had had four or five hours notice that you intended to viſit him?——Yes, I ſuppoſe he had.

Had you your coachman's great coat on?——I had this great coat on.

So the firſt man you ſaw was Mr. Wood?——Yes, he was in the bar; they told us to go for Mr. Wood, the landlord: Sir Thomas came home, and ſaid he ſaw the two men that had robbed them; that is, he told my fellow ſervant, and my fellow ſervant told me.

You know it would have been uncivil to have differed from Sir Thomas in his opinion; it would have been rude, therefore, of courſe, you concurred in it: do you remember being at the Brown Bear in Bow-ſtreet?——Yes.

Who ſat in the box?——I cannot recollect.

Do you recollect ſeeing Brown in the room at the Brown Bear?——Yes, they brought him in to me as one of the perſons that robbed my maſter; they aſked me if I knew him, and I ſaid, really, I could not recollect him, but I did not know but I had ſeen him.

Upon your oath, did not you ſay in the Brown Bear, that Brown was not one of the men that robbed your maſter?——I ſaid, I believe he is not, or not to my recollection, I only ſaw him going into the public houſe with the conſtable; they ſaid, do you think that that is the perſon that is going into the houſe now; upon my word, ſays I, I do not ſee his face, I cannot recollect whether he is or is not, but I do not recollect ſeeing that perſon.

I aſk you, Sir, and I deſire you to be cautious, upon your oath, did you not ſay that he was not one of the men; that is a plain queſtion, capable of a very plain anſwer: why you did ſay it; why do you mince it, Sir; why do not you ſpeak out? Theſe mens lives are at ſtake; was the houſe full of company?——I did not ſee one perſon.

Did not ſee! do not you know it?—He told me he had not got a fire in any room for us to ſit down.

Did you go into the club room?—No.

Did you go into the aſſembly room?—I cannot tell which that is; there might be a thouſand people beſides us, I only ſaw an old man.

Was not you in the room with him at the Brown Bear?—Yes.

Did you ſay then he was the man?——I did not punctually ſay it, I ſaid to the beſt of my recollection I had ſeen him before, but not to know him.

of

Deſcribe the manner in which the handkerchiefs were tied over the faces?—They were brought under the head, and covered one of the eyes, and ſo came down to the mouth; they had only one eye that they could ſee out of.

Mr. Garrow. The Gentlemen of the Jury will obſerve, that one of the eyes was compleatly covered.

Court. Do you mean now to ſwear poſitively, that Wood was one of the men that ſtopped the chariot?—To the beſt of my recollection he is, but I did not ſee ſo much of the other; I do not ſwear to him.

DANIEL NASH ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Shepperd.

Do you remember Sir Thomas Davenport's being robbed?—Yes; when I firſt ſaw them, they were coming to meet the chariot, they did not take any notice when they firſt paſſed it: they came up to me and ſtopped me firſt, they made me get off my horſe, then they put handkerchiefs over their faces, and rode back to the chariot; they ſtopped the chariot.

How far from the chariot was you whilſt they were robbing it?——About five or ſix yards; they went up and ſtopped the coachman, and demanded my lady's watch and money directly.

After they had robbed your maſter and miſtreſs, which way did they go?—They came back to me, and deſired me to get on the horſe again.

Had you not an opportunity to make any obſervation as to their perſons?——Yes, I took as much notice of them as I could the ſhort time they were with me, they made me get off my horſe, and after I was off my horſe, they wore large handkerchiefs tied round their necks, and they unbuttoned their waiſtoats, and put them acroſs their faces under their hats.

Had you an opportunity of ſeeing the whole of their faces?—Yes, Sir, and after they pulled them off again.

Should you know the men again if you were to ſee them?—I ſhould know one of them, the other I cannot ſay I ſhould know his face, becauſe the great coat came up ſo high and the hat ſo low.

Which of theſe two men is it that you think you ſhould know?——The talleſt.

Do you mean to ſwear poſitively?—Yes, to the beſt judgment that I can form, that is the man; I ſaw my lady give her purſe and money: they had both got great coats, Brown had a coat much like this, the other was not ſo good a one as this; I ſaw the horſes, Brown's horſe was either a very dark brown, or black; the other horſe can be produced, which is in the ſtable; it is a bay horſe, there is a large ſtar in the forehead, and white ſlip on his noſe; I have ſeen that horſe ſince at Bow-ſtreet.

Was the horſe you ſaw at Bow-ſtreet the ſame horſe the robbery was committed on?——Yes, I can ſwear that is the horſe the little man rode that robbed my lady.

What dreſs were they in when they came into Bow-ſtreet?——Brown had a brown coat on, a kind of a drab coat.

Court. That cannot be of much conſequence; did you take notice of their clothes beſides their great coats?——I had not a proper ſight of the coat, but what I ſaw of the great coat, was the ſame coat they appeared in at Bow-ſtreet.

Mr. Garrow. You ſay Wood's coat was muffled up about him ſo high, and the hat ſo low, and the handkerchief over his face; was Brown's hat in the ſame way?—When they committed the robbery, there was nothing viſible in the face of either of them, but one eye, and that was the right eye, that was uncovered as nigh as I can gueſs, I am ſure it was the right eye.

Have you ever ſince ſeen either of the great coats the priſoners had on?—No.

You made no other obſervation on the horſe, but that it had a ſtar on the forehead and a ſlit on the noſe?—Yes, I ſaw it was a kind of a blood horſe, the tail juſt docked; it was a mare.

How long might this robbery be in committing?

mitting?——Their time with me and my lady, I ſuppoſe, might be ten minutes at leaſt.

You obſerved all theſe marks particularly?—Yes.

Sir Thomas ſaw theſe two men afterwards?—He came down and aſked me if I could ſwear to the men if I ſaw them; I ſaid I believed I could ſwear to the tall man; he told me he had traced two men to the livery ſtables, and ſaw them ſhut themſelves in the ſtable.

The next day you was told you was to go to Bow-ſtreet and ſee them?——I expected to find Brown there; I did find him there.

Was you examined before Sir Thomas?—He was taken in firſt.

After that, I take it for granted, you ſwore to him too?—I ſaw him before Sir Thomas ſaw him.

You have ſaid to the beſt of your judgment he is the man?——Yes.

Do you mean to ſay, that if you had met him, you ſhould have known him to be the man?—I knew him at the Office.

But then you knew he was the man that had commited the robbery?——I was ſure of it.

Court. If you had met this man any where but at the Office?—Let me have met him where I would I ſhould have known him to be the man, I toook ſo much notice of him.

PATRICK MACMANUS ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Silveſter.

I went with Sir Thomas's coachman to Wood's houſe, I went firſt after Brown; Mr. Carpmeal, Jealous, Clarke, and I, went to Brown's mother's houſe, in Chapel-ſtreet, on the 11th of November, we ſaw Mr. Brown ſtanding in Chapel-yard, ſays Clarke, was you riding out yeſterday? yes, ſays he, I was; who was with you? Mr. Wood, of Kentiſh Town; he ſaid they went over Weſtminſter-bridge, and came home that way, as near as I can recollect; he aſked him where the horſe was that Wood rode yeſterday; he ſaid he was gone to graſs; ſays I to him, we want you for a highway robbery; ſays he, I never did ſuch a thing in my life; ſays I, you muſt go down to Bow-ſtreet; ſays he, let me go into my houſe; ſays I, by all means: Clarke and Jealous went to look for Sir Thomas, I ſat five or ſix minutes with Brown, I told him, you muſt come away, I cannot ſtay any longer; I took him to Bow-ſtreet, and put him into a back parlour, and went over the way and told Mr. Bond; I ſaw Brown no more till after ſix: late at night I went to Kentiſh Town, with two ſervants of Sir Thomas Davenport's, and another man; I ſent the coachman to ſee whether he knew any body in the houſe, he went in two or three ſteps, and turned round and ſaid to me, here is the man; as ſoon as Mrs. Wood ſaw us, ſhe had been at Bow-ſtreet that day and knew the buſineſs; ſays Mrs. Wood, you come for my huſband; yes, ſays I.

Court. You mean to ſay, that ſhe knew you was coming to take up her huſband?——I apprehended ſo, becauſe ſhe was at Bow-ſtreet when Brown was fully committed, and ſhe was at home when I got there; ſo I ſuppoſe ſhe told her huſband: Wood, ſaid, Gentlemen, do not make any noiſe or diſturbance here, there is a club in my houſe, and I went up ſtairs, and I ſuppoſe we might ſtop beſt part of half an hour, during that time the bell rung once or twice, and Wood wanted to go out, no, ſays I, you cannot, for Brown is fully committed, and I am accountable for you; ſo he did not aſk to go out any more till we came to Bow-ſtreet: I aſked him to get his great coat, and he ſaid it was not at home: then we brought him to Bow-ſtreet; I know of nothing paſſing at the Brown Bear.

Do you know this horſe?——I know the horſe that I ſaw at Bow ſtreet, it is Wood's horſe, he told me ſo himſelf; ſays I, we muſt bring your mare to town, ſays he, do not bring her to night, you will find it in the ſtable in the morning; he told me it was a poor thing, and he took a vaſt deal of pains to get it round.

Mr. Garrow. What time was the firſt examination of Brown?——Some time between twelve and one.

What became of Brown till the evening when he was re-examined?——I do not know, I heard he went home with his friend, and ſtaid till the evening.

Whether when he came back again in the evening, he was in any cuſtody, or came voluntary?——I believe he was not in cuſtody in the evening when he came back, but I do not know.

Whoſe writing is that?—I do not know, but I believe it is Allen the clerk's writing.

Do you know whether there was any ſuch meſſage as that ſent to Wood, before you went to Kentiſh Town?—Yes, I am ſure there was, I do not know the hour, there was fault found with ſomebody at the office that that meſſage was not ſent, and a note was produced to ſhew it had been ſent.

So that not only by Mr. Wood, but alſo by the note, he knew that Brown had been committed for this offence?——I do not know, Mrs. Wood was there.

Brown immediately told you all, and went immediately to Bow ſtreet, and came voluntarily again in the evening?—Yes.

On the evening of the robbery, or the next day, deſcription was given of the particulars of the perſons and the horſes?——Yes.

It was inſerted in the hue and cry papers?——I do not know, I believe it was entered in a book as uſual.

Has any part of this remarkable property been recovered ſince?——No.

And it was at the diſtance of a month before theſe perſons were apprehended?—Yes.

Mr. Wood told you there was his horſe, and there it ſhould be the next day?—Yes.

Was there a club that night at Wood's houſe?—I believe there was a club, for I heard the people ſinging up ſtairs myſelf.

You ſay when he wanted to go out, and there was ringing, to attend his buſineſs, you do not mean it as a deſign to eſcape?—No.

Did you ſee any great coats?——I never found any great coats, they were both aſked for great coats, and they ſaid they were not at home.

CHARLES WATKINS ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Silveſter.

I am a ſhoe-maker, was you on the road on the 10th of October?—Yes, on the Harrow road, between three and four miles from town, I met two men on horſeback about five o'clock.

Should you know them again?—They had their faces covered, ſo that I could not ſwear to them, they had handkerchiefs over their faces.

Court. Did you take notice of the horſes?——Yes, one was a bay horſe, and the other was a blackiſh horſe.

Had either of them any marks?——I do not recollect any marks, I did not take particular notice of them, I ſaw them ride by me on the road pretty ſwift, I ſaw one of the horſes ſince at the ſtable at Bow ſtreet, it appeared to be the ſame horſe.

Who ſhewed you the horſe?——One of Sir Sampſon's men, he came with us by Sir Sampſon's orders, and me and Sir Thomas's coachman came together.

Mr. Garrow. Who are you?—A ſhoemaker.

So I have heard, where do you live?—In White's Alley, Chancery Lane, I have lived there a twelvemonth, I am an apprentice to Mr. Mountjoy.

How came you to be on the Harrow road?——I went along with my father, I cannot ſay for the day of the month, I know it was on Monday, I think it was the 13th, my father was very much in liquor that day.

You had been walking with your father?——Yes.

Which way were the men riding?——Towards Harrow.

Is your father here to day?—No, he did not ſee them, I went to the Crown at Wilſdon green and I left him, it was as I was coming back alone.

When did you firſt tell this notable ſtory of yours?—I told it that day.

Who

Who to?—I told it to my maſter.

How came you here as a witneſs to day?——Sir Thomas ſent for me.

How did he know of it?—By Mr. Francis, a gentleman, whoſe chaiſe I was behind, it was a ſingle horſe chaiſe, he was in, I was behind it.

Are you ſure it was the 13th on your oath?—I cannot punctually ſay it was the 13th, I will not ſwear it was not the 14th, it was of a Monday in October.

Mr. Silveſter. Did they ſtop any body at all that day?——They ſtopped Mr. Francis.

Mr. Silveſter to Riley. You went with that young lad to the ſtables I underſtand, near Bow ſtreet?——Yes, I ſhewed him Wood's horſe.

Court to Watkins. What were their faces covered with?—A handkerchief.

THOMAS FRANCIS ſworn.

I was returning on the 11th of October, on the Edgware road, on Monday I met two men that were dreſſed in drab coats and round hats, I believe they were great coats, I am not ſure.

Did you make any obſervations as to the perſons of theſe men?——The ſize of the men I think I know.

Look at theſe two men?——They are very near the ſize as near as poſſible, as to the face I did not ſee, I have ſeen the little bay horſe or mare, I do not know which, I ſaw him in a ſtable near Bow-ſtreet.

Who ſhewed you the horſe?——One of the people belonging to the office.

Did you make any obſervation of the horſe, ſo as to know the horſe again?——Yes.

Now the perſons you met on that road, was one of them on that horſe?——Yes.

Court. Do you mean to ſay that poſitively?——No, my Lord, I am not ſure, as near as I can gueſs.

At what time in the afternoon was it or morning?——About five minutes paſt five as near as poſſible, between the three and four mile ſtones, on the Edgware and Harrow road.

Was any thing over their faces?——Yes, a ſilk handkerchief.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, I have a great number of witneſſes to prove as clear and complete an alibi for the priſoners, and for Wood who was in his own houſe at Kentiſh town, as ever was proved in a Court of Juſtice; they are people of characters beyond all ſuſpicion; then I have a croud of witneſſes to the character of the priſoners; I have witneſſes to prove the purpoſes theſe people were out on, a very lawful purpoſe, on the 11th of November.

Court. That cannot be neceſſary to be ſure a month after.

Mr. Garrow. Then I will begin with the 11th of October.

PRISONER WOOD's DEFENCE.

My Lord, and Gentlemen of the Jury, I have heard the evidence againſt me with aſtoniſhment, I ſuppoſe Sir Thomas Davenport has too good a heart to attempt to take away the life of an innocent man; therefore I have no doubt but he believes me to be one of the men who robbed his Lady: but I truſt your Lordſhip's candour and goodneſs will not admit any kind of prejudice to bear away your opinions in this buſineſs, until you have fully heard the witneſſes I ſhall call to prove where I was on the evening of the 11th of October, and alſo to ſpeak to my character; God knows it is the firſt time I ever was deprived of my liberty, and though brought before you in irons as a felon, the integrity of my heart ſtill adminiſters comfort: on my ſecond examination in Bow-ſtreet, many people attended who had been robbed on the 12th of October, near Twickenham, by two men; a ſhort man and a tall one, diſguiſed with ſilk handkerchiefs, they viewed me but all agreed I was not the perſon; ſtrange would it have been if they had, for that was the day I waited on my friends, which I had at my houſe; I mention this circumſtance, becauſe it is poſſible thoſe that robbed Sir Thomas on the 11th, are the ſame who robbed on the 12th near Twickenham, for they declare them to be disguised with silk handkerchiefs, as Sir Thomas Davenport had done before.

PRISONER BROWN's DEFENCE (Read.)

I am so unfortunate as to stand before this tribunal, charged with a crime of which I most solemnly declare I am not guilty; however respectable the characters of my prosecutors may be, however great their veracity, they are unquestionably mistaken as to my being one one of the persons who robbed them.—Similitude of persons may have deceived the prosecutors, unhappily in regard to me; such instances I am afraid have too often occured.—My parents in my infancy instructed and educated me in habits of honesty, industry, and integrity; and I have religiously observed their good instructions, without deviating from those paths.—My situation, and the circumstances in life of my parents being far from necessitous, under whose immediate inspection I have been hitherto brought up, I never was induced by any unlawful means to defraud or deceive any man, however easy it might have been effected, and how remote soever the detection of such crimes might be; much less could I, in the face of the sun be guilty of such an atrocious crime as I am now charged with.—I challenge all mankind who know me, to charge me with the commission of any dishoneſt act, and I again solemnly declare, I am not one of the persons who committed the crime, I am now arraigned for; and I trust that by the aid of that Divine Providence, who guards and protects the innocent, I shall prove to the satisfaction of the Court and Jury, by witnesses of credit and veracity, that on the day, and at the time the prosecutors charge the robbery to have been committed, I was in my mother's house; and that by testimony of a great number of respectable witnesses, my innocence will be so fully and effectually proved, that I shall be by this Honorable Court and Jury, acquitted of the crime laid to my charge, and dismissed from the bar as an injured innocent young man.

ARTHUR FREKE sworn.

I am an apothecary at Kentish Town, I attended the prisoner Wood on the 6th of October, with a complaint in his bowels, his head was at that time wrapped up; on enquiry, I found he had received a blow on the Sunday before by a brick thrown at him; I attended him to the ninth on Saturday morning, his face was then in some degree of extravasation, on account of the small wound, and in some degree swelled, on the ninth I directed him not to go out for some days.

What is the character of Mr. Wood, I know him only as being landlord of that house at Kentish Town, since Lady day last; I never heard any thing ill of the man, I believe his general character has been that of an honeſt man, he keeps the Assembly house at Kentish Town.

MARY WILSON sworn.

I remember being at the house of Mr. Wood at Kentish Town on the 11th of October in the morning; I had been there some months as companion to Mrs. Wood, and to assist in some measure in the business; he was at home on the 11th of October, in the fore part of the day he was bottling wine in the cellar till dinner time; on the 12th there was an entertainment at his house, I saw him at dinner time; my husband, Mr. Wilson, came rather before four, and staid till after six, I saw Mr. Wood the whole time, I was called down stairs to speak to my husband, and Mr. Wood was standing in the bar when my husband came in, and he was never out of my sight during that time.

The remainder of this Trial in our next Part which will be Publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 8th of DECEMBER, 1784, and the following Days;

Being the FIRST SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR of SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER I. PART III.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Paſter-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXIV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE PROCEEDINGS UPON THE KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of Thomas Wood and George Brown.

Court. What day of the week?—It was of a Monday.

Court. Can you be poſitively ſure, from the time your huſband came in, Wood was never out of your ſight?—He was never out of my preſence from five, till after my huſband went away, not for five minutes; my huſband had a pint of beer, and Mr. Wood aſked me to make him ſome Hollands and water, as he was cold with bottling the wine, and had not been well for ſome days before.

Do you remember ſeeing Mrs. Sanders there?—Yes, ſhe came in as near as I can recollect, about a quarter paſt five, I cannot ſpeak to a minute, ſhe came in to pay Mr. Wood for ſome rum ſhe had had.

Was there any thing remarkable in the converſation between them?——She aſked Mr. Wood how he did, ſhe is the wife of the apothecary in that neighbourhood; he told her he was obliged to her, he was better than he had been, ſhe ſaid ſhe came to pay him a trifle, ſhe gave him half a guinea to change, and ſhe was rather angry with Mr. Wood, for not employing Mr. Sanders as his apothecary in preference to Mr. Freke; he ſaid he was not fond of doctors, ſhe ſaid, if you are not fond of doctors, they need not be fond of your beer: Mr. Sanders was there all the time at the door waiting for his wife, this was about a quarter after five, and ſhe was there about a quarter of an hour, Mrs. Wood was gone to town to order things for the feaſt the next day, at that time there was no maid ſervant, ſhe went away on old Michaelmas day, which was the day before, it was the laſt feaſt that Mr. Wood ever had till laſt week.

What became of Wood after that?——He and I ſat in the bar till ſuch time as Mrs. Wood came back, he was not ten minutes out of my preſence, from that time till I went to bed.

Mr. Silveſter. You are a married woman?—Yes, my huſband is ſervant to Mr. Kendall the banker; the family conſiſted of Mr. Wood, his wife, and two children by the firſt huſband.

Did you ſet down this converſation?—I recollected every circumſtance in my own mind.

What makes you recollect ſo poſitively?——Having a feaſt the next day, a particular friend of Mrs. Sanders's dined there the next day, I can recollect it, Sir, exceeding ing well, in thoſe caſes, people have a right to endeavour to recollect every thing; it was the day after old Michaelmas day, he had been ill, and had not been from home ſome days before nor after.

Was there a receipt given for this rum? ——There was no occaſion, it was not booked, it was chalked.

If he was at home ſo many days before it, and ſo many days after, how come you to recollect juſt that particular day?—I particularly recollect Mrs. Wood being without a ſervant, I am poſitive of it being the 10th of October, the feaſt was on the 12th, a feaſt at Mr. Wood's of his tradeſmen.

Who told you it was on the 11th, that the robbery was charged to be committed? ——I did not want to be told, I know he was at home the 11th of October, Mr. Wood had a note from Bow Street, to appear, and there was the 11th of October dated in that note, but if not whether or no, he was at home that day, the 11th of October was dated in that note, I do not recollect from that note I know when the 11th of October was.

From whom did you hear firſt of all that the robbery was committed on the 11th of October?——Mrs. Wood came home and ſaid a robbery had been committed, and he and Brown would be accuſed.

(A note handed up.)

Mr. Juſtice Willes. It is a miſtake in the note, for it is dated the 11th of October, inſtead of November?—The 11th of October was dated in that note, I ſaw the note, I know it was the day after Michaelmas-Day, that the ſervant was gone.

Where was Mr. Wood on the 18th of October?——It is the feaſt makes me recollect it was the 11th of October, and being without a maid ſervant, this is the day after the ſervant left him.

What had Mr. Wood to do on the 11th?——He bottled wine in the morning, and he was not well, he had received a blow.

This wine was bottling for the feaſt; ——I cannot ſay what it was for.

Had he any body to aſſiſt him in the bottling this wine?——The waiter, he was to leave him as ſoon as the feaſt was over, he was not well, he was in the bar all the time, except a few minutes, Mr. Sanders waited at the door and ſaid to his wife, come we ſhall be too late, he was going to drink tea at Mrs. Evans's in the Town.

What makes you ſo particular as to the time?——I cannot be particular to a minute, my huſband ſaid he muſt be going home, he is a ſervant, I ſaid ſtay and have a cup of tea, Mr. Sanders waited at the door a few minutes.

Is not this mare a little mare with a ſwitch tail?—I do not know any thing about the tail, it was lame; I went to the ſtable door with my huſband when he went away.

What clothes does Mr. Wood generally wear?——Black and brown and light-coloured.

I ſuppoſe he had a great coat on that day?——I never ſaw him in a great coat in my life, he had no great coat, I never ſaw a great coat of his in the houſe.

You do not believe he had a great coat? ——I have heard gentlemen aſk him, and I have heard him ſay he was ſorry he could not lend them one; he had not one to lend; I was up two pair of ſtairs when Macmanus came, when I came down I ſaw two gentlemen in the room, I went down to the bar; the Monday after I was in town, and came home by the ſtage, when I came home he was gone to the Bull and Gate, in the town.

GEORGE WILSON ſworn.

I am groom to Mr. Kendall, the banker, my wife has for ſome time paſt been at the houſe of Mr. Wood, at Kentiſh Town; I remember going there on the 11th of October, about four o'clock.

Who did you ſee there, and what paſſed? —I ſaw Mrs. Sanders there about ten minutes after five.

Was Mr. Wood at home himſelf?—Yes, he was in the bar.

Do

Do you remember drinking any thing there?—Yes.

What had you?——A pint of beer, Mr. Wood had some Hollands and water, my wife made it for him.

Was she called down for the purpose of making it for him?——I do not recollect: I left there about a quarter past six, Mr. Wood was not out of my presence five minutes during the time, from four till a quarter past six.

What day of the week was it?—Monday, I am sure of it.

By what reason are you induced to be sure of it?—It was the day after Old Michaelmas day, Mrs. Wood was writing the cards for the feast, which was to be on the 12th, and I saw the 12th on the cards.

Do you remember Mrs. Sanders being there?——Yes, I did not pay any attention to any thing that passed, she staid about a quarter of an hour, and Mrs. Sanders came in about eight minutes after his wife.

Did they go away together?—I do not recollect that.

Do you recollect Mrs. Sanders paying any money to Mr. Wood?——She did pay some money for a bill for some beer.

Cross-examined by Mr. Silvester.

Your wife has lived some time at Mr. Wood's?——Yes.

Then you frequently went to see her?—Yes, two or three times in a week.

When did you first hear of this robbery?——I do not recollect.

What makes you so particularly positive to the day you are now speaking of?—It was the day after Old Michaelmas Day, and Mrs. Wood was writing the cards, which was in the middle of the week before, it was on a Friday that I saw her writing the cards.

Did you see Mrs. Wood that day, the 11th of October?——No, she was gone to town to buy fish.

Was not there a good deal of conversation between Mrs. Sanders and Mr. Wood?—I believe there was; I believe she found fault with him, I did not pay any attention to it.

It seems very odd, when you heard Mrs. Sanders find fault with Mr. Wood, that you did not attend to what passed?——I remember Mr. Sanders coming in about eight minutes after.

Did not Mrs. Sanders tell Mr. Wood, he ought to employ her husband as an apothecary?——I do not recollect that.

Do you recollect his being in your company all the time you was there?—He was once in the kitchen.

Were there many customers in the house, in different parts of the house?—I believe there was, but I did not see them.

Do you remember Mr. Wood's giving a bill to Mrs. Sanders?—No.

JANE SANDERS sworn.

I am wife to Mr. Sanders, apothecary, Kentish Town.

Do you remember being at the house of Mr. Wood, on the 11th of October?——Yes, Sir, perfectly well.

What day of the week?—Monday.

What time of the day?——At a quarter past five, I was going a visiting, to spend the evening with Mrs. Evans, in Chapel-row, Mr. Sanders was with me, I owed Mr. Wood a small trifle, about a couple of shillings, I went to pay him, he gave me no receipt, I did not think it required a receipt.

Do you recollect any conversation that passed between you and Mr. Wood?—Yes, perfectly well, Mr. Wood has not been long at the Assembly-house; when he come round to Mr. Sanders for his business, Mr. Sanders told him, certainly he should continue at the house; Mr. Wood had some accident and was ill, I heard of it, and I thought it unkind of him not to employ Mr. Sanders, I thought I would tell him of it myself; I do not come out of any prejudice to Mr. Wood, but merely to do justice; as Mr. Sanders thought I staid long, he came to fetch me out, he walked on the road and waited for me, he told me not to ſtop. I told him I choſe to ſtop to ſpeak to Mr. Wood, who gave me change for half a guinea; I ſuppoſe I was at the ſide of Mr. Wood's bar for ten minutes or a quarter of an hour. I think I may very well gueſs the time of the day, by our going to tea; I am ſure of the time from Mr. Sanders's books, and, beſides, I am as regular as clock-work.

not

Are you ſure from that regularity that that was the day?——Yes, I am perfectly ſure, I have other proofs, I waſh regularly once in three weeks, and I walked with a friend to London on the 9th, and ſhe went to ſee a friend, who died in her arms on Saturday, which precedes the Monday; there is a grocer can juſtify all I ſaid of Mr. Wood being ungrateful to Mr. Sanders: I remember ſeeing a woman and a man there.

Mr. Silveſter. You are as regular as clock-work; perhaps you put down where you drink tea?—I do not.

Court. How does it appear by Mr. Sanders's books?—Why Monday the 11th of October.

You did not ſet down in the books thoſe expences for the rum and beer?—No, Sir, we did not; Mr. Sanders ſet ſome things down on the day we went to drink tea with Mr. Evans; Mr. Sanders attends the family as apothecary. I have reaſon to know it is the 11th of October, I have given my reaſon, I am very juſt in my reaſons that I paid for it the 11th of October, becauſe Mr. Wood had a feaſt the next day, and the grocer I deal with had told me on the Saturday before, when I was in town, of Mr. Wood having employed another apothecary; I am certain to the time, I have no other account of it.

Court. How does it appear by the books?——It appears to me by my being in town on the 9th of October, which was Saturday, and I paid Mr. Wood on the 11th, which was the Monday after.

Mr. Silveſter. But how does that appear?——It appears to me in my own breaſt, as you aſk me ſo many queſtions.

Then the books have nothing to do with it?——You may croſs me as much as you pleaſe, I am ſure of the time.

How do you know it was that time of the day?—I looked at my clock when I went out.

That is a remarkable thing I ſuppoſe?—I do not know that it is, I have reaſon, my girl told me I was to go ſoon, I go very early to drink tea with that lady.

The maid told you, you ſhould loſe your tea?——No.

How came you to delay at this publick houſe?—I choſe it, and I ſhould not have had an opportunity another time.

Well, but as the maid told you, you are too late, yet you ſtay a quarter of an hour at the publick houſe to pay this two ſhilling bill?——Suppoſe I did, my huſband would not think I was wrong, I do not think you have any right to aſk me.

Mr. Wood had been poorly?—He had been ill.

Was not he poorly then?—I cannot tell, I did not aſk him; I had no right to deal with him, as he did not employ Mr. Sanders.

Had he a great coat, buttoned up?—I do not know that he had a great coat on.

Was his face wrapped up?——I do not know that he had any thing about his face.

Mr. Garrow. Mrs. Sanders, if I underſtood you right, that on the Saturday when you was in town, your grocer told you that he was going to a feaſt, and that Wood had employed another apothecary?—Yes.

Then you remember that you was in town on the 9th;——Yes, Sir.

You do not go out to tea at three in the afternoon, I ſuppoſe?——I do not.

No, I thought not.

WALKER SANDERS ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Garrow.

I am an apothecary at Kentiſh Town; I remember going with Mrs. Sanders to Mrs. Evans's on the 11th of October, my wife called at Mr. Wood's, ſhe went in firſt, and ſhe ſtaid I imagine about a quarter of an an hour, I went in thinking she was rather tedious, and we should be too late where we were going to tea; we went away together, when I went in I saw Mr. Wood and a woman at the bar, a Mrs. Wilson.

Do you remember seeing any other person?——I do not.

Do you recollect with certainty that this was on the 11th of October?——Yes, with great certainty.

State to the Jury, by what circumstance you are certain it was that day?——On the 10th, we dined at home, and on the 11th we had a message to invite us to tea; I had been at Mrs. Evans's the Sunday before, and she was rather indisposed, I wanted her to come and see us, she said, she could not come, but on the Monday she sent up a message, to desire to see us.

Now are you quite certain?——Quite certain, positive.

Do your books assist you?—I am perfectly sure.

What time of the day did you go out?——About a quarter past five.

Mr. Shephard. Your family and Mrs. Evans are very intimate?——Yes.

You frequently visit each other?——Yes, both before the 11th of October, and since.

Why do you recollect particularly, that you visited on the 11th of October?—We visited only once since, that was on the 19th of October.

How long afterwards was it, that you recollected so particularly you had been there on the 11th, you did not think of it every day?——No, Sir, but I have things in my book that reminded me, Mrs. Evans was poorly.

What induced you to recollect particularly being there on the 11th?——I cannot say particularly.

Did you ever positively, recollect that you had been there on the 11th till you heard of the robbery?——Yes, Sir, I did.

What induced you to recollect it so particularly?—By looking in my books.

What appeared in your books to assist your memory?——Mrs. Evans was poorly, and had a bottle of medicine on the 9th; I went to see her on the Sunday, and also on the Monday, and she had no more.

There were no medicines on the 11th?——There were no medicines on the 10th, or 11th, or 12th, but I know it in my own mind, I sent a medicine two days before, on the 9th, which was Saturday, to a young Lady there.

Mr. Garrow. Now this Gentleman asks you when you began to recollect it, I take it for granted you always knew it, and you began to recollect it when Mr. Wood was taken up?—Yes.

ROBERT FORD sworn.

I am a gardener at Kentish town.

Do you remember being employed by Wood at any time about old Michelmas day?—I remember I was employed on Monday the 11th of October, I was at work in Mr. Wood's garden, till it was far advanced in the afternoon, and I had finished my job about sixteen or seventeen minutes after four o'clock, I work by the day, and I charge according to my time; I did not do a whole day's work, I said to myself, a very honest three quarters of a day's work.

You say you was at work, meal times excepted?—I had my meals in Mr. Wood's house, my dinner a little after two o'clock, I saw Mr. Wood at the time I had my dinner, when I left off work I went directly in doors, and I met Mr. Wood in the passage, I told him I had earthed up his asparagus beds, and done up his garden ready for the reception of his trades-people tomorrow; the trades-people were to be there the next day; after I had done, I sat down and had some beer, Mrs. Wilson said, she should want some herbs; says I, do you want them directly, no, says she, any time this evening; I staid in the house till I heard Mr. Wood call Mrs. Wilson to get some tea, I thought it was a very early time, the clock wanted about a minute of five; Mr. Wood called again to Mrs. Wilson to make haste and get tea; as Mr. Wilson was going home, I went out to the garden for a quarter of an hour, when I came in again, there was Mr. Wood and Mrs. Wilſon in the bar, and tea things, but I did not ſee them drink any tea; I went into the kitchen, I heard ſomebody come in whoſe voice I knew very well, a boy came into the kitchen, ſays I, who is that? he ſaid, Mrs. Saunders is paying my maſter his ſcore; I did not ſee her, I knew her voice, and I recollected it when the boy told me; I continued in the houſe from that time till about half after ſeven, and then I went to bed; I lodge under the aſſembly room at Mr. Wood's.

was

Was Mr. Wood out of his houſe for any length of time amounting to ten minutes from the time you finiſhed your work? —If ever he was out of the houſe, it was the little time I went into the garden, to get the herbs, I had the opportunity of ſeeing him, I did in fact ſee him every two or three minutes; I heard him calling the boys, Mrs. Wood was gone to London, to beſpeak ſome things for the dinner the next day, ſo he told me; I aſked him why he did not come into the garden, to ſee me do the work, and he ſaid, he was not well.

Mr. Silveſter. He was ill at that time? ——He had been ill, and continued to be poorly, I do not know what was the matter with him.

Was he muffled up?—He was, I think he had a great coat on, as he walked through the paſſage; but I will not be poſitive on it, whether he had or had nor, I cannot tell.

What coloured great coat coat does he generally wear, blue is not it?—I cannot remember any thing about it, he was ſomehow muffled up, but I cannot ſay, I cannot recollect whether he drank tea; I heard no particular complaint but that Mr. Wood was ill, he did not come into the garden to me.

You do not recollect the colour of his great coat?—I do not remember any thing particular, I do not know that ever I ſaw him wear a great coat.

JOSEPH MERETON ſworn.

I am a day labouring man at Kentiſhtown. Do you recollect in the month of October, working for farmer Hedges the 11th of October, or within a hundred yards of Mr. Wood's houſe; where did you bait?—On the 11th of October, I had ſome bread and cheeſe in my pocket, and when I was hungry, I went in for a pint of beer; I went in at nine and at twelve, and Mr. Wood was ordering his tapſter to get ſomething for dinner the next day, one article was a bottle of ketchup; I ſaid, I had ſome very good, I could help him to ſome, he ſaid, when can I have it, I ſaid, this evening; I went to carry it, and his clock ſtruck five while I was in the tap room; I called for a pint of beer, and ſtaid and drank it in the value of four or five minutes; I ſaw Mr. Wood, and wiſhed him a good night, and he ſaid, my wife is not at home, ſhe will pay you when you call again, I do not pay for theſe things; I ſaw Mr. Wood, and ſpoke to him.

What day of the week was this?—— Monday.

What induces you to remember it was the 11th of October?—Old Michaelmas-day was on the 10th, and we poor Warwickſhire folks have a feaſt.

Mr. Garrow. You Warwickſhire wags have a feaſt?—Yes, we keep a feaſt at the firſt public houſe, we keep that day in preſerve.

Court. Had you kept Old Michaelmas day?—It was ſabbath day, we only went and had a pint or two of beer together, three or four that came from Warwickſhire.

Mr. Silveſter. How nigh was the 11th of October, to Old Michaelmas-day?—— Why, one was next the other.

You are very ſure it was?—Yes.

Did he tell you why he wanted the ketchup?—For the feaſt.

What feaſt?——I cannot tell.

RICHARD MEUX Eſq; ſworn.

I have known Mr. Wood from July 1781, he has dealt with me as his brewer.

What has been his general character as to oneſty?—Exceedingly fair and candid, In ever was at his houſe; but our clerks always always made a report of him, as a very honeſt and induſtrious man; and he was a man that I have given credit to, to the amount of five or ſix hundred pounds, I always looked upon him as a man of property.

GREGORY BATEMAN, Eſq; ſworn.

I live in Kentiſh town, I have known him ever ſince he kept the Aſſembly room, he is a tenant of mine; I have that opinion of him, that had he come to me, I would have lent him twenty or thirty pounds; the Gentlemen of the village meet there every week.

The Rev. Mr. WHITCHURCH ſworn.

His character was generally fair, as far as it particularly may have fallen under my obſervation, I have heard nothing amiſs of him.

Mr. PARKER ſworn.

I have known him ſix or ſeven months, he ſeemed a very honeſt induſtrious man.

Mr. PARS ſworn.

I have known him near four years, his character was as good, as ever I knew a man in my life, I ſerve him with brandy; he is as honeſt a man as ever I dealt with.

Mr. MURRELL ſworn.

I have known him about a twelvemonth, he has an extraordinary character, I appraiſed him into the houſe, and ſaw him pay down three hundred and fifty pounds for the goods.

Mr. BROUGHTON ſworn.

I am a fiſhmonger, I have known him but a very little time.

Do you remember the day before his feaſt, his wife coming to you?——Yes, on Monday the 11th of October, I dined there on the 12th, and Mr. Wood was at home all the time attending his company on the 12th.

FOR THE PRISONER BROWN.

EDWARD GREEN ſworn.

I live in Theobald's-road, No. 40; in the neighbourhood of Brown's houſe, I have known the priſoner at the bar, ever ſince he was born; I have uſed his mother's houſe forty-one years, the ſign of the King's arms, in Chapel-ſtreet, I was at that houſe on the evening of the 11th of October, I never miſſed one night in the year, I do not ſuppoſe I have miſſed it two nights theſe twenty years, I recollect in particular being there on the 11th of October, becauſe I never miſſed a night, I go there about a quarter of an hour after five; I ſaw the young man at the bar, Brown, on the 11th of October, I ſaw him as I went through the kitchen, ſitting by the fire; I called for a pint of beer, and in about half an hour after he came into the room where I was, and fell aſleep.

Did you ſee the ſervant of the houſe there?—Yes, he came in, and ſat with his ſide to the fire; I ſays to the girl, George will cut but a poor figure in the club, this was a lottery club; I ſaid to the girl, I believe George is done enough on that ſide, get a bit of butter and baſte him.

How long did he continue there?—But a very little while, the maid deſired him to go to bed, and went away with him to get him to bed, as I underſtood; it muſt be paſt ſix, I had been there near an hour; I am ſure he was there at that time.

How do you recollect it was the 11th of October?——Becauſe there was a lottery club, I do not belong to it.

Have you any doubt whether it was the 11th of October?——I have no doubt, I cannot miſs a night, becauſe I am there every night.

But are you ſure, that particularly on that night, the priſoner at the bar was there?——Yes, I am ſure he was, I have known him from his infancy, and have dreſſed him many times, he was always a down-right honeſt lad.

Mr. Silveſter. It is certain you was there?——Yes.

You never miſs a night going to the Alehouſe?——No Sir never.

What are you?——A ſtay-maker, at No. 40, Theobald's Row.

How often does this club meet?—Once a fortnight, I do not belong to it.

What was there particular about his being at home that night?——On account of the Club.

Is not he at home every night?—Yes, very ſeldom miſſes, he may go out, he came and ſat by me after I had been in the houſe pretty near an hour.

Where he had been before that time you do not know?——No, about ſeven the maid took him to bed.

Was that his uſual time of going to bed?——I cannot tell his time, he went away for the purpoſe of going to bed at ſeven or thereabouts, he was in company with me about half an hour.

How was he dreſſed?——In a browniſh coat, a drab colour'd coat, a ſtrait bodied coat, an under coat.

Was he tired?——I do not know.

Court. Had he boots on?——I believe he had.

HETTY OWEN ſworn.

I am ſervant to this young man's mother, I have lived in the family about ten months, there is a lottery club meets at our houſe once a fortnight, always of a Monday night, I recollect it met on the 11th of October.

Do you remember whether the priſoner at the bar was there?——Yes Sir, he was at home but not at the club, the club met generally about eight.

How happened it that he was not at the club?——He was rather intoxicated in liquor, and did not chuſe to go in.

Where was he when the club met?——He was in bed, he went to bed about ſeven, or a little after.

Do you remember ſeeing Mr. Green there?—Yes, Brown went into the room to Mr. Green, and ſat down ſome time with him, and he dropped aſleep, he was rather near the fire, and Mr. Green ſaid to me, you had better bring a lump of butter and baſte George, for he is roaſted enough on that ſide.

What time in the evening might that be?——That was about ſix, as far as I can recollect.

How long had he been ſitting there before that time?——The value of half an hour.

How ſoon did he go to bed?—About ſeven, I am ſure this was on Monday the 11th of October.

What is it that makes you ſure of it?—I recollect his coming in about a quarter after three, we had all dined, and he had a red herring for his dinner, and my miſtreſs told him he need not have a red herring, for ſhe thought he had had liquor enough, without eating herrings to make him drier.

Did he continue in the houſe from that time?—He never was abſent from his mother's premiſes till the time he went to bed.

Is the young man uſually at home in his mother's buſineſs?——Yes, he is, he officiates as maſter; he continued in the buſineſs, till he was taken up, ever ſince I was in the family.

Mr. Sheppard. What day was the meeting of the club?—I cannot ſay what day of the month.

What day of the month was the meeting before?——There was no club held the night before, and both the nights were held on the 11th of October.

What became of him between the time of his dining and this time?——After he had done, the hoſtler came in and aſked him to drink a pint of beer with him, he came in about five, and the hoſtler went into the ſtables, and he directly went into the back room, and ſtaid there with Mr. Green, and never was abſent.

Had he been out on horſeback that day?—Not to my remembrance, he was not in the afternoon; the hoſtler might ſtay three quarters of an hour, and then he went in to Mr. Green, I was about the houſe about my buſineſs.

And you say positively that he never was absent not three minutes the whole afternoon?——He was not, my business is no further than the back room and the kitchen.

WILLIAM WEST sworn.

I am a hostler, I know the prisoner Brown very well, I remember being at his mother's house on a Monday in October; I remember seeing him in his mother's house on the 11th of October, the first time I saw him I recollect I came through the passage in my way to the kitchen, to see what it was o'clock, to water my horses, and I went into the kitchen with a half-penny-worth of apples, and asked him to eat one, and he knocked the apple out of my hand under the grate; then I called for a pint of beer and asked him to drink, this was about four, or between four and five; I suppose I staid half an hour, or three-quarters of an hour, in his company in the kitchen.

Did he appear to be perfectly sober, as he is in general, or was there any thing particular in his appearance?—As far as I could see of him, he seemed to be rather intoxicated with liquor; I saw him again in the course of the evening, I staid till about five, and then went to water my horses at my usual time, between four and five, and about five, or half after, I came in again, and went to look at the dial, which I generally did, there was a lame gentleman, a stay-maker, his name is Green, as they tell me, that is the man; Brown was then sitting in a sleepy posture when I went to see what it was o'clock, I shut the door immediately; I was there as near as I can guess about a quarter before seven, and saw him in the back part, between the back room and the wash-house, he seemed to say he was going to bed, the maid servant was with him.

Mr. Silvester. Who are you hostler to?—I was hostler to Mr. Farren, a gentleman that rents stables on these premises; the publick house is a house that my master used always; Mr. Farren keeps horses to let out, I have lived with Mr. Farren three quarters of a year, I have used this house every evening, I knew Mr. Green very well by person, and by name as I have heard say.

Did Brown hire horses of your master?—I never knew the prisoner hire a horse of my master, he had not that day to the best of my knowledge.

Had he boots on?——Not as I know, I did not take any notice about it, I came in at four, and again at five, because I mistook the clock; in October I water the horses between four and five.

What made you know the day?——No further than I heard the men in the lottery club talking of it; they met about half after seven or eight.

What was Brown dressed in?——In a kind of a light coloured coat, a close bodied coat.

JOHN BAGGELLEY sworn.

I have known him ever since he was born, he lives at home with his mother; I have used the house for these twenty years, and have had an opportunity of observing his conduct, I have seen him always very attentive to his mother's business, I never heard the least suspicion of his character.

Mr. DUKE sworn.

I am a musical instrument maker in Great Ormond-street, I have known him from his petticoats, he has as good a character as ever I heard of any man in my life.

Mr. LUNN sworn.

I am a coal merchant, I have known this young man, Brown, sixteen years, his general character as to honesty has been good, I never heard an impeachment.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, a great many more respectable witnesses are ready.

THOMAS WOOD, GEORGE BROWN, } NOT GUILTY.

Prisoner Wood. My Lord, and Gentlemen of the Jury, I beg leave to return you my most sincere thanks.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. BARON HOTHAM.

5. CHARLES

5. CHARLES STONE was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 31ſt day of July laſt, five pair of ſilk and cotton ſtockings, value 30s. the property of Joſeph Thelwall, privily in his ſhop.

JOSEPH THELWALL ſworn.

I keep a hoſier's ſhop in St. Paul's, Covent Garden; on the 31ſt of July I loſt five pair of ſilk and cotton ſtockings, mixt, I loſt them out of my ſhop, it is an open ſhop, I ſell by retail; I was not at home at the time of the robbery, when I came home at nine at night, I found the houſe had been robbed, and the priſoner committed; I know nothing myſelf againſt the priſoner.

WILLIAM CHARNOCK ſworn.

On the 31ſt of July, on Saturday evening, I had been into the city on a little buſineſs, and as I was on my return, I was accoſted by a gentleman in the middle of the ſtreet, he ſaid if I would ſtop a minute, I ſhould ſee the ſhop-lifters, I was accoſted oppoſite a butcher's, at the beginning of New-ſtreet, Covent-garden; I went with him, and ſaw two men in Mr. Thelwall's ſhop, it was candle-light, I was about a dozen yards off; the priſoner was not one of the two; there were three or four men, and the priſoner was one of them, they ſtood at the turning of the corner in King-ſtreet, he was looking through the window, and in about ſix minutes he went right into the ſhop; theſe two men were in the ſhop, looking at different things on the right-hand counter; there were two women behind the counter, I ſaw the priſoner go behind the counter and take this bundle of ſtockings, he concealed it under his great coat, that he had acroſs his arm.

At what diſtance was you?—I was ſtanding on the oppoſite ſide of the way.

Could you ſee the priſoner's face?—Yes, he walked immediately from thence to two men that were by the counter, and put his head between the two men's ſhoulders, then he turned his face, and was coming out; I ſaid to the gentleman that was before me, that it was a ſin that he ſhould go out with the property. I immediately ran and took hold of his collar, he dropped the ſtockings on my ſhoe, and ſaid the other man had got them in his poſſeſſion, and they turned round and gave him ſome abuſive language; the other man ran off: the gentleman came to my aſſiſtance about two minutes after I had hold of him.

(The ſtockings produced and depoſed to.)

Proſecutor. I know them from the mode of their being done up, and marked with my own hand writing.

What is the value of them?——Thirty ſhillings they coſt me.

Priſoner. In what manner was the ſhop ſituated? he ſays he ſtood on the other ſide of the way; whether or no there was a light in that window?—Yes.

Was there two counters or one?—Two counters.

Was there any light at the counter where you ſaw me take the bundle from?—No.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

My Lord, I hope you will take it into conſideration, I had been to one Mr. Thompſon's, in the Haymarket, coming down New-ſtreet, I called for a hair ribbon, I went into this ſhop for one, and there were three people in the ſhop; I had not been in the ſhop the ſpace of two minutes, before two men came in and ſaid there were thieves in the ſhop, and immediately the other people ruſhed out of the ſhop; I never offered to run away, they took me, and ſaid I had taken ſomething, I ſaid I had not; he took the candle off the counter, and found the ſtockings on the ground by the door; I have not a friend in the world.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing, but not privately.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

6. THOMAS

6. THOMAS CHAPMAN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 24th of September laſt, one weather ſheep, price 20s. the property of James Gomm.

JAMES GOMM ſworn.

I am a farmer at Shepherd's-buſh, I loſt the ſheep on Monday night the 25th of September, I know no further, my bailiff told me ſo.

THOMAS GOFF ſworn.

I manage Mr. Gomm's farm at Shepherd's-buſh.

Does Mr. Gomm rent the farm, or is it his own?—Rents it, it is about a hundred acres; there were many weather ſheep upon the farm, they were intended for the butcher; I loſt one on the 24th of September, I miſſed it in the morning; the ſheep were marked G. D. George Dolling is the name of the man they were bought of; they were bought about ſix weeks before, down in Berkſhire; I ſearched after the ſheep, and found the blood in the place where he was killed, in the ſame field where he had been; I looked after the ſkin and could not find it, and I was looking after the entrails, and the priſoner watched me about, that gave me a ſuſpicion of him; the priſoner lived in a houſe adjoining to my maſter's field, near by the farm; we had two men threſhing in the barn, near the houſe, about fifty yards diſtant; I went and told the men, and got a warrant and ſearched the out-building of the priſoner's houſe, and the houſe, and found this bag, which had a patch upon it, and the mutton was in it, cut into quarters.

Court. Was the mutton warm or cold?—It was cold, it appeared to be freſh cut; the head and ſkin my brother found; the priſoner was gone to London when his houſe was ſearched. It was a weather ſheep.

How near was his houſe to this out-houſe?——Adjoining, all under one roof.

What time of the morning did you find it there?——About eleven o'clock.

GEORGE GOFF ſworn.

I am brother to the laſt witneſs, I was threſhing with another man in the barn, on Saturday the 25th of September, I began work between five and ſix, and whilſt I was working there, I ſaw the priſoner bring out a bag, that was between ſeven and eight, I ſaw him carry the bag out of his own houſe, into the ſtable, and put it down; I was between forty and fifty yards off; he carried the bag into the ſtable, the out-houſe adjoining to the dwelling houſe, I ſaw a patch upon the bag.

Could you ſee whether the bag was empty or full?——It appeared to have ſomething in it.

Had you, before your brother came and told you the ſheep was loſt, any ſuſpicion?——No.

How ſoon after you ſaw him come out of his houſe with a bag, was it that your brother came and told you that there was a ſheep loſt?—My brother came juſt after, and I told my brother, I ſuſpected the ſheep was in the bag, my brother got a ſearch warrant, and went into the out-houſe to ſearch for it, in the courſe of the afternoon I found this bag, and the fleſh of a ſheep, (the bag produced) there were four quarters of mutton, and ſome ſtakes cut off the loin, two loins were cut together, this is the bag, the priſoner was not at home when we ſearched; I found the ſkin directly behind his houſe, in a meadow of a Mr. Jones's premiſes, which the priſoner lived in, about a hundred yards from the priſoner's houſe or not ſo much, (the ſkin produced, marked G. D, and depoſed to by the other witneſſes) we tried the ſkin to the meat, and it all joined; the head was not ſtripped.

Thomas Goff. The head is not here, but it was ear marked, ſlit on the near ear.

Priſoner. George Goff ſwore they found the meat on my premiſes, which it was not, it was on Mr. Jones's premiſes; my wife lay-in, I juſt come out of the country from harveſt, I ſtaid at home two or three days, Mr. Jones was in the country, and Mrs. Jones

Jones desired me to come a day or two to work; I have no stable, nor a yard of ground but a little garden.

Court. In whose stable did you find it? —In Mr. Jones's stable, but the prisoner had the key of it for several days.

Court. Was it locked?—No.

JAMES PHARO sworn.

I was with the last witness, I am a constable, the mutton was found in that bag.

Prisoner. I set off in the morning on the Friday.

Court to Thomas Goff. You say he was sauntering about, how long did you observe him?—About two hours, from six to eight, he was not gone when I went to the barn, and when I came back from the barn the last time, he followed me down the lane, with the bag on his back; and I followed him up to Kensington Gravel-pits, and had him stopped and searched; and there was a double Gloucester cheese, and two meal-man's sacks, which he said, he was going to town with.

Prisoner. My Lord, I went with the horse and cart on Friday morning, I went to fetch a load of taters, it was eleven at night, before I came home with them, Mrs. Jones sent me when I had done my business, I set off to come home directly, I did not get up till the next morning near eight, and I got water in for my wife from the ponds; I had to go to town next day for two sacks of taters and I had a cheese, it was sent me up out of the country; I thought I could sell it, as it was a fine cheese, and I wanted the money; and buy some broken cheese that would do for me; I followed the witness down with the bag, there was a sow suckling some little pigs; says I to my wife, my dear, if I am not home time enough, do put the sow to the pigs, and she hung the keys on the door she had not locked it, and when I came home, I did not go in to lock it that night, and I was never in the stable till the next morning, that I went to let the sow out; the keys hung upon the lock, the door had not been locked all that night, because I came home so late, I went to bed directly; he followed me to Kensington Gravel-pits, and asked me what I had in the bag, I turned round and thought, Mr. Goff said I, I will turn the cock out of the bag, if you think I have any thing of your's; I shot the bag on the ground, and went to town and did my business, and at night as I was coming home, they stopped me, and brought me in a coach to Hammersmith; I never saw any thing at all of the sheep, or any thing of the kind; I am as innocent of it as the child that is to be born.

Thomas Gomm. I saw the prisoner in the morning washing his house, which I never saw before.

Court. Did his wife lay in at the time?—Yes.

How many children has the man?—Three.

What has been his general character?—He had been at home three weeks, and had never done a day's work.

THOMAS ARNOLD sworn.

I have known the prisoner about three years, I am a gardener, and in the farming way; I never heard any harm of the prisoner, he lived by me two years and an half.

How old is the prisoner?

Prisoner. I am thirty six, I have worked hard.

JOHN BARROW sworn.

I have known him three years, I never knew any misdemeanour of him, he was my near neighbour.

SARAH BURRIDGE sworn.

I have known him eight or nine years, I never heard any thing amiss of him before.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice WILLES.

---

7. ANDREW SIMMS (a Negro) was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 3d day of December, eight silver table spoons, value 30s. nine silver tea spoons, value 5s. four silver salts, value 2s. one Bath great coat, value 2s. one pair of boots, value 5s. one pair of shoes, value 1s. one cane, value 1s. the property of John Randall Grimes, Esquire.

JOHN RANDALL GRIMES sworn.

On the 3d of December, I lost the things mentioned in the indictment; they were in a cupboard, I do not know when I saw them before, this man was my servant he had the care of the things, and on the morning of the third, he came home having slept out all night, and in a very few minutes he went out; in about an hour or two hours after, which we thought a very odd circumstance, it was found he had carried his clothes with him, then I suspected his having taken those things he had in his charge; and on looking in the cupboard, I found they were not there; he did not return, I advertized him with a reward of five guineas, and in about a fortnight he was taken; a few of the things were recovered; before the Justice he acknowledged the stealing the things, I was present.

Was it reduced to writing?——It was not.

Was any thing said to induce him to confess?——Nothing at all, he confessed freely and honestly, and carried me to every place where he had sold the things, the shoes were found upon him and the cane; I recovered the boots, he carried me to the Jews where he had sold the plate, and we laid a very close siege to him, but never could catch him.

WILLIAM VAUGHEN sworn.

I took the prisoner in the Little Minories, I do not know the day, I found this cane upon him.

Court to Prosecutor. Do you know the cane?——I would not chuse to swear to the cane, I swear to the boots.

GEORGE SAUNDERS sworn.

I live with Mr. John Winne, in the Back Lane, in St. George's in the East, the prisoner bought these boots to sell, I cannot exactly tell the very time, it was about four days before he was taken up, I gave him half a guinea for them, he said he had them made for him and gave a guinea and a half for them.

(The boots deposed to by the Prosecutor)

Prisoner. I did not take the plate. Have you any body to give you a character?——My master is the only one that knows me.

Court. How long had he lived with you?——I have known him for ten or twelve years, I knew him in America.

How had he behaved?——I do not think he was a good character, but I would not chuse to say any thing against him.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

8. JOHN JEFF was indicted for feloniously assaulting William Limby, on the King's highway, on the 23d of September last, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniously taking from his person and against his will, one half yard of brown linen, value 6d. and one cloth cloak, value 2s. the property of George Yarnol.

Court to George Yarnol. My little boy, what church do you go to?——St. Andrews.

Can you say your Catechism?—Yes.

Can you say the Lord's prayer;—Yes.

Do you know the consequence of telling a lie?——Yes.

What is it?——I shall go to the devil.

To Prosecutor. What is your apprehension of losing the evidence of this boy?—He was put out of the way last sessions and I was bound for the appearance of the boy, and at the last sessions they got him away, and I am doubtful they will get him away again.

How

How long has the boy been in your custody?——About a week, even the boy's parents were at the justices.

Prisoner. They would not give this lad leave to send for his friends, and this man has taken the lad into custody.

Court. You must make an affidavit, let his trial come on in the afternoon, unless he makes an affidavit that will satisfy the Court.

Prisoner. I have a letter from a gentleman at Chelmsford.

Court. Where is the letter?—I have it not with me.

Is it in Newgate?—No, Sir, it is not.

Court. Go on with the trial.

The witnesses examined apart at the request of Mr. Silvester, Prisoner's Counsel.

DIANA YARNOL sworn.

I am wife of George Yarnol, I know this little boy, my husband at times does work for his father in law, I delivered the little boy my cloak on the 23d of September, the cloak was pinned in a bit of brown linen, it was a Bath beaver cloak lined in the hood with black, and bound with black ermine, I gave it to him to carry it to a gentlewoman, one Mrs. Turner, in Poole's Buildings, in Mount Pleasant, Cold Bath Fields, I gave it him the 23d of September about nine at night, I live in Maiden lane, the child lives in Brooks Market, and he had to go back and I got him to take it with him, and carry it home the next morning, I gave him a particular charge not to carry it home that night, about a quarter of an hour after the boy came back and begged me to go to the watch-house of St. Clements, to take the cloak, as the man was in custody.

JOHN CROWTHER sworn.

On the 23d of September about nine in the evening coming a long Portugal-street, Clare Market, I heard the cry of stop thief, and I saw the prisoner running with this cloak under his arm, and the little boy William Limbey after him crying stop thief, I saw the prisoner gain ground of the boy, and I having a load on my back cried stop thief, the people run out of the Market and took him just as he run round the corner, I saw him taken, he was not out of my sight; when I cryed stop thief, he threw the cloak on the ground, I saw him throw it down and I went and picked it up, this is the cloak.

The cloak deposed to, being the property of Mrs. Elizabeth Turner.

Mr. Silvester took the objection that the cloak was not the property of Mrs. Eliz. Turner.

Mr. Justice Willes. The woman delivered this cloak to carry to the owner, but till the boy had delivered the cloak it was in the possession of the woman, the boy was the servant of the woman, and any thing like possession is sufficient, he is a servant for that purpose employed to carry home the cloak.

WILLIAM LIMBEY sworn.

Where do you live?——In Dorrington-street, Brooks Market.

Who do you live with?——With my mother and father in law.

Do you remember getting a cloak from Mrs. Yarnol?——Yes.

What was you to do with that cloak?—To take it to Mount Pleasant, in a Court, I forget the name, and coming along Portugal-street I was crossing the way, and there was a coach coming by and I saw the prisoner behind me, I was making way for him, and he gave me a push on the head and I tumbled down, and he took up my bundle and run away.

Did he ask you for your bundle?—No Sir he never spoke to me.

How soon was he taken?—About eight minutes after.

Mr. Justice Willes. Goods that were stolen from from a washerwoman have been laid to be the property of her husband; this boy was servant to the woman and the woman's possession was the possession of her husband.

Mr. Silvester. Was there any force to knock you down?—No, no force, he only just touched me over the head, and I slipt over the stones.

Was

Was there any violence uſed againſt you?——No.

Was you frightened at all?——No Sir, I was not frightened a bit.

Court. What did you fall forward?——Yes.

Mr. Juſtice Willes. You fell by the puſh he gave you, did not you?—Yes.

You would not have fallen if he had not given you that puſh?——No, he juſt touched me and I ſlipt over the ſtone.

Priſoner. I leave it to my counſel.

JOSEPH GIFFORD ſworn.

I have known him ever ſince 1781, he was a maſter butcher then, I always found him a very honeſt man, I never found any thing to the contrary.

GUILTY.

Of ſtealing, but not of putting in fear.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

9. THOMAS BOLTON was indicted for burglariouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Daniel Cook, about the hour of two in the night on the 6th day of May laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein one ſilver pint mug, value 50s. one ſilver ſaucepan, value 15s. one ſilver ladle, value 25s. three ſilver table ſpoons, value 10s. three ſilver tea ſpoons, value 4s. one wooden caſk, value 2s. and five gallons of brandy, value 50s. his property.

DANIEL COOK ſworn.

I live in Uxbridge, I am a brewer and diſtiller, my houſe was broke open on the 6th of May, between eleven and four in the morning; I went to bed between ten and eleven, and aroſe about ſix, I did not miſs the plate till about eleven, the plate had been left in the kitchen, one of the caſements in the kitchen juſt by the pump was taken out.

Did you happen to ſee whether that caſement was faſt before you went to bed?——I cannot ſay.

What did you loſe?—I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment, I found them the 22th of laſt month at Marlow, the priſoner brought them to me, he was then in his father's houſe, he fetched them out of his own houſe.

How came you to ſuſpect him?—I went in ſearch of him, and I found him in his father's houſe, and he ſaid he would go and fetch me what plate he had; he worked with me between Michaelmas and Chriſtmas, but he never lodged in the houſe, I employed him as a porter, he left me at Chriſtmas, I never employed him after; I never ſuſpected the priſoner until one Hilſey, who is turned King's evidence, told me the things are here.

FRANCIS MOSS ſworn.

I was with the proſecutor at Marlow at the taking this priſoner, the priſoner brought them and delivered them to the proſecutor, I ſaw him.

(The things depoſed to.)

They have my marks on them, I bought them about four or five years ago, at Mr. Pinkett's on Ludgate Hill, and others were my wife's ſiſters, they were all marked.

RICHARD HILSEY ſworn.

The priſoner at the bar and I, went together to Mr. Cook's houſe, he conveyed me to Mr. Cook's houſe to go after ſome liquors, then he ſaid he wanted ſomething elſe, it was the latter part of the winter; after we had got the liquors, he ſaid we had ſomething elſe to get, he pulled off his coat and waiſtcoat and hat, pulled open the window ſhutters, and opened the caſement.

What time of the night was it?——Between the hour of one and two in the morning, and he gave me this mug out of the window in my hand, and he went in and fetched fetched some spoons and gave to me again, and likewise a saucepan and a pair of boats, after that he went in again, and I heard a bell ring, and I told him to come out, which he did, and shut the windows up again, after that we made the windows fast, and we went and put the door upon the hooks which we opened, and went to my house, then he gave me a couple of spoons and a silver saucepan, and he took some spoons to himself, and a mug, and a little tub of liquor, then he went away and I never saw him again.

How came you to tell this?——Because Justice Fellows told me if I knew any thing to acquaint him of it.

What way of life are you in?——A labouring man.

How long have you been acquainted with him?—I believe I saw him a year ago.

Where does he live?—In Great Marlow in Bucks.

Prisoner. I never saw the man in my life.

Hilsey. Yes, he has seen me several times in company with one William Bradbury, and likewise at the Horse and Groom in Uxbridge.

Prisoner. I found the things under a hedge.

GUILTY.

Of the Felony, but not of the Burglary.

To be confined six months to hard labour in the House of Correction.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

10. ALEXANDER M'DONALD was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 25th day of November last, one pair of silver shoe buckles, value 50s. five linen shirts, value 50s. two pair of cotton drawers, value 6s. the property of Henry Churchill, Esq. in the dwelling house of Charles Churchill, Esq.

HENRY CHURCHILL, Esq; sworn.

The prisoner lived servant with me about a week, I had discharged the prisoner that morning, and upon some information I sent for him, but he did not come, I then sent to bring him by force, upon which he was brought to me, and in his presence Thomas Archer said he had dropped a pair of buckles, which they brought in; on the landing of the stairs; I asked him why he took away the buckles, he said he had got them that evening from Gray's, in Bond-street, where I had sent them the evening before to get the plate put in; I told him that was impossible, as they had been brought home some days before, I paid the bill; I then told him I did not wish to be troubled, I had got the buckles, and he might go about his business; he very insolently told me he would not, I ordered him to be turned out, he knocked the watchman down under the bannister of the stairs, it was then thought proper to send to his lodgings to have them searched; after I had discharged him I understood he came back three or four times, on some pretence or other; a bundle was brought from his lodgings, in which was five of my shirts, and two pair of drawers, I then wanted to turn him out of the house, he swore he would not go out, and beat and abused the constable and patrol, and they then told me, if I chose to let him go, they would take him to the watch-house; since that time I have had bundles brought to me of laced waistcoats and stockings, and other things that were not in this indictment.

Prisoner. Whether Mr. Churchill was not all that time on the settee in the dining room?

Prosecutor. I was lame, he called out I want to speak to my master, I will speak to my master, you shall not force me out of the house; I went to the door, lame as I was, and said what have you to say? I saw him take hold of the banniſters of the stairs.

THOMAS ARCHER sworn.

I went to the public house after the prisoner.

Court. You told Mr. Churchill that you supposed he had taken the buckles, what made you think so?—The reason I had had was, a young man a fellow ſervant of mine took them out of his pocket; he took them out in the hall above ſtairs, the priſoner came to drink with us before we parted, my fellow ſervant's name is Charles Taylor, when he found my fellow ſervant had taken the buckles of his pocket, which he had no reaſon for, I believe it was a meere joke, as I ſat by the ſide of him he took them out, then the priſoner ſnatched them out of Taylor's hand and ſtruck him; the priſoner put the buckles in his right hand pocket again, he ſaid nobody ſhould ſee them, his coat dropped down from under his arm, and Mary Archer took out one buckle after; I was preſent and ſaw it, then he ſnatched the buckle out of her hand, and it ſcratched her hand as he ſnatched it out; I told him I would not have any confuſion in the houſe, he had better go to the publick houſe and have a pot of beer, and I would come to him immediately; he accordingly went, I went and told my maſter, I then went to the publick houſe to him, and told him my maſter wanted to ſpeak to him, he ſaid he would not come till the next morning; my maſter not being able to go, he got his brother to go to the publick houſe, I went with him, and the priſoner came with us, and the watchman and patrol; when we brought him to the houſe, he made an attempt to get out at the glaſs door which is behind the houſe, and the watchman ſtopped him; going up ſtairs, he put his hand in his right hand pocket and pulled out the buckles, and put them into his breeches, I was cloſe to him, and ſaw him.

Could you ſee what he had in his hand?—I obſerved they were buckles, I told him it was of no ſignification to put them there, I was ſure they were the buckles; he took them out immediately, and put them on the banniſters by me, I took them up and carried them to Mr. Churchill, and he ſaid they were his property; I knew the buckles, I have them now, they were in a bit of paper, theſe are the ſame buckles.

(The buckles handed to Mr. Churchill.)

Court. By what circumſtance do you know them to be your's?——By the ſize and pattern.

Is it poſſible to know a ſilver buckle, they are a pattern a good deal in uſe now?—I do not know, I have no doubt of their being mine.

What did the priſoner ſay about them?—I aſked him how he came to take them away, he ſaid he had them from Gray's that evening, he did not deny their being mine at all.

Court. Who went to his lodgings?——The watchman.

How were his lodgings found out?——He told me were he lodged the day he left Mr. Churchill; the publican came with him, we brought four ſhirts and two pair of drawers, they are now in the poſſeſſion of the publican; after that he was carried to the watch-houſe, and to a Magiſtrate.

MARY ARCHER ſworn.

Charles Taylor was ſitting by the fire-ſide, by the priſoner, and he put his hand into his pocket in a joke, and he pulled out a pair of buckles, then the priſoner took the buckles from him, and put them in his right pocket, and ſtruck Taylor; he wrapped up his coat, and ſaid nobody ſhould ſee them, and he dropped his coat again, and I put my hand and took out one of the buckles, and he ſcratched my hand in taking it away; I thought then they were my maſter's buckles, becauſe he ſeemed to be ſo angry, and I ſaw them about a fortnight before.

CHARLES TAYLOR ſworn.

We were all ſitting in the hall together, and in a joke I put my hand into his pocket, and brought out theſe buckles; at the inſtant he miſſed the buckles, he got up and ſtruck me, he catched them out of my hands, and put them in his right-hand pocket, I did not know whether he was angry or no, I took it as a joke; I ſaw him take the buckle from Mary Archer.

JOHN

JOHN KETTLE sworn.

The prisoner came at four o'clock, and asked for Thomas Archer, I am a publican, I told him he was not there, I thought he might be up at the tables; he then said he was discharged by his master; I said I was sorry for it, he says, will you oblige me with a lodging to night, I am engaged with a gentleman for forty guineas per annum, to wait on him at nine o'clock; I said if he could lay with my little son, he said with all his heart; he came to my house about half after ten at night, and asked for a pot of beer, he said somebody was coming, he waited there about 15 minutes, at last Thomas Archer came, and desired him to come to his master, he did not go at his request; soon after the Captain's brother came, and then he said he would go; I saw no more of him till the watchman came to ask if he had any property in my house; says I, why, what is the matter; O, says he, I am afraid there is a robbery in the house, I said, God forbid! the prisoner about four in the morning, when he came to engage the lodging, desired me to take these things, to take care of.

Did he give them you as his own?——I understood it so; this is the bundle he gave me, I left it in the house with some of the family, the bundle was opened that night, and there were four shirts, and two pair of drawers, and this dirty handkerchief, they looked at them, and said they were Captain Churchill's property; I did not look at them that night.

In whose hands did you leave that bundle?—I cannot say.

Archer. I had it in my care all night, I locked it up, the next morning I gave it to Kettle again.

Court to Prosecutor. Have you ever seen the buckles after they came home from Gray's?—I cannot say I have, they brought in the bill and told me they were come, the prisoner did not take them in; my things were under his care.

Archer. I took them in from Gray's man.

How came the prisoner not to take them in?——He was not in the way; this was three or four days before he was turned off.

Where were these shirts kept before they were lost?——They were kept in a side closet.

What may be the value of these buckles?—Near three guineas.

What may the value of the shirts be?—I cannot say, there are three of them that are new, they are fully worth the price charged in the indictment.

Prisoner to Kettle. What did I say to you when I gave you the bundle, did I tell you they were mine or my master's?—Neither, he asked me for the bundle again at ten, then he hung them into the kitchen window.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

In regard to the shirts, they were in my possession, and not out of it; I took the shirts till mistake of my own shirts; I the buckles I had for four days in this great pocket which I have on, my drawing coat: I was determined to come the next morning, and beg the favour of a character, and bring back the shirts; I neither took the buckles or shirts with intent to defraud the Captain: the gentleman that recommended me to Captain Churchill is out of town, which is Lord Mountmorris's brother; I have very little acquaintance; Captain Churchill will be so good to tell the character I had.——

Prosecutor. My Lord Mountmorris's brother knew him in Ireland, he would not send me to Mrs. Jeffries.

Prisoner. She was not in town; I did not think Captain Churchill would bring my trial to so great a heighth, I thought to have a lawyer, could get plenty of characters from Mr. Agar, in the Temple, and from Mr. Osborn, in Brompton-row; the buckles I found in a window, rolled up in a piece of paper.

GUILTY.

Of stealing, to the value of 40s.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

11. WILLIAM STEWART was indicted for burglariously and felonioufly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of William Maſterman, Eſquire, about the hour of two in the night, on the 18th day of October laſt, and burglariously ſtealing therein, one pair of piſtols, value 20s. five pair of ſilk ſtockings, value 40s. the property of Richard Truſcot; ſix ſilver tea ſpoons, value 14s. one ſilver cream jug, value 5s. one pair of lace ruffles, value 41. 4s. and two ſilk handkerchiefs, value 7s. the property of the ſaid William Maſterman.

(The Caſe opened by Mr. Fearnley.)

The Witneſſes examined apart by deſire of Mr. Garrow.

GEORGE FRANKLIN ſworn.

I live with Mr. Maſterman in Red-lion-ſquare.

Did you live there in October laſt?——Yes.

Was you there the 18th of October laſt?——Yes.

Who was in the houſe beſides yourſelf?——A maid ſervant, the houſekeeper, and Mr. Truſcot.

Who was up laſt that night?——I was.

What time did you go to bed?——Between ten and eleven.

Where the doors faſt?——Yes.

Did you faſten the outer door of the court yard at the back of the houſe?——It was faſtened with a croſs wooden bar and two iron bolts.

Did you faſten the front door of the houſe too?——Yes.

Were all the lower windows faſt?—Yes.

What time did you get up in the morning?——At ſeven, I was the firſt up, and when I came down the back doors were all open, the front of the houſe was never touched, the back court yard door had a hole cut in it.

Have you the pieces?——Yes.

Produce them.——This is the hole, it was cut about the middle of the door, there was a bolt about ſix inches.

What was done to the iron bolts?——There were two iron bolts, and both the ſtaples were forced out; as ſoon as I came down I went up to the houſekeeper, and to Mr. Truſcot, I told them; when I went out into the yard I ſaw a lamp-lighter's ladder out in the yard.

Was it there the night before, when you went to bed?—No; I ſaw the piſtols were gone, they were there the night before, I ſaw them when I went to bed, they laid inſide the kitchen door on the right-hand, the piſtols were Mr. Truſcot's; I found ſix tea ſpoons and the cream jug miſſing, that is all I know that was miſſing; Mr. Truſcot, I believe, knows of the reſt.

Mr. Garrow. What is the ſituation of this court yard door that you have been talking of, with reſpect to the houſe?——It comes into the paſſage that leads to the kitchen door.

Is that paſſage a covered one?——Yes.

What is over it?——It was the court-yard door to the houſe.

This was the night of the 18th of October?—Yes.

Do you mean it was the night between the 17th and the 18th, or between the 18th and 19th?——Between the 18th and 19th, I am ſure of that; I cannot ſay any thing of the piſtols, I never found the ſpoons and jug again.

HENRY WRIGHT ſworn.

Do you know the priſoner?——Yes.

Do you remember his coming to your houſe at any time?——Yes, on the 18th of October.

Recollect the time he came to your houſe with the piſtols?—The 18th in the morning, about nine o'clock.

He came with theſe piſtols to your houſe?——Yes.

The Remainder of this Trial in our next Part, which will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 8th of DECEMBER, 1784, and the following Days;

Being the FIRST SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER I. PART IV.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXIV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE PROCEEDINGS UPON THE KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the City of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of William Stewart.

Mr. Fearnley. It is ſtated, that this robbery was committed on the 18th at night; immediately after the robbery was committed, information was ſent to Bow-ſtreet: this paper is a liſt of things taken by theft.

Mr. Garrow. I object to this.

Court. You may aſk him, whether he remembers any advertiſement coming out from Bow-ſtreet, and whether it was before or after that?

Mr. Garrow. Theſe are the things taken between the 18th and 25th.

Henry Wright called in again.

Mr. Fearnley. Do you remember any advertiſement coming out from Bow-ſtreet? ——Yes, I received that advertiſement half an hour after I took in the piſtols, this was the paper, theſe are the piſtols, they have not been out of my poſſeſſion; I received them from the priſoner at the bar, I know him.

Had you much converſation with him? —Not as converſation.

Did he ſay whoſe they were? ——No.

Where do you live? —In the paſſage leading into Tothill-ſtreet, Weſtminſter.

Mr. Garrow. You remember the day by theſe papers I take it for granted? —That is what I go by.

You received them the day this hand-bill was iſſued, which you take to be the 18th? ——Yes, it is the 18th.

And it is by this paper that you underſtood it was the 18th; do not you keep books? ——Yes.

Have you referred to them? —No, I was guided by the hand-bill.

Court. How comes it, that in all this time, when this was diſcovered, that you have never looked at your own books to ſee when you received theſe piſtols? —I went by the hand-bill; I was in a hurry to go to Bow-ſtreet, as it was my duty to do, and they gave me directions to go to Mr. Maſterman's.

Mr. Garrow. Did you receive the hand-bill after the piſtols? ——Certainly.

Then that is no apology for your not ſetting them down; did you give a duplicate? ——No.

Do not you make a ticket? ——I do not know where it is.

Is not it your conſtant practice, and is not it your bounden duty to make a ticket and tie it to the articles? —Moſt undoubtedly;

edly; I have not a ticket, I do not know where it is.

There is no entry in your book I take it for granted?—Really, upon my oath, I am not able to say whether they were booked or not.

Do you mean to say, that going to Bow-ſtreet, in conſequence of this advertiſement, and knowing that you were to be examined, you made no entry; it ſeems to me to be peculiarly the object of an entry; you are quite ſure it was the 18th?—Yes, I go by the hand-bill, I do take it to be the 18th.

What day of the week was it?——On a Monday.

Court. Are you ſure it was on the Monday?—We always receive the papers on a Monday as early as poſſible.

You went immediately to Bow-ſtreet?—Yes.

Mr. Garrow. Do you know a woman of the name of M'Carty?—I do not know.

Do you know a woman of the name of Grace M'Carty?——I know Grace Maddocks.

How ſoon did you ſee her after you took in theſe piſtols?——She came on Saturday night, about a fortnight or a week afterwards.

Was the priſoner in cuſtody then?——No.

Do you recollect any converſation that paſſed between you and her?—She aſked me to let her have the piſtols, I told her it was not in my power.

Did you tell her you had given information?——I might ſay the information was given.

Did you, or did you not?—I cannot directly ſay.

You think you did?—I believe I did.

Do you think you told her this man, Stewart, had better get out of the way?—Stewart was along with her, I told her if he did not get out of the way, I ſhould ſtop him.

What, the man againſt whom you had given evidence, and was to be proſecuted for burglary?——I told him he muſt go, or I ſhould ſtop him.

Now, I believe, you have a ſort of private intimation in your ſhops, by which you can ſend for a conſtable, without any body knowing it?—If we find a ground or reaſon to ſend, we certainly do ſend.

Have not you a private ſign, by which you communicate with the perſons in your buſineſs to go for a peace officer, without giving an open order?—No, I have not.

So you told him he had better get out of the way; what did Maddocks ſay about it? I cannot ſay.

Recollect a little?—I do not remember.

How ſoon after this was the priſoner taken?——It might be in the courſe of the enſuing week; I believe it reſted a fortnight after the information was given.

What day in the week was he taken?—I cannot ſay.

Do not you recollect what day you attended?—I cannot ſay I do.

Mr. Fearnley. You received that paper, have you any reaſon to know the particular day on which you received the piſtols, excepting that paper?—It is from that paper I ſpeak as to the day of the month.

Do you know who this Mrs. Maddocks is?—I believe her to be a girl of the town.

CAPTAIN TRUSCOT ſworn.

On the 18th of October, I lodged at Mr. Maſterman's, in Red-lion-ſquare, I had a pair of piſtols at Mr. Maſterman's on the 18th of October.

Were they in his houſe that night?—I am ſure they were, I ſaw them there when I went to my bed, I paſſed by the cheſt where my piſtols lay, and looked at them, and took one of them in my hand; about ſeven the next morning the boy came in and told me the houſe was broke open; my piſtols were gone. I gave information at Bow-ſtreet the next morning, which was on the 19th.

When did you firſt hear of your piſtols again?—On Monday the 25th, I went to Woolwich, and returned again the Thurſday after, the ſervant went to Mr. Wright's and ſaw my piſtols. (Looks at them.) Theſe are my piſtols, I ſaw them at Mr. Wright's.

Court.

Court. How long after you returned from Woolwich was the priſoner apprehended?—About ten days or a fortnight.

Mr. Garrow. You had not all Sir Sampſon Wright's men with you?——I think not.

Did you apprehend this man or they?

Mr. Fearnley. Did you deſire the priſoner might not be apprehended?——I deſired he might not till I had written to Mr. Maſterman, unleſs he came for the piſtols.

Mr. Garrow. Why, Captain, theſe appear to me to be as plain piſtols as ever I ſaw in my life?——Yes, Sir, here is the maker's name, I had a particular mark on thoſe piſtols.

—What, that you had obſerved before?—In the firing them, which I could ſwear to them by; not only that, but the wood they are mounted on, one is a paler kind than the other.

Why, Captain, they are hardly ever ſimilar, the uſing one more than the other, makes them paler or deeper?——Here is a bit of one broke in the firing.

Yes, I remember that I have one of my own broke juſt like it, it happens nine times in ten to theſe Birmingham made piſtols.

PATRICK MACMANUS ſworn.

I know the priſoner, I and three more officers from Bow-ſtreet went to the place where he lived, in St. Ann's-lane, Weſtminſter, and found him in bed with a woman whoſe name is Grace Maddocks.

Did you tell him what buſineſs you was come upon?—He aſked what he was wanted for; I ſaid you are wanted for houſe-breaking, ſo ſhe made anſwer, damn my eyes, he has not got a penny ſince he came out of gaol: I ſaid, notwithſtanding that, he muſt come, after he got a little way, he ſaid what is this about? damn the piſtols, ſays he, why the boy that laid up in the garret found them one morning going to Fleet-market, upon Holborn-hill; he ſaid, you went up ſtairs, I ſaid yes; he ſaid, that boy is the boy that found them; that boy is the brother of Grace Maddocks.

Mr. Fearnley. Did not he make uſe of ſome cant expreſſion?

Mr. Garrow. How can you make uſe of ſuch a queſtion! did any thing more paſs?—Many things that I did not think worth my notice, and there might have been cant words, and I might have made uſe of them ſince, but I cannot charge my memory with them.

Priſoner. When this man came and three more with him, he came up into the room, I aſked them what they wanted, I told him before the Juſtice, when they brought me to Bow-ſtreet, if you will give me leave, I will ſend for the two boys that this Grace M'Carty had the piſtols of, I had them of her: the Juſtice ſaid, that we ſhould not do.

Court to Wright. When the priſoner brought theſe piſtols to you, what did he ſay?——I knew him very well, he ſaid he wanted half a guinea on them.

Did he pledge any thing elſe but the piſtols with you at that time?——No.

Priſoner. My Lord, when theſe piſtols were pawned, this Grace M'Carty owed me half a guinea for a ſcore, ſhe had not the money, but ſaid ſhe had ſomething that I was welcome to for the uſe of the half guinea, which were theſe piſtols; I told her I ſhould take them to Mr. Wright, as I knew him, and he knew my father; I told him I wanted half a guinea for them, ſays he, Bill, are they your's? ſays I, Mr. Wright, I had them from Grace M'Carty, but I will be anſwerable for them: on the Wedneſday following I went to this Grace M'Carty; it ſeems ſhe had been for the piſtols, and Mr. Wright told her he had taken them up to Bow-ſtreet, and they were ſtopped; he told Grace I had better get out of the way: I went to him, ſays he, Stewart, the piſtols are ſworn to, and I would have you get out of the way.

Court to Wright. Did he tell you when he brought them, whether he had them of the woman?—I cannot ſay, my Lord.

Court.

Court to Macmanus. What was the houſe in St. Ann's-lane, where you took the priſoner?—A houſe where he and ſhe lived.

Is it the place where he uſually lived?—For any thing that I know, when I wanted him I thought I ſhould find him there, and it turned out ſo.

Where is his father's houſe?—I do not know.

Court to Wright. Where does his father live?—He did keep a public houſe in Tothill-ſtreet.

Macmanus. It is a houſe where they both live, and are known to live.

Mr. Garrow. Is ſhe a common girl?——I do not know that of my own knowledge.

GUILTY

Of the Burglary, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

12. WILLIAM ASTILL and JOHN ELLIS were indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Thomas Powell, at the hour of two in the night on the 16th of November laſt, and feloniouſly ſtealing therein, thirty-ſix calf ſkins, value 12l. 8s. thirty-ſix ſeal ſkins, value 12l. one hide, value 26s. fifty neats leather ſhoulder, value 7l. 10s. the property of the ſaid Thomas Powell.

The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the Priſoners.

THOMAS POWELL ſworn.

I live in Blue Anchor alley, I am a Currier, I believe my houſe was broke open on the 16th of November in the morning; in the evening of the 15th, a little before twelve at night, I went into my ſhop and looked over my premiſes as I uſually do, I took notice that all the ſhutters and doors were faſt, I heard no noiſe in the night, I was the laſt that went to bed that night, my apprentice, Robert Roberts got up firſt in the morning, at a little before ſeven, and he deſired the maid to inform me my houſe was broke open.

Court. Was it day break at that time?——When I had the information, but the apprentice got up at ſix, and a large dog of great value, which I highly eſteemed, was poiſoned, and my ſhed, which is over my ſhop, and my ſhop were broke open and robbed, there is a ſtair caſe from my ſhed to my ſhop, and there is no communication from the ſhed but that; I was alſo informed that the back door of the ſhop was broke open, which I perceived was bolted the night before, the door goes into a little yard we have, which yard adjoins to a ſtone maſon's yard; when I went into the ſhop I found three dozen of calf ſkins, worth about 12l. 18s. I have eſtimated them moderately, and three dozen of ſeal ſkins, worth 12l. and ſome leather ſhoulders, worth about 7l. 10s. I imagined they carried the goods out by the back door, becauſe we found a conſiderable part of the goods left in the ſtone maſon's yard the next morning, this leather was half curried, that is, not finiſhed or dreſſed, the back door was broke open by the middle bolt of the door being wrenched entirely open, and the door forced; I advertiſed ſome of the property which I did not get, and put a reward of five guineas.

ROBERT ROBERTS ſworn.

I am apprentice to Mr. Powell, on the 16th of November laſt I got up about ſix, it was quite dark, when I went into the ſhop with my candle, I did not perceive that the light came in, I was at work at the other end of the ſhop, but when the day-light broke, I perceived the ſhop was broke open, the door had been wrenched open and broke in the middle, the ſhop is very long, and I ſat at the other end, but as ſoon as I diſcovered it I acquainted my maſter of it; the ſeal ſkins were in the ſhed over the ſhop, ſo were the calf ſkins; I went up in the ſhed, and found theſe things were taken out of the ſhed, and a fine dog that uſed to be kept in the ſhed was poiſoned and dead.

Court. Was there no way of going into the ſhed but through the ſhop?—No.

JOHN NEWMAN ſworn.

I am conſtable, I went to No. 17, in Noble-ſtreet, I was informed it was the lodging of the priſoner Aſtill, he was in a little trouble, I thought of finding ſome things there which I did not, I obſerved one of the boards of the floor a little looſe, and not to have ſand upon it; when I pulled the board up I found this calf ſkin concealed under the rafters, I ſearched the other boards as far as I could reach, and found nothing elſe.

(The calf-ſkin depoſed to by the Proſecutor, being half finiſhed.)

Mr. Chetwood, Priſoner's Council. When did he write that letter upon it?——When he had it in hand, before it was loſt.

Do not they go to the cuſtomers with that letter?—Not half finiſhed as this is.

Other people have that mark?——Not that I know.

JAMES ARCHER ſworn.

This letter is my mark, I ſaw this calf ſkin in the ſhed the night before.

SARAH PARKER ſworn.

Do you know Mr. Newman, the conſtable?—I was with Newman when John Aſtill's lodgings were ſearched, he found a ſkin underneath the boards, the priſoner Aſtill took the room of my ſervant girl when I was not at home, he was there twelve or thirteen weeks, he occupied to the time, he had not quitted them, the woman that cohabited with him paid me, the man paid me one week, he lived there with the woman.

Priſoner Aſtill. Who took the lodging of this woman?—I cannot ſay, I was not at home, I never recollect ſeeing him but twice.

And yet ſhe ſays I lived three thirteen weeks, it is very myſterious to me, ſhe ſhould never ſee me but twice?—My maid ſervant is gone away.

WILLIAM ALVEY ſworn.

On the 16th of November I was at the Hind in Redcroſs-ſtreet, about twelve at night, and the two priſoners and another man there, I knew them a good bit before, I was drinking at the ſame time, and I heard theſe two men aſk another man, whether he would go into Blue Anchor-alley, Bunhill-row, they ſaid they knew a place that would come to about forty or fifty pounds, they ſaid it was to nabb ſome ſkins at a Currier's.

How came they to ſay that, ſo as you could hear it?—They ſaid it at the houſe, and there was a large dog, and they had got ſome poiſon to poiſon him.

Court. I ſhould think you was part of the gang?—No, Sir, I was not, I followed them, they did not ſee me, I ſtood at the fore-part of Mr. Powell's houſe, they did not ſee me at all, and I ſaw the priſoner Ellis pulling down ſomething, and the dog barked, I heard a great noiſe, I was by the fore part of the houſe by Blue Anchor alley, there is a chandler's ſhop right facing Mr. Powell's houſe.

What did you do upon this, did you cry out thieves, or what did you do?—I was afraid they poiſoned the dog firſt.

How do you know that?—Becauſe they ſaid they would, I heard one of theſe men ſay to the other, damn my eyes, a bit of butter will make it ſlip down eaſy, I cannot tell which it was that ſaid it.

Court. How long did you ſtay in the front of the houſe?—When they ſaid that word, they ſaid let us leave the place for place for two hours, for they ſaid the dog will not be dead a good while, they had not enough ſtuff.

What time of night was this?—Half an hour after twelve, I ſtayed all the time, my couſin uſed to live in that alley.

Is your couſin a male or female?——A female.

So

So you went to your female couſin?—They came back in an hour and a half, I ſtaid there all the time, when they came back I heard a great noiſe, I cannot tell what it was, nor who it was that did it.

Did you ſee theſe two men when they came back?—Yes, I did, and another.

How near might you be to them then.?—About ten or fifteen yards off, I could not tell how far they were off.

How came you to ſtay in November to watch theſe people?—Becauſe they ſaid ſo; I heard Mr. Pool the conſtable had found the ſkin, and Mr. Pool is a barber and conſtable, and he ſaid he had found ſo and ſo in that young man's lodgings, Towley Scraggs, Aſtill we call him now, then I diſcovered this to Mr. Pool a few days afterwards.

Did you ſee them remove the ſkins into the man's yard?—No, I heard ſomething tumble, I cannot tell what it was.

Priſoner Aſtill. Upon examination at Juſtice Wilmot's, he ſaid he could poſitively ſwear to Ellis's giving the dog poiſon.

Alvey. I heard one of them ſay, damn my eyes, if I had old Dr. Stone here, I would ſtick the knife into him, becauſe he has not given us ſtuff enough to kill the dog.

Court. Who Dr. Stone is, I cannot tell?—He comes to the Hind in Redcroſs-ſtreet; the next morning after the robbery was done, I was at the Hind, and they came into the Hind, I was there a ſitting by myſelf about eleven.

You had not been in bed all that night?—Yes, about half after two, I live in Grubb-ſtreet, the other man came in juſt after, they then aſked if old Dr. Stone had been there, and the man of the houſe ſaid no, and they ſaid, damn my eyes if we had had him laſt night, if we ſhould not have killed him, we would have been damned, for not giving poiſon enough to poiſon the dog; he came in about half an hour after, and they hit him a ſpank of the head, and they told him ſo.

Who is Dr. Stone?——He is a horſe farrier.

Court. Theſe ſeem to be a pretty ſet; how came you there?—I uſed to be drinking along with my uncle, he is a porter; they ſaid, you gallows old thief you did not give us poiſon enough to poiſon the dog.

Court. What is the man's name that keeps this remarkable houſe?——Caſey.

Mr. Chetwood. How long had you been in this houſe this evening?——I went at ſix, and ſtaid from ſix to twelve.

There was no company?—No.

Quite at leiſure?—Yes.

Then you obſerved theſe people to talk about this buſineſs, were there no honeſt people in the houſe?—I cannot tell.

Was your father there?—No.

You ſaid no words to them?——No.

You had no thoughts of joining with them?—No.

You went to the front of the houſe?——Yes, they talked very loud about the poiſon, and they wiſhed for a bit of butter.

You heard that?——I was juſt at the corner of the turning.

Did not you know there was a reward for taking people for burglaries?——No Sir, Mr. Pool told me it was in the papers.

You do not know there is a reward?—No Sir, I do not.

Did you never hear there was forty pounds reward?——No Sir, I heard there was forty pounds for hanging a man, I never was told that only ſince they have been in trouble.

Did you never hear it in Newgate?——No Sir, I heard for highway robberies, or for hanging a man.

How long did they wait the firſt time?—About a quarter of on hour.

Then you walked down to your relations?——Yes, I waited in the alley above two hours, when I came up the alley again they were gone.

What did you wait two hours for?——Becauſe they ſaid they were coming back again, I ſaw them when they came back again, but they did not ſee me.

Were there no watchmen?——No.

Did you alarm the family?——No.

How

How came you not to do that?——For fear of their hurting me.

What did you wait the two hours for, was it with intention of being an evidence?——It was with intention of telling ſomebody or other.

Did you the next day tell any body?—Yes, I believe it was the next day I told Mr. Pool, that there was another robbery done in Golden-lane.

Did you go to Mr. Powell's houſe that had been robbed?—No, becauſe I thought it was beſt to tell Mr. Newman.

You thought Mr. Newman could put you in a better way of getting the forty pounds?——No Sir.

And this converſation happened publickly in the tap room?——There was only them three and me.

It is a wonder they were not afraid of you?—They were not.

They never ſpoke a word to you?—No.

Mr. Juſtice Willes. How long is it ſince you have been out of Newgate?——Two years, a man may be bad one time, but he muſt not always remain ſuch.

Court. It is no proof of your amendment to frequent the Hind; ſo the next morning they talked about the dog?——Yes.

Publickly?—Yes.

Priſoner Ellis. Do you know any thing of robbing the tenter ground, at the back of the Shepherd and Shepherdeſs three months ago.

WILLIAM POOL ſworn.

I am a conſtable, I was at the ſearching of Aſtill's lodgings when the leather was found.

When was it that you had firſt any converſation with the laſt witneſs?——I believe it was after the ſkin was found, I know nothing of Newman, but he was with me when I ſearched, I believe it was the ſame day the ſkin was found, that was the 18th.

How did you pick up Alvey?—I believe it was in the ſtreet, as we was going along with the ſkin, I did not know him before, Newman met him and ſaid we had found a ſkin in ſuch a place, he ſaid he had read the advertiſement, and thought it belonged to Mr. Powell.

Did you tell him at that time there was any money offered for diſcovering the people?—No, he ſaid there was a large dog poiſoned at the ſame time.

Court to Newman. Did Alvey tell you the ſame ſtory?—I ſaw him at Guildhall, and he ſaid, what have you found a ſkin; and he ſaid he knew the people that went to do a robbery in Blue Anchor Alley, he told me, that they gave the dog poiſon, and one Stone gave it them.

Did he give you the ſame account of his going to watch them?——I did not give any heed to it, he ſaid he watched them, I have ſeen him about our pariſh.

What is he?——I do not know, I believe nothing of a particular character.

Mr. Chetwood. It was the 18th that you found the ſkin?——Yes.

Nobody was by but Pool and you?—No, I carried it from Noble-ſtreet to Guildhall.

Had you no converſation with Alvey in Noble-ſtreet?——I never ſaw him in Noble-ſtreet, I had no converſation with him till I came to Guildhall, I never ſaw him that day till I had been to Mr. Powell's, then I ſaw him at Guildhall.

What was he doing at Guildhall?—He made a diſcovery of another burglary.

Did you, or did you not mention to him then, that there was a reward for the apprehending the people that robbed Mr. Powell's houſe, and ſhew him the newſpaper?——I did.

Did you, or did not you tell him there was a great dog killed?——I did not.

Did not you read the advertiſement?——Yes, but it was not in the papers.

Did you ſhew him the newſpaper;——I had not the newſpaper.

Did you not tell him it was in the newſpaper, there was a reward?—No.

Why he ſaid ſo, did not you tell him there was five guineas reward?——No, I did not, we took him up to Juſtice Wilmot's, Wilmot's, and Juſtice Wilmot bound him over.

Court to Pool. I think you met this Alvey firſt in the ſtreet?—It was after he had been to Mr. Powell's, it might be at Guildhall.

WILLIAM LARGESION ſworn.

I had information from the other office, that Ellis was wanted, I went to take him at the Hind about eight o'clock at night, in Red Croſs-ſtreet, I found nothing of him.

Court to Newman. Was any thing found on Ellis?—Nothing at all, we went there ſeveral nights to look after him, and at laſt he was there.

Priſoner Ellis. I leave it all to my Council.

Priſoner Aſtill. I wiſh for one witneſs to be called and that is Ann Thomas.

ANN THOMAS ſworn.

Are you acquainted with Aſtill?—No I never ſaw him before with my eyes, I am am unfortunate girl, I picked a man up on the night of the 15th, and he was to give me half a crown to lay with me all night, in the morning he had no money, and he gave me this ſkin to take care of.

So he picked you up about ten at night, and you was with him all that night, to the next morning, you never parted with him?——He gave me the ſkin the next morning.

What gentleman took it out of your room?——I lodged at Sarah Parker's.

Did the priſoner Aſtill never come there?——I never ſaw the man with my eyes.

Court to Sarah Parker. Have you ever ſeen this woman before?——She is the woman that cohabited with him in the room, and paid me the rent.

Court. Upon my word if there are two witneſſes againſt her, ſhe ought to be committed.

CHRISTOPHER HINTON ſworn.

I am a watchmaker, I live in White-croſs-ſtreet, I have known Ellis about a twelvemonth, ſince I reſided in that neighbourhood, I know no harm of him, but on the 15th of November, I came from work and went into the Hind a little after ten, and his father was there, in a little time after in came Ellis, I was drinking with him till about half after twelve, there was a young woman and the landlord; we went away from that public houſe and Newman the Conſtable laid hold of him about half paſt twelve, and aſked me if he had been in my company, I ſaid yes, then I went to ſee the old man home, and a young woman, we went to the Woolpack till half paſt two, then I went and put him to bed.

So you was never abſent from him from that time?——Never.

What time did you go into the Hind?—Between ten and eleven.

Court to Alvey. Did you ſee Hinton at the Hind that night?——No Sir, I have ſeen him there often.

CHARLES CASEY ſworn.

I officiate as maſter of the Hind, I have been there about eight months, on the 15th about ſeven o'clock, the priſoner Aſtill, and two other men came in.

Court. Was Ellis one of them?—No, Mr. Newman the officer came in, and a ſtrong diſpute aroſe between Aſtill and Newman, about ſome duplicates; and the priſoner Aſtill and two more men went away, and Newman took hold of a woman that had a piece of linen in her apron, he took her into cuſtody, and let her go again; a ſhort time after that Ellis came in, that was about half an hour after.

Was it about eight?—I cannot be poſitive to a quarter of an hour.

Was his father there?——No, he went away to the coat club; Ellis came in about ſeven, he ſtaid but a ſhort time, and then went to the coat club that his father had in White-croſs-ſtreet.

Did he return again?——He returned about eleven, and ſtayed till half paſt twelve, his father and this Chriſtopher Hinton went away with him, and a young woman; his father was very much in liquor.

Did you know what became of them then?——No.

Was Alvey at your houſe that night?——Yes, he was there at the time the diſpute aroſe between Aſtill and Newman.

The priſoner Ellis called three witneſſes to his character.

Court to Newman. Was you at this Hind ale-houſe the 15th?——I believe I might in the evening, this woman Ann Thomas was there.

Was Alvey there at that time?—I will not be ſure, I believe he might.

Court to Proſecutor. Were all the calf ſkins left in the ſtone-maſon's yard?—No, only ſome of them.

WILLIAM ASTILL, GUILTY, Death.
JOHN ELLIS, NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

13. PHILIP PATCH and HENRY RUTTER were indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting John Rollings, in a certain field and open place, near the King's highway, on the 22d of October laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life; and feloniouſly taking from his perſon, and againſt his will, eight half-pence and four farthings, one guinea, value 1l. 1s. one half-crown, value 2s. 6d. and four ſhillings and ſixpence in monies numbered, his property.

JOHN ROLLINGS ſworn.

I am a ſailor, I was robbed on the 22d of Auguſt laſt, between three and four in the afternoon, I was in Stepney-fields juſt by the George; the priſoner Patch came behind me and knocked me down, the priſoner Rutter was with him, he came behind me and gave me a blow on the temples and demanded my money or my life, and knocked me down; I went to the houſe with a fellow ſervant of mine, and I gave him a drink of beer, we were no ways acquainted; it was the Barley-mow, in Gravel-lane; me and John Harrington who was with me came out, he is bad in bed now; the priſoner followed us, we went to the George, and called for a pint of beer there, and they came in there, we got the beer and paid for it and went out, we ſtaid about half or three quarters of an hour at the George, we went out together, and they followed us again.

Court. After you left the George, did you obſerve them following you before they ſtruck you?——No.

You did not?——No.

What effect had the blow upon you?—It knocked me down.

How do you know who ſtruck you?—I got up and run after him, I ſaw his face when he knocked me down, he put his knee upon my breaſt, the other ſaid, you ſecure that other bugger, and he went to make a blow at the lad, and the lad fell down, he did not knock him down, he demanded my money or my life, and I bid him take it; he took a guinea in gold, and half a crown and four and ſixpence, and eight halfpence, and four farthings; I knew what money I had about me, becauſe I changed it juſt before, they had all the money I had; after he robbed me he run away, and I got up and run after him till I fell down, I could run no further; and then two rope-makers overtook him, I ſaw them ſtop him, he was out of my ſight about a minute or two; I was led home by two perſons, I was ſo much hurt by the fall, and the blow he gave me; Rutter got clear off, Harrington run after him, but could not catch him, he was taken the next day in his mother's bed.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoners Council. You are ſure as to the time this happened?—Yes.

Quite ſure of that?——Yes, it was on Monday the 22d of Auguſt.

You mean to ſtick to that?——I do ſtick to it.

How happened that theſe lads were not committed till the 26th of October?——I do not know for that.

How long have you been acquainted with Harrington?——He went the voyage with with me, the priſoners pretended to be acquainted with him.

How long have you uſed the Barley-mow?—I never uſed it before, it was as likely to fall into my hands as any other.

You have been pretty well acquainted with the Barley-mow?—I never was yet; I do not know what I may be.

How far was it from the Barley-mow to the George?——I cannot ſay.

Gueſs a little; you were leaky veſſels, you wanted wetting very often?—We had a pint of ale at the George, a pot of beer at the Barley-mow, it is between a quarter of a mile and half a mile.

A pint of ale, and a pot of beer?—That is nothing of a working day; it is the day I went up to be bound; I had been at work for my maſter.

Whoſe houſe have you lived in ſince this happened?—My maſter's ſiſter's.

What is her name?——Stoddert.

Which of the thief-takers is it, that you are ſo well acquainted with?—I am not acquainted with them, I never lived with one of them in my life, nor lay in their houſe a night, I have ſeen one of them every day I have been here, his name is Forreſter.

How often in the courſe of a week?——I cannot rightly tell, ſome weeks I have not ſeen him at all; I can ſwear I have not ſeen him every week upon my oath, ſome weeks two or three times a week only.

How much of the reward is Mr. Forreſter to have?—I know nothing about it.

Is there any reward?——I know I am to get my own money, that is all I know.

Have not you heard there is eighty pounds to be got by the death of theſe two lads?—I have not, I have never heard that.

You may ſwear it is if you chuſe?——Then I chuſe to ſwear it, I do not know it, I never heard ſo from any body.

When did you ſee Harrington laſt?—I ſaw him on Sunday laſt.

Where does he live?—In Farmer-ſtreet, he was taken ill on Monday laſt, this day week, he keeps his bed, I do not know his complaint; I went to him and aſked him if he was coming, and he ſaid, he was not well, and was not able to come; I never aſked him what was the matter with him.

Was Patch drunk or ſober?——Sober.

What was the expreſſion they uſed?——He told me to demand my money or my life.

Had you any converſation with Mr. Forreſter about that?—No, I ſuppoſe I had walked a hundred yards, theſe boys followed me, and I did not know it, Harrington immediately ſaid, there were the boys that were drinking with us.

What were you doing in the fields?——We were walking in the fields for our own pleaſure.

Court. Why my boy, do you know what Month it was in?—October.

What made you ſay Auguſt?—It is only what happened to ſlip out, I know it was October, becauſe I was bound that day.

What words did Patch make uſe of?—He knocked me down, and demanded my money or my life.

What did he ſay to you?—He demanded my money or my life.

He ſaid ſome words to you?——He demanded my money or my life.

But I want to know, in what words he demanded it, what were the very words he ſaid?—Theſe were the very words he ſaid, he expreſſed it in that manner, he came up and gave me a blow and knocked me down, and ſays he, your money or your life.

DAVID BURTON ſworn.

I firſt ſaw the priſoner Patch and three others in Biſhop's-fields, I ſaw the ſaid Patch and another walk down from Biſhop's-fields acroſs Mr. Beverley's-fields, they run as faſt as they could from the fields, both the ſame way, one was a head of the other, which was foremoſt I cannot rightly ſay.

What was the other a doing?—Stamping, and crying, and knocking his hat on the graſs; and ſaid, he was ruined.

What did you do?—I called to them, and aſked them what was the matter with them; they ſaid, they were robbed of twenty-eight ſhillings, I was pinning down and I made my thread faſt; there was another man ſaid, let us run after them, we purſued purſued and took Patch, and the other got away; a man was coming along by Mile-end and ſtopped him, John Millington and I went and ſaid, where is the money you took from the lad; ſays he, I have got none; ſays I, you have, ſays he, I have only ſeven or eight ſhillings, that is all I took from them, I am ſure that was what he ſaid, we walked along with him, and aſked him what he was, he ſaid, he was a ſcamp, and if he was at liberty, he would let us know what he was.

Court. What does that mean?—About our way, they call it a thief.

What, he ſaid ſo himſelf?—Yes, ſays he, I believe you are going to take me to Green's, we ſaid, yes, we went to the Lebeck's-head, and he pulled out ſome ſilver and halfpence, and laid it on the table, and ſaid, that was all he had; Mr. Roſewell, the Juſtice's clerk, was drinking in that houſe or the next; they took him into the back room and ſearched him, and the guinea fell from under his ſhirt.

Did you ſee that?—Yes.

Mr. Garrow. The two priſoners run very faſt?—They were running from us.

It was the boys Harrington and Rollings that were ſtamping with their feet?—Yes, about three or four minutes, they had got three or four hundred yards.

Did they get out of ſight of the boys before Patch was ſtopped?——Near a quarter of a mile out of ſight.

How ſoon after was it, before Rollings came up to you?—We brought him back to Rollings, I never ſaw the lads before.

How long had they been playing the rogue together before this happened?——I do not know, I ſaw them altogether, when I ſaw them firſt; it was only while I was making the thread faſt; I ſaw neither of them knocked down, I ſaw none of them down.

How often have you ſeen Harrington ſince?——Only once, about a fortnight ago, he is bad they tell me.

Who told you ſo?—Rollings.

Upon your oath Mr. Burton, whtwas that that Rollings ſaid to you, abot the reward yeſterday, in the hearing of Forreſter, at the Pitt's head?—He ſaid nothing to me.

Mind what you ſay, what converſation paſſed yeſterday upon the ſubject of the reward?——Nothing.

Did Rollings ſay any thing about the reward?——I never heard, I did hear, I never knew nothing about it.

Have you never heard that there was a reward of eighty pounds for convicting theſe boys, blood money, perhaps you know that better?——No, Sir, I never heard it, nor do not know it.

Court. Speak with caution, now give it an anſwer, after you have conſidered it?—Upon my oath, I never heard of no ſuch thing.

Then you do not know that there is a reward?——I do not.

Nor have never heard it?——No.

Court. Why young man, have you never heard at any time or from any body, that there was a reward for convicting of highway-men?—No, Sir, I never did in my life.

Nor you never heard there was to be any reward for convicting theſe two young men?—No, Sir.

Why do you heſitate ſo much?——Mr. Green's clerk told me I ſhould be paid for my trouble for coming up, for my day's work.

How long have you attended this buſineſs as a witneſs?—Three days, and Monday at Hicks's-hall.

Who has paid your expences?——Forreſter.

Did Rollings run after theſe two priſoners at all before you purſued them?—I ſaw them running, both Rollings and young Harrington running after the other, they began to run when we began to run, and not before.

JOHN MILLINGTON ſworn.

I was at work with Burton when theſe men were firſt taken up, and I heard John and another lad crying out, ſtop thief! I did not know Rollings before; I heard two boys boys halloo out, I was close by them, there was a bit of a field that laid in a hollow, and I was in the field.

Did you see them before you heard the cry of stop thief?—No, when I first looked, I saw Philip Patch, and another lad in red breeches, run down the bank, and cross the ground that I work in, I took no notice of the other two lads; I says to my shopmate, we will run after them, I dare say we can catch them; says Burton, we will go, and I run away directly, Burton was working close by me, neither of us asked any questions.

After you said to him, or before you said to him, we will pursue them, had either of you asked any questions of the other two lads?——Yes, I asked them what they had robbed him of, and they said 28s.

How came you to tell me just now, that you had taken no notice of the other two lads?——When I first looked, I saw two boys, which were Rollings and Harrington, they were crying out, stop thief! the boys were doing nothing but running and crying stop thief.

When did you first see the other two?—We saw them after we had asked the boys what they were robbed of, then we saw the other men running across the field.

And Burton and you took different ways?——We took different ways, I ran up the field that I work in, and the other up a gentleman's ground; I pursued Patch, and a man held up his stick, and I ran and caught him by the collar directly; the two boys remained in the ground that we worked in, we were three hundred yards off the boys when we stopped Patch.

Then the two boys did not pursue at all after you and Burton?—No, not after we were gone.

Mr. Garrow. When you were bringing them back, how long was you before you got in sight of the boys again?—About five minutes and better.

You walked quietly back again, I suppose?——They were at the upper end of the grounds, they had not a quarter of a mile to go, it might be between six or seven minutes.

What were the two boys doing?—I cannot tell, Patch and the other lad ran abreast of each other, one ran before, the other behind, but they were near together; one parted from Patch, and made off another way.

How many days have you been attending here?——Three days.

How much have you paid out of your own pocket now?——About two or three shillings.

Did you pay for yourself and Burton too, or only for yourself?——For myself, sometimes between us both.

Did Burton pay for his bread and cheese and beer?——Sometimes, we did not eat a great deal, but what we did we paid for.

Which of you was it that paid for Rollings, the boy?—I do not know.

ALEXANDER RAMSAY sworn.

I examined the prisoner, and he produced the money, half a crown, sixpence, four shillings, eight halfpence, and four farthings, and a guinea dropped from his breeches.

GEORGE FORRESTER sworn.

I apprehended Rutter in bed, I told him it was for a robbery in the fields, he said it was not him, it was Patch; Fletcher was present, he said Patch had the money: Mr. Cliff, of Shadwell-dock, gave me half a guinea to pay for this prosecution, and I paid for the indictment. One of the rope-makers brought some victuals in his pocket; he paid part of their expences: I told them they would be paid their expences; there never was a word said about the reward in my presence.

——— FLETCHER sworn.

I apprehended Rutter, I told him it was for this robbery, he said it was very hard, for he had none of the money.

Court to Prosecutor. When did you see Rutter after he was taken?——Upon the Tuesday evening.

Upon your oath, are you sure he was the man that was with Patch?—I am sure.

FOR THE PRISONER PATCH.

JANE M'DANIEL sworn.

I have known Patch from his infancy, he is a ſailor, and has been a ſhort time from ſea, he has a very good character, and is very honeſt: he has an impoſthume in his head, which iſſues out of both ears, and when he takes liquor, I do not think he is right in his ſenſes.

Do you mean that it affects him more than it does men of ſound underſtanding when they get drunk?——I think it does: there has been gentlemen of character to ſpeak for him, but their buſineſs called them away, and they could not attend any longer.

The Priſoner Rutter called three witneſſes, who gave him a very good character.

PHILIP PATCH, HENRY RUTTER, } GUILTY, Death.

They were both humbly recommended to mercy by the Jury.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

14. STEPHEN HANKS and ALLEN WILLIAMS were indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Rowland Wells, the younger, on the King's highway, on the 26th day of November laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will, one canvas purſe, value 1d. one penknife, value 3d. one iron key, value 1d. his property, and four guineas, value 4l. 4s. and two ſixpences, value 1s. the property of Rowland Wells, the younger.

ROWLAND WELLS, jun. ſworn.

I am a farmer; on Friday the 26th of November laſt, I was robbed about half after five in the evening, between Nottinghill and Shepherd's-buſh, as I was going along by the ſide of my horſe, I had a load of hay for my father, and I obſerved two men at the tail of my cart; then I made a ſtop myſelf, and let my team keep on, and as the cart went paſt me, I ſaw the two men with my dung fork; I aſked them what they did there, they made no anſwer, one of them came up, and laid hold of me on the left ſhoulder with one hand, and held a ſtick over me with the other, and ſaid if I did not deliver my money, he would daſh my brains out immediately. As ſoon as I ſpoke to them at the tail of the cart, they dropped my fork immediately, and came up to me, the other came before me, and lifted a ſtick over my head, and ſwore if I did not deliver my money, he would daſh my brains out; I pulled out my purſe, containing four guineas and two ſhillings and ſixpence; one of the guineas I can ſwear to, as I had refuſed it: the moon was up, but it was rather cloudy, I am punctual to the priſoner Williams, as to Hanks, he ſtood rather behind me, I had very little ſight of him, I ſhould not care to ſay any thing about Hanks, as he was behind me; they followed on the outſide, and followed ſome time, and ſwore I had more money, I told them I had an iron key, and they ſhould have it if they would, and they demanded it immediately; they ſaid, damn your eyes, here is your dung-fork; I ran on, I did not come back for it, I ran on to where I was to ſleep, I left my team, and went to the door and called the landlord and the hoſtler, the landlord and I purſued them up to Tyburn; in a very few minutes we met the patrol, and we ſent two or three one way, and two or three another, and I and theſe two gentlemen went down the Edgware road, and there we met theſe two men coming along, one was at a diſtance from the other eight or ten yards: I ſuppoſe it was near upon an hour upon the Edgware road that we met them; they went away over the field for the Edgware road, they went over the hedges and ditches; as ſoon as we met Williams, I ſays to one of theſe gentlemen, that is the man I am ſure that robbed me; we took them into a tallow-

tallow-chandler's ſhop there, that gentleman pulled out my money, the four guineas, and two ſixpences, four bad ſhillings, and three pence, a key, and a knife; Williams had the money, the man that took it from me; as ſoon as he pulled out the money, I ſaid that is my guinea, I can ſwear to it.

Look at that guinea?——I can ſwear to the guinea, and the knife, and the key too.

JOSEPH CREEDLAND ſworn.

Produces the four guineas, two ſixpences, four bad ſhillings, one halfpenny and a farthing, a knife and key.

Proſecutor. This is the guinea, it is particularly marked, it was a particular old guinea, marked 45, or 46.

Mr. Juſtice Willes. Here is no particular mark upon this?——I have no other particular marks, the edge of one ſide of the knife is turned quite rough, I have had it two years.

PRISONER WILLIAMS's DEFENCE.

The money was my own, that I worked hard for; I can bring witneſſes to prove that I had it when I came from my father's houſe, my friends are in the country, I picked up the knife and key on the road.

STEPHEN HANKS, NOT GUILTY.

ALLEN WILLIAMS, GUILTY Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

15. MICHAEL MACQUIRE was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Magnus Ohran, on the 10th day of November laſt about the hour of four in the night, and ſtealing therein one pair of ſilver ſalts, value 20s. one ſilver milk pot, value 10s. four ſilver tea ſpoons, value 6s. a ſilver pepper-box, value 10s. a cloth coat, value 10s. three linen waiſtcoats, value 3s. two ſhirts, value 5s. and one iron ſpectacle caſe, value 6d. his property.

MAGNUS OHRAN ſworn.

On the 10th of November in the morning between four and five my houſe was broke open, I had not been long aſleep, I did not come home till late, and I heard a noiſe as if ſome panes were broke, I liſtened a little while before I went down, my wife went down directly, ſhe thought it was the china broke, I heard her go to the maid, and ſay, you naſty toad you have not ſhut the outer door; no madam, ſays ſhe, I did not, there are two doors, one was upon the latch, and the other was open, ſhe came up ſtairs again and came to bed; in a little while the maid came up to me, and called Maſter, Maſter, I am robbed, I dreſſed myſelf, and went down directly, and in the little breakfaſt room towards the garden, I found every thing was taken away, and the ſmall ſilver that was left behind, and the china were moved on the floor; then we went to the fore parlour, there was broke one clothes preſs, and one corner cupboard, the glaſs broke, but nothing taken out from there, they took out a mahogany drawer full of clothes, and they were every bit taken away, and after that we began to ſearch about the houſe, and we found in the back part, which was a little open, about ſeven feet deep under a gateway, an old ſaſh about ſeven foot high, which gave light, that was cut acroſs with a knife, and the wall in the middle was broke through, ſo that a man could get through by all means; then I ſearched about the houſe, and I found an old black coat, the thief had cloathed himſelf in my clothes, and left all his old clothes behind, and in this coat I found a letter which a man in Clerkenwell wrote to his wife in Hatton Garden; I ſent my ſon and another down to the workhouſe, to make an enquiry in conſequence of this letter, whether there was ſuch a woman in the workhouſe, and I went to Juſtice Green, and he gave an order for two of his officers to go and fetch the man from Clerkenwell; I knew the man when he was brought to my houſe, he lodged in my houſe nine months before, I believe for ſeven or eight weeks.

Were

Were any of your things ever found again?——Yes.

THOMAS ISAACS ſworn.

I had information from one Richard Brown of Bridewell, I did expect he would have been here, but being ſeſſions time I fancy he is not come down yet; I had information to apprehend this priſoner, accordingly I did apprehend him on the 12th of November, I took him to my houſe, and there I ſearched him, and found this ſpectacle caſe, and in his ſhoes he had a pair of ſilver buckles, and ſilver knee buckles, I aſked him how he came by them, he ſaid he bought them at a ſilverſmith's in the Minories, I aſked him whereabouts it was in the Minories, he told me near the bottom, I went and enquired out the ſhop, I carried the buckles and ſhewed them to Mr. Dean, at Dean's I found nothing, theſe are the buckles I took from the Priſoner.

THOMAS DEAN ſworn.

I am ſon to Mr. Dean, ſilverſmith.

Look at theſe buckles?——As to knowing the buckles I do not, I did not ſell them; on the 10th of November, to the beſt of my knowledge, the priſoner came to our houſe in the morning with a pair of ſilver ſalts gilt inſide, an old faſhion milk pot, a pepper box, and three odd tea ſpoons, the whole amounted to two pounds fifteen ſhillings, I was behind the counter, and reckoned them up; we eſtimated the value by the weight; the ſalts being foreign made, was four and ten pence, and the reſt of the plate being hall marked, was five ſhillings; I did not know him before, we aſked him how he came by them, and he was very much affronted at it, he ſaid they were his own property, he brought them from Gibralter, he ſaid he ſhould hardly bring them for ſale, if they were not his property, he bought a pair of ſhoe and knee buckles, to the beſt of my remembrance it was the priſoner at the bar, and a gold breaſt buckle.

Can you upon your oath poſitively ſwear that the priſoner was the perſon?——No Sir, I think it is, but I cannot ſwear to him, I did not take particular notice of him, I was reckoning up, I do really think it is the ſame man, I cannot poſitively ſwear to him.

THEODATUS DEAN ſworn.

Confirmed his ſon's account, but could not ſwear to the buckles nor the priſoner.

Proſecutor. The ſpectacle caſe was not mine, it was one I took inſtead of my own, but I cannot ſwear to it.

Court. There is no evidence in this caſe brought home to the priſoner.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before MR. RECORDER.

---

16. WILLIAM GILES was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting William Bailey on the King's highway, on the 21ſt day of November laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will, 10s. in monies numbered, four half pence, and two farthings his monies.

Mr. Garrow Council for the Proſecution.

WILLIAM BAILEY ſworn.

I am a muſical inſtrument maker, I came out of Mr. Smith's houſe, and I was met by the priſoner at the bar.

Have you ſeen the priſoner now?——I cannot by this light diſcern him; about ſix o'clock as I was coming out.

Well you was ſtopped by ſomebody?—Yes.

What did that ſomebody do to you?—He clapped a piſtol to my breaſt, he ſaid your money, your money, your money, three times over, I gave him nine ſhillings, two ſixpences, four halfpence and two farthings

Was it light enough for you to obſerve the perſon that robbed you?——Yes, and I ſaw him within five minutes after, there was ſome perſon almoſt immediately apprehended, that was the perſon that robbed me, he was taken by Peter Campbell, who is

Is a ſervant to Mr. Smith, and by a coachman to Mr. Monk; I am confident that was the man that robbed me.

He did not miſbehave to you?——No further than claping his piſtol to my breaſt, he ſaid directly as I gave him my money, where is your watch, I ſaid I have none, ſays he damn me, you lye, go about your buſineſs; I went a little way and I turned round, and he came to me again, ſays he damn me where are you going to, go where you was going; I had been at General Prevoſt's tuning a piano fort, and double harpſicord.

Priſoner. He ſays I am the man that robbed him, I am not the man that robbed him I will be upon my oath; whereabouts did I rob you?—Within five paces of Mr. Smith's yard, he made up to me and clapped the piſtol to my breaſt I was quite cloſe againſt the wall.

PETER CAMPBELL ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Smith, I was informed that Mr. Bailey had been robbed, Mr. Monk's coachman was at Mr. Monk's gate, I was ſtanding with him, I joined in the purſuit of this man, I firſt ſaw him at Mr. Smith's gate, when he got to the edge, he leaped over the ha ha, into Mr. Smith's garden, I took him there, I found nothing on him, I ſearched him for arms, he produced the money at Mr. Byng's, I have not got the money, he demanded his money and had it, there was one halfpenny, which is a part of the money, and he produced ſeventeen ſhillings, two-pence and two farthings.

Court to Proſecutor. How long after the robbery was it that he was taken?——I believe not five minutes, he turned to the right, to get into the ha ha, in the garden.

Court. When you ſaw him, was he running in a path?——Yes, in a foot path that people commonly go on from Hadley to Barnet.

Mr. Garrow. Did you obſerve the courſe he took, in his way towards where you took him from the field?——Yes.

Did you next day, or at time any ſearch in that courſe?——Yes, there was a piſtol found.

(The Piſtol produced.)

It was found near the place where he went over, on the field ſide.

Was this piſtol loaded?——It was not (The Proſecutor looks at it.) That was much ſuch a one as this is, he put it in three different directions, he ſaid afterwards, it was a ſtick, not a piſtol; when he was taken into Mr. Smith's houſe, he ſaid that life was a precious thing, and that he hoped we would not be too ſevere with him, for as God was his judge it was his firſt attempt; when we came out I ſaid to him cannot you trace your own footſteps here, he ſaid what ſignifies troubling me I acknowledge I am the man that robbed you, I will give you your money again, and make you any acknowledgement, only be favourable to me.

JOSEPH BENN ſworn.

I am coachman to Mr. Monk, I remember Mr. Bailey coming to me and giving a particular account of being robbed, Campbell went with me, I ſaw the priſoner go out of the Hadley road, over the gate into the field, then he ran as far as the lower end of Mr. Smith's garden, and jump'd into his garden over the ha ha, I aſſiſted in taking him, I did not trace the place after, I heard the priſoner ſay he was the man, but it was the firſt time he had done ſo, and hoped we would be as favourable as poſſible, he had not been promiſed any favour at all; the priſoner was the man I found in the garden.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going to East Barnet, to ſee a young woman I kept company with for many years, one Elizabeth Wetherley, who lives with Squire Baker, as I was going, I was purſued by ſome dogs, and for fear of the dogs I jumped into this garden, they brought me back and ſearched me, nothing was found upon me.

GUILTY, DEATH.

Court. Has this man been on the lighters?

Mr. Akerman. My Lord I do not remember him in cuſtody ever before, he is quite a ſtranger before this time.

---

17. WILLIAM SMART was indicted for felonſouſly ſtealing, on the 2d day of December, one cambrick handkerchief, value 4s. the property of Nathaniel Bayley, Eſquire.

THOMAS GALE ſworn.

On Thurſday, about twelve, I was coming down by St. Andrew's Church, and I ſaw a gentleman go by before me, and three boys; this boy and another made a motion to attack the gentleman's pocket, this boy put his hand in the gentleman's pocket, and ran over to Field-lane, and diſpatched the handkerchief.

Did you ſee him put his hand into the gentleman's pocket?——I did.

Are you quite poſitive?—I am.

Did you ſee what he took out?—The gentleman's handkerchief, it appeared to me to be a white handkerchief, it was done ſo ſudden I could not venture to ſay what it was, I called after the gentleman, I told him where the boy was; they ran over the way, right againſt the gentleman, I imagine he came for a ſecond attack.

Court. Did the lad that put his hand into his pocket run up Field-lane?—Yes, he was out of my ſight, but I am quite ſure he is the lad; I had ſtopped the gentleman and he went to go after him, and before he could get off the curb, the lad was right up againſt him again.

Should you know the gentleman again if you ſaw him?——Yes, that is the gentleman.

NATHANIEL BAYLEY, Eſq. ſworn.

This man run after me, and with a very earneſt countenance, aſked me if I had loſt any thing, I clapped my hand to my pocket, and found I had loſt my handkerchief, I am ſure I had two, I carry two; as he ſpoke to me, he ſaid this lad picked your pocket, and I ſeized the lad; when I firſt ſaw the priſoner, he was walking with another lad, I think they were arm in arm; ſays I, is it you, you dog, that picked my pocket? the other boy ran away, this boy began to cry: ſeveral very reputable people came out of their ſhops, the boy was taken to the conſtable's, and nothing found.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was by myſelf, I was not by the gentleman indeed, I was going into Fleet-market of an errand for my mother.

The priſoner called two witneſſes, who gave him a good character.

GUILTY.

Recommended by the Jury.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

18. WILLIAM HUGHES was indicted for ſtealing, on the 26th day of November laſt, one copper, value 10s. the property of Hugh O'Connor.

ELIZABETH SAGE ſworn.

I was in Mr. Connor's houſe the beginning of November, a month next Saturday, I called the duſt-men in to take the duſt away, and they ran away with the copper; they aſked me for a broom, and while I went to get one, they took away the copper, it ſtood in the kitchen, they had a duſt cart; they went away with the cart and all as faſt as ever they could drive, I ran after them for an hour, I met with a man that told me of them; I never ſaw them before; the priſoner was brought back and ſhewn to me in about an hour, the copper was never found, they had parted with it; I am ſure the priſoner was one of the duſt-men: they would not let me light them down ſtairs; he ſaid he knew he was in the houſe houſe, but denied taking the copper; there were three of them, they were all gone, he ſaid he knew nothing of his companions, he would not give any directions to them: I had ſeen the copper a little before.

JOHN RICHARDSON ſworn.

I ſaw a copper in the priſoner's cart as he came down St. Mary-axe, and I ſpoke to him about it, ſays I, you have done the people out of the copper; he ſaid, I am going to take it to be mended.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

They took me and my partners in Norton-falgate; I know nothing at all about it, they ſtopped a man in Houndſditch, and ſaid he took it.

Court to Richardſon. How many was with the cart when you ſaw it?——Three, the other two ran away.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

19. JOSEPH DAVIS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 28th day of October laſt, one wooden box, value 6d. and twelve pounds of bohea tea, value 30s. and nine pounds of green tea, value 30s. the property of John Pinhorn and John Tiffin Stewart.

DAVID LEVI ſworn.

I am a conſtable, I took the priſoner coming from London-bridge, about eight in the morning on the 28th of October, I met the priſoner and another man looking at the windows of the ſhops, and I ſuſpected them; I followed them up Gracechurch-ſtreet, I ſaw them ſtop under a gateway, I ſaw the priſoner go into the proſecutor's ſhop, and was in about a minute, and came out with a box of tea on his head, I took him in Leadenhall-market; I ſaid, what is that; he ſaid, what is that to you.

(The box produced and depoſed to.)

JAMES VINEY ſworn.

I packed this box up on the morning of the 28th, they were to be ſent to Dedham, in Eſſex.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

In the morning a young man met me, and aſked me to hold that, while he went over the way to ſee whether the coachman was in the way; he ſaid he would give me two pence, I laid hold of it, and put it on my head, and immediately Levi came and took me.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

20. JOHN MACGOWAN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 1ſt day of November laſt, two mens hats, value 20s. the property of Mary Hall, widow, and John Hall.

JOHN HALL ſworn.

I loſt two hats, I only prove the property.

RALPH PAYNE ſworn.

I am apprentice to Mr. Hall.

Is not Mrs. Hall partner with him?—Yes, I ſaw the hats hanging on a nail cloſe to the window, I had them to finiſh.

Was the window open?—Yes, I miſſed them directly, I ſaw ſomething whiſk over the window, and I ſaw the hats bulk out under his jacket.

Under whoſe jacket?——Under the priſoner's jacket: I ſaw him cloſe to the window, I called ſtop thief, and he ran up the next lane, and a man ſtopped him, I do not know who it was.

How near was the priſoner to you?——Cloſe to the window.

Did you ſee his face?—No.

Then how can you ſwear that is the man?——I am ſure.

Why?

Why?—Because there was nobody else nigh.

If you did not see his face, how can you swear that was the man?——I saw him immediately before he passed the shutters.

JOSEPH GATES sworn.

I know nothing of the robbery, I was coming by at the time, and they had the prisoner in the shop, I took him into custody.

Court to Payne. Who brought him to you?——I do not know who he was.

Was you present when the prisoner was taken?——Yes.

What was found upon him?—Nothing, he threw the hats away before he was taken, I saw him throw them away when he was half way up the lane.

Was he out of your sight?——No.

How far might it be before you took him?——About ten yards, I took him immediately, I was close by the hats when they were picked up; the hats are here; I do not know who picked them up and gave them to me.

Gates. I produce the hats, I had them from Mr. Hall.

(The hats deposed to.)

Mr. Hall. I had them from the boy, these are the hats which the boy had to do before.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

—I was coming through Tower-street, and I picked up the hats under the window, and I saw the boy coming after me; I did not know who they belonged to, and I threw them away: I am a stranger, not long over from America.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the first London Jury before Mr. Justice WILLES.

20. WILLIAM COX was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 30th of November last, one wooden trunk, covered with hair, value 5s. eight pair of cotton stockings, value 20s. seven pair of silk stockings, value 28s. eight muslin aprons, value 20s. four women's linen riding shirts, value 20s. fourteen linen handkerchiefs, value 14s. nine shifts, value 20s. one white linen petticoat, value 5s. one woman's linen cloak, value 10s. one gown and petticoat, value 40s. one riding habit, value 40s. six pair of ruffles, value 20s. a pair of callico sheets, value 20s. the property of Thomas Larkin, Esquire.

The witnesses examined apart, by desire of Mr. Garrow.

THOMAS LARKINS sworn.

I lost a trunk from behind my carriage on the 30th of November last; I was coming out of Hampshire; I missed it about half way up Ludgate-hill, I believe it was about twenty minutes, or half an hour after six; I do not immediately know every thing that was in the trunk, but I opened the trunk, and took an account of the things at the constable's house, I sealed it up again, I found the trunk about five minutes after it was lost; I found it in a shop on Ludgate-hill, and the prisoner in custody.

Mr. Garrow. It was, on the 30th of November, as dark as it is now?——Yes.

The lamps all alight?—Yes.

How much of the town had you come?—From Hyde-park-corner.

Had you observed yourself the trunk before?——No, I had not

The Remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be published in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 8th of DECEMBER, 1784, and the following Days;

Being the FIRST SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER I. PART V.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXIV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of William Cox.

——— WEST ſworn.

I am a coachman, I was on foot when I ſaw this, coming by the Bell Savage Inn on Ludgate-hill, between ſix and ſeven, I cannot ſay to a minute, I ſaw five or ſix men behind the carriage, I thought the man had a reſtive horſe that they were puſhing behind, and in half a minute I ſaw the man take the trunk from the carriage, three or four were helping it on the ſhoulders of one, I called out to the coachman, but he did not hear me; I ſtept about two or three ſteps to them, and made an alarm; I called out, you have taken the trunk from the gentleman's carriage, and you ſhall not have it, and they dropped it on the edge of the ſtones, and after they had dropped the trunk, they ſhuffled round one another, and I called, ſtop thief! and the witneſs Warren ran up and caught the priſoner, and brought him back.

Can you diſtinguiſh any of theſe four or five men that were round the carriage?—That was one of the men that was with them, the man that had the trunk in his arms was a taller man, he was not the man on whom they were putting it.

Mr. Garrow. It was a dark night?—No, it was not very dark.

Did you ſee his face?—Yes, I ſaw them all, they were round me when I ſpoke, the priſoner was brought back in a minute to the ſhop door where we threw the trunk in, and I ſaid that was one of the men, he was dreſſed as he is now, only he had a ſilk handkerchief tied round his neck.

Were people going by at the time, or was the ſtreet quiet?—There were plenty of people walking on both ſides of the way, I ſuppoſe there were thirty or forty people round the carriage, when I called ſtop thief, in an inſtant.

How long did you ſee them round the carriage?——Not half a minute.

You had not obſerved the young man at the bar till the people ran after, and you cried out ſtop thief?——Yes, I had, the people were all round.

Several of them ran, after the people ran away?—I do not know.

Do not you know the direct contrary, that a great number of the bye-ſtanders ran after thoſe they ſuppoſed thieves?—I ſtood by the trunk.

Anſwer

Anſwer my queſtion upon your oath; do not you know, that great numbers of the hue-ſtanders, as well as Mr. Warren, ran after thoſe they ſuppoſed to be thieves?——I cannot ſay whether they did or not, I know that the men that were taking the trunk all run.

Court. Was it Mr. Warren run after theſe people, or did other people run?——Mr. Warren, as far as I know.

Mr. Garrow. That will not do, I will not be ſo anſwered; do you mean to ſwear that nobody but Warren run after theſe men!——There might be.

Do you not know that there were?——I do not know, there might be other people run probably.

Court. Then why did not you ſay that?

Mr. Garrow. Have you always been in this ſtory, Mr. Weſt?—Yes, Sir, I ſpeak the truth.

Yes, yes, I know you do, that is for the Jury to judge of though a little; you have always told the ſame ſtory when you have been talking about this robbery?——I ſaw that he was one of the men that was there, and run away.

Have you always ſaid that, Mr. Weſt?—I do not know what you mean, I never was on ſuch an affair.

Yes, you have.——No, never.

Have you always given the ſame account?—I do not know but I have, to the beſt of my knowledge.

Then I will help you a little; you have always ſwore poſitively to the priſoner, do you remember being examined before my Lord Mayor?——Yes.

Do you remember my Lord Mayor aſking you, if ſomebody had not bribed you for the priſoner?——Yes, becauſe I was loth to ſwear.

Then you did not ſwear to him?——I ſwore that he was in company.

Mind what you are about, Sir, as I know the Short-hand Writer will take down very accurately what you ſay, for I promiſe you ſhall hear of it again.——He was one of the people.

I aſk you this, did you, before the Lord Mayor, ſwear he was one of the perſons?——He was one of the people round the carriage.

Did you ſwear ſo before the Lord Mayor?——Yes.

You did?——I believe I did.

Will you ſwear poſitively that the priſoner is one of the perſons?—One of the perſons.

Court. Did you ſwear that before the Lord Mayor?——I could not ſwear that he was the man that took the trunk from the carriage, I ſwore that he was one of the men that was round there, and that he ran away, and that Mr. Warren took him back.

Did you ſwear that?——Yes.

Mr. Garrow. Do you mean to ſwear, Sir, now, that was the account you gave before the Lord Mayor?—As near as I can tell.

Let us have ſomething poſitive, ſome one thing that we can lay hold of that is not true; did you before the Lord Mayor ſay, he was one of the men?—I could not ſwear poſitive he was one of the men.

Did you ſwear that?——I did.

You mean now to ſwear poſitively, that you told the Lord Mayor he was one of the five or ſix?——Yes.

What was it induced the Lord Mayor to aſk you, if you was not bribed by the priſoner, was not it becauſe you would not ſwear poſitively to him, and becauſe you equivocated ſo much?—My Lord told me I was upon a right cauſe, and told me to ſpeak the truth; I told him I would.

Then you did not firſt ſwear poſitively to the young man at the bar?——I ſwore he was one of the five or ſix, I would not ſwear at once.

How ſoon after the trunk was ſtolen was you at the Lord Mayor's?——The next morning.

Then you could not ſwear poſitively that he was one of the five or ſix?——I could ſwear that he was one of the five or ſix that ran away; my Lord Mayor aſked me if I had been bribed or threatened, I told him I had not, I ſaid I could not ſwear he was the man that took the trunk, but that he was in company.

Have

Have not you told the Lord Mayor, that you could not ſwear poſitively that he was there?—I knew he was there, and ſaw him run.

I muſt have an anſwer?—It is clear he was there, by the mens bringing him back; I meant I could not ſay he was the man that took the trunk.

Did you, or did you not, ſay to the Lord Mayor, he was one of the five or ſix perſons?——That was what my Lord Mayor made me ſwear.

My Lord Mayor cautioned you to ſpeak the truth?——Yes.

Had not you heſitated a little about this young man being one of the party?——I could not ſwear he was the young man that took the trunk.

THOMAS WARREN ſworn.

On the laſt day of November, I was going down Ludgate-hill in the evening (I live in Stationers-alley) I ſaw two or three men following a poſt-chaiſe, I rather made a bit of a ſtop to look, and went on a little further, and I ſaw the ſame men bruſh by me, and one of them ſaid, damn my eyes it will do; and I ſaw them run into the highway, after the poſt-chaiſe, I immediately croſſed the way, and run up Ludgate-hill after them; and juſt before I got to them, I ſaw the perſon that was examined juſt now, had hold of the handle of the trunk, and they were all round the trunk, five or ſix men; and he ſaid, they ſhould not have it; they had taken it from the poſt-chaiſe that went up the hill, and he ſaid your are all thieves, and he cried ſtop thief! and they all run away; and I ran after the priſoner and took him.

Court. When all theſe people were about Weſt, was the priſoner one of thoſe?—He was one that was amongſt them, and as ſoon as he cried ſtop thief he ran off, and I ran after him and took him; I am confident he was one of the five or ſix.

Did you ſee him quit Weſt and run off? Yes, I did, and he run up againſt the ſide of a houſe, and went to creep under a woman's elbow that I might miſs him, but I took him.

Did you never loſe ſight of him, till you took him?——I did not.

How far might he run before you ſeized him?——Three, four, or five doors at the moſt.

Was there a croud of people, or was he ſingle?—Juſt as he halloed out you are all thieves, I got as near to them as I am to this table, then I run after him and took him.

Mr. Garrow. I take it for granted, you do not mean to ſay, that all the perſons that were round Weſt, were concerned in the intention of robbing the chaiſe?—— They might be drawn by curioſity, but I think their intention was to hoiſt off the box; I ſaw two or three of them behind the chaiſe, I really think they were all of them concerned; there were a good number of perſons round.

It was very dark?——No, Sir, there were very great lights from two ſhops in particular, I ſaw no other perſon running after him; ſome run acroſs the way, ſome up the hill, and he turned round and run down the hill.

(The box produced and the things depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was coming from Fleet-market, and was going to Friday-ſtreet to an acquaintance, I ſaw a great croud of people round this trunk, and I ſtopped, and this gentleman came and laid hold of me, and took me into a ſhop; I told him I would go with him any where, I have no witneſſes, becauſe I did not know of being tried to day, they told me in Newgate I ſhould not be tried.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

22. JAMES DUNN was indicted for that he, on the 10th day of July laſt, did utter as true, a falſe, forged, and counterfeited will and teſtament, with a certain mark thereto ſubſcribed, purporting to be the laſt will and teſtament of John Potter, with intent to defraud the United Company of Merchants trading to the Eaſt-Indies.

A Second Count with intention to defraud Thomas Newt and others.

A Third Count with intention to defraud Eneor Burgeſs.

A Fourth Count with intention to defraud Jenny Potter.

THOMAS FLETCHER ſworn.

This is the will of John Potter, I brought this from the Prerogative Court of Canterbury.

Mr. Keys, Priſoner's Council. Who had you that from?—From the record keeper, John Watſon.

When had you it?——This morning.

EDWARD LOVELOCK ſworn.

I am clerk to Mr. Charles Biſhop; a perſon attended the 10th of July to prove the will of John Potter, and a probate was granted of the will; I do not know who brought it to our office, I wrote the jurata upon it.

JOHN FLEMMING ſworn.

I am an attorney; in the beginning of July laſt, the priſoner applied to me reſpecting ſome wages he ſaid he was due to him, for the Rodney Eaſt-Indiaman; I deſired him to leave the will, and I would make enquiries at the India Houſe.

Court. How did he claim to John Potter?—As executor; I verily believe this is the will; in conſequence of his application I went to the India Houſe, to enquire what wages was due, and found there were forty pounds due to him, I returned the will to the man, and gave him directions to Mr. Charles Biſhop, in Doctor's Commons to make out a probate of the will; in the courſe of a day or two, or three, I received a probate of the will from Mr. Biſhop, I appointed to meet the man in the city, that I might attend him to the India Houſe; I attended him there, and Mr. Burgeſs then began to interrogate him, and I found him a ſuſpicious kind of a character, and I left him to Mr. Burgeſs.

Mr. Keys. Are you quite ſure as to his perſon?——Certain of it.

As to the will you made no memorandum on the will, at the time you received it?——None at all.

Therefore you have no certainty of the will, only a will of that import, or a will like that, has been in your hands?—I will not ſay this is the will, I verily believe it to be the ſame.

Court. I preſume you read the will, and looked at it?—I read it, and have not any doubt but that is the ſame will.

Court to Mr. Fletcher. Upon whoſe oath does the probate appear to have been granted?—Upon the oath of James Dunn, ſole executor; here is the book in which the original minutes of the Court is kept (reads) "on the firſt ſeſſions of Michaelmas term 1784, the probate was revoked, and adminiſtration ſecured to Jenny Potter, widow and relict of the ſaid deceaſed."

——— BIRCH Eſq. ſworn.

About the 12th of July laſt, the priſoner at the bar came to my office, at the India houſe, in company with Mr. Flemming, who has been juſt now examined, and produced the probate of the will annexed to John Potter, a ſeaman on board the Rodney, I was called out from where I generally ſit, and I aſked him if he was the perſon named in the will as executor, he ſaid he was, I then aſked him if he was a relation of the deceaſed, he ſaid he was a ſecond couſin, that Potter's Mother's name was Dowding, and ſiſter to James Dunn, I aſked him if he had received any money, as abſent money for the deceaſed; as being attorney to the deceaſed, I called for the book and found none had been paid, I obſerved the mark to the will, and I aſked him if Potter could write, he ſaid he never could write, I aſked him if he was preſent at the time that Potter executed the will, he ſaid he was, and it was executed at the Crooked Billet, at Goſport, on Portſmouth, but I am not clear which, I aſked him if he was acquainted with the witneſſes, he ſaid he was, he ſaid that Buſh was Boatſwain of the Perſeus, and William Johnſon, the other ſubſcribing witneſs, was a waterman at Portſmouth, I aſked him what was the age of Potter, he ſaid about thirty nine at leaſt, he did not look older, then I ordered one of the clerks to bring me the muſter roll of the ſhip, in which I found Potter's name was entered, and aged fifty-two: having ſuſpicion in my own mind that the will was a forgery, I put off paying the money; the next time he came which was a few days afterwards, he perſiſted in the ſame ſtory, I put the ſame ſeveral queſtions to him that I did before, and I repeated the queſtion, particularly about his writing, becauſe at that time, I had evidence in my pocket, or in the office, that the man could write a very good hand, and I particularly aſked him about his age, and appearance, the priſoner perſiſted in the ſame ſtory, and the third day when he came I charged a conſtable with him.

EDWARD KING ſworn.

I am purſer of the Rodney, I knew John Potter, I ſhould ſuppoſe he was about fifty five, between fifty and ſixty, from his appearance, there was only one man of the Potter on board, I have not a liſt of the names of the men, but I know there was no other.

Burgeſs. I have the ſhip's ledger here.

Mr. Silveſter. Could he write?—Yes.

Have you ever ſeen him write?——He wrote that in my preſence, it is the receipt book for the ſlops.

Do you know when he died?——At St. Helena, the 14th of March, 1784, on a homeward bound voyage.

When did he go on board, at Portſmouth?——I do not remember the day.

Burgeſs. The 22d of July, 1782.

CHARLES RUSSEL ſworn.

I live at Portſmouth, I am a navy agent, I knew John Potter, when he came to me he did not belong to any ſhip, he was diſcharged from the Medway to Haſler hoſpital; and from thence he went to the Mars, after he was diſcharged unſerviceable from there, he came to me to make him out a power of attorney, to receive ſome prize money for the Medway, I ſaw him ſign this, I received ſome prize money, one pound two ſhillings and ſix-pence.

JAMES WARD, ſworn.

I am a ſeaman on board the Rodney, I knew John Potter on board the Mars hoſpital ſhip, he told me he had been on board the Medway before.

Mr. Silveſter. Where did Potter die?—At St. Helena, he ſaid he had a wife and Children at Exeter, and a brother at St. John's Newfoundland, he ſaid he was born at Exeter.

MARY RUSSEL ſworn.

I live at Portſmouth Common.

Did you know John Potter?——Very well, he came to me and ſaid he was an invalid from the Mars, he aſked me if I was acquainted with any of the officers on board the Rodney, he went on board the Rodney, with me, and remained on board, I never heard him ſay what ſhip he was of before.

THOMAS STEBBING ſworn.

I am clerk in the Navy Office, I have the ſhips books of the Medway, here is John Potter quarter gunner.

Where was the veſſel in April 1781?—The 15th of April 1781, ſhe was at Gibralter, ſhe ſailed from thence, ſhe arrived at Spithead the 7th of June; Potter appears to have been on board all that time.

Court. Does it appear from the Medway's books when Potter was diſcharged?——I have not the books here, but I remember looking into them.

Court. That will not do?——Who was boatſwain of the Perſeus?——James Burratt, from the 17th of September, 1780, to the 12th of April 1782.

Is there any ſuch man on board as Alexander Buſh?——No ſuch man, there was a Thomas Buſh came as acting boatſwain, when Burratt left the ſhip, I have examined, and there is no ſuch man of that name before 1782. Thomas Buſh entered on board in April 1782.

(The will read and the indictment examined by Mr. Keys.)

JENNY POTTER ſworn.

Court. How do you make Jenny Potter a witneſs?——She has letters of adminiſtration.

Court. But if this is a genuine will, theſe letters of adminiſtration may be again revoked, ſhe cannot be a witneſs againſt this will as forged, which takes all her huſband's property.

Mr. Silveſter. You have ſeen Potter's writing, look at this, is this his hand writting?——Yes, I believe them to be the hand writing of Potter.

Court to Priſoner. Where are the witneſſes you had laſt ſeſſion?——They are gone to ſea.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

That will was made and delivered to me at Portſmouth, in the preſence of two or three people, who attended here laſt ſeſſions, and the ſeſſions before.

Court to Mr. Silveſter. This trial was put off for the purpoſe of revoking the adminiſtration.

Mr. Keys. It may be in your recollection Sir, that I oppoſed the motion, to put off the trial, on account of his witneſſes being in danger of going away.

Court to Priſoner. Who are theſe ſubſcribing witneſſes?——One is Alexander Buſh, he is gone to America, he ſaid he was boatſwain of the Perſeus, at that time, and the other was Johnſon, the waterman at Portſmouth; Neale was preſent, and two or three others, in a large room where they were drinking.

Court. Was this John Potter a relation of yours?——Yes.

Where was he born?——He told me he was born in the Iſle of Wight, I knew nothing of his family, I have been conſtantly at ſea, I was acquainted with him about twelve years, I knew he was a Couſin of mine, by what I heard my father ſay, and he acknowledged himſelf.

Do you know whether that John Potter that ſigned this will, had any wife or children?——He never told me, I never aſked him, he might for ought I know; I have nobody to my character.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

23. RICHARD SMITH was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 19th of October, a black mare, price 40s. the property of John Gauncy.

JOHN GAUNCY ſworn.

I live at Winchmore Hill, I loſt a black mare on the 19th of October, about eight in the evening, I had had it to London that day, I came home at eight, I miſſed it, the next day I went after him three days, and could not find him, I found him on the 2d of November, at Farmer Holloway's, at North Mims, I am ſure the horſe I found was my horſe, I do not know the priſoner.

Mr. Garrow. What is the extent of Edmonton Common?——It is about ſeven hundred acres.

A good deal of wood upon it?——A good deal.

It is not at all uncommon for cattle to ſtray and be miſſing for ſome time?——Sometimes they will be loſt for a fortnight.

It was a fortnight before you found it?——Yes.

You do not know what buſineſs the young man at the bar is?——He was a hoſtler at the Bird cage, at Stamford Hill.

CHARLES CHADDICK ſworn.

I know but very little of the matter, I never never ſaw the priſoner before, he ſaid he knew me, I was going to Colney, and he was following his landlord where he had ſlept the remaining part of the night of the 19th of October, which was the night the horſe was loſt, at eleven on the morning of the 20th, I met the priſoner, he was following his landlord in a little cart, the priſoner was on one horſe and led another, and the landlord ſays will you go with me, I ſaid I am going to the Hop Sale, the man hearing him call my name Chaddick, ſays he the hoſtler ſays you want to buy a horſe, ſays he this is it, I had it in a chop, at Walden yeſterday, I ſays whereabouts is the price of her, three pounds ſays he, ſays I it is better worth a guinea, it is a blind poor creature, it was not worth a guinea, but I gave him a guinea and a half, and he left the mare, and the money with me from Wedneſday till Friday, when he called for the money, I ſold the mare to this Holloway, on the Thurſday before the man called for the money.

What did you ſell her to him for?——I had a pig of him, and the difference was about two guineas, I was to give him a guinea and a half for the pig, and he gave me half a guinea and took the mare.

Mr. Garrow. Mr. Chaddick, do you know what you have been ſwearing all this time?——Swearing!

Aye, ſwearing that this horſe was not worth a guinea?—I would not have had him of a gift.

How came you to ſell him for ſo much?——He charged me rather too much for the pig, and I charged him rather too much for the mare.

I ſuppoſe you gave a guinea and a half for a pig, that was not worth nineteen ſhillings?——I believe he charged me too much for the pig.

And how come you to ſell it?——It did not ſuit me, as ſoon as I ſee them I can tell whether they are workmen or no.

How long have you been in the horſe-dealing line?——I only buy for my own uſe.

Do you mean to ſwear that horſe was not worth a guinea?——I do not ſay he was not worth a guinea.

But you have ſaid it was not a cheap horſe at two guineas?——No Sir, and the owner will ſay ſo.

How ſoon afterwards did you hear the horſe had been ſtolen?—I believe it was ſeven or eight days before I heard of it.

Do you uſually buy horſes in this way?——No, Sir.

Of a ſtranger in the road and know nothing about him?—No, Sir.

Did he come to your houſe to take the money?—No, Sir, he took it at the houſe where he uſed to ſleep at, he ſent for me.

And took the money before witneſſes?—Yes, he was at his dinner, other people preſent, and two days after the ſale he took the money for the horſe.

Has this young man been employed in conducting ſtrings of horſes, as they are called, to this town?——I have heard ſo.

Court. Are there any other witneſſes?—No, my Lord.

Court. Then there is no evidence at all, there is no proof, that this horſe that this man bought is the ſame horſe.

GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

24. The ſaid RICHARD SMITH was again indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 2d day of November, one gelding of a bay colour, price 10l. the property of William Johnſon.

WILLIAM JOHNSON ſworn.

I live at Southgate, I loſt a horſe on the 2d of November, it was in my field, I ſaw him there that evening, I miſſed him the next morning, I found him I believe the Friday following, down within a little way of Hockley town with Mr. Inwood, I am ſure the horſe was the ſame horſe.

Court to Proſecutor. What is Inwood?—A publican and farmer, he keeps the Fleur de

de Lis, I found him with Inwood upon him on the high road, juſt of this ſide Hockley; his houſe is in Hockley, I knew him as ſoon as I ſaw him, I went to Inwood and aſked him how he did, I did not know him before, he ſaid very well, I ſaid you have got a prettyiſh ſort of a horſe there, he ſaid he was going down as far as Dunſtable, but ſays I, I need not keep this a ſecret from you, for I dare ſay you are an honeſt man, and I am come for this horſe, for it is my property, and he ſaid he wiſhed every man had his own; nothing more paſſed, only we came away to Dunſtable, and he was very willing to deliver the horſe up when we came before a magiſtrate.

Where did he ſay he had the horſe?——He ſaid he had the horſe at Hockley, of Richard Smith, I cannot rightly ſay the day, he bought him, he ſaid, in change, he had given twelve pounds ſeven ſhillings, and had three guineas to boot.

Do you recollect when he ſaid he bought it?——No.

Did he ſay where?—I think he ſaid at Hockley.

Do you know any thing of Richard Smith?——No, I believe I have ſeen him before.

Did Inwood ſay there was any body preſent when he bought the horſe of Smith?—I heard him mention that he bought him at a neighbour's houſe.

Mr. Garrow. What might your nag be worth when you loſt him?——We laid him to be worth ten pounds.

This is your field adjoining upon the Common?——No, it joins the Green.

The horſe had been miſſing about a week before you ſaw him, how ſoon afterwards was this young man taken up?——The Friday following, the Tueſday I loſt the horſe, he was taken up before I found him.

Court. What was Smith taken up for?——For a mare that was ſtrayed before, as they told me.

Did you expect to find your horſe before you went to Hockley?—Yes.

Mr. Garrow. Farmer, this young man has been employed in leading ſtrings of horſes?—So I underſtand.

——— INWOOD ſworn.

I live at Hockley, at the Fleur de Lis.

How came you by this horſe?——I ſwapped with Richard Smith for a horſe and mare, and gave him three guineas to boot, it was the 3d of November, he told me he bought the horſe of a gentleman at Hackney.

Where did you firſt hear of any ſuſpicion that this horſe was ſtolen?—I met the proſecutor when I was going to Hockley, he challenged the horſe, I was ſurpriſed to hear it was his property, it was a great loſs to me.

Have you known Smith before?——I knew his friend before, and I knew him about four years back.

Where did you ſwap this horſe?——At Hockley, the landlord was by.

Mr. Garrow. This ſwap was made publicly?—Yes, the landlord was preſent, the young man told he was out of place and dealt for himſelf.

Court to Proſecutor. Are you quite ſure that this is your horſe?——Yes.

Had he any particular marks?—He had a blaze down his face, and four white heels, and he was hurt by the collar in the top of his neck, and he was blind of one eye.

Court. Then with theſe blemiſhes he muſt be a good horſe to be worth ten pounds, was he a cart horſe?—Yes, he was worth ten pounds; I am ſure it was my horſe, I have no doubt of that.

Priſoner. I leave it to my council.

The priſoner called three witneſſes, who all gave him a good character.

GUILTY.

He was humbly recommended to mercy by the Jury.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

25. LUKE ROGERS was indicted for ſtealing on the 29th of October, a tin japan plate warmer, value 9s. the property of Joſeph Lucas.

SAMUEL BEARD ſworn.

On the 29th of October laſt I was going from Queen-ſtreet to Long-acre, I ſaw a man at Mr. Lucas's ſhop window, and then I ſaw him ſtanding in the ſhop, and I ſaw him come out of the ſhop with ſomething under his arm, I followed him into Great Queen-ſtreet, and laid hold of him at the end of Wild-ſtreet, and aſked him if that was his property, he had a plate warmer under his arm, he ſaid it was his own; I took him back to the ſhop, he ſaid, Sir, do not make a noiſe, I will go back with you; he behaved very well.

JOHN FOWLER ſworn.

I am ſhopman to Mr. Lucas, on the 29th of October about five, there were two plate warmers in the ſhop for ſale, in about a quarter of an hour after a woman called into the ſhop, Sir! ſomebody has robbed you; I went out and met the laſt witneſs, and the priſoner with a plate warmer, it is Mr. Lucas's; there were two in the ſhop, and there was one miſſing, they were not marked, they had not been long come in.

Priſoner. I ſhall not preſume to trouble the Court with a defence after this evidence, but I truſt in your Lordſhip; I did not know that my trial would come on, though there are many reſpectable people in the Court I believe that know me.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

26. JOHN SHAW was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Thomas Davis on the King's highway, on the 15th of November laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will, one metal watch, value 20s. one ſeal, value 2s. a gold key, value 1s. and four guineas and a half, value 4l. 14s. 6d. his property.

THOMAS DAVIS ſworn.

I live in Princes-ſtreet, near the Manſion-houſe, I am a tea broker; on the 15th of November laſt, I was robbed near twelve o'clock at night, near Bagnigge-wells, I was on foot coming from Princes-ſtreet, I was going to ſleep at Bagnigge-wells, which is my father's dwelling houſe; I was attacked by four men, who were on foot, who robbed me of my watch, and four guineas and a half in money; they with an oath demanded my money or my life; it was a dark rainy night.

Was there any light?—It was between two lamps; the gold ſeal and key were found by the patrol: I have no knowledge of the priſoner.

THOMAS ATKINSON ſworn.

I am one of the patrol, on the 16th of November, about ten minutes paſt ten at night, I ſtopped the priſoner, in company with four others, by the ſide of Mr. Green's rope-ground, called Bagnigge-walk, three more patrols were with me; and going to ſearch them, a gentleman and lady came up that had that moment been robbed.

Mr. Garrow, Council for the Priſoner. You did not find any offenſive weapons on this young man?——Nothing at all, on ſearching the priſoner I found a gold ſeal and key, we found nothing elſe upon him.

Court to Davis. What chain had you to your watch?—A black ribband, I had no chain.

(The ſeal and key handed to the Judge.)

Had you any thing faſtened to the ribband beſides the ſeal and key?—Nothing at all.

What was the impreſſion on the ſeal?—I believe it is a Shakeſpeare's head, but I will not ſwear to it, the key is an upright key, ey, there has been a hook in the key originally, which is broke out, and which I think made the key particular, as I could ſafely ſwear to it.

Court. Look at that key?——This is the key.

Mr. Garrow to Davis. Bagnigge-wells we all know is a place much frequented by young gentlemen that are in buſineſs in town?—It is.

Is it uſual, when they ſtay late, to make parties to come home together?—I never go into the room, but many people go home together.

JOHN SERLE ſworn.

I am an apothecary, I live at Walworth, I have known the priſoner from the time he was five years old, I never heard any thing prejudicial to his character till this circumſtance of robbing Mr. Davis.

BENEDICK CHAFENEAR ſworn.

I have known the priſoner ever ſince he was eight or nine years old, he always bore the beſt of characters till this accident.

What is he?——He is apprentice to his father, an upholſterer; his father is a very reſpectable man in this city.

WILLIAM SAMUEL ſworn.

I have known him ever ſince he was in petticoats, he was a very ſober, honeſt lad; I never heard any thing amiſs of him before.

EDWARD LATTER ſworn.

I have known him about ten years, he was a very good induſtrious boy, always working with his father, to whom he is apprentice.

ALEXANDER HOOLE ſworn.

I have known him about three years, he was a very honeſt lad, he has done buſineſs for me in the undertaking line, and I always found him very honeſt.

ROBERT COOKE ſworn.

I have known him ever ſince he was a little boy, he had a very good character as I always thought; I live near his father, I have known him theſe thirty years.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

27. THOMAS TABBS, GEORGE HARRIS, the ſaid JOHN SHAW, THOMAS BUTTLEDOZE, and JOHN MOODY, were indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Thomas Francis on the King's highway, on the 16th of November laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will, two glaſs drops ſet in metal, value 3d. one inch rule, value 2d. two papers of nails, value 1d. one knife, value 1d. and two ſhillings in monies numbered, and one counterfeit halfpenny, his property.

Mr. Peatt, Council for Harris and Buttledoze.

Mr. Garrow, Council for Shaw.

The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of Mr. Peatt.

THOMAS FRANCIS ſworn.

I live at Pancras, it was the 16th of November, I and my wife had been to ſee an acquaintance, and coming home from Long-lane, Smithfield, five men overtook us a little beyond the new cut going to Battle-bridge, in the hollow road leading from St. John's-ſtreet, it was about ten on the 16th of November, it was rather dark, and hazy, I think it rained a little, but why I am ſo poſitive, there were lamps all the way we went from Long-lane, in the publick carriage road; the priſoner Tabbs was the firſt that came to me, he demanded my life or my money, he caught hold of my collar, he ſaid, ſtop, your life or your money; I told him I had little money about me, I had left it all at home, but the money I had got they were welcome to, if they would not

uſe

uſe my wife ill, I told them ſhe was very big with child, my wife ſhrieked out, then two of them came round her, and ſwore if ſhe ſpoke they would kill her; when I begged of them again not to uſe her ill, they ſaid if I ſpoke they would murder me, and throw me in a ditch; and Shaw put his hands into my breeches pocket and pulled out what he found there, he aſked me for my watch, and put his hand into my breeches pocket, to feel for my watch, I told him I had left it at home, which was truth; after ſearching us, there were three about me, the other two were about my wife, they then bid us a good night, and went off.

What did you loſe?——I had about two or three ſhillings in my pocket, and ſome halfpence, a particular rule with tables upon it, and two glaſs drops in my pocket, one of which was off; there was an old knife, and there was a paper of tacks, and a particular bad half-penny, there was a piece of the ſide of the woman off the left hand as ſhe ſits, it is a baſe metal half-penny; I had a little favourite dog followed them, and kept barking at them, and I told my wife I would follow them; I purſued them fifteen or twenty yards diſtance, and kept ſight of them, they kept together and kept the foot path, and I heard them at laſt ſay huſh, and ſeveral little trifling words; after ſometime following them ſoftly, I heard the patrol, I ſaw three men meet him, I heard one of the patrol whom I know by the gruffneſs of his voice, ſay who are you? I then went up and ſaid, you are the man that robbed me; I then told the patrol to hold them, and they took them to the public houſe and ſearched them; and Tabbs ſaid to me, when they were taken, we did not uſe you ill, did we, I told him not ſo much as he might think of, for my wife was almoſt dead; then they were ſearched, and upon Shaw there was the bill of a ſale, part of it, and it ſeemed as if it had been torn, and the bad half-penny; on Tubbs and Buttledoze, I believe the reſt of the property was found, but I was not in the room while they ſearched them.

Then by your account, theſe men kept together, and never were out of your ſight till the patrol ſtopped them?——No.

Mr. Peatt. Did theſe perſons overtake you, or meet you?——Overtook me when they were coming down the hill, they were coming the ſame way that we were, but walked very quick, we were going from town to Pancras.

I was a very hazy night you ſay?—Not very, it was rather darkiſh, we could ſee the lamps, Tabbs firſt laid hold of me, I know Shaw's face, for he on a white drabiſh coat.

If you had ſeen the parties, any of them next day, ſhould you have known them?—Yes, if I had ſeen the faces of them I might; but I did not ſee the faces of any of them when I went into the room.

It was about ten?—Yes.

A great many of the Bagnigge-wells people were on the road I ſuppoſe?—I met the foot patrol a few minutes before, I ſaw no other perſons.

Can you recollect to a certainty, the number of perſons that were about you and your wife?——Yes, I ſhould think there muſt be more rather than leſs.

And you ventured to follow theſe five fellows, whoſoever they were, that robbed you, at the diſtance of fifteen yards?——I did, my wife at the ſame time ſaid to me, they would turn round and murder me, I ſaid, if they turned round I could run faſter than they.

What for the ſake of two ſhillings?—Perhaps to have them puniſhed for frightening my wife, for ſhe has ſince had a dead child on the occaſion, I did not loſe ſight of them at all.

It ſeems you was under ſome ſuſpicion from the patrol yourſelf?—I have come that way late.

They never took you to any place of ſafety?—No, Sir, never.

Did any of them attempt to eſcape of this cluſter that you followed?—No, they were all all close together, they made no attempt to escape, they had no notion of my being so near them, I saw no other persons coming on the road.

If any person met them, could you see through them?——They could not meet them, because I was so close to them, none of them were out of my sight.

ANN FRANCIS sworn.

I have lain-in three weeks next Tuesday,

Do you know any of these men?——Gentlemen, I perfectly well know all their faces, but I cannot swear to any particular, but I believe all of them to be the same; they were never out of my sight, I was about two or three yards at the farthest.

Was you, who was behind your husband, near enough to see them?——Yes.

Did they ever get out of your sight before the patrol met them?——No.

Did they keep all together?—They seemingly kept together, they were very merry and jovial till the patrol met them, and my husband said, that he heard one of the patrol's voices, and he immediately ran after them.

Did they remain so in your sight, that you could see whether they continued in the same party, or whether some went off and others came?—No, they all continued in the same party, I am sure of that.

Mr. Peatt. You have only a general recollection of their faces?——No more.

Do you recollect seeing any persons cross over the way, about the time that the patrol surrounded the parties that you followed?——No.

To your knowledge or observation, did any person meet them, or in any direction come near them?——No, Sir, none that I observed, not one.

HENRY COCKER sworn.

I am one of the patrol, I stopped these men near the Bull, Battle-bridge, near the rope walk belonging to Mr. Green.

Did you meet them, or follow them?—Met them, we had just come down from Pancras, there were four of us, and we four met them five; there were three first, and two directly after them, not five yards from them, partly altogether, as they could come along upon the foot path; we suspected them, we immediately surrounded them, and took them to the Bull, at Battle-bridge, and searched them; but before we got to the public house, up came Mr. and Mrs. Francis, and said, they had been robbed, I searched Buttledoze, and on him I found this knife, under his stockings and breeches; the prosecutor owned the knife.

Mr. Peatt. Did you take Buttledoze?—I believe so.

Mr. Francis. This seems to be the very knife I used to have in my pocket, here is a very trifling mark at this end, I have taken notice of the knife; I found it going to Pancras, and I had a thought of engraving my name upon it, but I do not attempt to swear it, it is only like that which I had.

Court. Did you take notice of that flaw at the end of it?——I think I did, to the best of my knowledge, and I have known it for three or four months; I think I might, but I will not be positive, I took notice of no mark on the blade of it, I cannot say positively, but to the best of my knowledge it is mine.

(The knife shown to the Jury.)

WILLIAM PITTARD sworn.

On the 16th of November last, I and three more of the patrol met the prisoners at the bar all together, as close as they could walk; we surrounded them and took them, and just as we had taken them, the prosecutor and his wife came up just behind them; he said, hold them fast, they have just robbed me and my wife; we took them into the Bull, at Battle-bridge, and I searched Tabbs, and found this rule and two drops, and two papers of little tacks, which the prosecutor swears to be his property; I searched Harris, there was nothing found upon him that the prosecutor owned.

Prosecutor. This particular rule I know to be mine by the tables, a pence table, a multiplication table, and a numeration table; I never have seen another like it, that makes makes me think it is mine, there may be others like it, but I will not be positive.

Court. This is not so uncommon as the knife by far, there are hundreds such as that; from the general appearance of it, do you believe it to be your's?——I do, these two glass drops, one of them has a little eye off it, we were working at them.

THOMAS ATKINSON sworn.

I am one of the patrols, we stopped the prisoners in Mr. Green's rope-walk, in Bagnigge-walk, they were all together.

Did any body come up after you had stopped them?——Mr. Francis was a little behind, he came up and said he had been robbed; I searched Shaw, and I found a bad halfpenny and a memorandum paper.

Mr. Garrow. You did not find any offensive weapon on Shaw?—No.

Or any knife?——No, only a common walking stick.

Court. Did you find any weapons on any of the five?——Nothing but a stick and a small knife.

How many sticks had they got among them?—Two or three.

Court to Francis. What sort of memorandum paper was that, that you mentioned to me before?—A bill of some few goods that I had bought at Mr. Key's sale, one Richardson was auctioneer, his clerk gave me a note of the money, there is my own name upon it, I believe there is seven lots upon it.

Is that the paper?——This is the paper, I can swear to it.

Mr. Garrow. I believe you did not chuse to swear that before the Magistrate?

Court. Then it is not material to ask you about the halfpenny, the halfpenny that is swore to be found on the same person?—— I told the Magistrate I would not swear to the halfpenny, here is a bit of the side of the woman off it.

JOHN SERLE sworn.

I am an apothecary at Walworth, I have known the prisoner Shaw above twelve years, he was then about five years old, he is an upholsterer, and apprentice to his father, who lives in Queen-street, Bloomsbury, a man of credit and reputation; I never heard any thing amiss of the prisoner Shaw till this time.

JOHN COOPER sworn.

I live in Queen-street, Bloomsbury, I have known Shaw near eight years, he was a very sober honest lad, that has been his general character, a very steady, sober, young man; I have seen him pass three or four times a day about his his father's business, he had been very much remarked for his sobriety and honesty.

JOHN JACQUES sworn.

I live in Little Russel-street, Bloomsbury, I have known Shaw these ten years, he bore a very good character; he has done business for me and his father too; he has been in my employment in places of trust, and has behaved honestly.

PETER ASHMORE sworn.

I have the honour of a place under my Lord Mansfield, every opportunity I have had of trying the lad, I always found him strictly honest.

BENJAMIN TUCKER sworn.

I live in Middle-row, Holborn, I am a milkman, I have known Buttledoze for seventeen or eighteen years, he is a very honest, sober, young man, his character has been a very good one.

THOMAS CROFT sworn.

I keep a public house, near Smithfield, I have known Buttledoze three years and a half, he bore a very good character, I never knew any other, he was always a sober, civil lad as ever I knew or heard.

CHARLES BATTY sworn.

I have known Buttledoze four years and better; I am a pastry-cook in Clerkenwell, his mother lived at our house these four years; I never knew any thing of him but honesty; he is a milkman, his father deals in milk, he is a very honest sober lad, I live over against him, I have known him four years, he behaved with great order, decency, and regularity.

WILLIAM COX sworn.

I have known him the value of twenty years, he is a very sober, worthy, young man.

JOHN GALLEY sworn.

I have known Harris about four months, he came to lodge with me when he came from sea, from the East Indies, he behaved very orderly and well, as any young man could do, and bore a good character.

ABRAHAM GALE sworn.

I have known him these twelve years, I never knew him but a very sober, quiet lad.

Court. How long was he out on his last voyage?—About two years, he has been at home about half a year.

THOMAS WILLIAMS sworn.

I have known him about five years, he is a very honest, sober, industrious young man, I have always understood him to be so, I never heard he did any misbehaviour in his life, he is a labouring lad.

Have you known him within these two years?——During four months that he has been from sea, he has used my house backwards and forwards.

SARAH WILLIAMS sworn.

I have known him from a child, he had always a very good character, a very sober, quiet, honest lad; I have known him since his return from the East Indies, I never heard any thing to the contrary.

Prisoner Tabbs. My witnesses are gone home.

Prisoner Moody. I could not get my witnesses.

THOMAS TABBS, GEORGE HARRIS, JOHN SHAW, THO. BUTTLEDOZE, JOHN MOODY, } GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

28. WILLIAM ABBOTT was indicted, for that he, on the 18th of October last, feloniously and falsly did make, forge, and counterfeit, or cause and procure to be falsly made, forged, and counterfeited, a certain deed, with the name John How thereto subscribed, purporting to be a bill of sale of the said John How to Daniel M'Carthy, for 23l. 14s. 10d. with intention to defraud the said Daniel.

A Second Count, for uttering the same, knowing it to be forged, with the like intention.

DANIEL M'CARTHY sworn.

The prisoner applied to me on the 18th of October, in the name of John How, and produced a note; I asked him if his name was John How, and he said yes, his name was John How, of the Warren Hastings East Indiaman; one Myles, who is custody for another offence, was with him; says I, do you know him; he said, yes, he knew him, he was a seaman on board his ship; I advanced him twenty-one pounds fifteen shillings, after deducting the discount, and 6s. 6d. for the bill of sale; I saw him sign it.

Are you sure that is the man?——I have lost the memory of him, he kept his head down when he came, but I knew him when I saw him before the Justice; I verily believe that is the man, but I will not take upon me to swear positively.

CHARLES M'CARTHY sworn.

I indorsed that bill of sale, this is my hand writing, it was signed by the prisoner.

Are

Are you ſure he is the man? ——I am ſure.

WILLIAM CAVENOR ſworn.

I indorſed that bill of ſale.

Who ſigned it?——That is the man, I am poſitive of it, he is the man that wrote the name John How.

—— SHAW ſworn.

I was purſer on board the Talbot, I know the priſoner perfectly well, his name is William Abbott, he ſerved on board that ſhip, I do not know How.

Court. How long did he ſerve on board the Talbot?——I ſent him on board the Talbot in July 1783, and came here in 1784.

Court. When were theſe wages ſuppoſed to be due?—He was not a ſeaman, he was only a paſſenger out in one of the ſhips.

LARKIN HOW ſworn.

Had you a brother on board an Eaſt India ſhip?——Yes, on board the Warren Haſtings, he was preſſed the 4th of March, and died the 28th of April, 1783.

Look at that man, is that your brother? ——No.

Court to Shaw. Were the Talbot and the Warren Haſtings together?——The Warren Haſtings arrived at Bombay two days before we ſailed.

Then they were both ſhips together?—Yes.

Priſoner. I know nothing at all about it, I never was in M'Carthy's houſe but the time when I went in with four young fellows, and he invited me into the parlour, and ſaid there were ſome of their comrades; he aſked me what I was, I told him I was nothing, I ſat down in the kitchen, and ſo he took us up to the Juſtice's, and he could not ſwear to me then, and at the next hearing he could not ſwear to me; I never received a farthing of money from him.

GUILTY, Death.

He was humbly recommended to mercy by the Jury.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

29. HOLLAND PALMER, otherwiſe FARMER was indicted for that he, on the 10th of October laſt, unlawfully, fraudulently, and feloniouſly did utter and expoſe to ſale, to one Hannah Gabriel, wife of Francis Gabriel, one thouſand pieces of paper, with a counterfeit ſtamp thereon, knowing the ſame to be counterfeit, with intent to defraud the King.

A Second Count for uttering, vending, and ſelling the ſame, with the ſaid counterfeit impreſſion, with the like intention.

A third Count for expoſing to ſale one thouſand other pieces of paper with a counterfeit impreſſion thereon, reſembling the impreſſion of a certain other ſtamp, knowing the ſame to be counterfeit, with intent to defraud the King.

A Fourth Count for uttering, vending, and ſelling ſame, knowing them to be counterfeited, with the like intention.

The Indictment was opened by Mr. Silveſter, and the Caſe by Mr. Sollicitor General, as follows.

Gentlemen of the Jury. I muſt upon this occaſion beſpeak your moſt ſerious attention, inaſmuch as this caſe is of infinite importance to the public, being the firſt of the kind, and having very extenſive conſequences; but when I call your attention to the importance of the caſe, I do it ſimply for the purpoſe of fixing that attention, and in no degree to raiſe your reſentment; far be it from me to do ſo, for I need not tell you, what you already know; that there cannot be any thing of equal importance to the life of a ſubject; yet as the public good is ſo materially intereſted in this caſe, I am to requeſt a degree of your attention, and perhaps a little more than is neceſſary in many ordinary caſes: you Gentlemen very well know, that the legiſlature has thought it neceſſary to impoſe a duty on receipts for all ſums exceeding forty ſhillings, and not exceeding twenty pounds. The charge againſt the priſoner is, that he expoſed to ſale, or ſold, a number of counterfeit receipts amounting to three or four thouſand, importing the payment of a two-penny duty according to act of parliament.

Gentlemen,

Gentlemen, it is very plain that if ſuch a fraud as this is not vigilantly checked in its commencement, the ſecurity of people's affairs will be very bad indeed, becauſe if their receipts are not legally and properly ſtamped, they can be no evidence againſt a ſecond demand; you eaſily ſee therefore, how very extenſive the miſchief muſt be, and now if a well proved inſtance ſhould be laid before you, you will give it the attention it deſerves, becauſe in the preſent hour there hardly has been any inducement to counterfeit ſtamps whatever; ſtamps are things not very often uſed by a man in the courſe of his lifetime, therefore no extraordinary ſale was expected, but now that every one for his own ſecurity muſt have a great number by him, conſequently very large parcels might be forged, and may be ſold: in the next place, the price for which they were ſold is infinitely below the value for ſuch a number of ſuch ſtamps; for you will find, that theſe amounting to between three and four thouſand were ſold for fourteen guineas, not half the value; you ſee the temptation to perſons to purchaſe them at half price, and afterwards to ſell them to others: ſuch is the nature of the crime with which this priſoner is charged, ſuch is the miſchief, and conſequently ſuch the neceſſity of the board to lay before a Court and Jury, the firſt clear inſtance in which it has been detected; when I ſay clear inſtance Gentlemen, you will naturally ſuppoſe I ſpeak from my inſtructions; it is for you to decide; but according to the evidence in my hand, if it turns out according to my expectations, I think not much doubt will remain on your minds of the guilt of the priſoner. The ſhort ſtate of the fact is this, that the priſoner on Tueſday morning, and one Michael, an Iriſhman, called up one Hannah Gabriel, ſhe is the wife of Francis Gabriel, who keeps an old clothes ſhop in Chick-lane, this was about the beginning of laſt October; this Mrs. Gabriel had been acquainted with this Michael for ſome years before at a publick-houſe, and after ſome little converſation, he aſked her if ſhe would buy ſome receipt ſtamps; ſhe anſwered that if they were good ſhe would, he then gave her two two-penny receipt ſtamps on a ſmall piece of paper to look at, and told her at the ſame time, that he had ſent a man for more; after this on the Thurſday following between nine and ten, the priſoner came to Mr. Gabriel's houſe, and he produced four two-penny ſtamped receipts for her to purchaſe; ſhe ſaid ſhe would give him an anſwer in the afternoon, her huſband afterwards ſhewed them to ſome perſons, and were told they were good, and about two the ſame afternoon, the priſoner came to her houſe again, but ſhe could not give him an anſwer then, accordingly he called about four, and ſhe told him ſhe would buy them, he went away purpoſing to bring a large quantity on the Saturday following, and about ſeven on that day the priſoner came to Mrs. Gabriel's, and he brought twelve hundred two-penny ſtamps, divided into ſix parcels of two hundred each; ſhe found they did contain that quantity, ſhe was told by him at the ſame time, that the five parcels contained the ſame quantity, and that he had in all three thouſand and ſome odd hundreds beſides, and would bring more on the Sunday following; he deſired Mrs. Gabriel to let him have a couple of guineas, ſhe did ſo, and he went away; the Sunday morning, which was the morning following, the priſoner came again, and brought with him two hundred and twenty of theſe ſtamps, at the ſame time he produced a letter which he ſaid came out of the country, and that he had orders to purchaſe four pair of ſtockings, two handkerchiefs, and a round hat, (which you will particularly attend to) and a waiſtcoat to ſend into the country, the amount of theſe goods was 1l. 3s. 6d. theſe goods he took away about twelve on the ſame day; the priſoner returned again, and he brought with him one thouſand more of the ſtamps, and deſired to have a guinea more, his expreſſion being "a guinea to go on." Mrs. Gabriel did not very well underſtand the meaning of that expreſſion; ſhe aſked him what he meant; his anſwer was, that the ſtamps came from Dunſtable, and he muſt ſend the guinea and the things that he had purchaſed there; this occaſioned in her mind, a conſiderable degree of doubt about theſe ſtamps; ſhe aſked him if they were good, he told her they were: between ſeven and eight he came again the ſame day, and brought the remainder of the ſtamps, making together three thouſand and ſome hundred; when they began to talk about price, he inſiſted on twenty pounds, ſhe refuſed, but ſhe paid him nine guineas and a half and ſome ſilver; this with the ſum paid before, amounted in the whole to fourteen guineas; he told her he was going to the country, but might be heard of at the Bull Inn in Holborn; Mrs. Gabriel afterwards finding that theſe ſtamps were all bad, on Sunday evening ſhe delivered them to her ſervant Hannah Abrahams, and told her to leave them at the Bull Inn for the priſoner, according to his direction; this girl was coming out of a place called Field-lane, and Lucas and Mecham by name, two conſtables, obſerving ſhe had a bundle under her cloak, and being accuſtomed to ſuſpect bundles when they came from that part of the town, they took hold of this girl, and they found therein pretty near four thouſand counterfeit ſtamps; this maid was detained, and examined the next day, and Mrs. Gabriel was ſent for, and ſhe told the Juſtice if he would let the maid be a witneſs, ſhe would get the man; the parties were all ordered to attend my Lord Mayor at Guildhall, this Mrs. Gabriel's huſband was very much alarmed at the whole of this tranſaction, and he went in purſuit of the priſoner, and ſaw him by mere accident in Jewin-ſtreet, and followed him into Hounſditch, and David Levy the conſtable took him into cuſtody; he aſked for what, and Levy told him, and he then deſired to go to the publick-houſe.

Priſoner. Gentlemen, have I a right to contradict this gentleman, for there is not three true words in the whole, as I hope to be ſaved.

Mr. Solicitor General to the Priſoner. Give me leave to tell you, that the Jury are not to believe what I ſay, unleſs it is proved. Gentlemen, he ſaid he had theſe ſtamps out of the country, Levy ſearched him, and found a two-penny receipt in his waiſtcoat pocket; he refuſed to tell where he lived, upon this Mr. Major, the Engraver to the Stamp office was examined, and he found that theſe ſtamps were forged with a good deal of addreſs and art: the priſoner ſaid he had been employed at Dunſtable for five months, and had theſe ſtamps from Michael and Jones in Clerkenwell, and had ſold a large quantity to Mrs. Gabriel, and had paid the money to the perſon at the Horſe-ſhoe, Clerkenwell, and that perſon he believed was Thomas Jones; it was afterwards found that this man was connected with a woman of the name of Jones, who had lodged in a houſe belonging to James Slang, and upon examining the houſe of this James Slang, and enquiring who lived in it, and frequented that houſe, it was found that the priſoner at the bar had taken that lodging, and that he was frequently and repeatedly there: in that lodging was found a fly ſcrew, a model, and a conſiderable number of forged receipts hid in a feather-bed, and there was likewiſe found in this houſe, the hat that was purchaſed of Mr. Gabriel, as making up a part of the fourteen guineas, which is an important thing for your obſervation. Gentlemen, it will be neceſſary for me, having ſtated this ſhortly to you, to call the witneſſes; this caſe muſt be introduced, by proving to you the commiſſion under which the officers of the ſtamps act, next their order to make ſuch ſtamps, and then that that ſtamp was uſed for ſuch purpoſes, and that theſe ſtamps are not the genuine ſtamps ſtruck by this inſtrument, ſo made from proper authority, that authority too bottomed on an act of parliament. Gentlemen this is a ſhort ſtate of the caſe, and if it is proved to your ſatisfaction, you will then be under the diſagreeable neceſſity of finding the priſoner guilty; on the other hand, he will undoubtedly receive from the Court that protection, which every man on his trial has a right to, and I have no ſort of doubt but you you will do that duty to the public on the one hand, and to the individual on the other, which is neceſſary for the adminiſtration of public juſtice, and peculiarly neceſſary in a caſe carried on by public proſecution.

——— BRETTELL, Eſq; ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Wilſon.

I am Secretary to the Stamp Office, this is the commiſſion by which the commiſſioners are appointed there names, are J. Bindley, William Waller, William Bailey, Richard Tickell, and Michael Falknere.

Did any, and which of them make any order for a ſtamp for two penny receipts? ——I beg leave to refer to the order, this order is dated the 21ſt of June, 1783, ſigned, J. Bindley, R. Tickell, William Bailey, theſe are three of the Commiſſioners, I know their hand writing, theſe are their ſignatures.

(The Order read.)

THOMAS MAJOR ſworn.

I am engraver to the Stamp Office.

Did you in conſequence of that order from the Commiſſioners make any two-penny die for the ſtamps?——I did.

Are they here?——I have brought the book of the entry of that very die.

GEORGE HARRIS ſworn.

Was the ſtamp uſed, that was provided by the Commiſſioners?——Here is a book where the impreſſion of the letter G is.

Has it been uſed ſince?——We uſe it conſtantly.

Have you uſed the others?——All of them at times.

(The Stamp ſhewn to the Jury).

HANNAH GABRIEL ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Solicitor General.

Have you ever ſeen the priſoner?——Yes.

When did you firſt ſee him?——The beginning of October laſt.

Where did you ſee him?——At our houſe in Chick-lane.

What paſſed between him and you upon his coming to your houſe in Chick-lane?——Firſt of all one Michael, an Iriſhman came.

What did the Priſoner ſay to you?——He ſaid he was recommended by this Michael, and aſked if we would buy any ſtamps, I told him yes, then he left two till about three o'clock.

What paſſed then?——I told him I could not buy them till Saturday night, this was on Friday, on Saturday night he brought one thouſand two hundred.

Priſoner. I hope they may all be examined ſeparate.

(All the other witneſſes ordered to go out of Court.)

Priſoner. My Lord, I have one queſtion to aſk, is it reaſonable that that gentleman ſhould put days and words into that woman's mouth?——I told the priſoner to come again on Saturday night.

What day of the week was this firſt coming?——It was on Friday.

Then this was the next day?——Yes, he then brought one thouſand two hundred, and aſked me for the money, and I gave him two guineas as part of the money.

Of what money was that two guineas a part?——He ſaid he had three thouſand and odd hundreds, he aſked me twenty guineas, for the three thouſand, and odd hundred.

What did you agree with him for?——For fourteen guineas.

Court. How many hundred was there over the three thouſand?—I cannot rightly tell.

Mr. Solicitor General. When was the one thouſand two hundred brought?—On the Saturday night, I gave him two guineas as part of the money, he came again on Sunday morning, he then brought two hundred and twenty, and he ſaid he was to buy two pair of ſtockings, ſome handkerchief, a round hat, and a waiſtcoat.

Did

Did the prisoner pay for those goods?—No he did not, he left this two hundred and twenty, till he brought the others, and took away these stocking and things.

How were these goods to be paid for?—To be taken out of the money that I was to give him.

How much did these goods amount to?—Twenty three shillings and six-pence.

When was the next time that you saw the prisoner?——He came again at twelve on the same day, he brought one thousand more, and he asked for the money, I said he should bring the whole, and I would pay him when he brought the second thousand, he said he wanted a guinea to go on with; I asked him how he meant to go on with, he said he was to send a guinea into the country along with the things he had bought.

Did you give him that guinea?—I did, I asked him then three or four times if they were good, and he said they were very good.

When did you next see the prisoner?—He came between day and night the same evening, and before I paid him the money, I asked him if they were good, and he said he would hang as high as Haman if they were not, I paid him the whole money, fourteen guineas.

Did you afterwards discover any thing particular about these stamps?——I enquired several times, and shewed them to several people, and they said they were good.

What did you discover about them afterwards?——I shewed them to a gentleman, who had a receipt book with stamps in his pocket, and then the gentleman found it out for me.

What did you then do with these stamps?——The prisoner said every Sunday he might be found at the Bull Inn, in Holborn; I sent our maid Hannah Abrahams, with these stamps to the Bull, to see if he was there.

Court. Did he tell you he came from the country?——He said he came from the country, and was going there again directly, but was to be found at the Bull Inn in Holborn, on the Sunday following, or any Sunday, I told the maid to go to the Bull, and ask for Holland Farmer, that was the Sunday following.

When did you first learn that these stamps were bad?—About Thursday.

What did you do with the stamps?——She took them with her.

Who put up these stamps for her, who packed them up at the time you gave them to the maid?——I did, I took them from the prisoner's handkerchief, and put them into my own handkerchief, I saw the prisoner no more till he was taken.

When was that?—I do not know rightly the day of the month when he was taken, it was just a week after I sent my maid with these stamps to the Bull.

Court. This man was a stranger to you, only saying he came recommended?—Yes.

What do you deal in?—In old clothes.

What occasion had you for such a number as three thousand stamps?—For to sell them again.

You bought them as two-penny stamps?—Yes, I did.

Did you know how much three thousand two-penny stamps were worth?——I did not reckon it up.

You know that two-pence must have been paid for each of these stamps, if they were genuine?—Yes.

He asked you at first I think twenty guineas, there was three thousand some odd hundred?——About seven or eight hundred.

Then how could you suppose if these stamps were good, that the man could sell them for less than they must cost himself?——That I do not know, I bought them to get something by them.

Yes, but how came you to suppose that this man would take less for these stamps than he himself had paid for them?—I do not know what he had paid for them.

The Rmainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be published in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 8th of DECEMBER, 1784, and the following Days;

Being the FIRST SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER I. PART VI.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

MDCC LXXXIV.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of Holland Palmer.

You underſtand my queſtion, but you do not like to anſwer it; how could you ſuppoſe that this man would come to ſell ſtamps to you for leſs than he paid for them himſelf?——I do not know, I am ſure.

You ſuppoſed them to be good when you bought them, did not you?—Yes, I did.

And you knew if they were good, he could not have got them for leſs than two-pence apiece?—He ſaid he had them from the country.

But you knew they would come to twenty-five pounds; then unleſs you ſuppoſed theſe ſtamps were either forged, or ſtolen, how could you ſuppoſe that he would take fourteen guineas, which was not a great deal more than a penny apiece?——I do not know, he ſaid he got them of a friend in the country.

But that friend could not have come by them honeſtly?—I do not know.

You did not trouble your head how he came by them, or whether they were forged or ſtolen, for he could not himſelf have got them for leſs than twenty-five pounds.

Priſoner. My head is ſo very bad, I have had a blow by ſome of the priſoners, I told her huſband my name was Farmer, and that this man ſent me to ſell them for him, I never was at the Bull Inn, in Holborn, in my life.

HANNAH ABRAHAMS ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Wilſon.

Did you ever ſee the priſoner before?—Not before I ſaw him at our houſe; I cannot tell what time it was.

What day of the week was it?—I believe it was on a Saturday.

When you firſt ſaw him there, did you hear him ſay any thing?—He brought ſome ſtamped papers.

Can you tell what number?——It was a great many, he wanted to ſell them to my miſtreſs, Mrs. Gabriel, and ſhe bought them.

What paſſed between your miſtreſs and him, when you firſt ſaw him there?——She bought the ſtamps.

What was ſhe to give for them?—When ſhe gave him the laſt money, ſhe ſaid that makes fourteeen guineas.

Priſoner. Remember you are upon your oath, you have ſwore falſly already.

Mr.

Mr. Wilſon. Do you know how many there were?—No, there were a great number.

Did you hear him ſay any thing about the number?—No, I did not, I ſaw him backwards three or four times, he came three or four times in one day once, but I cannot rightly tell what day it was; he was once there, and ſhe gave him two or three guineas, I do not know which, he bought ſome clothes at our houſe, he bought a hat, and handkerchief, and ſtockings, and a waiſtcoat.

You do not remember particularly any converſation, otherwiſe than that your miſtreſs bought theſe things?—No.

Had you ever theſe things?—My miſtreſs found they were good for nothing, and ſhe ſent me to bring them to the Bull Inn, in Holborn, that was the Sunday about ſeven o'clock.

Did you go with them?—Yes, I went with them, and at the bottom of Chick-lane I was ſtopped.

Who ſtopped you?—Lucas.

Did he afterwards let you go to the Bull Inn?—No, he took me to priſon.

Did you ſee the priſoner at the bar after?—I ſaw him at Guildhall, no where elſe.

Court. What did your miſtreſs deſire you to do with them at the Bull in Holborn?—I was to aſk for Holland Farmer, and to leave them there.

Priſoner. She tells the ſame ſtory as her miſtreſs. Did you hear me mention any thing of the Bull in Holborn?—Yes, he ſaid at our houſe, you may always find me at the Bull, in Holborn, of a Sunday night.

EDWARD LUCAS ſworn.

I am conſtable of the pariſh of St. Giles's in the Fields.

What day was it that you ſtopped Hannah Abrahams?——On Sunday evening, the 17th of October, about half paſt ſeven.

Where did you ſtop her?—At the bottom of Chick-lane.

How came you to ſtop her?—Seeing her have a bundle under her arm; I ſtopped her as a ſuſpicious perſon, and aſked her what ſhe had got there, ſhe ſaid ſhe had not got any thing; I ſaid ſhe had, and took the bundle from under her arm; I then went into the publick houſe to ſee what ſhe had got, I went into a back room, and opened this ſmall bag, it contained a quantity of ſtamps, lapped up in a handkerchief, there was nearly four thouſand. (Two little bundles given into the Court, and opened.) In conſequence of finding theſe ſtamps upon her, I aſked her where ſhe got them, and ſhe would not give any anſwer where ſhe lived, therefore I took her up to St. Giles's watch-houſe, ſuſpecting there had been a robbery or forgery, and the next day I took her before the Magiſtrate, in Hyde-ſtreet, Bloomſbury, ſhe then would not tell the Magiſtrate where ſhe lived; the next morning her miſtreſs, Mrs. Gabriel, heard ſhe was taken into cuſtody, and before the Magiſtrate, and ſhe came; this was on the Tueſday morning following.

How came Mrs. Gabriel there, do you know?—I really cannot tell, except it was from hearing that I had been down Chick-lane, and hearing from the publick houſe.

What morning did ſhe come?—On the Tueſday following, Mrs. Gabriel then told the Magiſtrates, Juſtice Walker and Juſtice Brittle, that if they would admit Abrahams an evidence for the Crown, ſhe would tell who the man was that ſhe had got the ſtamps from; accordingly, Abrahams was ſworn an evidence, and then Mrs. Gabriel ſaid, that the man was in cuſtody in the city, before my Lord Mayor.

What paſſed there?—The priſoner confeſſed before my Lord Mayor, the ſelling the ſtamps to Mrs. Gabriel, I heard him, he ſaid ſo once or twice before my Lord Mayor, in my Lord Mayor's preſence, he ſaid he did not deny ſelling the ſtamps to Mrs. Gabriel, but he believed them to be good ſtamps.

Court. What did he ſay, you ſay he confeſſed ſelling the ſtamps?——He ſaid very little, he wiſhed for a little more time, and that he would tell us where the ſtamps was.

Priſoner.

Priſoner. No, Mr. Lucas, not where the ſtamps was.

Lucas. I am not poſitive to what he ſaid, farther than in ſaying that he was concerned with one Jones.

Court. You told me juſt now, he confeſſed before the Lord Mayor, ſelling the ſtamps to Mrs. Gabriel, that, ſhortly ſtated, goes all the length againſt the priſoner; now you ſay, you cannot tell what he ſaid.——No further than his being connected with one Jones.

In what words?—He ſaid, he ſold ſome ſtamps to Mrs. Gabriel, which he believed to be good, and that he had about eight pounds in caſh, and the remainder in clothes; he ſaid that in the preſence of my Lord Mayor and ſeveral people; when I went with him to the counter, he ſaid he would tell us the perſon concerned in theſe ſtamps, which was one Jones, of Dunſtable, and a man named Mich. that lived ſomewhere about Old-ſtreet, or Clerkenwell, and if we would come, he would tell us the particulars of it, that they were concerned in the ſtamps, and that they had given them to him to be diſpoſed of: theſe are the ſame ſtamps that I took from Abrahams.

Priſoner. Had that woman any thing elſe with her at the time of the ſtamps?—Yes, ſhe had a piece of melted ſilver.

Priſoner. I ſaid I had ſold ſome ſtamps, but I could not tell that they were them.

(The ſtamps ſhewn to Mr. Major.)

Mr. Major. They are forged, I am ſure of it.

Court to Lucas. Did he ſay for what money he ſold the ſtamps?——He ſaid it was part in caſh, and the remainder in clothes, at the ſame time.

Did he ſpecify what the clothes were to come to?——No.

Priſoner. Whether I did not ſay at the time I was taken, that there was a perſon preſent at the time I had theſe ſtamps delivered to me?—I really do not remember that.

Court to Priſoner. The charge againſt you, is for ſelling theſe ſtamps, knowing them to be counterfeit; now obſerve, though it may be true that you received them to ſell for ſomebody elſe, yet if it appears that at the time you ſold them you knew them to be counterfeited, that will not avail you in your defence.

GEORGE MECHAM ſworn.

I was with Lucas when he apprehended Hannah Abrahams, on Sunday the 17th of October, about the hour of ſeven or eight, we thought her a ſuſpicious perſon, and ſhe was very loth to part with the bag from under her arm, Mr. Lucas took her to the publick houſe, the corner of Field-lane; then he ſaid, why, theſe are ſtamps, either the Stamp Office is broke open, or it is a forgery; he took her into cuſtody: I was not at the taking the priſoner; the priſoner ſaid he had them from one Jones and Mich. to ſell, and that he carried them to Mrs. Gabriel's, near Chick-lane, and he carried the money and the clothes back to the Horſe-ſhoe again to this man; he ſaid he had about eight pounds in money, and ſome clothes, but the whole ſum I cannot recollect.

Court. When he gave this account before the Lord Mayor, of where he had theſe things, did he ſay that he knew them to be ſtamps?——He was ordered to go back to the priſon, and he ſaid he would make a full diſcovery of the people; he ſaid if we would go to Dunſtable, to the Swan, there we ſhould find a full confeſſion of the whole.

Court to Brettell. Was you preſent when the priſoner was examined at Guildhall?—I was, he was aſked how he came by them, he ſaid he had made an acquaintance with two men, who informed him they ſhould have occaſion to employ him on ſome occaſion, and that ſome time after that, he met a man of the name of Mich. ſomewhere about Clerkenwell, and he gave him theſe ſtamps.

Recollect his expreſſion?——That he had given him theſe ſtamps that he had ſold or delivered to Mrs. Gabriel.

Did

Did he ſay what the bundle contained?—I am ſure he ſaid the ſtamps; he was aſked how he came to know theſe two people, he ſaid he was a watchmaker, and took a houſe at Dunſtable, that Jones came pretty frequently to Dunſtable, and he did not know where he lived, but if he was at liberty, he was ſure he could find them both: he wiſhed much to have his liberty, he ſaid he left Dunſtable after he found he could not live as a watchmaker, and that he met Mich. about Clerkenwell, that Mich. gave him theſe ſtamps, and recommended him to ſell them to Mr. Gabriel in particular, and that he received for them about eight pounds ten ſhillings, he recollected the different ſums, and caſt them up in his mind, and the waiſtcoat that was then on his back.

Court. Did he ſay any thing in your hearing, expreſſing his own knowledge what theſe ſtamps were, as to their value?—No, he did not, he neither ſaid he did or did not know.

Did he ever ſay what price Mich. had deſired him to aſk for them?——No, he did not, he ſaid the money he had received for them he delivered to them, and had had nothing for his pains but that waiſtcoat.

DAVID LEVY ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Wilſon.

I know the priſoner very well, I am a conſtable; I took him into cuſtody on the 19th of October, on a Tueſday.

What was he taken up for?—Mr. Gabriel came to my houſe, and told me to come with him; I went with him to Houndſditch, and the priſoner was coming along, and I laid hold of him, ſays I, I have a charge againſt you for making ſome ſtamps, and for ſelling them; ſays he, cannot we go to a public houſe, I told him it was not in my power to take him to the public houſe, I muſt take him to my Lord; ſays he, Mr. Gabriel gave me ſuch a ſmall quantity of money for the property, it will be the means of bringing us both into a hobble, unleſs he makes it up.

Priſoner. O, my God! thou wicked villain! as they laid hold of me, ſays I, what is it for, and he ſaid he could not tell.

Levy. And he told me I ſhould go to the other ſide of Moorfields, and I ſhould meet a man, one Mich. an Iriſhman, a luſty man, at the houſe of one Fitzpatrick; Catchpole went along with me, but we did not find him.

Priſoner. My Lord, I hope you will underſtand this Jew, and that he is a conſtable that receives money by this, as I underſtand.

Court. Is there any reward?——No.

Levy. I aſked the priſoner how he came by them, he ſaid they were brought out of the country, and brought to him to ſell.

JANE SLANN ſworn.

I live in Pump-court, White Horſe Alley, Cow-lane; you know that you took the lower room.

Priſoner. O yes, yes, I did, I did.

Did he occupy any other room in the houſe?—He took the room, I believe it was of a Friday, to enter on the Tueſday, and the Thurſday following, in the morning, the goods they brought, were taken away for rent from whence they came from, then his wife moved into another room that was cheaper, and laid upon ſome ſtraw.

Priſoner. I never came to the room.

Slann. About an hour after, that day, he came and aſked if his wife, or his old woman was at home.

Where did his wife take a room after this?——Next door, it is all belonging to us, we rent all the whole court, and he has not been ſeen for a fortnight, he came in a fortnight after, he uſed to come now and then, ſometimes he came pretty often, ſometimes we did not ſee him of a while, in particular, for ſix weeks he was there every day.

Was you there when the officers came and ſearched?——Yes.

What room did they ſearch?——The lower room, ſhe moved out of the garret into the lower room again.

Was it that room that the officers ſearched?—Yes, I ſaw what was taken out, theſe things were taken out.

Court. Was he ever in the lower room?—He took it, but he never was in it; he took a room at Ratcliffe-croſs, they had ſome goods elſewhere, and ſome they moved into the lower room, and I never knew where he was.

Mr. Soliciter General. My Lord, I confeſs that does not bring it home to him with reſpect to the room.

Court to Priſoner. Now this is the time for you to make your defence.

Priſoner. My Lord, I hope the witneſſes will be ordered out, I wiſh to ſpeak without contradiction.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

As to the room, I know nothing of it.

Court. That is not brought home to you?

Priſoner. Then what elſe is there?

Court. I will ſtate the evidence, it amounts to this, that you ſold thoſe things to Mrs. Gabriel, as you have acknowledged to the conſtables.

Priſoner. The Gentlemen of the Jury may think I ſhould certainly have gone elſewhere, and not have remained in London if I knew any thing of their being bad, I received them of Mich. and as ſoon as I had ſold them, I returned him the money; there were two parcels, the firſt parcel I had two guineas for, but my memory is really treacherous with diſorder, the whole that I was to ſell them for, was ten guineas; if I did not get ten guineas for them, I muſt not ſell them; I came back and told him what money they were willing to give him, which was eight pounds ten ſhillings, the clothes and all incluſive; I knew not the value, I never had any thing to do with receipts in my life; I have plenty of gentlemen here, I have a witneſs that was preſent when I received them, when I was taken I had no money, I had not ſixpence.

Court to Levy. You ſay, when you took up this man, it was upon the information of Gabriel, where did you find the priſoner? Gabriel took me into Houndſditch, and going along I met the priſoner.

Where were you going to look for him?——He came to my houſe, and told me there was a perſon coming along Houndſditch, and I ſhould take him into cuſtody.

MARY HOWELL ſworn.

Do you know any thing about this matter with which the priſoner is charged?——No further than I went for a watch that he had cleaned, of my ſon's in Cowcroſs, I ſaw a man bring two bundles, but what they contained I do not know, I did not know who it was; he ſaid, carry theſe bundles for me, and he took the pen and ink and wrote, I did not ſee what he wrote; I do not know his name, his name was not mentioned; I have only known the priſoner within five months, at the public houſe.

Priſoner. Did you ſee any thing that was in the bundle?—It was bits of paper, but what they were I cannot tell.

GUILTY

Of uttering them, knowing them to be forged, Death.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

30. JOHN KELSEY was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of William Page, about the hour of ſeven in the night, on the 6th of November laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, one linen gown, value 6s. one ſilk gown, value 10s. one crape gown, value 9s. a ſtuff gown, value 4s. three pair of gloves, value 2s. four caps, value 2s. a pair of ſtays, value 3s. two petticoats, value 10s. a dimity petticoat, value 1s. a pair of pockets, value 6d. four handkerchiefs, value 2s. a pair of gloves, value 3d. a ſilk cloak, value 7s. three aprons, value 7s. a wooden box, value 1s. the property of Elizabeth Major, ſpinſter:

And

And ELIZABETH COLLEY was indicted for feloniouſly receiving, about the hour of ten in the night, on the 6th of November, one linen gown, value 6s. and a ſilk cloak, value 7s. part of the ſaid goods knowing them to have been ſtolen.

ELIZABETH MAJOR ſworn.

I am a ſingle woman, I live in Kenſington-ſquare, my mother and me lodge in the houſe of William Page, I lived there in November laſt; on the 29th of November, my mother and me went out about half paſt ſix, and ſtaid till about half paſt eight; our room is on the ground floor, we left the door locked when we went out, I locked it; the people that belonged to the houſe, were at home up one pair of ſtairs, the ſtreet door was open, the windows were down when we went out, and we found the door open when we came back at half after eight; it was wide open, and the windows were half open, the lock of the door was a ſpring lock, and it was drawn back; we had only one window in the room, and that is in a back yard, and that was half open; there did not appear any marks of violence about it.

Court. Was there room enough for a man to get into that room?——Yes.

How high is this window from the ground in the yard?—About four feet, we found nothing in the yard, the firſt thing I miſſed was my box, I cried out my box; it was an oak box, it was found in the fields, there were four gowns in it, one linen; I had taken every thing out of my box that night, and put them in again, there were all the things mentioned in the indictment; I had left my ſervice the night the things were taken away.

Court. Did you ever ſee any of your things afterwards?——Yes.

Had you ever ſeen the priſoners before?——Yes, they live cloſe by where my mother lives; a pair of my ſtockings was found upon Kelſey's legs, at the Brown Bear, Bow-ſtreet; I know no more about it; the woman pawned ſome of my things, the linen gown and ſilk cloak.

Court. Are there any particular marks on the gown?——I had taken off the cuffs, the evening it was taken away.

CATHERINE BURGESS ſworn.

I heard a door ſhut, it ſeemed to be below where I was going in, there was a light in the next window, I obſerved the priſoner Kelſey to walk very quick, he had a box on his head.

Can you poſitively venture to ſwear that the priſoner Kelſey is the man?——Yes.

Did you know the priſoner before?—Yes, I thought it was ſomething of his mother's, I did not attempt to ſtop him; it ſeemed to be a darkiſh box about a yard long, as near as I can gueſs, it was about two hours after that, I heard the firſt witneſs complaining; I live within two or three doors, and I looked out of the window, and ſhe ſaid, ſhe was robbed; and I innocently ſaid, I ſaw Kelſey go off with the box; I ſaw his face, he came in front, I made way for the perſon that had the light to paſs me, he came up the yard where the woman lodges, it is an encloſed yard, there is no thorough-fare; I ſaw him not ten yards off.

Alderman Watſon. Tell me child, on what day was this?—On Monday laſt, was a week.

SAMUEL MAYNARD ſworn.

I ſearched Kelſey's lodging, in a little court the back of Pye-ſtreet.

What did the priſoner Colley ſay?—She ſaid, ſhe had pawned a gown and coat, ſhe ſaid nothing about the lodgings, I found I pair of pockets, two gowns, three pair of ſleeves, and two caps, and the remains in the fire place, of a ſilk gown, there appeared to have been a good many things burnt there.

Did you find any box there?——None at all, I have had the cuſtody of theſe very things.

Court to Proſecutor. Look at theſe things.

(The gown depoſed to by a bit of black ſilk ſtocking put a ſtrin the three pair of ſleeves depoſed to by a black ſtring, the two caps by being turned in.)

Proſecutor.

Profecutor. As to the piece of ſilk gown, I had one of the ſame pattern, but I cannot ſwear to this piece.

Court to Maynard. At what time did you find theſe things at Colley's lodgings?—At half after ten, on Tueſday morning.

What did Colley ſay?—She ſaid, there was a large bundle of things brought there the over night, and when I came, I found no more.

Did ſhe live in theſe lodgings?——Yes, and had lived there a week.

WILLIAM BIRD ſworn.

I am a pawnbroker in the Ruins, near St. Margaret's, Weſtminſter; the priſoner Colley brought a gown, and pawned it about nine at night; I am very ſure ſhe is the woman, I never ſaw her before, the diſtance from Kenſington-ſquare to my houſe is three miles.

JANE ELDRIDGE ſworn.

I live at No. 18, Old Pye-ſtreet; the priſoner Colley brought me this ſilk cloak for two ſhillings, about nine on Monday ſe'nnight in the evening.

(The cloak depoſed to by a mark in the neck.)

THOMAS DYER ſworn.

I belong to Bow-ſtreet, I was at Kenſington-gate, on Monday ſe'nnight at night, and there was information of a place being broke open: and a box of clothes ſtolen, and a perſon ſaw the priſoner, with the box upon his head; I purſued him, and found the two priſoners at the ſign of the Bell and Fiſh, it was a little before ten, I brought them away to Covent Garden watch-houſe; the next morning they were brought before Sir Sampſon Wright.

Did you examine the priſoner?—Yes.

Did you find any thing on either of them?——No.

PRISONER COLLEY'S DEFENCE.

On Monday night I went to ſee my brother, who lives cloſe by this girl's houſe, and I ſaw a man come out of this yard, and I ſaw this box ſtand in the middle of the road; I did not know what it contained, I aſked ſeveral people if they owned it, I found it was uncomfortable to carry, and I put it down, and the lid came open, and I took the things that came out, and carried them home.

PRISONER KELSEY'S DEFENCE.

A young man came to ſee me, and I went to the public houſe, and this young man aſked me to pawn theſe things, and I went.

JOHN KELSEY, GUILTY Death.

ELIZABETH COLLEY, GUILTY.

Tranſported for fourteen years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

31. WILLIAM BENTON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 13th of September, a wooden box, value 12d. four ſilver diſhes, value 10l. two ſilver water plates, value 4l. two ſilver bowls, value 5l. a ſilver cheeſe toaſter, value 3l. a ſilver ſaucepan and cover, value 40s. three gold and ſilver hookers and tops, value 10s. three hooker ſnakes, value 10s. the property of Dame Suſannah Coote, and one ſilver tankard, value 3l. the property of the Reverend Weſtroe Hulſe, in a certain ſhip called the Bellamont, in the navigable river of Thames: and GEORGE GREEN was indicted for feloniouſly receiving on the 30th of October laſt, part of the ſaid goods, knowing them to have been ſtolen.

The Caſe opened by Mr. Fielding.

GABRIEL DAUETON ſworn.

I was Aid-de-camp to Sir Eyre Coote, and after his death I came home with Lady Coote; ſome time in the month of November, I went into the city to a ſilverſmith's ſhop, and from thence I went to one Benjamin a Jew; I did not go in, but in conſequence of ſomething that paſſed there, I went to Sir Sampſon Wright's, and I went to Mr. Godbehere's, there I ſaw a ſilver tankard tankard on the counter, which I knew; in conſequence of that, I went to Sir Sampſon Wright's the next morning.

What ſilver tankard was that?—It was a ſilver tankard, that had been uſed in India.

When you went to the priſoner Benton's, what paſſed?——He was a gunner on board, I did not myſelf go in, till the officers had ſecured them; I went in at laſt and ſaw the priſoner, and aſked him what had become of the ſmall box of Lady Coote's plate, he firſt ſaid, he knew nothing of the matter, we then told him we had ſeen the Jew, who had a commiſſion for the ſale of it; that he ſaid, he had received the plate, and we had ſeen him, and therefore he had better own it.

Be accurate to the exact words you made uſe of?—We told him he had better own it, or tell who was concerned with him; at the houſe of the priſoner, there was a piece of a handle of a ſaucepan found, but I do not know that it was part of that plate.

Have you been able to ſee any part of the plate?—I ſaw a ſmall tankard, the ſilver hookers were found.

Mr. Garrow, Council for Benton. What was your department?—Aid-de-camp.

Had you packed the plate yourſelf?—I had not, there were ſeveral packages of plate, ſervices of plate, but theſe were put in a ſmall box.

Is the tankard here?—Yes.

Do you happen to know what metal it is?—It is ſilver, I believe, it is India made, and there may probably be ſome good, ſome bad ſilver.

Jury. It is not ſo good as the ſterling plate in this country.

SAMUEL DE SILVA ſworn.

Are you a Chriſtian?——Yes.

Mr. Garrow. Where was you baptized?——At Madraſs.

At what age?——At eight days old.

Mr. Fielding. You underſtand yourſelf to be a Chriſtian?——Yes.

You profeſs the Chriſtian Religion as far as you know of it; you know the nature of an oath?——Yes.

Did you ſee this box?——Yes.

Was there any particular mark upon it, writing or any thing elſe?——Yes, it is the box which I marked.

What did that box contain at Madraſs?——There were ſome ſilver plate put into that box, there were two bowls, one ſmall bowl and a big one, and four diſhes, and two water-plates, and one cheeſe toaſter, a ſaucepan, and a little mug, which I put in myſelf; I do not know who the little mug belonged to, I packed it up myſelf, I ſaw it lodged on board the Bellamont, Eaſt-Indiaman.

What do you think is the value accord-to your idea?—I cannot ſay.

Were they above the value of forty ſhillings?——I cannot ſay, there were four ſilver diſhes, and this little mug, I underſtood they were Lady Coote's property.

Mr. Garrow. You came home in the Belmont?—Yes.

How long were you on your voyage?—I think from Madraſs to St. Helena, was twelve weeks, and home eleven weeks, I ſpeak from memory, I did not pack all the other cheſts, that cheſt is here, I did not make any inventory of the things contained in the ſmall cheſt; I ſpeak of them from my memory, at the diſtance of many months; this box was packed the laſt.

Who packed the other cheſts?——The other cheſt was packed by Mr. Hulſe, I attended them to the ſhip, the ſecond mate attended them to the ſhip, they did not go with the ſmall box, I carried this box myſelf on board the Bellmont; I had not a note for that ſmall box, it was all delivered in the ſhip, then I think it was in the care of the officers.

But it never was delivered in the way the cheſts were delivered, taking a note, or receipt for it?——No, I had not a particular receipt for this box but I had a receipt for all the things coming ſafe on board, and this box amongſt them. The things I carried on board, I had a receipt for and the things I carried after and the box, I had a receipt for too; I am ſure of that, I remembered this box, I wrote myſelf, Lady Coote, and I put the number on this part of the box, I did not mention that there was ſilver plate in it, I only mentioned ſuch a number this is the box that contained the four diſhes and the mug.

PHILIP ATKINS ſworn.

I am a waterman; I know both the priſoners, I have ſeen them on board the Bellamont Indiaman; on the 13th of September, I was employed by the priſoner Benton, he came to me about the latter part, and ſaid he had a box of Charots, they are like ſegars, to put on ſhore, he aſked us when we could come for them, I ſaid at night, he told us to come for it to the gun room port, and he gave me his box out, he ſaid it is a box of china, and I took it out of his arms, into my arms, ſays I, hand in the other things, ſays he, go along to ſhore directly with that box, I carried it to our own houſe for ſafety, and I never ſaw any more of him from that time to this, he told me immediately to go on ſhore, and I had no converſation concerning it, I ſuppoſe it was kept at Trippar's houſe for three weeks, Trippar is my brother waterman, no application was made for it during that time.

Do you know Green?——Yes.

Did he ever apply at the houſe for that box to your knowledge?—No.

Mr. Silveſter, Council for Green. Green was a ſeaman on board the Bellamont, was not he?——Yes.

What was your demand for carrying this box on ſhore?——We could not tell.

Does it happen frequently in this trade, that you are engaged in thoſe things that are called charot's, and thoſe for whom you ſmuggle, often cheat you?——Yes, often, we always like to ſee the inſide.

You are paid according to the value of the thing ſmuggled?——Yes, according to what they are.

You are never ſurprized when the box is opened, at the value being more than you expected?——No.

Seven o'clock is as good a time for ſmuggling as any?——Yes, Sir, juſt the duſk in the evening.

Did you never name any price you thought this box would come to?—No.

Did you never ſay that you ought to be paid eleven pounds?——At the proper value, it would be a ſhilling an ounce, but they told us it was china.

I believe that India made plate is contraband?——I cannot tell that.

I believe you ſmuggled ſome liquors for the priſoner Benton?——Yes, Sir.

Thoſe you were paid for?—Yes.

Mr. Fielding. If you had known it to be plate, you would have taken it as the property of the gunner?—Yes.

JOHN TRIPPAR ſworn.

I am a waterman; I was engaged with Atkins to go on board the Belmont Indiaman, I received that box at that time, I did not know the contents, he told us it was charots or ſegars, it ſtaid about three weeks in our houſe as nigh as I can gueſs; Green applied to our houſe for the box, he came down in company with one J. Smith, he was carpenter of the ſame ſhip, he ſaid he came for the box, I aſked him if it was for the box of china, and aſked him to come in, he ſaid it was not china, when he came in doors I aſked him for the key, he ſaid he had not the key, but the lock was good for nothing, he deſired me to bring him a hammer, and I fetched him a hammer, he opened the box, and there was four diſhes, two of them reached from ſide to ſide of the box, and two ſmaller, and there were two water-plates and a cheeſe toaſter, a ſaucepan, with a wooden handle, and cover, a three pint bowl and a pint baſon, and a pint mug with a flat cover, the mug was remarkable, I think I ſhould know the the mug again, if I was to ſee it.

How much do you think that mug might be worth?——I ſuppoſe it might weigh about five ounces, I do not know the value, the larger things were tied up in two handkerchiefs, and the ſmaller things Green put into his pocket; Smith ſaid at that time he had come from Benton for the things.

Mr. Silveſter. They were carried openly in handkerchiefs, were not they?—Yes, openly and publicly, in the middle of the day.

CHARLES

CHARLES SMITH sworn.

I am a waterman at Blackwall, I was at a public house, the Britannia, with Green; he intimated to me there was some plate at Benton's, at Poplar, to dispose of, this was the eleventh of last month, at the same time I saw David Benjamin on horseback, I says to Green, no doubt here is a man that will purchase it.

Did you call Benjamin in?——I went to the door, and spoke to him on horseback, he did not come off his horse, Green was not present.

Did Green and Benjamin enter into any kind of treaty?——They never spoke to one another.

DAVID BENJAMIN sworn.

Do you know the prisoners, or either of them?——I was at the Britannia, and one Wood called to me, and asked me if I bought silver, I told him no, it was a thing I did not buy, but if I could get any thing by it, I would either sell or buy, he gave me directions to Benton's house, somewhere in Poplar, and I went to Benton's house, and asked to see the silver, he told me I could not then, for there was another party concerned, I appointed to be down there on the Thursday, which I think was the 16th; I could not go till the 17th, I then saw a person that was there, which was Green the prisoner at the bar, then we were all in company together, then Benton asked Green, if he was agreeable to let me have a sample, or something of the kind, and Green said all that Mr. Benton did was right, and went away; I then asked Benton for a sample, and he gave me some plate, which I took to Mr. Rutherford.

When did you see any more of Benton and the plate?——I went to him in the afternoon, and I told him I thought I could sell the plate, to a silversmith in Leadenhall-street, and I would call upon him with a chaise, and he should go with me, and I would be with him about nine, or half after, I called upon him, and he put up the four dishes, a mug, and a tankard, we went to town, and baited at my father's; in the mean time I put it in a handkerchief, and took it under my arm to Mr. Godbehere's, a silversmith, in Cheapside.

How much did you get in the whole for this?——Eighty one pounds, three shillings, and ten pence.

Did you pay this money to Benton?—I was to pay him seventy pounds for it, I got ten pounds by it.

Do you remember a tankard there?——I believe there was, it looked like one, it was all battered and bruised.

Mr. Garrow. What is the value of that mug?——I do not know, I am not a dealer in plate.

This is the first adventure you have made in that way, upon your oath?——Yes, it is, upon my oath, and the first that I have sold by commission in this way.

Who instructed you in the price you was to have in this way by commission?——No person instructed me, I did not take it at a venture, when I came to settle with Mr. Benton, I paid him up the account, which he was agreeable to, and I got that by it.

You memory does not keep pace with your ingenuity at all, because you told my friend just now, that you received eighty one pounds; upon your oath, did you tell Benton that you received eighty one pounds?——No I did not, I told him I should expect to get something, if I sold it for him.

Did you tell him what that something was?——No.

Then you handed over seventy pounds, and told him you got a trifle by him, as you did before; what was the value of that tankard?—I cannot tell.

Where do you live?——No. 11, Artillery-lane, Bishopgate-street.

For what purpose is it that you keep the crucible on the fire?——I do not understand you.

Court to Silva. Had this plate Sir Eyre Coote's arms upon it?——I do not know, I remember the water plates and dishes had the coat of arms upon it, and the collar as a knight of the Bath.

Court.

Court. Did not that ſtrike you Mr. Benjamin?—There was neither mark nor ſtamp on the ſilver, there was no initials, it was all plain on my oath.

Court to Silva. Are you ſure the arms were there when you packed them?——I cannot be ſure.

SAMUEL GODBEHERE ſworn.

I keep a ſilverſmith's ſhop, No. 86. Cheapſide, I remember Benjamin applying to me to diſpoſe of plate, I ſhall be able to tell you the day by referring to my books, it was on the 18th of November, he brought ſome plate into the ſhop, he ſaid that was to be diſpoſed of, I aſked him if it was his, he ſaid no, he had brought it from the gunner of the Bellamont Indiaman.

What were the articles of the plate which he produced?——They were two large and two ſmall diſhes, two water plates, a cheeſe-toaſter, a ſaucepan, a cover and a mug.

What were the value of theſe articles, they weighed three hundred and twenty-ſeven ounces and a half, for which I paid 81l. 3s. 10s.

Court. Had theſe plates and diſhes Sir Eyre Coote's collar and coat of arms upon them?——Not a mark upon them.

I aſk that for your juſtification.——If it had been Engliſh plate, and had had no arms on it, I ſhould certainly have acted otherwiſe; but as it was foreign plate, and the property of a gunner, whoſe name and place of abode I had, and he left it me to make an aſſay, there were ſeveral gentlemen in the ſhop, all the men ſaw it, here is a mug, it is about the ſame quality as Spaniſh dollars.

There was a ſaucepan?——Yes.

Had that ſaucepan any handle?—It had not, I was applied to by Rutherford, and I never reſted till I found it out.

Mr. Garrow. Is this mug in ſuch a ſtate as to paſs at Goldſmith's hall?—It is moſt certainly plate, but not having paſſed, it cannot be called what we deem ſterling; I would not venture to ſend it to the hall without making a ſeparate aſſay.

Now conſidering it as old plate, and not ſterling, do not you think you have over valued it?——I and my clerk made an aſſay of the whole, and I think the diſhes were worſe.

But you have not aſſayed the mug?——No, therefore I cannot tell whether it is worſe or better.

There is ſome ſolder about the mug?—Yes, there is very little ſolder in it.

Court. At what value did you eſtimate it?——I ſhould gueſs it at the preſent price of dollars, which go at four ſhillings and eleven pence halfpenny per ounce at preſent, I fancy it is about fifteen ounces, value 3l. 15s.

(The mug ſhewn to Mr. Doveſton, and depoſed to by him.)

Mr. Garrow. Do you mean it was uſed in the family, or as excluſive property?—As excluſive property.

Mr. Fielding to Silva. Have you ſeen this mug?——Yes.

Was that the mug you put into the caſe?——Yes, it was Mr. Huſſe's.

EDWARD WOOD ſworn.

I keep the Britannia public-houſe adjoining to the water, the priſoner Benton left a parcel of plate at my houſe.

What was left at your houſe?——Four articles which appeared to me to be ſuch plate as I have ſeen come from the Eaſt-Indies, they were left about three weeks.

——— MACMANUS ſworn.

I produce the things that were left at the houſe of Mr. Wood.

Mr. Wood. They are the things that were left by Benton.

Mr. Garrow. You are acquainted with this buſineſs?——In the firſt part of my life I ſerved my time to the water, and have brought many a cheſt on ſhore.

When perſons come home from India, they intruſt the running their goods to the inferior officers of the ſhip?——Yes, and they apply to the watermen, and they are paid according to their value.

Theſe hookers are common things?——

I ſup-

I ſuppoſe they are thought no more of there, than copper is here.

PATRICK MACMANUS ſworn.

I went to apprehend Benton at his houſe on the 20th of laſt month, and I found him at home, Carpmeal and I went into the houſe firſt, and left the other gentlemen that were with us; we told him our buſineſs, he ſaid he knew nothing at all of the matter, then Mr. Carpmeal opened the door and came in, and when the gentlemen that went with me that belonged to Lady Coote came in, they ſpoke together, and ſhewed Benton the warrant, we ſearched, he ſaid there was nothing; we firſt ſearched down in the kitchen, then one pair of ſtairs, and in a cloſet in the one pair of ſtairs I found this handle of a ſaucepan, I came down and ſhewed it, he ſaid he knew nothing of it, we found nothing but that; upon his own perſon there was money and notes found.

Mr. Garrow. Do you know this honeſt dealer in Spaniſh wool, Mr. Benjamin? ——Yes, I know him.

——— CARPMEAL ſworn.

I went with Macmanus, I ſearched his pocket and found eleven guineas and three twenty pound notes, he opened his pocket book himſelf, and I found this paper, an account of ſilver, and a card of Mr. Benjamin's addreſs in his pocket, there were ſeveral of them in his pocket.

Mr. Fielding to Benjamin. Do you know this paper?——Yes.

Did you give thoſe to Benton?—Yes.

Mr. Garrow. Are they your writing, friend?——Yes.

Let me look at them then, for any manuſcript of yours muſt be curious, what is this?—It is the weight of the ſilver as he deſired, the other is the value.

Mr. Doveton. The hookers are very common things in India, it is impoſſible to ſwear to them.

Priſoner Benton. I leave my caſe to my Lord and the Gentlemen of the Jury.

WILLIAM DICK GAMAGE ſworn.

I am captain of the Belmont Eaſt-Indiaman, I know the priſoner Benton, I did not think I had two honeſter men in my ſhip than the priſoners at the bar.

And that is the eſtimation of all thoſe that know them?——Yes, I have truſted a great deal of property to theſe men, and never miſſed any thing, they might have robbed me of twenty thouſand pounds.

JOHN BEVAN ſworn.

I was chief mate of the Belmont, and have known Benton upwards of two years; during the whole time that I ſailed with him I looked upon him to be a perfect honeſt man, as far as my duty and his were connected; he had very great charges under his care, in all which he conducted himſelf with propriety in every reſpect.

CHARLES LINDEGREEN ſworn.

I was the ſecond mate of the Belmont, I knew Benton during the laſt voyage, he bore a very high character on board the ſhip as an officer, and for his honeſty.

GALPIN BAXTER ſworn.

I am a ſtationer in Leadenhall-ſtreet, I have ſupplied Benton with goods occaſionally, I have known him three years, he is a very honeſt man; I have credited both the priſoners, and they have paid me their different bonds and bills off with great honeſty ſince they came home.

——— WILSON ſworn.

I am clerk to Mr. Baron Eyre, I have known Benton ſix years, he has a very good character indeed; the Baron inſtructed me to ſay that he entertained a very high opinion of him.

DOROTHY FARR ſworn.

He ſerved as apprentice with my ſpouſe, and was ſervant to us eleven years and better; when his maſter died we had a great deal of charge, I never knew him wrong us of a halfpenny in his life, he was very honeſt and ſober; I never heard him ſwear, nor ſaw him in liquor, I would have truſted him with a hundred pounds of my own.

WILLIAM BENTON GUILTY, DEATH.

In conſideration of his character, he was humbly recommended to mercy by the Jury.

GEORGE GREEN, NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

Priſoner Benton. Aſk the officers of the ſhip whether they ever ſaw the box on board.

Mr. Lindegreen. I do not remember this box coming, it never came under the idea of plate, it might come into the ſhip, but I never gave a receipt for it, nor I never knew it was in the ſhip.

Mr. Doveton. My Lord, my Lady Coote ordered me in a particular manner to recommend the priſoner to mercy, as he bore a very good character before.

---

32. EDWARD GARTH was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 29th day of October laſt, two live cows, value 17l. the property of Thomas Rhodes, the younger.

THOMAS RHODES ſworn.

I live at Tottenham Court, juſt through the turnpike, I am a cow-keeper, I am in buſineſs for myſelf; I loſt two cows, I never miſſed them till accidentally coming along Monmouth-ſtreet I ſaw one of my beaſts in a drove, I challenged the drover, he ſaid he had bought them of Mr. Chapman, ſaleſman in Smithfield, a perſon I very well know; the drover ſaid he was going to take it to Mr. Wright's in St. James's; I deſired him to make my compliments to his maſter, and tell him not to kill it till I ſaw Mr. Chapman; when I came to Smithfield I ſaw another of my cows in Mr. Chapman's cuſtody, and he told me they were brought to him by a perſon in the name of Hamilton, I ſaw the cows on Thurſday following.

Were they in milk?—No, they were what we call inter beaſt.

Were they going in the field?——They laid down in the fields, they laid down there a good while, we lay a quantity there, I ſaw them all ſafe in particular on Thurſday morning; as I knew I ſhould not ſee them on Friday, I made it my buſineſs to ſee them on Thurſday.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council. You ſay you had not ſeen theſe cows ſince Thurſday morning?—No.

How long have you had them?—I cannot ſay, we change our beaſt about from year to year, I have a great many, my father is a cowman; they do not feed together, we know them all be the colour what they will, I found the priſoner at the King's Head in Smithfield.

Was you ever miſtaken in a cow?——I ſhould know it if it was a thouſand miles off, in the midſt of a thouſand beaſt.

Court. Are you perfectly ſure theſe were your cows?—Yes, I have not the ſmalleſt doubt about them, I know them all by their colour, nothing more, and one of theſe cows is a particular grey one.

WILLIAM CHAPMAN ſworn.

I know the priſoner, I have ſeen him before; on the 29th of October laſt on the Friday morning, as I was going to Smithfield about half paſt ſix, the priſoner came, and ſaid he had brought two cows for me to ſell, he ſaid he brought them from Mr. Hamilton, of Holloway or Highgate, I am not ſure which, I looked at them, and booked them in that name, the name of Hamilton.

Court. Was there a Mr. Hamilton at Holloway that you knew?—No, I do not know any ſuch name.

Court. You did not buy the cows?——No, my Lord.

Did you ſell either of them?—I ſold one of them.

Did you receive the money for it?—No, I ſold it to a Mr. Wright, of St. James's-market, market, a perſon I am very intimate with, and he had not paid me.

Did you pay the priſoner for that?——No.

Did you acquaint him that you had ſold it?——I never ſaw him from the time he delivered me the cow, when he ſpoke to me, till he was taken, which was about twelve o'clock.

Before that, Mr. Rhodes came to you?——Yes, Mr. Rhodes came about twelve, and ſaid that is my cow ſtands there, how came you by it; I told him a young man had brought them to me in the morning, and ſaid he brought them from Mr. Hamilton, of Holloway, that he left the cows with me, and was gone away ſomewhere, I did not know where; when the priſoner was taken up I was preſent.

What did he ſay?——He ſaid little or nothing to Mr. Rhodes, till he came before the Juſtice, then he ſaid he bought them.

Did he give any account of the perſon of whom he had bought them?——No, I do not remember.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was paid for driving theſe cows to market, by one Hamilton of Highgate, he told me he was going into town, and deſired me to ſell them, accordingly I gave them to Mr. Chapman, and deſired him to ſell them, and I went into the King's-head, and had a pint of beer, and they came and took me up, I have ſeveral times carried cows to Mr. Chapman.

Court to Chapman. Had you ever any dealings with the priſoner before?—None, to my knowledge; I find ſince, he lived with a Mr. Herring, and he ſent three or four to me to ſell, and I have mentioned him to Mr. Herring, and he gave him a very good character; Mr. Herring lives juſt by Hampſtead.

Court to Priſoner. Did you ſend to Mr. Herring?——Yes, Sir, he was here four days paſt, he was here till eleven o'clock laſt night, my witneſſes were all here this morning, they are all over at the public houſe.

Mr. Chapman. I did not ſee him drive them into the market.

You did not know how they came into the market?——No.

ROBERT —— ſworn.

I was watchman at the ſmall-pox hoſpital, by the turnpike, Cold-bath-fields, on the 29th of October, on Friday morning, between five and ſix, I ſaw the priſoner come through the turnpike with two cows, one cow was a grey cow, the other was a dark mottled cow, it was light enough for me to diſcern the colour of his coat, and his face, and his hair, he came very cloſe to me, I never ſaw him before.

Do cows coming from Hampſtead-road come through that turnpike?——It is the road from Kentiſh-town.

Court to Rhodes. Where were your cattle on Thurſday laſt?——In the fields by the half-way houſe, it was in the forenoon.

JOHN REDMAN ſworn.

I am a victualler in Taviſtock-row, Covent-garden, I have known the priſoner fourteen years, I knew him to be an honeſt, hard-working lad, I never heard any thing elſe of him before, he bore a general good character.

MICHAEL REDMAN ſworn.

I am a milkman, I have known him a year and a half, his general character is an honeſt, hard-working lad, he worked for bricklayers; I got him into Mr. Herring's, and I was bail to Mr. Herring for his honeſty.

Court. Would you, if he was diſcharged, take him into your ſervice?—Yes, I would, I never knew any thing of him but honeſty, he behaved well.

The

The priſoner called two more witneſſes, who all gave him a very good character.

GUILTY.

He was humbly recommended to mercy by the Jury.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Lord LOUGHBOROUGH.

---

33. GEORGE GOLDSMITH, LAURENCE HALL, JOHN SMART, and JOHN JONES, were indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe houſe of Samuel Satcher, about the hour of two in the night on the 30th of October laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, one watch with a metal caſe, value 20s. two ſilk cloaks, value 10s. three muſlin aprons, value 10s. three pair of cotton ſtockings, value 1s. two handkerchiefs, value 1s. three cotton handkerchiefs, value 2s. two ſilk handkerchiefs, value 4s. one pair of gloves, value 1d. four ſilver tea ſpoons, value 4s. one gold ring, value 4s. one ſilver ſtay-hook, value 2d. a china ſnuff-box, value 6d. a ſilk and ſilver purſe, value 3d. a worſted purſe, value 2d. a linen bag, value 1d. five guineas, value 5l. 5s. one half guinea, value 10s. 6d. three half crowns, value 7s. 6d. and 7s. in monies numbered, the property of Elizabeth Satcher, widow; one muſlin handkerchief, value 2s. ſeven hundred and twenty halfpence, value 30s. and eighty-four farthings, value 1s. 9d. the property of the ſaid Samuel.

SARAH SATCHER ſworn.

I am mother to Samuel Satcher, who keeps the Black Dog at Shoreditch; I have reaſon to remember the 31ſt day of October laſt, between the hours of one and three there were three men approached my room, and one of them ſtood with a piſtol preſented to me, or a pretended one, I cannot ſay which, the one did that, and the other two rifled my drawers, and took my money and clothes, and all that I had; the firſt demanded my pocket, and my money, and my keys, I gave it them, they drew the curtain when they firſt came in, then after that they took my money, my watch, and my clothes, I believe there was in all about eight guineas; there were three ſilk gowns, one damaſk, one tabby, and one black, it was a very good man's ſatin, and one linen, beſides, there are ſome things that the conſtable has; I loſt two gold rings, I loſt a ſilver and ſilk purſe, I have ſeen it ſince; I loſt a china ſnuff-box, and there was in that eight guineas, I believe I have loſt a pretty many ſilk handkerchiefs, I have ſeen ſome ſince that I know, but I have not ſeen them all; I have loſt two ſilk cloaks, which the conſtable has, one black and one blue, the blue is a flowered ſatin, lined with white, unmade; I loſt one very handſome muſlin apron, with an edging round it, and there is two beſides; I loſt four tea ſpoons; the purſe was a little fanciful thing, ſilk and ſilver, I think it was purple, but I cannot be ſure; I loſt a worſted purſe, and a pair of ſleeve buttons of no great value: when firſt theſe things were brought me, there was ſome pocket pieces, reſembling guineas, offered to me, but they were none of mine, my guineas were good, ſome of them have been found, there was no mark on the money; there were ſeven half crowns.

Mr. Chetwood. Do you know that the houſe was faſt before?——There was light with them, I ſaw two that waited upon me, one was very near to me; there was no light but what the gentlemen brought with them, and that was, I think, a dark lanthorn; I could not ſee a man's face, the perſon that ſtood over me I know very well.

Which of them had the dark lanthorn?——I cannot tell.

Which was he that ſtood over you?——(Goes up to Hall.) Thou art the man!

What was there in Hall's face, that enabled you to know him?——I know him by his hair, and dreſs, and ſize, there was a dark lanthorn.

But you know the nature of a dark lanthorn?

house?—I did not say it was a dark lantern, I think it was, but I believe it was light all round, there was a tall thin man, and there was a short man; my curtains are but thin.

What is that knife?—This is what the gentlemen left behind them.

Mr. James, Prisoner's Council. This is a public house?——Yes.

How long have you kept this house?—About a year and a quarter.

Your husband kept it before you?—No, it is my son, I have lived with my son many years for a maintenance, my husband has been dead thirty years, I came out of the country since his death, we have all lived together about a year and a quarter.

Who pays the taxes for the house, and is the occupier of it?——My son, I live with him, he keeps me, and pays the taxes.

Mr. Chetwood. Who had the care of the house that night?——My daughter.

Court. Was there any disguise over Hall's face?—None at all.

Had he any hat on?——He had, Sir.

How was he dressed?——I think he had something of a blue jacket on, I knew him by his sheing of hair as soon as I saw him, I saw him so much, that I knew him by his face and hair too, for I suppose he was with me twenty minutes, I might say half an hour and not tell any story, I had time enough to see him.

SUSANNAH SATCHER sworn.

I am wife of Samuel Satcher, I was last up in this house, I remember the doors and windows of the house were fast, there is a sash window backwards, I went to bed a little after one, I cannot tell just to a minute; we were alarmed by the watchman about three, I came down stairs and found the doors open, and the bar open, I had left it shut and locked over night, they had opened the sash over the door and come in, there were four table cloths and two aprons, that were dropped down in the passage, there were five silver spoons, and how much liquor I do not know, there were five five shillings worth of halfpence, there might be about twenty shillings in half pence and farthings, I think my husband must know the halfpence, he always makes them up himself, there was a pane of glass cut out, and the things that fasten the window were pushed out, and then the sash falls down, it was a sliding shutter the inside falls down.

Was the sash open?——Yes, it was left open when we come down, there was a bolt fixed to hold up the sash that it might not fall down.

Mr. James. What was this door that was left open?——A back door that leads into the passage, and then you go into the street.

You say you went to bed last, do you swear positively, and are you sure that there was no door or window open when you went to bed?——Yes.

Whose business was it to look round the house generally?——Mine, there never is any door or window open any night.

THOMAS HOSIER sworn.

I am a watchman in Shoreditch, on the morning of the 31st of October last, I saw one man, I do not know his name, at three o'clock on Sunday morning, six weeks ago, I cannot tell the month, because I am no scholar, I met him half way, in black dog alley, I saw him come out of the alley, and asked him what he wanted, he said nothing at all, he was going to make water, I went to take hold of him, and he almost shoved me down, the prisoner Hall is the person; there was a lamp at the end of the alley, I am sure Hall is the man, when I got half way down the alley, I saw him there, he said he was making water.

Prisoner Hall. The Justice asked that man, if he knew the man, and he came and pointed to me, he said it was the night before last, and I was in prison at the same time.

Hosier. I was then in liquor, I did not know what I was about, but I know now; they fetched me up before the Justice, but Mr. Willmot said, that man is in liquor, send him away; I am very sure and certain, I only saw him by the lamps, I kept hold of him about a minute, he shoved me off directly, I had just hold of his collar, I never saw him before in my life.

How long after?——I never saw him after, till that night, I never saw him before I saw him at the Justice's.

How long was it after the time you saw him in the alley?——I cannot say rightly, about half an hour.

The prisoner says it was only two days, how long was it;——Two days after, they said it was about a week, I cannot rightly tell how long it was.

Was it a day, or a month?——About a day I think so.

Was it the next day, you saw him at the Justice's?—I think so.

Are you sure of that as you are of his face?——I cannot say I am sensible of it.

DAVID LEVY sworn.

I am a constable in Duke's Place, I produce the property belonging to Mrs. Satcher, I took it from the prisoners.

How came you to know them?——Goldsmith we took in the night, here is a bag of half-pence, five guineas and a half in gold, three half crowns, seven shillings in silver, a gold ring, watch, and silver spoons; on the 31st of October, I being a constable, the watchmen, Thomas Bond, and Thomas Taylor, brought in the prisoner Goldsmith, into St. James's watch-house, Duke's Place, between three and four in the morning, he had a bundle under his arm, this is the bundle, I asked him what he had, he said he did not know, he said I came from Deptford, and my shipmates desired me to carry it along, I opened the bundle and saw it contained women's apparel, I bid him stand up, and in his coat pocket there were some half-pence, I put them into my hat, and asked him what half-pence he had, he said he did not know, out of his waistcoat there fell this linen waistcoat, then fell out some handkerchiefs from his bosom, then I found a silver purse in his pocket, half a guinea and three half crowns and seven shillings in silver, I opened his breeches, and there I found three pair of cotton stockings, and a pair of gloves, I opened the knees of his breeches, and behind there, in the bend of his knee, I found a watch, this watch fell out; I bid him open his mouth, and I took three guineas out of his mouth; I said then you had better tell me where your comrades are, and I will shew you some mercy, no, says he, damn my bloody eyes, I am done, and they are far enough off from me now, and you will never get them, I carried him to prison, and between six and seven, when the watchmen went off, I patrolled the parish myself, and I went round Leadenhall-street, and went into Houndsditch, and in Houndsditch I met the other three prisoners, and Aaron Levy who is another of the witnesses, and my watchman says to me, them are the three men, I followed the prisoners, and took them in the Minories, I took Jones, and I followed and knocked down Hall, I brought them all three to the watch-house, I first searched Jones, I opened his breeches and found two silk handkerchiefs, and a china snuff-box in his breeches pocket, and a crown's worth of halfpence he threw out of his pocket, they were picked up; on Hall I found four silver spoons, and two papers of half-pence; upon Smart I found a green purse, and seven shillings in silver, and six brass counters; when I took Jones to the counter, I bid him open his mouth, he would not, till he received a blow on the head, and then he did, I told him not to bite my fingers, when he opened his mouth, I got two guineas out of his mouth, he swallowed something which had like to have choaked him, I put my fingers down his throat, and pulled out the two guineas, and I gave him half a crown for not biting my fingers, here is all the property.

Court. Separate the things, and put together, first of all, the things you found on Goldsmith?——On Goldsmith I found all the wearing apparel, but two handkerchiefs.

Old Mrs. Satcher. The blue cloak I know by a piece in the back, I am very sure it is mine, it is a blue figured sattin, lined with white, I know it by the lining and sattin, I am sure it is mine, here is a striped kenting apron mended by myand another apron with a piece joined across,

Court. Let me ask you as to two or three of the things, look at the purse?——It is my purse, it is a present a young lady gave me, it is silk and silver, I have had it a dozen years, this china snuff box, I know full well, it is what my gold was in; as to the watch, I cannot tell the maker's name, it was left me by my daughter, I know it by the shagreen case, and by the etwee, that was bought very lately.

Court. Produce what you found on Jones?——The two silk handkerchiefs and this china snuff box.

Mrs. Satcher. I know this silk handkerchief, I hemmed it myself, this china box I kept

kept my money in, what little I had, I always liked to keep ſix-pence under my thumb.

Produce the four ſilver ſpoons that were found on Hall?——I do know them very well, two of theſe ſpoons I have had ever ſince I was married, which is fifty years; I aſſure you in what I ſay, that green purſe I cannot ſwear to, I know nothing of the braſs counters.

Mr. James. How do you know that china ſnuff box?——It does not ſhut very well, I have no other reaſon.

Court to Levy. All the property that was found on Goldſmith was kept ſeparate?—Yes, theſe handkerchiefs have been kept by themſelves, I did not obſerve the pattern of the ſnuff box?—I am not ſure whether the lid was cracked or whole, but I think it was whole.

(Suſannah Satcher depoſes to the waiſtcoats.)

Levy. I ſaw the three priſoners between ſix and ſeven.

Had not you ſome money from Jones, after he was in the Compter?—No I found two guineas in his mouth, I gave him half a crown.

You ſwear you had no property from Jones, after this time you ſearched and apprehended him?——No, that I ſwear.

When ſome of the property was carried back to the proſecutrix, did not ſhe ſay it was bad money, and that it had been changed?——No.

ELIZABETH VARNICOT ſworn.

I live in Bolt Court, Shoreditch, with one Mrs. Dring, I was at the houſe of one Mrs. Borſhaws, on the 30th of October, it is a private houſe in the ſame court, Goldſmith was ſitting on the foot of the bed drinking, and he aſked me to drink, I can ſwear to the two Hall and Jones, this court is about half a dozen doors from the black dog, Shoreditch.

Mr. James. Who are you?—I take in waſhing, and I have been in ſervice, I have lived there eight months; I have a young man that comes out of the country with me, he is a watch and clock maker, he maintains me; I went to ſee after this young man, it is a private houſe, I drank with him for fear.

Had you ever ſeen Jones before in your life?——No, never, I ſaw him at Juſtice Willmot's, I took a great deal of notice of him, becauſe they ſaid he was going into the country.

Look at him again?——I can ſwear to Shaw and Jones.

The Priſoner Jones called three witneſſes to his character.

PRISONER GOLDSMITH'S DEFENCE.

I went that night to ſee my maſter, and I picked up this bundle coming acroſs Moorfields, ſome in one place ſome in another; I put them in my boſom, and I put the money in my coat pocket; Levy came and took me, he has not brought half of the half-pence he took from me.

PRISONER SMART'S DEFENCE.

I got up half after five, and went over Tower-hill, I changed half a guinea, and had ten ſhillings in my pocket, I gave my poor old mother three ſhillings; I went to the White Hart, and fetched her up a quartern of gin; I was going to Deptford to ſee if the Britannia Indiaman was out of dock, I intended to go to India; coming through Houndſditch I met with this man, and ſeeing him look like a waterman, I aſked him what it would coſt to go down by water to Deptford, there I heard a noiſe and I ſtopped, up came another man and laid hold of me, he took me to the watch-houſe, and took out that green purſe, and ſix pocket pieces, and a duplicate of my ſhirt for half a crown, my witneſſes are gone home.

GEO. GOLDSMITH, LAURANCE HALL, JOHN JONES, } GUILTY, Death.

JOHN SMART, NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

34. RICHARD HOBSON was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Samuel Harris, about the hour of one in the night, on the 22d of October laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, two towels, value 12d. three aprons, value 3s. two flannel waiſtcoats, value 3s. five linen pockets, value 10d. one handkerchief, value 1d. one cap, value 1d. and one cloth cloak, cloak, value 3s. the property of the said Samuel.

MARY HARRIS ſworn.

I am wife of Samuel Harris, on the 22d of October, our houſe was broke open; I was called up about one by the watchman, I let him in, I told him to look round the houſe, and he found the houſe was faſt as I left it in the night; I opened another door, and went into a houſe adjoining, I found that door open which I had locked the night before, it is a waſh-houſe adjoining to the parlour, it is under the ſame roof with the dwelling houſe, and the chimney runs into another chimney of the houſe; there is no ſeparation but the wall, and the door into it is from the yard; I locked that door the night before myſelf, I was the laſt up in the houſe; the clothes that had been in the waſh-houſe were gone; we went a little further, and found the priſoner in the neceſſary; he ſaid, he would go with the watchman any where, the clothes were not with him, they were carried out of the waſh-houſe, where they had been, and I found them in the yard, the yard is incloſed with a wall round.

Court. Is there any door into the yard, without coming through the houſe?—— One for the lodgers, that door was bolted the night before, the priſoner had got over the wall by what appeared, there was ſome bricks taken down.

Where is your houſe?——In Chiſwell-ſtreet, No. 87, the priſoner made no excuſe at all, the conſtable came to the aſſiſtance of the watchman, and he took the clothes the next morning, I kept them ſeparate that night, they were the ſame that were found in the yard.

The CONSTABLE ſworn.

I have had them in my poſſeſſion ever ſince.

(The things depoſed to.)

JAMES MAXEY ſworn.

I am the watchman, it was firſt obſerved by a part of the wall being broke down in the yard, when I ſaw the priſoner, I aſked him what he did there, he ſaid, he came to eaſe himſelf, I told him he muſt go along with me, he ſaid, along with you, where? he ſeemed to make a great many words, I brought him into the houſe, and on examining him I found theſe picklock keys, (Produced) I did not ſee where the clothes were found, when I was taking him to the watch-houſe at the end of Chiſwell-ſtreet, he attempted to get away, and I told him I would cut him down ſooner than let him; he ſaid cut away you bloody thief, I have been uſed to cutting away; I ſaid, I will cut your legs off before I will let you go.

JOHN PEARCE ſworn.

On the 22d of October, about one in the morning, I was alarmed by the ſound of a rattle, I ſprung out of the watch-houſe, and ran into Chiſwell-ſtreet, and I found this property in Mrs. Harris's yard.

JOSEPH HAWES ſworn.

I aſſiſted the watchman in taking the priſoner, as the other witneſs ſaid.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I went to carry a letter for one Chriſtopher Divers, a butcher, on the other ſide of the water, to the Red-lion, Iſlington; coming down Goſwell-ſtreet, I went to the ſign of the White-horſe, a young man ſat in the box, he aſked me my trade, I told him I was an iron founder, and came from Colebrook, in Shropſhire, we ſtaid till it was very late, I was much in liquor, I told him I lived on the other ſide the water, and I left him, and going up this place I went in there to eaſe myſelf, and this man came and caught hold of me, I have no witneſſes.

Court to Watchman. Was this man drunk or ſober, when you found him?—I do not know, he appeared to me to be pretty ſober.

GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 8th of DECEMBER, 1784, and the following Days;

Being the FIRST SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER I. PART VII.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

35. WILLIAM FINDER was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of John Mew, about the hour of ſeven in the night, on the 24th of October laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein one cotton gown, value 10s. his property.

JOHN MEW ſworn.

I live in Crown court, Charter-houſe lane, on the 24th of October between ſeven and eight, me and my wife were coming home, we went out at five, and left nobody in the houſe, the door was ſhut and locked, I am ſure it was double locked, I ſtood at the door and ſaw her lock it; there is only that one door in front, all the lower windows were faſt, I found the door as I came up the court half open and half ſhut, and by the light of the candle which the man had in his hand, I ſaw three men in the houſe, I made a ſtop for a ſecond or two, one of the men came out of the houſe, I aſked him what he had been doing there, he ſaid where, I ſaid in that houſe, he ſaid he had not been in the houſe, I ſaid you ſcoundrel you have, and collared him directly.

Did you ſee him come out?—I did, I immediately called out for aſſiſtance, and he called out to the other men, and they came out of the houſe and laid hold of me, in order to reſcue him from me, but my aſſiſtance came at the ſame time, and they made off, I had the priſoner into the houſe, and ſent for an officer, and he was committed, the officer found this bag with a gown of my wife's moved from the place where we left it, it was left in a bureau bedſtead, and my clothes that I have on, laid in the ſame place, and they were all moved down to the middle of the floor by the ſide of the bag, but this gown only was in the bag, it is my wife's gown, I am ſure it is her's, I know it by the time ſhe has had it, and I know it has never been out of her poſſeſſion on any occaſion, the man never went away from me till I delivered him up to the officer, I am quite ſure he came out of the houſe, there is no thoroughfare in the court, I am quite ſure the door was locked, there were ſome pick-lock keys found on the priſoner, and one of them opened the door.

JOHN DAVIS ſworn.

The night the priſoner was committed, I was ſitting by the fire ſide in the houſe, and heard a noiſe in the ſame court, and I went out and found the proſecutor and his wife wife had each hold of the priſoner, and when I went in with them, I ſaw the bag lay on the ground with a gown in it, with the clothes on the floor by it.

WILLIAM PALMER ſworn.

The night the burglary was committed, I was ſent for between ſeven and eight; when I came into the houſe I ſaw the bag on the floor, and the clothes laying by it, and I took theſe picklock keys upon him, and this key, which was one of them, opened the door.

Court. This was on the 24th of October.——Yes.

It was not quite dark?——No, it was dark ſome time before we came back again.

The priſoner called four witneſſes, who gave him a good character.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

36. THOMAS CALE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 23d day of November laſt, two live cows, price 10l. the property of John Stebbing.

JOHN STEBBING ſworn.

I am a poor man, and keep a few cows, on the 21ſt of November laſt in the morning about ſeven I firſt miſſed my cows, I keep them in a field at the back of Stepney Cauſeway, I know nothing of the priſoner, one of the cows was a ſtrawberry cow, with a good deal of white about her, and all along her back, and a good deal of white at her tail, her horns ſtand very wide; the other cow is a dark brown cow, her two hind feet are rather whitiſh, I went to the office of the ſitting Alderman the day after I miſſed them; the cows were then in the green yard, I ſaw them there, I knew the cows directly; I have had one of the cows about four years, and the other I believe I bought it about June laſt.

JOHN WILLIAMS ſworn.

About a quarter after twelve in Fore-ſtreet, I heard the cry of ſtop thief, and I thought there was ſomething miſſing, I ſaw three beaſt coming along the middle of the ſtreet and a man following them at a diſtance on the pavement; in the middle of the way on the 23d of November when I ſaw the cows, I thought they muſt be the ſubject I was called to, I ſaw a man in a red jacket, it was a light night, the lamps were alight, I cannot deſcribe the cows at all, I croſſed the way to the man, I ſaid to him, my friend where are you going with theſe beaſt, ſays he I am going to Smithfield, I collared him, and he ſeemed to make ſome reſiſtance, he told me then if I would let him go, he would tell me where he was going with the cows; I told him if he told me truth I would let him go, he told me he was going to take them to Pancras; I ſaid that was a bigger falſity than the other, that is not the road to Pancras, I did not remark the cows, I then called Cameron, and gave him the cows to go to the green yard, and I went with him, there were three in the whole; I took him to the watch-houſe, I ſaw the proſecutor the day after he was robbed at the Alderman's and the green yard, he ſaid they were his property.

DANIEL CAMERON ſworn.

I am a watchman, the laſt witneſs, Williams, ſtopped the cows, and called me, I aſked him if he had the man ſecure, he ſaid he had; I heard the priſoner ſay he was going to Smithfield, ſays Williams, it is the wrong day, I told Williams, ſays I, that will do, meaning that he ſpoke falſe; he then ſaid to Williams, let me go, and I will tell you where I am going, and he ſaid he was going to Pancras, he was going down Fore-ſtreet, Cripplegate, I firſt ſaw him oppoſite the end of Little Aldermanbury, then the priſoner ſaid he was going to the Green-yard with them; I ſaid, ſo he ſhould; I ſaw the proſecutor there, he owned the cows to be his property.

JOHN

JOHN BECK ſworn.

I am a watchman, I heard them going by Bethlem, I ſaw the priſoner with three cows, I called my partner, John Williams, and he anſwered; then Williams croſſed the way, and aſked the priſoner where he was going with the cows, and he ſaid to Smithfield market, and Williams told him it was not market day; the priſoner ſaid to Williams, if you will let me go, I will tell you, I am going to Pancras; Williams ſaid that was a greater falſity than the other, and they all went to the Green-yard together; I ſaw the proſecutor there.

What did he ſay to the cows?——He owned two of them to be his property.

Priſoner. I told them I was going to the Green-yard with the cows.

Beck. Yes, he ſaid ſo, after he had been in the two firſt ſtories.

FRANCIS STEBBING ſworn.

What age are you?——Seventeen.

Do you know the nature of an oath?—Yes.

With whom do you live?——With my father, I lived with him in November laſt.

Did your father loſe any cows in that month?——Yes, of a Tueſday afternoon, about half after two, one was a ſtrawberry cow, with a high hip, a good deal of white about her, the other was a brown cow, ſhe had white ſtars in her forehead, and white feet; I ſaw them in the Green-yard on Wedneſday, and knew the cows directly.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I know nothing about it, I was coming to Roſemary-lane between eleven and twelve at night, and I ſaw theſe three cows, and nobody with them, and I thought it was fitting to drive them to the Green-yard, as nobody was with them, and the watchman ſtopped me, I told him I was going to the Green-yard with them, and he took me to the watch-houſe; I have no witneſſes, I am a poor labouring man, and never was before a Juſtice before.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

37. WILLIAM FLINT, WILLIAM ANDERSON, MELVIN SIMMONDS and SARAH HOLMES otherwiſe BROCKLEY were indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Thomas Powell, Eſq; on the 27th of November laſt, about the hour of ſix in the night, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, one ſilver waiter, value 10l. three ſilver tea canniſters, value 5l. one ſilver table ſpoon, value 10s. two ſilver tea ſpoons, value 4s. one ſilver ſalt, value 5s. one ſilver ſalt ſpoon, value 1s. four glaſs caſtors, value 8s. four gold mourning rings, value 40s. a needle book with a ſilver cover, value 6s. one Spaniſh dollar, value 4s. and eight half-crowns, value 20s. the property of the ſaid Thomas Powell, Eſquire.

SARAH DAVIS ſworn.

I am ſervant to Thomas Powell, Eſq; he lives in Buckingham-ſtreet, York-buildings; I knew the priſoner Anderſon, he uſed to be employed about our maſter's houſe as carpenter, the priſoner Anderſon deſired me to go down to Weſtminſter to my father, and then he deſired me to go up to Clare-market to fetch a piece of pork, as he ſaid he would dine there; on Sunday about ſix I went, and returned about a quarter after ſix, when I returned, Sarah Parrot my fellow ſervant was in the houſe, ſhe went out in a few minutes after I came in, and ſomebody came and knocked at the door, and brought this letter, and ſaid it was for my maſter, when the man knocked at the door, I opened it, and he threw me down in the paſſage, and put my apron over my eyes, and covered them.

(The letter produced being a blank cover.)

Court. Was it dark at this time?—Yes.

Had you lighted candles?——Yes, then one took me into the parlour and aſked me where the money was, then I heard them whiſtle while I was down in the paſſage, and I heard ſome man come in and chain the door, and I told them if there was any, it was in the table drawer in the parlour; then they told me they muſt take me down in the kitchen, that no light might be ſeen on

on the terrace walk, and one of them ſtaid with me in the kitchen with a loaded piſtol, and two of them went up ſtairs, when they came down ſtairs, he that was in the kitchen with me went out, and they all went up ſtairs together to the ſtreet door to go away, then the other two men ran away, and the other man, Simmons, came down and ſaid to me, if I did not reſcue him till three o'clock, he was a dead man, and he aſked me if I could not let him out at the top of the houſe, and I told him there was no door, and he aſked me if I could not cover him with clothes, and he told me if I did not cover him with clothes, and ſtay with him till ten o'clock, he would blow my brains out; I went up and covered him up with two beds, then I went down and called in the people to take him: I know the priſoner Anderſon, he was with us about three weeks before; the houſe was attempted to be robbed before, and my maſter aſked me if I knew an honeſt man to ſleep in the houſe, and I recommended Anderſon as an honeſt man, having known him twelve years; the bureau was broke open, and ſome drawers up ſtairs, and the things mentioned in the indictment were taken. I ſaw no perſon but Simmons in the houſe.

Mr. Garrow, Council for Priſoners. Dame, how long have you lived in Mr. Powell's family?——Thirteen years.

Now I remind you, you are upon your oath, and that the lives of theſe people are depending, take care to conceal nothing.—I have known Anderſon twelve years, he has worked in his buſineſs.

Have not you been very intimate with him?——I have not.

How happened it that he was to dine at your father's on Sunday?—He ſaid he had not ſeen the old folks a great while, and he would dine with them.

Has the priſoner Anderſon, in the abſence of the family, ſlept in Mr. Powell's houſe?—He ſlept there the time the houſe was attempted before, he ſlept there with a pair of piſtols loaded, and a blunderbuſs; my maſter deſired me to get an honeſt man.

You ſay you did not ſee any of the perſons that committed this robbery, except Simmons?——I think two more perſons came in after the firſt, becauſe I think I heard them talk.

How ſoon after the robbery did you ſee Anderſon?—He came about nine on that evening, and ſaid he would ſit up all night for the ſafety of the houſe, and ſat there all night; at one o'clock in the morning we went round to ſee the ſtate of the premiſes.

Did you find any thing in the courſe of that ſearch?——Yes, I picked up a ſilver book in my progreſs through the houſe, in the India room.

Anderſon was there then?——Anderſon took it out of my hand, and ſaid he would have it, I ſaid he ſhould not; I can ſpeak to it: I do not know what became of it after he had it, till the runners told me, I did not know he took it out of the houſe.

SARAH PARROTT ſworn.

At what time did you go out from Mr. Powell's?——Between ſix and ſeven, and returned in about half an hour, I left every thing ſafe, I took the key with me; when I returned I could not get in, they had chained or bolted the door, I waited a great while, and rung, and when I did not get admittance, I got over the iron gate in the terrace, and I looked in the kitchen, and I ſaw no light, and I looked farther, and ſaw two men through the laundry window, I do not know the men; then I went to the next gentleman's houſe, and got aſſiſtance to take them, and he went up Buckingham-ſtreet for aſſiſtance, and I ſaw two men run out of the houſe; then we tried to get in, but could not, when the two men got out, the door was unchained, and another perſon chained it after them.

Mr. Garrow. Who ſat up with you that night?——Two coal porters and Elizabeth Davis; the ſaid Anderſon came afterwards, and he ſat up with us to protect the houſe, he ſaid he ſlept there a fortnight before, he was acquainted with Davis, I did not know by whoſe orders he ſlept there, we went round the houſe about one, and Elizabeth Davis picked up a ſilver book in the India room.

Is that the ſilver book that has ſince been found on Anderſon?——Yes, ſhe picked it up about one.

What became of it at that time?—Davis had it in her hand, and the priſoner ſaid he would have it, and ſhe ſaid he ſhould not, there was a ſtruggle between them, and we went down ſtairs, and I know no more of it, I never thought any more about it, he ſaid he would return the next morning to clear up his character.

Was this a familiar ſtruggle?—He ſtood on this ſide, and ſwitched it out of her hands.

Alderman Watſon. What do you mean by his returning to clear up his character?—He ſaid he would return, becauſe the neighbours had accuſed him of being concerned in the robbery, he ſaid that at that time, and different times in the night.

DAVID JONES ſworn.

I went to Mr. Powell's houſe on the alarm, about ſeven in the evening, the ſervant, when I was going to break the door open, came down, and ſhe had a ſmall baſket of plate, ſuch as table ſpoons, and ſome ſpoons in her hand, I aſked what ſhe would do with them, ſhe ſaid ſhe would put them behind the door; I aſked her how many thieves there were, ſhe ſaid there was but one; ſays I, do not be frightened, ſhe ſaid he was up three pair of ſtairs; ſhe ſaid ſhe had covered him up, he ſwore he would blow her brains out if ſhe did not; I went up, and the priſoner Simmons lay under a bed, I had a ſword in my hand, and ſays he, for God's ſake, ſpare my life, ſays I, do you ſurrender quietly, he ſaid he would, I ſaid, then nobody ſhall hurt you; he ſeemed very much frightened, and when he got up, I put my hand into his pocket, and found this piſtol, with theſe three ſlugs, and this crape; I tied his arms round with my handkerchief, and took him to Bow-ſtreet.

JONN ATKINS ſworn.

I apprehended three of the priſoners, Anderſon, Flint, and the woman, I ſearched Anderſon, and under his arm I found this little pocket book next his fleſh, for he ſaid he had a hole in his pocket, but he had not.

(The book depoſed to.)

Court to Davis. You have never found any of the articles of plate that were miſſing?——No, Sir.

THOMAS CAMERON ſworn.

I keep the Thiſtle and Crown in Church-court, I know Anderſon, I ſaw him on the 27th of November, about nine o'clock, I am not poſitive I ſaw him before that, there was one Walker in his company.

DAVID SINCLARE ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Cameron, I know Anderſon, I ſaw him on the Saturday or Friday night in the evening, I cannot anſwer which of the nights it was; I heard the confeſſion of Simmons taken; I did not ſee him ſign it.

Atkins. The confeſſion was read to him upon the ſecond or third examination, and he ſaid he believed it was true, I did not ſee him ſign it.

THOMAS CARPMEAL ſworn.

Was you at Bow-ſtreet when the examination of Simmons was taken?—Yes.

Did you ſee it ſigned?——I did not; here is a piſtol key found on the woman priſoner.

Court. The confeſſion cannot be read.

Priſoner Anderſon. I can give very good proof where I was at the time the robbery was committed.

Mr. Garrow. It is not neceſſary for you to call any witneſſes.

Priſoner Simmons. I am very innocently brought into this affair by another perſon, I was

I was in liquor, and very much in diſtreſs; I have not a friend in the world.

WILLIAM FLINT,
WILLIAM ANDERSON,
SARAH HOLMES, } NOT GUILTY.

MELVIN SIMMONS, GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

38. JAMES SMITH and FERDINAND DOWLAND were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 8th day of November laſt, one black mare, price 30s. the property of Hannaſh Marſhall.

HANNAH MARSHALL ſworn.

I go a duſting, and keep a cart and a mare, on the 8th of November my mare was taken out of the place where I paid for its ſtanding, in an old ruined houſe; I cannot ſay who took it out, I found it at Mr. Minſhall's, he buys them to kill for the dogs; I know her by the marks.

Was it alive when you found it again? —Yes.

How long after you miſſed it?—I miſſed it the next morning, when I wanted it to go to work, and Mr. Minſhall ſent his boy up our way to know who had loſt it, becauſe he thought it was ſome poor perſon's that could not afford to loſe, and I went down there and ſaw it.

JAMES MARSHALL ſworn.

I am a duſtman, I tied up my mother's mare over night, and I miſſed it in the morning; I went to Mr. Minſhall's when he ſent for us, and I found my mother's mare there; I do not know who took her away.

Priſoner. Was the mare ſtole before we were in trouble; it has been found in the ſtreet ſince.

Court. When was the mare found again? —It was found one night ſince, a little boy came and ſaid ſhe was in the ſtreet.

——— MINSHALL ſworn.

I live in Bedford-ſtreet, Liquor-pond-ſtreet, I boil horſes for the dogs; on Monday night the 8th of November, about twenty minutes or half an hour after eleven, the two priſoners brought this mare to my gate, they aſked me a guinea for it, Smith was upon the back of it, and the other ſtood at the gate, and I aſked them whoſe it was, and they ſaid it was their own property, that they bought it and gave two guineas and a half for it, and they were partners in a duſt cart, and had it three weeks; I looked at it, and ſaw it was blind, and I aſked them what made them bring it at that that time of night to ſell, they ſaid it fell down under a load of duſt, and they could not get it up again; I looked at it and found it was very clean, as if it had juſt come out of the ſtable; I aſked them a good many more queſtions, and at laſt I aſked them whether it was a horſe or a mare, and they ſaid it was a horſe, I looked and found it was a mare, and I told them I ſuſpected them, and then they uſed a many bad expreſſions, and Smith ſaid I wanted to ſwindle them out of it; Smith went out under pretence to make water, and he ran up a paſſage and I ſtopped them, I ſent our boy round St. Giles's, and I went round Paddington way, and our boy heard that it belonged to Mrs. Marſhall.

Priſoner Smith. This man is very apt to take people's lives away for the ſake of the reward, he has been confined himſelf for the ſame affair three years, and has taken us up thinking to make the ſame of us.

Court to Minſhall. Have you been confined for any thing?——Once.

For what?——For carrying ſome ſilk in a cart, two men hired me to carry it, and it was ſtolen, I was tried here for it, ſix or ſeven years ago, I was convicted and ſentenced to Newgate for three years, and the horſe and cart taken away.

Have you ever given evidence againſt any horſe ſtealers?——Yes, in the ſeſſions before laſt, one that was ſtolen from Lewiſham, and another a year and a half or two years ago.

What

What did you get in that laſt conviction?——Nothing at all, there is a ticket the proſecutor would not trouble himſelf about it.

What do you expect to get by this?—Nothing at all as I know on, I have attended here ever ſince Tueſday week, and at Hicks's-hall, and loſt my time.

What are the horſes that you boil up?——Dead horſes, and poor ones, that are paſt their labour.

You do not always wait till they die?—Sometimes we buy them alive in Smithfield, we deal with collar makers, and give them ſo much each for the meat and they have the hide back again for their own uſe.

JOHN DENMORE ſworn.

I am conſtable of Clerkenwell, about a quarter before twelve, on the 8th of November, I was ſent for to Minſhall's, he had ſtopped two people for ſtealing a horſe, I went in at the gate, where they where, and the horſe ſtood cloſe by and the two priſoners were in the room, one on the right ſide, I aſked them whoſe horſe it was, Dowland ſaid it is our's; I ſaid what are you partners, they ſaid yes; then the other made anſwer, and ſaid it is our horſe; I aſked them how long they had had it, they ſaid about three weeks, and gave two guineas and a half for it, as it was to run in a duſt cart, and it was too weak for their buſineſs; I put one into New Priſon and the other into Bridewell, when they were examined apart before Juſtice Blackborough, Smith ſaid he found it the over night, at St. Giles's, and the other ſaid it fell down in their cart, in Ironmonger Row, Old-ſtreet, this was the 8th of Novenber, at night, it was the 9th when they were examined before Mr. Juſtice Blackborough.

What day of the week was it?——I cannot recollect.

Court to James Marſhall. What day of the month was it on, the laſt night you ſaw the mare?—On the 8th of November.

What time of night did you tie it up?—Half after nine.

PRISONER SMITH's DEFENCE.

This priſoner and I worked together, and we had been to put on two ſacks of cinders for Mr. Ireland, we went and got our ſuppers, and coming home about ten, we ſaw this mare the corner of Holborn, in St. Giles's, upon the pavement, and two or three people round it, they ſaid it was a pity but ſomebody would take it to the Green-yard, as it was blind; accordingly we took it down Whitecroſs-ſtreet, and going along we met a man, and told him we had found a ſtrayed mare, and he ſaid here is a man that deals in ſtray horſes, take it to him, accordingly he went to this man's houſe and told him, he ſaid it belonged to one Stephen Rhodes, we ſaid we did not know whether it was a horſe or a mare; we never offered it for ſale, or aſked him a farthing for it.

PRISONER DOWLAND's DEFENCE.

After we got our ſuppers, coming home, we ſaw this horſe in Holborn, and the people ſaid the coaches would run againſt it, and ſomebody ſhould take it to the Green-yard, and we took it down to this man and he ſtopped it upon us; he took us into cuſtody.

Priſoner Smith. My maſters Richard Edwards and Thomas Smith are here, we ſerve them with aſhes.

JAMES SMITH, FERD. DOWLAND, } GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before LORD LOUGHBOROUGH.

---

39. EDWARD JOHNSON, and SAMUEL WARNER, were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 28th of November, one ſilver ſoup ſpoon, value 20s. two ſilver table ſpoons, value 15s. four ſilver tea ſpoons, value 4s. one ſilver pepper caſtor, value 5s. one large damaſk table cloth, value 10s. one other table cloth, value 10s. ſix china plates, value 3s. and eighty-four four watch movements, value 10l. the property of James Noakes, in his dwelling houſe.

EDWARD TITCOMB ſworn.

I was thirteen laſt Valentine's Day, I am apprentice to Mr. Noakes, at No. 34, Charter-houſe-ſquare, he is a watch movement maker; on the 28th of November, on Sunday, my maſter went to church, and nobody was left in the houſe but me, and the priſoner Warner came and rung at the Bell, at better than half after ten; then I came to the door, and he aſked me if Mr. Noakes was at home, I told him no, he aſked if any body was at home that he could ſpeak to; ſays he, is nobody at home but you? I ſaid no; then he went out, and came back again; ſays he, I will leave the meſſage with you; the parlour door was locked, I could not go in there, ſo I went up ſtairs, and he wrote on a paper, and he chucked it to me, there ſays he, can you read that, yes, ſays I, and he put his apron over my eyes, and he ſaid, Charles come up; with that I tried to get the apron from over my face, and I juſt ſaw the glimpſe of his coat, but I did not ſee him to know who he was; then they put me into the cellar, and told me if I ſpoke a word, ſo that any body could hear me, they would cut my throat for me, and while they were committing the robbery, Warner came down and aſked me where my maſter was, I told him he was gone into Biſhopſgate-ſtreet, and would be back in a quarter of an hour; I did not ſay he was gone to church; they took ſome table ſpoons and tea ſpoons, and a ſilver pepper box, and ſix china plates, and three table cloths, and ſeven dozen movements, they were in the ſhop up ſtairs, the others were in the kitchen.

Are you ſure it was Warner?——Yes, I knew by his talk it was him; I am ſure he was the perſon that came in; I know the coat of the other priſoner very well, but I do not know his face.

Mr. Knowles, Priſoner's Council. Had you ever ſeen this lad, whom you ſuppoſe to be Warner, before?——No.

You knew nothing of him?——No, he came and opened the yard door, and aſked me if I knew him, I ſaid no; he aſked me if I knew the other, I ſaid no, and he ſaid, you can get up this way; and he told me, if I told any body he would cut my throat when he ſaw me; I got out as ſoon as I could, and went and called James Ariel.

JAMES ARIEL ſworn.

About eleven o'clock, the little boy came to my lodgings, which were in Alderſgate-ſtreet, and ſaid there were thieves in the houſe; I ran after him, and he ſhut the ſtreet door after him, and I got in at one of the parlour windows and looked round, and the dining room had been forced, and a piece had been cut out, the back ſhop was broke open, becauſe that was always locked, I had locked it myſelf, that door was ſtove open, the door had been forced, and the ſtaple fallen out; by this time the boy returned with the conſtable; I aſked him if he knew any thing of that door being open, he ſaid no; the people went, and I ſtaid with the boy till Mr. Noakes came in; I ran up ſtairs into the ſhop, and I miſſed a deal box, and looking on the board, I ſaw ſome articles which I knew; I have a very perfect knowledge of all the movements; I immediately wrote them down on a piece of paper, and gave them to Mr. Noakes: I went the Wedneſday morning to Warner's lodgings with the conſtable, and there was the very deal box found; it is my maſter's property, and which I left in the ſhop, locked up, on Saturday night.

Did you hear either of the priſoners ſay any thing when they were taken up?——Yes.

Were any promiſes made to them?—Not as I know of; Warner was examined by himſelf firſt.

Mr. Knowles. I believe Warner aſked the Juſtice if his evidence would clear him?—The Juſtice ſaid he could make no promiſes; he ſaid he would give very ſatisfactory anſwers to every queſtion he aſked, and the Juſtice aſked him about the things, where they were ſold, he told immediately, that they were ſold to one Levy, a Jew, and the movements for one guinea and a half, he had received a guinea, and was to go for the reſt: I was at the firſt examination of Johnſon, but he denied every thing.

Do you know the value of theſe movements?——They were valued at twenty pounds fourteen ſhillings.

Court. What led to any ſuſpicion againſt Warner?——Johnſon was taken up on the Tueſday evening, and Warner was well known as a companion of Johnſon's.

Nothing was found but the deal box?—No.

Mr. Knowles. You was at your maſter's houſe on Saturday night?——Yes, and I locked up the room, and laid the key on a table in the paſſage.

Whether your maſter opened the door or not, between the Saturday and the Sunday, and removed thoſe movements, you cannot tell?——No.

JAMES NOAKES ſworn.

I am maſter to the two laſt witneſſes; about half after ten, my wife and me went out, I took the key.

Was all ſafe when you went out?——I do not know, I did not go up ſtairs; nobody could go in, I had the key in my own room; I immediately ran up ſtairs, and ſaw the box that we uſed to keep ſome unfiniſhed work in, was taken away, and the movements gone; the value of them was twenty pounds fourteen ſhillings. The priſoner Johnſon had been with me upwards of three years, he was with me an errand boy before I bound him; I never ſaw the other boy: I ſaw the box at Warner's lodgings, and owned it immediately. The priſoner Johnſon, upon being firſt charged, boldly denied it, and again he denied it before the Magiſtrate; at laſt, in conſequence of what Warner had ſaid, that he had ſold the coffee pot, he then ſays, now you know all, I may as well tell you.

Mr. Knowles. Was this confeſſion taken down in writing?——I cannot ſay.

Had you any converſation with Warner, before this confeſſion?—No, I never ſpoke a word to him.

Priſoner Warner. I am not guilty of the fact, they told me I ſhould be ſure of being cleared, if I ſpoke the truth; I ſaid that he and I did this robbery.

Proſecutor. Mr. Poole ſaid, lad, I would have you confeſs the whole before the Juſtice, and you will find mercy in the Court.

Court to Jury. I ſhall ſum up the caſe independent of the confeſſion.

PRISONER JOHNSON'S DEFENCE.

I am quite innocent, I never was nigh the place, I had not been that way before for three weeks; when I was brought before Juſtice Blackborough, they perſuaded me to own it, ſays they, if you know any thing, ſpeak; ſays, I I am quite innocent of the robbery, I never was nigh the place.

The priſoner Warner called one more witneſs, who gave him a good character.

Priſoner Johnſon. My friends are not come.

EDWARD JOHNSON, NOT GUILTY.
SAMUEL WARNER, GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Lord LOUGHBOROUGH.

---

40. The ſaid EDWARD JOHNSON and SAMUEL WARNER were again indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 15th of November laſt, one ſilver coffee pot, value 5l. two ſilver table ſpoons, value 5s. the property of James Noakes in his dwelling houſe.

Mr. Silveſter opened the indictment.

JAMES ARIEL ſworn.

On Monday the 15th of November, the priſoner Warner came to our houſe, either to have a ſcrew wheel changed, or to aſk for one, he ſaid, it was for one of Mr. Jackſon's ſon's watches; he came in with his hat in his hand, I took particular notice of him, as he was dreſſed very genteel, he had on a blue coat, with yellow buttons; I aſked him the number of teeth, I remember what ſort of wheel I gave him, and he went away: the coffee-pot was not miſſed till the Saturday following, the ſpoons were miſſed before.

JAMES NOAKES ſworn.

We generally have coffee on Sunday morning for breakfaſt, but the coffee-pot was put in a particular part of the cloſet, where any body might go twenty times and not ſee it; we did not know what day it was gone, but by the confeſſion of one of the priſoners; Johnſon ſaid, the coffee-pot was knocked to pieces; he ſaid, I dare ſay the plate is all knocked to pieces, for I ſaw the coffee-pot was all knocked to pieces, but I can get ſome of the movements.

Priſoner Johnſon. Why ſhould he tell ſuch a falſity.

Proſecutor. What I ſaid is truth; he ſaid, he had ſold it, it weighed ſixteen ounces at four ſhillings an ounce; and he ſaid, he would knock it to pieces before his face.

—— POOLE ſworn.

I was preſent when the priſoner Johnſon ſaid, before the magiſtrate, that he ſaw the coffee-pot knocked to pieces, it weighed ſixteen ounces, at four ſhillings an ounce, Warner and he were both together with the plate; Mr. Levy was taken into cuſtody, we found nothing at Levy's.

—— PALMER ſworn.

Did you hear Johnſon ſay any thing about this matter?——I was ſent for by the Magiſtrate, and he deſired me to go to the perſon, and he granted a ſearch warrant, I heard Johnſon ſay nothing about it.

Priſoner Johnſon. I never had the coffee-pot, nor ever ſaid theſe words that were repeated.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, GUILTY Death.
EDWARD WARNER, NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Lord LOUGHBOROUGH.

Proſecutor. My Lord, I wiſh to recommend Warner to mercy, a relation of his will undertake to ſend him abroad.

---

41. JOHN EVANS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 25th day of Auguſt laſt, two printed bound books, value 36s. two other books, value 45s. one other book, value 30s. two other books, value 36s. one other book, value 11s. one other book, value 4s. 6d. two other books, value 18s. three other books, value 23s. ſeven other books, value 45s. ſix other books, value 26s. two other books, value 6s. 6d. two other books, value 16s. one other book, value 2s. five other books, value 12s. ſix other books, value 18s. and ſix other books, value 32s. the property of Thomas Pitt, Eſq; in his dwelling houſe.

Mr. Manley opened the indictment, and Mr. Fielding the Caſe.

THOMAS PITT, Eſq; ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Manley.

I live in Paper-buildings, I took chambers there in 1782, I continued to live there before I went abroad, rather more than a twelvemonth.

What became of your chambers then?—I let them ready furniſhed to Mr. Gaſcoigne, my books were in the chambers, and locked up in caſes; Mr. Gaſcoigne was not to have acceſs to the books, I let the chambers for a twelvemonth.

With whom did you leave the keys of the book-caſe?—With the laundreſs; Mr. Gaſcoigne continued rather more than a year, when he quitted them, the chambers were delivered up to me.

ELIZABETH

ELIZABETH FENNER ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Fielding.

I am Mr. Pitt's ſervant's wife, I was left laundreſs of theſe chambers, Mr. Gaſcoigne gave up poſſeſſion of theſe chambers in July, he delivered up the key to me for Mr. Gaſcoigne's ſervant.

At the time theſe keys were delivered to you in what condition were the books in the book caſes?—Perfectly ſafe, and the caſes locked, I ſaw the books there.

Was the priſoner ſervant to Mr. Gaſcoigne?—Yes.

How many keys were there to theſe chambers?—Three, I went out of town to Oxford, in July the 23d or 24th, I took one key with me, the other I left at Mr. Pitt's uncle's, in Weſtminſter, and the other with Mr. Roſe's ſervant.

When you left the chambers, and were ſetting out for Oxford, were the books perfectly ſafe?——Yes, the priſoner went to Oxford with me that very day, he ſtayed till the 11th of Auguſt, it was of a Wedneſday.

How long was he abſent before?—He was invited down by my friends, on account of his civility to me, my father who is a bookſeller in Oxford, had got the priſoner to do ſome buſineſs for him in town, which buſineſs he did very punctually; I ſaw him the following Wedneſday or Thurſday, I think he ſtayed till Saturday night, he came the following Thurſday morning he never left Oxford till I came to town, when I came to town, it was the 6th of September; I had a friend came to meet me at the coach, I came to the chambers immediately, as it was my home.

Deſcribe the manner in which you found theſe chambers?—On my arrival in town, I was met by a friend as I expected, and we had a coach and came to the chambers, I found the outer door open, which alarmed me very much; I went into my room, and found my cabinet broke open, and what was in it was thrown out; I alſo found a deſk of my huſband's broke open, I went into Mr. Pitt's dining room, and there I found every book caſe broke open, I think there are ſixteen in the whole, but only fourteen are locked, two are left open for Mr. Gaſcoigne, ſome of the books were taken out of one caſe and ſome out of another, they were not all taken; I found Mr. Pitt's deſk alſo broke open, one of the windows was open, and a long cord hanging out at that window, the window looks into the Temple-garden, I did not look out to ſee the length of it.

Was the priſoner in company with you you at the time?——Yes, and the watchman whom I called up as it was dark.

Were theſe book caſes in the ſame condition when you went out of town to Oxford, as they were when Mr Pitt left it?——Yes, I never miſſed a book that I know of, I cannot ſay I know all the books, but I never miſſed any; in conſequence of this I applied to Mr. Pitt's uncle.

Court. Who had the keys of the book caſes?—I had them, I locked them up in the deſk when I went out of town, I had opened them ſeveral times myſelf to have a book to read, I always took care to lock them again perfectly ſafe; I firſt informed Mr. Pitt's uncle, I then applied to Jackſon the ſmith, the next day I ſent for him to repair ſome locks, I had ſome converſation with him.

What became of the priſoner after this evening?——I ſaw him ſeveral times, I got the watchman to ſit up that night, and the priſoner being a perſon that I thought I could rely on, I got him to ſit up with the watchman, I went to ſleep at a friend's.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. Had the priſoner been a ſervant of Mr. Gaſcoigne's during the whole time he had theſe chambers?——No, Sir, he came in January, and continued till July, Mr. Gaſcoigne never had a regular ſervant, he hired them by the week, he never had a ſervant only in term time; he kept him from January to July, he had only one more ſervant beſides the priſoner.

Priſoner. Two I fancy Mrs. Fenner.

Mr.

Mr. Gaſcoigne hired the priſoner by the week, you during the whole time was the laundreſs?—I was.

Was it underſtood by Mr. Gaſcoigne, that you inhabited the chambers of a night?—No, I had always a lodging, I have ſlept frequently there when Mr. Gaſcoigne was out of town; I have had friends viſiting me from the country.

This occurred frequently, that you had viſitors from the country at the chambers?—Yes, when I liked.

You preferred to have your viſitors when Mr. Gaſcoigne was out?——It did ſo happen.

When he was out was his ſervant generally with him?——Not always.

How many of theſe revels may you have had?——Revels, Sir! I do not underſtand you, I do not know.

They were ſo frequent, you cannot recollect?—Not at all frequent, I was my own miſtreſs.

Did it ſuit your convenience now and then to have your viſitors ſleep in chambers?——It ſo far ſuited, when Mr. Gaſcoigne was out I have had them ſleep there.

Your keys of the book caſe were depoſited in your deſk?—Yes, that deſk was always locked; I do not know that I have left it open.

You occaſionally reſorted to Mr. Pitt's books yourſelf, did you lend them to others?——No, Sir, not to my knowledge, I do not know that I let any one perſon have a book.

Are you ſo certain, that upon your oath you can ſay, you never did?——I cannot ſay upon my oath, I may have lent them for a quarter of an hour.

There were three keys to theſe chambers, for what purpoſe was either of them left with Mr. Sadler?——I left them for ſafety, I expected nothing to happen but fire.

Was there no other reaſon for depoſiting the key with Mr. Sadler, but ſecurity?——Only his living oppoſite to the chambers.

Had you any inventory of the books——No.

When Mr. Pitt went abroad, were the books delivered to you with any account of what they were, or only the keys?——Only the keys.

What was the purpoſe of this young man's viſit to Oxford?—Sir, when I had theſe friends from the country before, his genteel behaviour induced ſome of my friends to aſk him down to the races; he was not at my father's houſe, but he was at liberty to come when he liked, his good behaviour induced my father and brother to look upon him as a friend, my father's name is Richards; I found the chambers doors open, I thought they had been broke open, and ſomebody had concealed themſelves.

Was there any thing curious in the locks of the book caſes?—No, not that I know of, common locks.

Had Mr. Sadler any particular directions to look at the chambers?—Not particularly, he had directions to Mr. Pitt.

Mr. Manley. At the time you ſlept in the chambers, they were perſons of you own ſex that ſlept there with you?——Yes.

Mr. Garrow. I do not mean to impute any thing impure to this lady; I believe, while you was at Oxford, you and the priſoner had ſome difference?——I do not know that we had any particular words.

I believe it was not unfrequent for you to have words?—Not that I know of, many friends fall out, and the more intimate they are, the more apt they are to fall out.

Only thoſe little ſquables that ariſe in common life; do you recollect now at the Lamb inn, a little miſunderſtanding there?——I remember being there by the priſoner's ſending for me, he came to Oxford privately.

Why he came in the ſtage coach, that was pretty public; you had ſome words?—I do not know that we had.

You will not ſay that you had not.

Priſoner. I believe in the latter end of July I went out of Oxford with you?——You did.

I returned again the 11th of Auguſt?—You did.

Was not your propoſals to go to Margate, and our intentions to go to Margate?—I know nothing of your intentions.

On the 11th of Auguſt I arrived in town, on the Monday following I received a letter from you by the Oxford coach, ſignifying you had wrote a letter to me from Oxford, and directed to me at chambers, and was ſurpriſed you had no anſwer, therefore you had ſent that letter by the ſtage?——I ſent a letter, but not by the ſtage as you ſay, I ſent a letter by the poſt the next day after you ſet off, I do not recollect ſending another by the ſtage, but I believe I did.

Priſoner. On the 18th of Auguſt, which was a week I returned to Oxford, by means of the letter I received from you?—I will be upon my oath, I did not deſire him to return to Oxford.

You deſired me to ſend a letter to you between ſome leather, that I was to ſend you for ſome ſhoes, that your friends might not ſee it?——I do not recollect it, they were ſuch indifferent things, that I cannot recollect it.

Court. Is that the reaſon you do not recollect it, that it is ſo indifferent a thing?——I told him if he ſent the letters to my father, I would receive them and anſwer them, but it was not my wiſh.

Mr. Garrow. Did you give him any particular directions, with regard to the leather?——I did not, I do not know that I did.

Will you ſwear you did not?—I cannot recollect, I cannot ſwear.

Court. Did the priſoner ſend any leather down to you to make ſhoes?—Yes.

Was there any note in that?——There was a little note in it.

Priſoner. I ſent a letter to her between the leather, and I ſent to her for ſome ſhoes intimating to her that I was then at the Croſs-inn at Oxford.

Did you or not, immediately on receiving the letter, come to the Croſs-inn at Oxford?—By your deſire I did.

You then ſaid, I am greatly afraid my friends will ſee you?——No, upon my oath.

On the Saturday you and I went to the Lamb at Oxford?——I ſaw him there, we went there.

On the Saturday I reproached you with your conduct towards me, and I adviſed you to come to town?——He did not that I know of, we had words.

Mr. Garrow. The queſtion is, whether at that place he did not reproach you with ſome advice?—As to his advice I looked upon it as nothing, I do not know that he did then, I did not come to town for a fortnight after, had he adviſed me I ſhould not have taken it.

When was that?——It was on Saturday the 21ſt.

For what purpoſe did he adviſe you to come to town?—For a purpoſe I did not know, he ſtated many frivolous things.

State ſome of thoſe frivolous things?—We had words, and he upbraided me with ſomething of my conduct, I was amongſt my friends.

What did he ſay were the reaſons why you ought to come to town?——I do not know any other reaſon than being at Oxford at the time I was, he thought the inhabitants and my friends would take notice of it.

Court. He adviſed you to go, that you might be together more privately?—I did not follow his advice at all.

I obſerved an expreſſion that dropped from yourſelf a few minutes ago, which I took notice of at the time, it is more obſervable now, you ſaid he came to Oxford privately?—Nobody knew of his being there, that is what I call privately.

Priſoner. At this time I fancy I told you my reaſons why I came privately, it was through your letter you wrote to me, that I would not wiſh to come publicly, therefore I told you to come to town, if you could not

not behave with more prudence, that it might be kept a ſecret?—Upon my oath I had done nothing in town or in country improper, you had the impudence to introduce yourſelf there.

Mr. Garrow. You told us he was invited by your friends, did not he upon the 21ſt of Auguſt explain to you his reaſon for coming to Oxford privately was this, that as your behaviour was ſuch, you ſhould not be ſeen together?—It might be his vanity perhaps.

But was that the reaſon he aſſigned?—I believe it was.

But did he ſay to you that your conduct during the laſt three weeks had made you the ſubject of obſervation together, and that therefore it was to go on, you had better come to town?—No, Sir, I mean to ſay that poſitively.

He did not aſſign it as the reaſon that it was in obedience to your directions, to ſend his letter between the leather?——To be ſure he did wiſh me to go from Oxford.

And for thoſe reaſons?—I do not know that they were.

Did not he ſtate the reaſons?——I do not know that he did.

Priſoner. To convince the Court that what I have ſaid is truth, at that time when we were at the Lamb together, you ſaid you would not come to town?—I ſaid I would come to town when it ſuited my own convenience.

Did you or did you not ſay the ſame evening after that, that you would go to town, for home to your friends you would never go more?—No, indeed I did not.

After that, did I or did I not call for pen, ink and paper, and write a note to your brother, and deliver you into his hands?—I do not remember ſuch a circumſtance.

Mr. Garrow. Did ſuch a thing paſs?——I do not know that it did, I remember well I ſaid, there is my brother paſſed the window, I ſaid there is my brother gone by, ſhall I call him in, no ſays he, I do not want him to know I am here.

Did he or did he not in fact ſay, he would have ſome converſation?——He did not.

Did he write a note to your brother? He did not.

Did not he call for pen and ink to do it?——I cannot ſwear that he did not.

Did you inform your friends he was at Oxford at that time?—No Sir, I did not.

Did you drink tea with him at the inn?——I believe I did drink one cup of tea with him.

Priſoner. When I called for pen, ink and paper, and wrote a note to your brother, and was determined to ſend to him, did you or not get off your chair, fall down upon your knees immediately and ſay, my dear Evans do not?——I will be upon my oath Sir, it is not true.

Did you ſay any thing of that ſort?——No.

Mr. Garrow. Was that the way you did ſometimes call the priſoner?—No Sir, it was not, I never was heard by any body to call him ſo.

Priſoner. Did I not take you from your knees, ſaying that if you would wiſh to ſave yourſelf from being expoſed, you muſt behave with more prudence?——It is falſe, and you know it is.

Well, here is further than that ſtill, after that did not you expreſs yourſelf thus; my dear Evans, I never ſpent ſo agreeable a time in my life, not even with Fenner, and of the two I do not know which I love beſt; I ſooner would live with you Mr. Evans?——It is falſe, as there is a God in Heaven, I never made uſe of ſuch expreſſions, I am not that kind of woman, nor never was.

Court to Priſoner. Have you preſerved any of theſe letters?——No, we came to town the 6th of September laſt; we were in town about ten days or a fortnight, and her brother's wife in Oxford hearing ſomething of our behaviour in Oxford together, which was rather ſingular, ſhe immediately came up to town on that occaſion; then they knowing I had ſome letters I had received during the times I came to town, they ſaid they would not believe that there was any intimacy between us, nothing ſhould prove it but her hand writing; I immediately produced five or ſix letters to her ſiſter in law, which ſhe ſaid was her hand writing, I had them in my pocket, and ſhe coaxed me to burn them, and ſaid, my dear Evans do burn theſe letters; I burnt them before her face.

letters

Court. Is this true, that you ſolicited him to burn theſe letters in your preſence? ——No Sir, I never uttered a word about them, he burnt two letters in my preſence, which is all I wrote, but I never aſked him.

WILLIAM JACKSON ſworn.

I firſt ſaw the priſoner the latter end of May, or beginning of June; he applied to me, to know if I could make him a key to a chamber door, the key was made at my ſhop by one of my men.

Did he bring a lock with him?——He brought the lock to our ſhop, he aſked me if I could make him a key, I told him yes, if I had the lock or the key; he ſaid it was for chambers, No. 4, Pump-court, the key was left in my ſhop, I did not receive it.

When did he come again to your ſhop? ——About ſix weeks afterwards, I was in the ſhop, the priſoner came and aſked me if that key was made, he ſaid he had been in the country; he took the key, and aſked me if it would fit, I ſaid I would go with him and try it; ſays he I am in a hurry, I will try it, and he came back with ſome of the bits of the key broke; ſays he can you mend it, ſays I, I cannot, I muſt have the lock, for ſome of the bits of the key are in: I offered to go with him to take off the lock, he ſaid he could take it off himſelf; he brought the lock, and the bits of the key in the inſide were taken out, and the ſame key was mended and made to fit.

Did you offer to go back with him to put it on?——I cannot recollect, but as he had taken it off himſelf, I let him put it on himſelf.

Did you in fact offer to go back with him?——I cannot recollect.

Are you ſure this is the man?—Yes.

Did you ſee theſe chambers after they were broke open?——Yes, Sir, it might be ſome weeks afterwards, I went there to repair ſome locks, I took off the lock off the great door, it is the ſame lock the priſoner brought to me.

After this tranſaction, did you ſee the priſoner at any time?——Frequently.

Did he ever come to your ſhop?—Yes.

Did you ſee him after, when Mr. Pitt's chambers were broke open?——Yes, the priſoner came to me, and deſired I would be favourable to him at the examination, for he was ſuſpected of being the perſon that had the key made in my ſhop; he told me the family were ſo connected, it would be the ruin of himſelf and his character, and the ruin of the young woman and her family; I told him it was a ſerious affair, I did not like to do it; when they firſt came to me to look at him, I ſaid he was the man.

Did Mrs. Fenner ſend for you?—Yes, or her ſiſter.

What paſſed between you and the priſoner afterwards?——There was no great deal paſſed, he deſired me to be favourable to him on the key which he had made, he acknowledged then he had that key made; he ſaid it would be a material thing, it would injure him, he ſent for me once or twice to ſpeak to me, he ſent for me to the Bible, it was ſtill to want me to be favourable to him on the ſame occaſion.

What was the particular reaſon that he gave for it?—Concerning his connection with the laundreſs, it would ruin her family, and with ſome other woman, and it would ruin her character; Mr. Manley examined us all round, and the priſoner denied having the key made for theſe chambers, for any thing of the ſort.

Did he deny having the key made?—— Yes.

Court. What was the ſubject of that enquiry at the time he denied the key being made?—He was charged with having the key made for Mr. Pitt's chambers; Mr. Pitt's chambers had been robbed, and they wanted to find out the perſon that robbed him; he was accuſed of having this key made, but for what purpoſe I cannot tell.

Was

Was he charged with having this key made to rob the chambers?——I do not recollect any charge of that ſort being given, but he denied any thing of that ſort.

Mr. Garrow. Before this examination by Mr. Manley, had the priſoner been accuſed of the robbery?—He was ſuſpected.

And had been accuſed of it?——Not that I know.

Why was not Mr. Manley's enquiry into the cauſe of the robbery?—No doubt.

It was ſo underſtood by you and all that were preſent?——Certainly.

Then the priſoner as well as the reſt knew that was the ſubject of the examination; then I take it his anſwer was juſt as you have ſtated, that he had not had the key made for any thing of that ſort?——Mr. Manley accuſed him of having the key made, which he denied.

In what words?—Mr. Manley, when he came into the room ſaid, Evans, you are charged with having a key made to theſe chambers.

What words did the priſoner uſe?——I cannot recollect the words that he ſaid, he had not had the key made.

He ſaid I never had a key made to theſe chambers?——It might be ſo or it might not, what I put in of that ſort had no meaning.

Did not you take his anſwer to be, that he never had the key made for the purpoſe of robbing the chambers?—Yes.

You ſaid he deſired you to be favourable, what did he ſay?

Court. Tell us what he ſaid, not what you thought?

Mr. Garrow. What did the priſoner ſay to you, that induced you to ſuppoſe he wanted you to favour him?——Says he, Mr. Jackſon, this is an unfortunate affair, we are going to be examined this day, and I hope that you ill be favourable to me; when we came before Mr. Manley and Mr. Pitt——

What did he ſay more?——This is an unfortunate affair, I having a connection with this laundreſs, and ſhe being the ſervant of Mr. Pitt, if ſhe is found out, it will be the total ruin of her and the family, and it will be the ruin of my own character; he mentioned to me, that he had a connection with another woman, and that he had this key made for the purpoſe of introducing that other woman.

Mr. Garrow. You are the Temple ſmith?——Yes.

You are more frequently employed to make locks for the Temple than any body elſe?——Yes.

Does this frequently happen, that our ſervants loſing their keys, conceal it from us, and get new keys from the Temple ſmith?——They may do ſo, I do not know.

Have not you reaſon to know it, have not you known a number of inſtances of ſervants and laundreſſes coming for keys?—Ceretinly, I have received orders from laundreſſes to have keys made, it always had the approbation of the maſter.

Court. Did you always think it neceſſary to go and aſk the maſter?—By no means, I always was paid by the maſter.

Was you never paid ready money for thoſe keys that have been made?——Many a time.

Then what do you mean; when it has happened that you had an account with the maſter, it has been put in the account, but in a multitude of inſtances they have been paid for by the laundreſſes?——I am paid by the maſter.

Has it not happened to you to know, that it has been the neglect of the ſervant?——Never in my life, that never happened to me in my knowledge.

Mr. Garrow. I am afraid that, beſides the bad practice of multiplying the keys of our chambers, there is another bad practice, which is, that ſervants very often introduce ladies into the chambers?——I do not know.

When you took in the bill to Mrs. Fenner to be paid, what did ſhe ſay to you reſpecting this key that had been made by the the order of the priſoner?——Nothing that I know of particularly, ſhe ſaid ſhe had not the money then about her.

Priſoner. Had you any converſation with Mrs. Fenner about this key?——We had ſome converſation, ſhe aſked me whether I thought he was guilty or not, but I thought he was guilty.

What did Mrs. Fenner ſay to you about this key?——I cannot ſay.

Had you any converſation with her about this key?—Yes, ſhe aſked me if I did make the key, I told her, yes, I did make it.

Priſoner. Did ſhe not tell you that ſhe was exceedingly ſorry that ſhe had mentioned any ſuch thing, that ſhe was exceedingly ſorry that ſhe had aſked you any queſtions about a key being made at all?—Yes, I believe ſhe did.

Court to Mrs. Fenner. You ſay there were three keys belonging to theſe chambers?—Yes, they were all left in my poſſeſſion when Mr. Pitt went abroad; during the time Mr. Gaſcoign had the chambers, Mr. Gaſcoign had one, I had another, and his ſervant had the third.

Were there two or more returned to you?——Two, and my own made the third.

Court. Had you ever any converſation with Jackſon, the lock-ſmith, about the key he was ſuppoſed to have made for the priſoner?——When I ſent for Jackſon, I aſked him if he had ever made a key for that door, he ſaid he could not tell, he believed he had, he would go home and ſee; he took the key and went home, and returned with the key, and ſaid there had been ſuch a key made at his ſhop; he did not give me a poſitive anſwer of the perſon, but by the deſcription, I concluded it to be the priſoner.

What did you ſay to Jackſon after that about it?——He ſaid if they had made a key, his man knew about it, and he had repaired the lock at the ſame time, I deſired him to take off the lock, which he did; when he returned, he ſaid the man would ſwear it was the lock he made the key to; Mr. Jackſon was ſent to, the time the priſoner was in the chambers, I took him and aſked him if that was the man, he ſaid he could not be ſure, and he wiſhed me to go into my room, that he might have a full view of him, and then he ſaid he could not be ſure that was the man.

Did you ever ſay you was glad this diſcovery had been made?—I ſaid ſo far as this, as Jackſon was not ſure that was the man, and as I had informed Mr. Pitt of it, I was ſorry I had made ſuch a diſcovery.

Priſoner. Whether Mr. Gaſcoign was not to leave the chambers on the 23d of June, and ſhe expected I was to leave the chambers at the ſame time?——His time was up then, I expected it, as the twelvemonth was up.

Whether in the middle of May we did not often have a few words at the chambers?——We have had frivolous words.

Court to Jackſon. You told me poſitively, that you took off the lock and took it home?——I was quite ſure, as well as my ſervants.

Are you equally ſure that the priſoner is the man you made the key for?——I am ſure he is the man I made the key for, and gave it to.

What has made you more ſure he is the man now, than when he was ſhewn you at chambers?——I knew he was the man, but when the priſoner came and deſired me to ſpeak favourably of him, I told Mr. Manly I believed he was the man, but I would not chuſe to ſwear to him; I was always ſure of the man after he came to me, and reaſoned with me, which confirmed my ſuſpicions.

RICHARD WATKINS ſworn.

How old are you?—Seventeen, I am a ſmith, apprentice to Mr. Jackſon.

Look at the priſoner; did you ever ſee him before?——Yes, he came to our ſhop, to bring a key, to have another key made by it.

Had he a key made?—Yes.

Are you ſure that is the man?——Yes; there was a lock brought.

Mr. Garrow. How many gentlemen's ſervants do you think have ordered keys for chambers chambers in the Temple in the courſe of the laſt twelvemonth?——I cannot tell.

A great many?——Yes.

Do you think you could ſwear to them all?—No, nor half of them.

Have you any doubt of the man at the bar that he was the man?——No.

JOSEPH DENNIS ſworn.

I am a bookſeller, No. 2, Bridge-ſtreet, Black-friars, I know the priſoner by buying of him ſome books that are ſignified in the indictment, in Auguſt laſt the time the priſoner came to me, I will not take upon myſelf to ſpecify; he came in the habit, and dreſs, and appearance of a gentleman; he ſaid, he had part of his library to diſpoſe of, I deſired to know where I could ſee the books, and he deſired me to come to his chambers, No. 2, Fig-tree-court, in the Temple, I went according to his order, and ſaw the books, it was on a Saturday, which I believe you will find to be the 14th of Auguſt; I went with my man and looked at the firſt parcel, I paid him for them four guineas and a half; he had a fire in the chambers, he told me, he was a going to travel, or going into the country, and had an inclination to part with ſome law books, he called on me ſome days afterwards, I deſired him to appoint his time, he appointed a future day, I went and took my man, and paid him fourteen guineas for them, and took them away in a coach.

Can you enumerate the books of the firſt parcel?—(the books produced). Daniel's Hiſtory of France, there wanted the laſt volume.

Mr. Fielding. What is the value of that ſet of books?——I ſhould ſuppoſe the value of them not perfect to be about eighteen or nineteen ſhillings, and the others I had priced in my public ſale and catalogue at half a guinea.

Mr. Garrow. You do a great deal of buſineſs, more perſons in it than yourſelf; they are all authorized to ſell?

Proſecutor. There are ſufficient marks in theſe books, that mark is of letters inſtead of figures, denoting the price of them in my own hand writing, A. for one, L. for eleven.

What is the amount of the whole loſs?—Seventy pounds.

Mr. Garrow. How lately before you let your chambers to Mr. Gaſcoigne, had you been there yourſelf?—I left England in June, 1782.

Had you been abſent from your chambers any length of time?——No, I had not, I had a catalogue of my books, I always kept a catalogue in caſe of fire; I left the keys with the laundreſs, ſhe knew the ſituation of the books of courſe.

MATTHEW SMITH ſworn.

I apprehended the priſoner at Mr. Gibbons's, in Eſſex-ſtreet, in the Strand; Mr. Pitt's ſervant directed me to the houſe, I found him there at eleven o'clock, he lodged in the garret, I found him in the parlour, I took him to the watch-houſe, and ſearched him, I found the key of his room, and the key of his box; I went back again, he would not tell me where they were; I found his father and mother lived in Shire-lane; then I went to his father's lodgings, and found his father there; he ſaid, he had no objection to my ſearching his room, with that I ſearched the drawers, and found theſe book, which Mr. Pitt ſays are his; I charged the priſoner with them, the priſoner ſaid, they were his own, he had had them two years.

(Theſe two books depoſed to by Mr. Pitt.)

Court. We cannot receive them that were found in his father's houſe.

Mr. Garrow. It ſhould be a low buying price of ſecond hand goods?——Then I will ſay this Jacob's Law Dictionary, 16s. Hoffman's Conveyancer, 1l. 16s. Silva or a Treatiſe on Foreſt-trees, 30s.

(The books depoſed to by the Proſecutor.)

Mr. Dennis. The firſt payment was four guineas and a half, for which I took a receipt; and the next parcel was fourteen guineas.

THOMAS

THOMAS HODGKINSON ſworn.

I was preſent with my maſter, the laſt witneſs; I know the priſoner again very well, I remember his applying to my maſter extraordinary well.

ABRAHAM SADLER ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Roſe, I know Mrs. Fenner, ſhe left the key of the chambers with me, I kept it very ſafe.

Mr. Garrow. Do you recollect ſeeing the priſoner on the 25th of Auguſt?——I do not know the day he came to our houſe.

Do you recollect about what day?—It was the latter end of Auguſt.

Do you think it was as late in the month, as the 25th?——I believe it was.

Do you recollect your ſending your ſervant to Mr. Pitt's chambers, by his deſire?——Yes, to ſee if there were any letters for Mrs. Fenner, the ſervant went and came back, and brought the key back, ſhe locked the door, and ſaid there were no letters.

Do you know whether the priſoner went out of town to Oxford that day or not?—I cannot ſay.

Court. Do you know theſe chambers?——Yes, it is a ſpring lock that will open within ſide, without a key.

Priſoner. I will call my witneſſes to character. Gentlemen of the Jury; on the latter end or middle of May, Mrs. Fennell and I had many words, we uſed to cohabit together in chambers, the ſame as man and wife; ſhe told me after Mr. Gaſcoigne was to leave the chambers, ſhe would uſe me juſt as ſhe pleaſed, and lock me out, and if I could get in by any means, ſhe would give me leave; by that means I had a key made for that account, but in the room of leaving chambers, I did not leave them at all; Mr. Gaſcoigne left them the middle of July after term, he then diſcharged me, and told me he would take me again in November; I ſtaid at chambers from the 17th of July, when Mr. Gaſcoigne diſcharged me, to the 23d or 24th of July; on that day we quitted the chambers, I left them perfectly ſafe, I went out of town, I ſtaid three weeks, I came to town to go to Margate; on the Wedneſday I received a letter, on the Saturday I received another letter, on the Monday following I went down to Oxford, and ſtaid till the Saturday; we had a few words on the Monday night in the evening; on the day I fetched the key from Mr. Jackſon, I received another letter by the Oxford coach, deſiring me to come down to Oxford again, and not to come as I did before, but to come to her friends, and ſay I was going to Birmingham; when I went I called her brother up, and told her friends according to her deſire; they told me to ſtay there, I thought her conduct was rather ſingular, I adviſed her to behave otherwiſe, and treat me as a common acquaintance; we fell out a great deal, then I took the key and was determined to have no farther connections with her, I threw the key away; on the 6th of September we came to town together, we arrived about eight in the evening, and as we were going to the chamber door, ſays ſhe, Lord Mr. Evans the doors are open, ſays I, it is impoſſible; the door was open, the windows up with a rope from the top to the bottom. Gentlemen, with reſpect to the books in queſtion, I can account for: about 1779 I lived with Mr. Jones, I was ſervant to him at the time he had a commiſſion in a new raiſed regiment at Hilſey barracks, he was taken very ill and was obliged to leave the regiment, and was ill at his ready furniſhed lodgings four months, and was like to die; he gave me ten pounds in money and his furniture, and a great number of books; here are witneſſes here to prove, that they had the books in their poſſeſſion two years, here is a perſon that had that book that Mr. Pitt has ſworn to, before ever it was taken from me; I will leave it to your opinion, whether I could commit that robbery in chambers in that condition, in the height of ſummer.

The Remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 8th of DECEMBER, 1784, and the following Days;

Being the FIRST SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority,

NUMBER I. PART VIII.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLEY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter-Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of John Evans.

PETER CLUTTERBUCK Eſq. ſworn.

The priſoner lived with me till Chriſtmas laſt, he was ſober, diligent, and honeſt; I frequently entruſted him with ſums of money to go to the bankers, and never found him deficient, but perfectly honeſt; I had ſo high an opinion of him, that I would have kept him, but he did not chuſe to wear a livery.

Priſoner. Gentlemen of the Jury, my trial was appointed for laſt Thurſday was a week, Mr. Lucas and Mr. Gaſcoigne attended almoſt all laſt week, they are gone into the country, and I wrote down to Eſſex to let them know my trial was coming on to day.

Mr. Fielding. Mr. Clutterbuck's eſtimation of him is equivalent to an hundred witneſſes.

Priſoner. I have three very particular witneſſes that had theſe books in their poſſeſſion long before, that Mr. Pitt ſwore to.

Court to Priſoner. You are aware of the marks that Mr. Pitt ſpeaks from.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

42. GEORGE ROBINSON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 24th of November laſt, one ſilver quart mug, value 6l. the property of Letitia Clarke in her dwelling-houſe.

LETITIA CLARKE ſworn.

On Wedneſday the 24th of November, a little before five in the afternoon I was coming down ſtairs, and juſt before I got down, I heard a violent breaking of glaſs, I thought a porter had been coming by; I aſked my daughter that was in the ſhop what was the matter, ſhe ſaid the glaſs was broke, and before I could get to the ſhop door there was an alarm of ſtop thief; ſeveral people came about the door, and in a few minutes ſomebody came, I cannot tell who, and ſaid they had got the man, and he is coming over preſently, the man was brought back within ſeven or eight minutes, he was brought into my ſhop; a gentleman immediately came in, and ſaid here is your mug, the mug had my own private ſhop mark upon it; the priſoner ſaid nothing, the mug ſtood in the ſhop window, the third pane high.

JAMES

JAMES OATES ſworn.

On Wedneſday afternoon about a quarter before five, the 24th of November, I was gathering my pots at the corner of Brook-ſtreet, I looked acroſs the way, and ſaw two men at Mrs. Clarke's window, and one of them put both his arms through the window and took out a mug, and run acroſs the way; I tried to lay hold of him, and he knocked me down, I am ſure this is the man.

SAMUEL HARPER ſworn.

As I was going up Holborn, about ten yards above Mrs. Clarke's door, nearly oppoſite Brook-ſtreet, I heard a ſudden craſh of glaſs, I turned about and ſaw nobody for a quarter of a minute, immediately I ſaw the priſoner croſs oppoſite Brook-ſtreet, and run as faſt as he could; I purſued him, and was cloſe to him two or three times, but he rather gained ground of me, he was not above ten yards from me any time; I thought to have caught him, he turned round the corner of Gravel-ſtreet, which is a pretty ſhort turning, I was in the middle of the ſtreet, he croſſed over it; half way in Gravel-ſtreet there is a little paſſage and a man tripped him up, and he fell in the kennel, I took him by the collar and lifted him up, and walking two or three ſteps all of a ſudden a perſon gave me this tankard into my hand, then we took him to the ſhop, that is all I know of the matter, I only know of taking him to the Compter.

JOHN BUSKET ſworn.

I was going down Holborn, and I ſaw the priſoner paſs me, not a minute after I heard the break of a window, and I heard the voice of ſtop thief, I ſaw the priſoner croſs with the tankard in his hand, I followed him, I never loſt ſight of him, I ſaw him drop the tankard, he is the ſame man, he dropped the tankard in Gravel-ſtreet; the perſon that picked up the tankard is not here, I ſaw it picked up, and it was given to me, and I gave it to Mr. Harper.

(The tankard depoſed to marked L. M. U.)

Priſoner. I know nothing of it; I have not a friend in the world.

GUILTY, Death.

He was humbly recommended to mercy by the Proſecutrix.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

43. FRANCES, wife of GEORGE GOOSSEY, was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 17th day of September, a pair of ſheets, value 8s. the property of Mary Barrett, widow, being in a certain lodging room, let by the ſaid Mary to her the ſaid Frances, to be uſed by her with the ſaid lodging room, againſt the ſtatute.

There being no evidence to affect the priſoner, ſhe was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

44. ABRAHAM SLATER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 31ſt of Auguſt laſt, four leather bridles, value 12s. the property of William Church.

John Turner found the priſoner aſleep in a neceſſary at Kenſington Gravel-pits, with theſe bridles, which were owned by the proſecutor.

Priſoner. I have nothing to ſay; I came a hundred miles off: I have been ſick ſeveral Seſſions.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

45. WILLIAMS BROOKS and BENJAMIN HILLIARD were indicted for for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 23d day of November laſt, one mare, price 7l. the property of Joſiah Boydell, Eſquire.

The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council.

JOSIAH BOYDELL ſworn.

On the 24th of November laſt, I loſt a mare from Weſt-end, out of a field; I found her in Bow-ſtreet the 24th.

JOHN WEMBRIDGE ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Boydell, I am gardiner; I miſſed the mare on the 24th of November, ſhe was taken out through a new hedge, they had pulled up the hedge on the 5th of November, to make a bonfire, I ſaw the mare again when my maſter brought her home from Bow-ſtreet.

SIMON GOLDSMITH ſworn.

I am a ſmith and farrier at Wembly-Green, near Harrow, the priſoner at the bar came to me on Tueſday the 23d of November, near twelve at night, in a field called New Field, belonging to Mr. William Walker, there came this man on one horſe, and another man on another horſe.

Were the two priſoners on one horſe?—I cannot ſay, I believe not.

Have you known the priſoners before?—I knew one of them, Hilliard, I was ſet to watch, becauſe ſome fowls were found killed, and ſo we watched to ſee who came for them; when the priſoner came to the gate, which is a diſtance from the place where the fowls were concealed, two of them alighted about fourſcore yards off, and the two priſoners came up where the fowls were concealed, the priſoners uncovered the fowls, and I believe they heard me, he dropped the fowls, and Hilliard met me round the rick, there was Pollard and five more with me.

Where was the mare all the time?—Tied to the gate the outſide the field, Pollard releaſed the mare from the gate, but I cannot ſay whether Hilliard or Brooks were on the mare.

Mr. Peatt. Could you, at the diſtance of eighty yards, ſee whether there were two on one horſe, at eight at night?——Yes, I I never ſaw Brooks before.

Could you ſee the ſhape, or the face of Brooks at that diſtance?——Yes, it was moon-light, I ſwear to the beſt of my knowledge theſe were the men that got off the horſe: I carried the priſonet and the mare to the Office, and ſhewed it to Mr. Boydell: it was the mare that was tied to the gate.

Mr. Peatt. Was the gate between you and the horſe?——Yes.

Were there buſhes in the gate?—No; I I ſaw the mare at the gate all the time.

Mr. Boydell. It was my mare.

JOHN POLLARD ſworn.

I was watching the ducks under the hay-rick.

Was it a dark night, or a light night?——A light night, I ſaw nobody come to the gate, I heard ſome horſes come along the road, I ſaw the two priſoners come towards the hay-rick.

Did they come to the place where the ducks were?——Yes.

Were the ducks alive or dead?—Dead; they began to uncover the ducks, and I apprehended them, the gate was about fifty yards off; I carried them through the gate after I apprehended them: the mare was tied to the gate, I unlooſed her.

Had it a ſaddle on?——No, I carried the mare to Bow-ſtreet.

Court. What is the value of your mare?——I gave ſeven guineas for her laſt year, ſhe was then three years old.

PRISONER HILLIARD's DEFENCE.

I had been ſeeking for work.

PRISONER BROOKS's DEFENCE.

I was along with him ſeeking for work.

The

The priſoner Brooks called four witneſſes to his character.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

46. The ſaid WILLIAM BROOKS and BENJAMIN HILLIARD were again indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 22d of November laſt, one live cock, price 18d. ſeven live hens, price 7s. one live drake, price 2s. and four live ducks, price 4s. the property of George Chandler.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RSOE.

---

47. The ſaid WILLIAM BROOKS and BENJAMIN HILLIARD were again indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 22d day of November laſt, one live drake, price 2s. and two live ducks, price 2s. the property of James Hall.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

48. ANN PETRE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 23d of November, two linen handkerchiefs, value 5s. the property of Jacob Janet.

GUILTY.

Fined 1s.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

49. JOHN MAXEY and JAMES TURLEY were indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Rice Evans on the King's highway, on the 1ſt of December, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will, one linen handkerchief, value 2s. and a pair of plated buckles, value 2s. and 10s. 6d. in money, his property.

The Proſecutor not being able to ſwear poſitively to the priſoners, as they were out of his ſight for ten minutes, they were

BOTH ACQUITTED.

Court to Priſoners. I adviſe you to take good care how you behave in future; I am afraid you have got into a very bad way of life, take care we do not ſee you here again.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

50. WILLIAM WELLS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 28th day of October laſt, ſixty-ſix pounds and a half of pewter, value 8s. the property of John Hudſon.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

51. JAMES DAVIS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 28th day of October laſt; one man's cloth great coat, value 5s. one petticoat, value 10s. one gown, value 4s. one handkerchief, value 3s. one ſilk handkerchief, value 2s. two other handkerchiefs, value 2s. one pair of ſheets, value 7s. two ſhirts, value 4s. two ſhifts, value 4s. one apron, value 2s. two aprons, value 1s. 6d. two yards of white thread lace, value 4s. one yard and a half of linen cloth, value 12d. the property of William Farrington.

The priſoner was ſeen coming out of the houſe with the things, and taken immediately.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

52. MARGARET APPLETON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 28th of October laſt, one ſilver watch, value 40s. the property of Iſrael Tarver.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

53. WILLIAM NOBES was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 2d day of November laſt, one man's great coat, value 10s. and one handkerchief, value 6d. the property of Thomas Whitby.

The Proſecutor ſaw the priſoner go into his counting houſe, unlock his door, and take his great coat away, he was taken immediately.

GUILTY.

To be confined twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

54. EDWARD BUNDY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 17th of November, two pair of men's leather ſhoes, value 9s. the property of Marmaduke Storr.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

55. ROBERT HOARE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 19th of November laſt, one cloth coat, value 18s. and two pair of worſted ſtockings, value 2s. and two ſtocks, value 3s. the property of John Shelton.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

56. ROBERT BRADY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 19th of November, three men's hats, value 15s. the property of Thomas Davies, James Jones, and Edward Evans.

GUILTY.

To be confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

57. JAMES THOMAS was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of John Parleyman, on the 13th of November laſt, about the hour of eleven in the night, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, eighty pounds weight of copper, value 40s. and one hempen ſack, value 1s. the property of the ſaid John.

JOHN PARLEYMAN ſworn.

My houſe was not broke open at all; I went out at nine and left my wife at home, I left a ſack of copper in the paſſage, within my houſe, that paſſage leads to no other houſe.

ELIZABETH PARLEYMAN ſworn.

I went out about eleven, to get me a pint of beer, and I met the priſoner, I knew him, he ſaid he was going to our houſe, I left the door on the latch, I am ſure I latched it; the windows were all ſafe, ſafe, when I returned the copper was gone; I told the watchman, and he brought it back.

Two other witneſſes depoſed to ſtopping the priſoner, with the copper, which was produced, and part of it depoſed to by the Proſecutor.

The priſoner called five witneſſes to his character.

GUILTY, 39s.

Not of the burglary.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

---

58. MARY HORTON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 19th of November laſt, nine yards of muſlin, value 40s. the property of Chriſtopher Tennant, privately in his ſhop.

The priſoner being ſuſpected, was followed and brought back with the muſlin on her.

GUILTY, 4s. 10d.

To be privately whipped, and confined twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

59. JOHN LANGFORD, otherwiſe HARRIS, and JAMES WHITE, were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 27th of October laſt, three pair of nankeen breeches, value 10s. the property of Joſeph Robert Ireland.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

60. JANE CURFEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 22d day of October, one cluſter diamond ring ſet in gold, value 12l. the property of Mary Walker.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury, before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

61. AMY COLLINS was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Jane Rawlins, ſpinſter, on the king's highway, on the 12th of November laſt, and putting her in corporal fear and danger of her life, and feloniouſly taking from her perſon, and againſt her will, one cloth cloak, value 12d. the property of John Rawlins.

There being no other witneſs but Jane Rawlins, who was a child of ſeven years old, the priſoner was not put on her defence.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

62. ROBERT JONES was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 27th of October laſt, fifty four yards of ſilk ribbon, value 20s. the property of Charles Troutbeck, privately in his ſhop.

The priſoner came into the Proſecutor's ſhop, for ſome trifling things, and as ſoon as he went, the ſhopman miſſed three pieces of ribbon, he immediately purſued the priſoner, who perceiving him follow him, ran into an entry, and dropped the ribbons on the ground.

George Mecham. I took the priſoner into cuſtody.

Priſoner. I am not guilty, my mother and father and two people are at the door.

GUILTY,

Court to Priſoner. How old are you?—Thirteen.

Court.

Court to Priſoner. You have began very early to lead a diſhoneſt life, it is to be hoped this will be a warning to you, think that you may have a long life, to live and make up for what you have done.—Let him be fined ſix-pence, and diſcharged, and given to his parents.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

63. WILLIAM JACKSON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 27th of November laſt, one large copper, value 16s. the property of John Rickars,

ANN HODGSON ſworn.

I live in Bear-yard, I had this copper to ſell for my neighbour, Mr. Rickards, between twelve and one, I ſaw the priſoner bring it back, I did not ſee him take it. I can ſwear to the copper.

——— JAMES ſworn.

I am one of the porters of Lincolns Inn, I ſtopped the priſoner, with the copper on his back.

ELIZABETH BENSON ſwern.

I ſaw the priſoner take the copper from under the window, I ſat at work oppoſite to Mrs. Hodgſon's, and I ran after him, as far as Lincolns-Inn, and I deſired Mr. James to ſtop him, which he did.—Nobody was with him.

(The copper depoſed to.)

Priſoner. A man employed me to carry it.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

64. JOHN BRIANT was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 26th day of October laſt, one Cheſhire cheeſe, value 20s. the property of Thomas Godſell.

GUILTY.

Privately whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

65. MARY BUTLER widow, otherwiſe MARY wife of JOHN PERKINS, was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 2d day of September, one bed quilt, value 6s. and one waiſtcoat, value 18d. the property of George Pitkin.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

66. PAUL CLARKE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 25th of November laſt, one table ſpoon, value 8s. the property of George Eades.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

67. EDWARD CROKER was indicted for ſtealing on the 27th of November laſt, eight live hens, value 8s. one live cock, value 12d. and one iron dung drag, value 6d. the property of William Church.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

68. DENNIS HAYES was indicted for he that on the 2d of November laſt, upon Abner Wyman, did make an aſſault, with a fe-felonious intent his goods and monies from his perſon, and againſt his will, feloniouſly to ſteal.

This indictment being founded upon 7th G. 2d. chap. 21. and not properly drawn, the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

Ordered to be detained.

---

69. ISAAC WARREN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 9th of November, one cloth coat, value 40s. two pair of nankeen breeches, value 6s. one pair of cotton breeches, value 6s. four jackets, value 12s. one other jacket, value 5s. two waiſtcoats, value 6s. two dimity waiſtcoats, value 3s. one ſhirt, value 5s. two odd ſtockings, value 6d. the property of Adam Kelly, in the dwelling-houſe of William Barker.

(The things were taken on the priſoner, who with another was coming from the houſe directly after they were ſtolen, they were taken out of a garret window.)

GUILTY, 39s.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

73. CATHERINE SPEEDY and MARY GREEN were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 20th of October laſt, one muſlin gown and apron, value 10s. one yard of muſlin, value 2s. one bed-gown, value 5s. one cradle quilt, value 5s. eight ſheets, value 40s. ſixteen yards of thread edging, value 6s. fourteen pair of ſhift ſleeves, value 14s. four aprons, value 4s. one ſhawl, value 5s. three handkerchiefs, value 5s. four yards of cotton, value 4s. ſeven yards of muſlin, value 21s. two handkerchiefs, value 4s. two yards of linen, value 2s. two cotton petticoats, value 10s. one muſlin apron, value 5s. ſome thread lace, value 5s. five yards of ribbon, value 3s. ten yards of ribbon, value 6s. a quantity of thread, value 1s. ſome pins, value 1s. the property of Alice Rudd, EDWARD GALE, and JOHN SMITH: and ELIZABETH (wife of George) CHENERY were indicted for feloniouſly receiving part of the ſaid goods, knowing them to be ſtolen.

ALICE RUDD ſworn.

I am executrix with Edward Gale and John Smith, executors of the effects of William Saunders.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. Have you a probate of the will?——We have a copy of it.

Mr. Garrow. That will not do.

Mr. Saunders has been dead long ſince?——Yes, his wife ſurvived him about nine years, and continued in poſſeſſion of the effects.

It was upon her death, theſe were ſuppoſed to be ſtolen?—Yes.

Court. Who had the poſſeſſion of the goods from the death of William Saunders, to the death of his wife?——In poſſeſſion of the executor, ſhe lived with Mrs. Rudd, her mother, Mrs. Saunders left no will.

Court. They cannot ſupport this indictment.

ALL THREE ACQUITTED.

Ordered to be detained.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLIS.

---

71. The ſaid three priſoners were again indicted (on the tenth day of this Seſſion) for the ſame offence, only laying it to be the property of Alice Rudd.

The Court being of opinion that Mrs. Rudd, who was one of the executors of Mr. Saunders, long ſince deceaſed, the huſband of Mrs. Saunders, whoſe property the things were alledged to be, having no letters of adminiſtration to Mr. Saunders, had no property in the things, and the priſoners were a ſecond time

ALL THREE ACQUITTED.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Lord LOUGHBOROUGH.

---

72. SAMUEL PICKERING was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 28th day of September laſt; five pots, containing twenty five pounds weight of gold ſize, value 3l. the property of Edward Turner: And RICHARD WINTER was indicted for feloniouſly receiving the ſame knowing it to be ſtolen.

There being no evidence but the confeſſion of the Priſoner Pickering, and of one Claridge an accomplice, and that confeſſion obtained under promiſes of favour, the priſoners were

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

73. THOMAS BROWN was indict- for feloniouſly returning from tranſportation, and being found at large on the 15th of November laſt, without any lawful cauſe.

JOHN FLETCHER ſworn.

I apprehended the priſoner, he made no reſiſtance, he acknowledged he was the perſon.

The Copy of his Conviction read, and examined by the Court.

JOHN OWEN ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner tried and convicted.

Moſes Levy. I apprehended him alſo.

Priſoner. I ſhould be ſorry to put you to trouble; I am the perſon, but by force and arms, I was obliged to come away, I have never been on ſhore for a fortnight, I have been to Greenland, I was going to India.

Fletcher. I made enquiry, and was informed he had been to Greenland, and was going to India.

Priſoner. The ſhip I was going in was obliged to be at the Downs, the 8th of this month.

NOT GUILTY.

Court to Priſoner. You ſee the Jury have been inclined to hope, that you will lead a good life hereafter.

Priſoner. I will be out of the kingdom in forty-eight hours.

Court. I hope you will, I wiſh you may lead a good life for the future.

Priſoner. I was going on board the Winter, Captain Snow.

Mr. Alderman Peckham. Captain Snow is detained now, he is at Woolwhich.

Court. Then you had better go there immediately.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

74. JOHN CASHON was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Joſeph Norris, on the King's highway on the 9th of November laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon, and againſt his will, three men's linen ſhirts, value 3s. and one child's ſhirt, value 6d. one cap, value 4d. and one apron, value 3d. the property of Edmund Netterville.

JOSEPH NORRIS ſworn.

I live at Mr. Bailey's, a faſhmaker, in Bunhill-row, I am an apprentice, my mother is a waſherwoman, ſhe ſent me for ſome linen, and on my return I called at Mr. Netterville's for another bundle of linen; I did not ſee what was in the bundle then, it was tied in a white apron, and as I was going up White-croſs-ſtreet, between eight and nine at night (the ſtreet has a many butchers in it and lamps, ſo that it is well lighted) a perſon behind me ſnatched this bundle from under my arm, I immediately called out ſtop thief, and turned round with intent to purſue the perſon perſon that had robbed me, and having the preſence of mind, as God put it into my head, to put the other bundle into Mr. Tyler's ſhop, a butcher, I ran round Foſter-buildings, one end comes into White-croſs-ſtreet, and at the top of theſe Foſter-buildings I met the priſoner, with the property under his arm, this might be between three and eight minutes; I do not think it could be four minutes, when the man that ſnatched the bundle ran down the alley, I had a ſight of his back, and of a bundle under his arm; as far as I can apprehend, it was the priſoner, but I cannot be ſure; I caught him in my arms, and he laid down the bundle, and ſaid, damn your eyes what do you want with me; I have ſeen the priſoner ſeveral times before, he ſtruck me on the breaſt, and I threw him down; he knocked me down, we both roſe, and I knocked him down, and he threw me down upon him; a perſon came and aſſiſted me, and took up the bundle and gave it me, this gentleman is the man that lent me a hand to take him, and by God's providence, and his aſſiſtance, I was able to take him, and he was committed.

Court. Was the thing pulled from you by violence or not?——It muſt be by violence.

Did you guard it very tight?—I did not guard it very tight, I might hold it ſlack.

GEORGE GEARY ſworn.

I live in Foſter-buildings, I heard the cry of ſtop thief, and ſaw the priſoner and this witneſs ſtruggling at the top of the buildings, it is a court with a thoroughfare, and there was a bundle laid down juſt by; there were a good many people juſt by, I immediately ſecured him, he ſaid nothing then, but before the Juſtice he ſaid, it was thrown into his arms, the ſecond time he went before the Magiſtrate, he ſaid, he kicked it before him.

THOMAS HYAM ſworn.

Confirmed the evidence of Joſeph Norris.

The three ſhirts depoſed to by Mr. Netterville.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

A man run by me, and I ſaw a white thing lay, and I picked up the bundle, and the proſecutor met me and hit me with a ſtick, and ſaid I had robbed him; the proſecutor was going to ſwear the robbery to my father, after he had ſworn it to me; I can fetch witneſſes if you will let me.

JOSEPH BAILEY ſworn.

When the priſoner was taken up for the robbery, his father was taken up for a reſcue or aſſault, and the proſecutor ſwore the robbery againſt the father at the ſame time; I called out young man take care, ſomebody aſked him, and he ſaid the father was the man.

Aſked him what?——I do not recollect what; he twice ſaid, the father was the man that robbed him, the priſoner has worked for me, he never cheated me.

Proſecutor. I charged the father with ſtriking me, I did not charge the father with the robbery, I miſtook the Magiſtrate's queſtion the firſt time; I never ſaid, the father was the man that robbed me.

The Priſoner called four other witneſſes who gave him a good character.

JAMES NORRIS the Proſecutor's father ſworn.

Who was preſent at the examination of the father, and he confirmed the proſecutor's evidence, about his not charging the priſoner's father with the robbery.

Hyam. I was preſent at the examination of the father, the proſecutor anſwered yes, by miſtake, he recalled his words, I am ſure of this fact.

Court. Did he twice repeat that the father was the man that robbed him?—But once, I did not hear him, it was recalled directly, a perſon ſpoke to him.

GUILTY.

Of ſtealing, but not violently from the perſon.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

75. WILLIAM WILLS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 27th of November, one cloth great coat, value 40s. the property of Robert Buchanan.

John Wood, who had left his cart about two minutes, on his return ſaw the priſoner jump out of the cart, and run away with two coats, he purſued him, but loſt ſight of him about two ſeconds, and he was ſtopped by James Grace; Wood ſaw him drop the coats.

James Grace confirmed the above account.

(The coats depoſed to.)

GUILTY.

To be whipped and confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

76. MARY WOOD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 22d of November laſt, two table ſpoons, value 30s. the property of William Davis.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

77. SAMUEL LANE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 12th of November laſt, one pint pewter pot, value 6d. the property of Robert Cocks Trapp.

GUILTY.

Fined 1s.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

78. ELIZABETH BROWN was indicted for ſtealing, on the 27th of October, two children's linen ſhirts, value 1s. the property of Hannah Jacobs.

GUILTY.

Fined 10d.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

79. The ſaid ELIZABETH BROWN was again indicted for ſtealing, on the 16th of November laſt, one rug, value 5s. one ſhift, value 18d. two frocks, value 4s. one ſkirt, value 3s. one pair of ſheets, value 4s. the property of Moſes Shaw.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

80. MARY BRIGHAM was indicted for ſtealing, on the 6th of November laſt, two ingots of pewter, value 30s. and thirty four pewter plates, value 17s. the property of John Townſend and Thomas Compton.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

81. WILLIAM HALL was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 21ſt of November laſt, one pound weight of ſponge, value 16s. one other pound weight of ſponge, value 5s. twelve ſkins of leather, called bazils, value 10s. eighteen ſilk laſhes, value 2s. 9d. and twelve coach kirb hooks, value 6d. the property of Francis Leeſon.

Thomas Peckham ſaw a man taking this parcel out of the boot of the Camberwell ſtage, he purſued him directly, he ran up a paſſage and ſaw him drop the parcel, but was not certain to the priſoner.

James Barnwell ſtopped the priſoner in the paſſage, he was running, and was the only only man that came up the paſſage at that time; there was nothing on him then; the court is a thoroughfare.

Priſoner. I went to the Croſs Keys to enquire for the Chatham ſtage, and I croſſed the way, and there was a cry of ſtop thief, and a man ſtopped me; I am a ſhoemaker, I worked with one Mr. Watts, in Oyſter-ſtreet, Portſmouth, I had been come to town but a fortnight, trade is dead there, and I heard of a maſter at Chatham, one Mr. Trott.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

82. WILLIAM SMITH was indicted for ſtealing, on the 13th of November, one coachman's cloth great coat, value 10s. the property of Joſhua Howard.

Edward Emery ſaw the priſoner take the coat off the box of the proſecutor's coach in St. Paul's Church-yard, and he went down Paul's-chain; he purſued him with another perſon, but did not find him, and the proſecutor afterwards found the priſoner at a public houſe in Eaſt-Smithfield, by the direction of Emery, who went with him.

Priſoner. I know nothing of the coat, it was not found upon me.

Emery. I am ſure the priſoner was the man, and no other, I have known him two or three years back.

Priſoner. Emery only ſculks about the place, he is as likely to take the coat as me.

Court to Proſecutor. Have you known Emery any time?——About four or five months, the lad bears a very honeſt character at the watering houſe.

GUILTY.

To be confined to hard labour ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

83. JOHN GOODWIN was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Peter Marſhall, about the hour of eleven in the night on the 28th day of October laſt, with intent his goods, chattles, and monies in the ſaid dwelling houſe then being, burglariouſly and feloniouſly to ſteal.

The Proſecutor faſtened his houſe up, and went up to bed at eleven, and in about a quarter of an hour he heard a terrible ſmaſh in the waſh-houſe, and he, with one John Evans, ran and unbolted the door of the waſh-houſe, and found the priſoner had dropped through the ſky-light; a ſquare of glaſs was broke in a one pair of ſtairs window, there was blood on the glaſs, and his hands were bloody; the priſoner confeſſed at the watch-houſe, that being ſhort of linen, and ſeeing ſome ſhirts hang up in the two pair of ſtairs, he was going to get them, and he ſuppoſed he ſhould ſuffer for it; he did not ſay which way he intended to get them, but the proſecutor ſaid, it appeared to him, that by ſtruggling to undo the ſhutter, his foot gave way, as the ſky-light is directly under the window.

Court. Then he had actually fallen through the ſky-light?——It appeared ſo to me, nobody ſaw him till he was through the ſky-light.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, it ſeems unneceſſary to go any further, he certainly was attempting to commit the crime, but he failed.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

84. JAMES ELLISON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 9th of November laſt, four guineas, value 4l. 4s. and 5s. in monies numbered, the property of James Loop.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

85. BENJAMIN INGRAHAM was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 8th day of November laſt, one linen handkerchief, value 1s. the property of Timothy Brown.

The Proſecutor ſaw the priſoner take his handkerchief, and ſeized him directly.

GUILTY, 10d.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

86. LAIR EZRAL was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 29th of November, ſix yards of gauze, value 4s. the property of Thomas Bevan.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped, and confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

87. MICHAEL SULLIVAN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 25th of October laſt, one white cambrick handkerchief, value 2s. the property of John Dilks.

William Hall ſaw the priſoner pick the proſecutor's pocket, and took him directly.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for fourteen years.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

OPINION of the JUDGES,

On the Caſe of Humphy Moore, who was tried in April Seſſions laſt, delivered by Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

88. HUMPHRY MOORE, you was indicted laſt April ſeſſions, for feloniouſly ſtealing twenty guineas and four doubloons, value 14l. 8s. the property of John Field, in the dwelling houſe of John Brown, it appeared in evidence, that a perſon unknown joined company with the proſecutor John Field, in the ſtreet, and ſoon after picked up a purſe, and perſuaded the proſecutor to go to a publick houſe with him, telling him he was intitled to half; the perſon took out a receipt, and whilſt they were looking at it, you came into the room, and aſked if there was any thing extraordinary, and being told by the unknown perſon, you ſaid, which of you picked it up? and the proſecutor ſaid he had forty or fifty pounds, at his lodgings at Chelſea; upon which you ſaid we will call a coach and go there, and you all three went to Chelſea, and drank a ſhilling's worth of punch, that they found you afterwards at the Cheſhire-cheeſe, and in your preſence, the proſecutor put down the money twenty guineas, and four doubloons, which the perſon unknown took up and carried away, leaving the ring with the proſecutor; and appointed to meet him the next day, to have the money returned, and one hundred pounds for his ſhare of the ring; that the perſon unknown, and you went away together, and the proſecutor went to the place of appointment, but neither you nor the perſon unknown came;

came; the ring was proved to be of very ſmall value, and the jury were of opinion you was confederating with the perſon unknown, for the purpoſe of obtaining money, and ſharing the value of the ring, and therefore, that you did aid and aſſiſt the perſon unknown, to obtain the money of the proſecutor John Field; and the jury found you guilty—Subject to the opinion of the Court.

This matter was ſubmitted to the opinion of all the Judges the firſt day of laſt Michaelmas term, except Lord Mansfield, who was abſent, and they all agreed in the diſtinction between the parting with the poſſeſſion, and the parting with the property; that in the firſt caſe it was felony, and in the laſt caſe it was not; nine of the Judges were of opinion, that in this caſe poſſeſſion only was parted with, it being only a pledge, till the ſuppoſed value of the ring was delivered; two of the Judges thought that the doubloons were the ſame as money, and were of opinion it was a loan, and was a parting with the property, but nine of the Judges were of opinion it was felony; and the Judges could not diſtinguiſh this from the caſe of the King and Patch, that caſe was this; the priſoner was indicted for ſtealing a watch, and ſome money, the priſoner picked up a ring and purſe in the ſtreet, the priſoner pretending he found it, offered to divide the money with the proſecutor, and opening the purſe, there was a ring, and bill of parcels, ſtating the ring to be a diamond one, of one hundred and forty ſeven pounds value, and a receipt for that ſum different modes were propoſed for the diſtribution, at laſt the priſoner aſked the proſecutor if he would give him his money and watch, and take the ring; two other men that were in company took up the watch and money, and the priſoner got the proſecutor out of the room under pretence he had ſomething particular to ſay to him, and the two men ran away with the watch and money; the perſon was uneaſy, and the priſoner ſaid he knew the two men: The priſoner was apprehended, and the ring was found to be of the value of ten ſhillings only: It was objected by the counſel, for the priſoner that was not a felony, but Mr. Juſtice Gould, Mr. Baron Perryn, and Mr. Juſtice Buller, held it ſhould be left to the Jury to ſay, what was the intention of the priſoner, to get the money and watch, for if the whole was a ſcheme of the three men, it was felony, according to the caſe of the King and Peers, where a horſe was hired for the day, by two men, who went directly and ſold him: and Mr. Juſtice Gould left it to the Jury, whether the priſoner, and the other two men were not all in concert together; upon the whole therefore, of your caſe the majority of the Judges are of opinion that you are guilty of the felony, and not merely of a fraud, and that judgment muſt be paſſed upon you accordingly.

Mr. Recorder. Humphry Moore, when upon your trial I reſerved this caſe, it was not from any doubt of your guilt, but doubting whether your guilt was of that kind to ſupport the indictment, that doubt has been ſubmitted to the opinion of all the Judges, and a great majority of them have concurred in opinion, that the indictment was ſufficiently ſupported, by the circumſtances given in evidence againſt you; I never entertained any doubt, that the offence of which you was clearly proved to be guilty, was deſerving of as high a puniſhment, as any felony committed under ſimilar circumſtances, if therefore no doubt in point of law had occured, I ſhould have paſſed ſentence upon you, to be tranſported for ſeven years; no reaſon occurs now, for changing that opinion of your offence, but as the neceſſity of laying your caſe before the Judges, has occaſioned ſome delay, and a conſiderable time has elapſed ſince your conviction, I ſhall take care the term of your tranſportation ſhall be computed from the time of your conviction, therefore the ſentence of the court is, that you Humphry Moore, be tranſported beyond the ſeas, for the term of ſeven years, from the time of your conviction, to ſuch place or places, as his Majeſty by the advice of his privy council ſhall think fit to direct or appoint.

89. EDWARD HOUSEHAM was indicted for feloniously ſtealing on the 13th of November laſt, five pair of leather ſhoes, value 20s. two pair of ſtuff ſhoes, value 5s. the property of James Deabwell, privately in his ſhop.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

90. THOMAS WALES was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 21ſt of November laſt, one live pig, value 10s. the property of Joſeph Wood.

The priſoner was ſtopped by the watchman, with the pig in a ſack, and carried to the watch-houſe, and the proſecutor came and owned it.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

91. ELIZABETH SMITH, otherwiſe CATHERINE CLARKE, widow, was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 5th of November laſt, ſix linen ſhirts, value 30s. the property of Henry Aſton.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

62. JAMES LATHAM was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 21ſt of November laſt, one linen ſheet, value 5s. the property of Thomas Palmer.

GUILTY, 10d.

Privately whipped.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

93. JAMES LEE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 13th of November laſt, twenty four pounds weight of lead, value 3s. belonging to Thomas Hubbart, Eſq; fixed to a certain building of the ſaid Thomas, againſt the ſtatute.

GUILTY, 10d.

Whipped.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

94. JOHN WILLIAMS was indicted, for that he, on the 9th of November laſt, thirty pounds weight of lead, value 5s. belonging to Samuel Buſh, fixed to a certain building of the ſaid Samuel, did rip, cut, and break, with intent to ſteal.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

95. JOHN FULMAN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 26th of October laſt, one live ſow, price 20s. the property of Samuel Price.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury, before Mr. RECORDER.

---

96. MARGARET MURPHY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 28th of November laſt, one guinea, value 1l. 1s. half a guinea, value 10s. 6d. and two ſhillings in monies numbered, the property of Dennis Hurley.

DENNIS HURLEY ſworn.

I came athwart the priſoner, and ſhe took me to a houſe to lodge, I being a ſtranger, and the priſoner aſked me to let her bide, and I ſaid yes, if you are honeſt; it is a rule rule with me to take off my ſhirt at night, and I tied my money in my ſhirt, very ſtrongly with a ſtring, and when I fell aſleep, I heard the money rattling, and I waked and I got up out of my ſleep, and ſhe was after dreſſing herſelf, ſhe ſaid ſhe was going for ſome purl for me, but my landlord would not let her out, till he knew whether I had my money, for he came and brought a light, but I could find only ſeven ſhillings and ſix-pence, and ſhe gave me two ſhillings-worth of money before the light came up, I got my ſhirt when the money was out, the priſoner was taken into cuſtody, I never got any of money; I am cold and hungry, and dry, I cannot earn a penny to ſupport myſelf, I am the father of five young children, and I ſhould think myſelf happy, if I could get to my own country, I would go there to-morrow before to day, if I could; I was obliged to walk the ſtreets two nights laſt week.

Court. You ſhould not have gone to this idle woman?——Oh lord! Sir, I was a ſtranger, I did not know but ſhe was an honeſt woman.

Why was ſhe not ſearched?—I do not know, I am a very bad hand in law.

Charles Young the conſtable, and Thomas Palmer the landlord, confirmed the above account.

GUILTY.

Privately whipped and confined twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

97. WILLIAM GILBERT was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 13th of November laſt, thirty pair of womens leather gloves, value 36s. and ſeventy-two yards of ſilk ribbon, value 40s. the property of Hannah Perry.

The Proſecutrix, who is a millener, in Bond-ſtreet, ſent the things by a waggon, to Scrivenham.

ANDREW M'MILLAN ſworn.

I keep the Barley Mow, on Hanwell Heath, about half paſt ſeven on Sunday morning, the 14th of November, the priſoner came in and called for a pint of beer, and ſaid he had found ſomething, between the Old Hats and London, he produced a piece of ribbon out of his pocket, about a dozen or fourteen yards, my maid offered him eighteen pence for it, but I ſaid it was worth more, my wife gave him four ſhillings for it, and he ſaid he would ſpend a ſhilling for the good of the company, and had two glaſſes of gin, in the mean time this parcel lay on the kitchen dreſſer, badly wrapped up, I went and opened it, and found it contained ladies gloves, and ſeveral pieces of linen, and one pound of Hyſon tea, then I ſent for the headborough, and took him into cuſtody, then he ſaid he had them from his ſiſter, who lived in Spital-fields, who kept a glovers ſhop, and told ſeveral different ſtories.

(The things depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE,

I picked up the bundle on this ſide Brentford.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

98. WILLIAM HORTON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 26th of October laſt, one wooden till, value 6d. and two ſhillings in monies numbered, the property of William Pearſon.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

99. HANNAH TROTTER was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 28th day of October last, two pieces of lawn, containing eight yards, value 15s. the property of Robert Atkinson.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped, and confined three months in Newgate.

Tried by the second London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

100. EDWARD HUMPHREYS was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 8th of November last, one cloth great coat, value 30s. one pair of leather boots, value 10s. the property of Henry Martin Bird, Esq.

The prisoner was stopped by Nathan Nathans, with the great coat and boots; and Sarah Biggs deposed, on the 8th of November she let the prisoner into her master's house, as a dustman, but did not miss the things till they were brought back.

(The things deposed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

A gentleman asked me to carry them, he had a sack on his head.

The Prisoner called three witnesses, who gave him a good character.

GUILTY.

Court to Prisoner. This is a second instance that has occurred this Sessions, of dustmen robbing houses; it is an offence particularly dangerous, because the credulity of servants is imposed upon by those that come under that pretence, they come into the house under a trust; I think it therefore necessary, for example, to pronounce sentence upon you before you quit the bar, in the hearing of those who have heard the trial, and that sentence shall be as severe as the law admits in such a case; which is, that you be

Transported for seven years.

101. GEORGE FRANCISCO was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 6th day of November last, three linen shirts, value 3s. one pair of stockings, value 6d. and four guineas, value 4l. 4s. the property of Alexander Andrews.

The Prosecutor suffered the prisoner to sleep in his shop for several days; he found one of the shirts upon him, and he confessed to Samuel Greatrix, that he had taken four guineas of the prosecutor's.

(The shirt deposed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I have been three years in a French prison, my Captain's name is Collins, I received prize money at the India house.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the second London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

102. JAMES BROTHERTON was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 6th of December, a wooden firkin, value 4d. and fifty six pounds weight of butter, value 30s. the property of William Field.

The prisoner was stoped with a firkin of butter belonging to the prosecutor, by the Watchman, who asked him where he was going with it, he said any where, and chucked it against him, and struck him; the prosecutor's warehouse was broke open at the same time.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

A man asked me to carry it for a shilling.

The prisoner called three witnesses to his character.

GUILTY.

To be fined 1s. and imprisoned one month in Newgate.

Tried by the second London Jury before Mr. Justice NARES.

103. ED

103. EDWARD BRETT was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 26th day of November laſt, one linen handkerchief, value 10d. the property of Emmerſon Tidſly.

The Proſecutor caught the priſoner in the fact, with his handkerchief in his hand.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

104. ISRAEL SILCOCK was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 24th day of October laſt, one woollen waiſtcoat, value 4s. one linen neckcloth, value 1s. the property of Richard Hatt.

The Proſecutor employed the priſoner to help him in his maſter's ſtable, and whilſt he was gone to dinner, left him in the ſtable, and when he returned, the priſoner was gone; the priſoner was taken in the Minories by one of the patrol, and in his pocket was found a duplicate for a neckcloth.

John Morratt, the pawnbroker, ſaid the priſoner pawned a ſhirt, handkerchief, and neckcloth, for three ſhillings.

(The neckcloth depoſed to.)

——— Conway, a hackney coachman, proved driving the priſoner this day from Piccadilly to the Minories, and that he had a bundle with him.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I changed a coat and waiſtcoat with a Jew, and bought two neckcloths and handkerchiefs; the runners ſaid the proſecutor ſaid, he would get double the value of his clothes.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

105. MARGARET ALLEN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 30th of November laſt, ſix cotton handkerchiefs, value 15s. the property of George Hooper.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

106. JOHN GRETTEN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 23d of September laſt, one woollen jacket, value 3s. one velveret waiſtcoat, value 3s. one pair of fuſtian breeches, value 3s. one pair of cotton ſtockings, value 12d. one handkerchief, value 12d. one pair of ſilver buckles, value 20s. one pair of ſilver knee buckles, value 4s. one pair of ſilver ſleeve buttons, value 12d. one ſilk purſe, value 12d. and 3s. in monies numbered, the property of Bartholomew Williamſon.

BARTHOLOMEW WILLIAMSON ſworn.

I live in Wapping, I did live there the 23d of September laſt, I am a ſailor, the priſoner told me he was a countryman of mine, and he deſired me to come to his lodgings with him, and I did ſo, I went with him to Darkhouſe-lane, I ſuppoſe it was between ten and eleven at night, it was not quite dark, I was a little groggy, but I was as ſenſible as I am now; I never ſaw the priſoner before, I found him in the public houſe, I was with him about an hour before we went out, we had two pots of ale, I went to the priſoner's lodgings, we went to bed together; in the morning, the priſoner got up about half paſt five, and put on my clothes and things while I was in a dead ſound ſleep; I awoke at ſeven, and he went out at half paſt five, I miſſed the things mentioned in the indictment, and my ſleeve buttons were in my ſleeves when I went to bed, but they were taken out; I ſaw the priſoner the next day on Tower-hill, at a public houſe, but I cannot tell the ſign, I knew him again directly; my landlord took him him up, his name is Palethorp; I asked the priſoner how he came to take my things, he had my handkerchief round his neck, and my waiſtcoat on, and the ſilver ſhoe and knee buckles in his pocket, and the ſilver buttons in his ſhirt; I had worn the waiſtcoat five weeks, I particularly know it; the handkerchief had no mark, but I know it to be mine; the buttons had no mark, I have had them about four weeks; my name was on the buckles, I am ſure they are mine: the priſoner denied the fact, and ſaid it was a lie; he did not deny taking me home with him.

Priſoner. I ſhould be glad to know whether I took him to Darkhouſe-lane, or whether he took me there?—I am ſure he took me, he asked me to go with him, and would not leave me.

WILLIAM PALETHORP ſworn.

I live at No. 24, in Wapping-ſtreet, I lived there in September laſt; the proſecutor lodged with me at the time of the robbery, he is a ſeafaring man, he had lodged with me about five weeks.

Court. How had he conducted himſelf during that time?—Very ſober and ſteady, the proſecutor went out of my houſe between ſeven and eight at night, and not coming home all night, I was very uneaſy about him, it was on a Thurſday night, I am ſure it was in the month of September, he never ſlept from my houſe only one night before; in the morning the proſecutor came home, he had borrowed an old jacket and trowſers, and told me he had been robbed, I had never ſeen him in that jacket and trowſers before, he told me a perſon had ſcraped acquaintance with him, and ſaid he was a country man, and inſiſted on going to get ſome ſupper and ſleep with him that night; and that he took him to the ſign of the Dark-houſe, in Dark-houſe lane, and I went with the proſecutor there about half paſt eight, the proſecutor came home about a quarter before eight, and I could find none of the proſecutor's things; but ſoon after a woman came and gave information of the priſoner, and I went upon Tower-hill and took the priſoner; I went paſt him two or three times before I took him, and I obſerved the proſecutor's waiſtcoat and handkerchief upon him, it was a handkerchief of the ſame pattern.

Did you on the appearance of theſe things, immediately believe them to be the proſecutor's?——I did, I ſecured the priſoner, and took him to the publick-houſe where the proſecutor was, I think it is the ſign of the old King's-arms; the proſecutor immediately challenged the priſoner, and told him he had his handkerchief and waiſtcoat, and his ſleeve buttons, he had his ſhirt ſleeves over his hands, he did not challenge any thing elſe at that time; the priſoner ſaid they were none of his, he knew nothing at all about it; I aſked the priſoner if he had not got a ſilk purſe about him, and he aſked me what buſineſs I had with any thing belonging to him; I ſaid I believe you have one; he aſked me if there was any particular mark upon it, I told him there were two ſteel rings upon it, I told him there were ſome ſtitches which I had obſerved before when the purſe was in the hands of the proſecutor, and the priſoner pulled out the purſe in a hurry, and ſaid where are the ſtitches? and I ſhewed him that very moment; I ſaid this is the purſe belonging to the proſecutor; nothing elſe paſſed, but I took him to the Juſtice's, and I gave the purſe to the priſoner after I had ſhewn him the ſtitches.

Priſoner. Whether I reſigned myſelf willingly or no?——He did, after I ſaid he muſt go with me; he ſaid he would go with me any where, he made no reſiſtance.

Priſoner. Did the proſecutor buy that purſe?—No, he did not, my wife gave the proſecutor that purſe, that made me ſo well acquainted with it.

The Remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be publiſhed in a few Days.

ERRATA.—In No. I. Part V. p. 100, l. 23, trial of Tabbs and others, inſtead of "Peter Aſhmore ſworn, I have the honor of a place under Lord Mansfield" read "——— Jordan ſworn, I have the honor" &c. and then Peter Aſhmore as another witneſs to character.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 8th of DECEMBER, 1784, and the following Days;

Being the FIRST SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER I. PART IX.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

MDCCLXXXV.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of John Gretten.

PETER MAYNE ſworn.

I am an officer belonging to Eaſt Smithfield, the priſoner was brought to me by the laſt witneſs the day after the robbery, and I ſearched him, and found this purſe in his waiſtcoat pocket.

(The purſe and waiſtcoat produced and depoſed to.)

I took this handkerchief off his neck, and this waiſtcoat; I pulled theſe buckles out of his pocket and buttons out of his ſleeves.

(The buckles and buttons depoſed to, the proſecutor's name being in the ſhoe buckles.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

When I firſt came on ſhore I came to this houſe, and we were drinking together, and after we had done I ſaid I wiſhed to go on board, he ſaid it was too late, and I ſhould ſtay with him all night, accordingly I went and ſtaid with him, and being very much intoxicated, it is quite a myſtery to me all this affair, I am ignorant of it.

The Rev. Mr. COOPER ſworn.

I am curate of St. Andrew's Holborn, I have known the priſoner from a youth, I know his father, he is an inhabitant of the pariſh which I was rector of in America; his father is what they call a ſhopkeeper in a very reputable way in Charles Town, a man of a very worthy and very good character, very upright in his dealings; I knew this young lad, and when I was obliged, in order to maintain my allegiance, to quit the country, he remained in the garriſon till the cloſe of 1782; he went out then into the American camp, I never heard any thing amiſs of the boy, I never heard any thing criminal of him; I have not known him ſince he came home, he has been in England but two or three months.

EBENEZER JOHN COLLETT, Eſq. ſworn.

I knew the priſoner for near the laſt four years, he was eleven months with his father in Charles Town, South Carolina; I believe the reaſon of his leaving the country was, he had been out a ſhooting; bringing home home his gun charged, he left it in a room where there were his brother and ſiſter, the younger brother of the lad the priſoner, took up the gun in mirth, and ſaid he would fire at his ſiſter, unfortunately the gun was charged, and it killed his younger ſiſter: it was on account of this unfortunate circumſtance, that the priſoner begged of his father to permit him to leave home, and ſeek his fortune elſewhere; his father permitted him to go, and put him under the care of a Captain M'Carty bound to this port; the Captain was obliged to ſell his ſhip, and could not afford this lad any longer protection; if the Court will put him under my protection, I have a ſhip going to the part where his father now lives, and I will pledge myſelf to the Court to ſend him to his father; he has had a good education, and till now was a very good boy, he may be reſtored.

Court. How old is he?—About ſeventeen.

Court to Priſoner. Will you undertake to go with that gentleman as a ſailor on board his ſhip?—Yes, my Lord.

GUILTY.

Court. Then let him be fined 1s. and delivered to that gentleman.

---

107. RICHARD CAIN, THOMAS WATSON, and GEORGE ONSLOW were indicted for burglariouſly and felonioufly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of George Stevens, about the hour of three in the night on the 10th of November laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein three ſhirts, value 10s. four ſhifts, value 8s. five yards of cloth, value 5s. one pillow caſe, value 6d. two nightcaps, value 6d. and one apron, value 1s. his property.

The witneſſes examined apart.

REBECCA STEVENS ſworn.

My huſband lives in Drury-lane, he keeps the Mogul's head; my houſe was broke open on the 10th of November, we had waſhed and hung ſome linen in the club room, every thing was ſafe over night, and I ſaw the windows both ſhut, there was no faſtening to the ſhutters, we went out of the room and locked the door about one o'clock in the morning; about eight the girl went in to open the windows, and ſhut the door again; at half after eleven I went to ſee if the things were dry, and I miſſed the things mentioned in the indictment, they were all there the night before; I immediately enquired about them, and could not find them, I did not obſerve any part of the houſe to be broke open; it being talked about the neighbourhood I got again one old apron, and one night cap; the things were found on the Monday, one Mrs. Dobſon had bought them as ſhe ſaid, becauſe ſhe thought they were mine, and a woman had been offering ſome ſhirts and ſhifts, I know nothing of the priſoners.

ELIZABETH SIMMONDS ſworn.

At half after eight on the Thurſday morning I went into this room, I found the ſaſh window open next King-ſtreet, I did not mind the clothes, the ſhutter was open, the other window was ſhut, and the ſhutter was ſhut.

How came you not to mention it?——I do not know, I did not take any notice about it, I did not ſhut it down.

Court to Mrs. Stevens. Did you find the window open?——Yes.

MARY DOBSON ſworn.

I produce an apron and cap, I bought them of Ann Geary, the 15th of November.

What did you give her for them?——Two ſhillings and two-pence, ſhe is here, I bought them by Mrs. Stevens's deſire, to find out the other things.

(The apron and cap depoſed to by Mrs. Stevens.)

ANN GEARY ſworn.

I ſold this cap and apron to Mrs Dobſon.

How

How did you come by them?——I had them and three ſhirts, and four ſhifts, all wet, from that young gentleman Thomas Watſon; it was on Thurſday morning, about a quarter after ſeven, I cannot tell the day of the month.

How long before you ſold them to Mrs. Dobſon?——Three or four days, I ſold the ſhirts and ſhifts to one Glover.

Did you buy them of Watſon?—No.

How came you to get them from him?——I went into a public-houſe to get a pennyworth of purl, and he aſked me to ſell them, he ſaid I need not be afraid.

Was he an intimate acquaintance of yours?——No, I have ſeen him ſeveral times before.

Did he tell you how he came by them?——No.

Court to Watſon. Have you any queſtions to aſk?

Priſoner. My Lord, this woman has been tried ſeveral times, I wiſh you to enquire into her character.

What are you?——I go out a charing, and ſell things in the ſtreet.

Are you a married woman?——No.

Priſoner. She is a woman that gets her living upon the town, ſhe will ſwear any other man's life away, as ſoon as ſhe would ours, ſhe was tried here the ſeſſions before laſt.

EDWARD LUCAS ſworn.

On Sunday the 21ſt of November I received information, and apprehended the priſoners, I am conſtable of St. Giles's pariſh; I went to the priſoner Cain's lodgings, I found him in the room ſtanding by the fire, and in ſearching under the bed I found theſe implements.

(Two crows, a hammer, and a piſtol tinder box produced.)

I then went after Watſon and took him in bed at his lodgings in Croſs-lane, I found nothing upon him, I took him to the round-houſe.

GEORGE MECHAM ſworn.

I know nothing of the robbery, I took all the three priſoners in cuſtody, and in Cain's room I ſaw theſe crows taken; I took Onſlow in Drury-lane, in the ſtreet, I found nothing upon him, Watſon was in bed with his girl.

Priſoner Watſon. I never ſaw the woman, I know nothing of the affair, I never gave her any thing to ſell for me.

RICHARD CAIN, GEORGE ONSLOW, } NOT GUILTY.

THOMAS WATSON, GUILTY.

Of ſtealing the goods, but not Guilty of the burglary.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

108. ANN BARKER, wife of WILLIAM BARKER, was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 3d day of November laſt, two pair of drawers, value 3s. two handkerchiefs, value 3s. one other handkerchief, value 12d. one pair of ſilk ſtockings, value 2s. a table cloth, value 5s. five linen towels, value 2s. one handkerchief, value 18d. and a pair of laced ruffles, value 4s. the property of Mary Bond.

MARY BOND ſworn.

I live in Dean-ſtreet Soho, the priſoner at the bar lived ſervant with me about nine months, I have been loſing things during the time ſhe lived with me; I loſt a table cloth, five towels, a dreſſer cloth, a long lawn white apron, a linen handkerchief, a pair of laced ruffles; I have ſeen them ſince, I had them from Mrs. Francis's houſe, the priſoner had my keys and acceſs to my property; I do not know when theſe things were loſt in particular.

——— FRANCIS ſworn.

The priſoner brought ſome things to our houſe, and aſked me to let her leave them them there till ſhe called for them, ſhe was ſervant at that time to this lady.

(The things produced.)

ELEANOR RICHARDS ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mrs. Bond, I went to Mrs. Francis's houſe by mere chance, and I ſaw this handkerchief on Mrs. Francis's neck, and theſe things were there, my miſtreſs has had them in her cuſtody ſince.

(The things depoſed to by Mrs. Bond.)

Mrs. Francis. I pawned ſomething for her by her deſire, ſhe owed me a little money, and ſhe bid me pay myſelf.

Priſoner. I lived with that lady nine months, I never had any wages, I lent her half a guinea, ſhe always gave me leave when I wanted money to pawn her things, ſhe never offered me a farthing.

Court to Richards. How long have you lived with Mrs. Bond?——Nine months, I always could have money when I aſked for it; Mrs. Bond never told me to pawn her things, nor the priſoner neither, not for herſelf.

Priſoner. Gentlemen I never had a farthing, the Lady took me out of ſpite to Litchfield-ſtreet, the Lady is in a very various way of life.

Court to Mrs. Bond. Had ſhe any wages of you?——Yes, I paid her wages as ſhe ſays.

Priſoner. Mr. Fletcher paid me my wages at the Rotation office, by order of Sir Robert Taylor.

ELIZABETH EDWARDS ſworn.

The priſoner came to me, and deſired I would go and receive her wages of a Lady whoſe name was Appleton, in Fitzroy-ſtreet; her miſtreſs was very much offended at the demand, and charged me on my life to tell her ſhe had robbed her; ſhe called this woman a thief, I told Mrs. Appleton, you have much the appearance of a gentlewoman, I beg you will adjuſt this matter, for the woman declares ſhe never robbed you, or any body elſe; I ſaid for my own ſatisfaction, and the many obligations the priſoner at the bar has been under to me, I ſhould have been very happy for her family's ſake. Mrs. Appleton ſaid, if ever ſhe dared go nigh any of her friends, ſhe would proſecute her; I ſaid Madam, do not be ſo cruel; this is the gentlewoman that is the proſecutrix now, I had this order to demand the wages of Mrs. Appleton; will you be ſo obliging Madam to let me look at your face (to the proſecutrix) I am not afraid to ſhew my face before all the world; that is the very Lady, Sir, who went by the name of Appleton; and ſhe further ſaid, that if this woman had any demands, that her maſter ſhould hang her; which of the maſters I cannot ſay.

Court. Then you went to that Lady who bore the name of Appleton, and you demanded wages, and ſhe ſaid if ſhe troubled her for wages, her maſter ſhould hang her?——Yes.

Mr. Silveſter, Council for the Proſecutrix.

Who are you?——A woman Sir.

You look more like a man than a woman, what are you?——I am a wife, I have lived in Printing-Houſe-yard, Black-friars, eight years, I never was before a Court, nor my name in queſtion before.

Did you know the hand-writing of the priſoner?——Yes.

Look at that, and ſee if that is her hand writing?—There is her hand writing on the note.

Put on your ſpectacles?——I have none Sir, but if you pleaſe to lend me a pair, I can tell you; my huſband was a jeweller by trade, I now follow the ſtay-making buſineſs, and employ a great many hands (looks at it) I cannot pretend to ſay, I have a vaſt many notes, I have ſeen her writing.

(Read.)

"Received the 4th of November, nine months wages, due the 10th of October."

Court. When was it you went to Mrs. Appleton?——The week following, after ſhe was diſcharged by her miſtreſs.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped, and diſcharged.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

109. SARAH LADLOVE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 23d of October laſt, a gold mourning ring, value 8s. the property of Jonathan White, privately in his ſhop.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

110. WILLIAM THOMAS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 19th of November laſt, one blunderbuſs, value 10s. the property of Nathaniel Parker Forth, Eſq.

The proſecutor could not ſwear to the blunderbuſs.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

111. ANN FARMER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 23d of October laſt, a ſilver watch, chain, ſeals, value 50s. and five guineas, value 5l. 5s. the property of Richard Hurd, in the dwelling of Samuel Hatton.

The proſecutor being very much intoxicated would not undertake to ſwear to the priſoner.

NOT GUILTY.

Court to Priſoner. If the proſecutor's conſcience had not been tenderer than your's, you might have been convicted of a capital offence; however, you have this aggravation of your crime, that you know now that you have robbed an honeſt man.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

112. ELIZABETH COOPER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 20th of November laſt, two pair of linen ſheets, value 10s. two blankets, value 4s. one bolſter, value 2s. one quilt, value 2s. a tin kettle, value 12d. three flat-irons, value 1s. 6d. the property of Mary Smith, widow, being in a certain lodging, let by the ſaid Mary to the ſaid Elizabeth, to be uſed by her with the ſaid lodging, againſt the ſtatute.

Mary Smith depoſing, that ſhe did not think the priſoner took the things with a felonious intent, the Jury found her

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

113. SAMUEL SATCHER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 10th day of November laſt, one tea-cheſt, value 3s. one pair of ſilver ſhoe buckles, value 7s. one bird-cage, value 5d. three white aprons, value 3s. two ſilver ſleeve buttons, value 1s. and three guineas, value 3l. 3s. the property of Elizabeth Hole.

The Proſecutrix left theſe things in a hackney coach, and found them afterwards at the priſoner's lodgings, who was the coachman; ſhe ſaid, ſhe believed they were taken by miſtake, and did not want to hurt the priſoner.

Court. You ſpeak like a very humane and good woman, but however you owe a duty to the public; do you believe he took them with an intent to ſteal them?—No, I do not think he did.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

114. CORNELIUS CASSODY was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 4th of December, an iron-bar, value 2s. one iron-padlock, value 6d. the property of Chriſtopher Coates.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

115. WORRALL GEORGE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 4th of December, one copper ſauce-pan, value 4s. two flat-irons, value 2s. the property of Henry Jones.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

116. JOHN BROWN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 2d of November laſt, one pair of ſaddle piſtols, value 30s. the property of Uritas Humphrys.

GUILTY.

Privately whipped.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

117. SAMUEL KIRBYN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 8th day of November laſt, one pair of ſtockings, value 10d. one neckcloth, value 2d. one apron, value 10s. the property of John Hayward.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

118. WILLIAM MOUNTAIN was indicted for burglariouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of John Lejune on the 3d of November laſt, about the hour of ſeven in the night, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein a brown ſilk gown, value 15s. another gown, value 5s. a black ſilk gown, value 6s. a black crape and worſted gown, value 4s. one apron, value 6d. a ſilk cloak, value 1s. a bed quilt, value 2s. a remnant of worſted damaſk, value 1s. the property of the ſaid John Lejune: And ANN HEWITT was indicted for receiving the ſame, knowing them to be ſtolen.

Mrs. Lejune depoſed to the burglary, and loſing the things, but could not tell who took them; and John Armſtrong found part of the things at the houſe of Mrs. Hewitt, who very readily produced them, and came to the Juſtice's and gave evidence, that ſhe had them of the priſoner and another, after which ſhe was indicted as a receiver: the Court obſerved, the Juſtice ſhould not have ſuffered the woman to be indicted as a receiver, after he had examined her as a witneſs, there being nothing improper in her conduct; and ſhe would have been a very legal and proper witneſs againſt the priſoner and his accomplice; inſtead of which the Juſtice ordered her to be indicted as the receiver, and the accomplice as the witneſs; therefore, the priſoners were

BOTH ACQUITTED.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

119. JAMES HOBBS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 20th day of November laſt, one ſilver watch, value 40s. a ſteel chain, value 1s. two ſtone ſeals, ſet in baſe metal, value 2s. one other ſeal, value 6d. the property of Thomas Holmes.

Thomas Holmes depoſed the priſoner came in to ſweep the chimney, and his watch hung by the ſide of the chimney, and his wife miſſed the watch, and purſued purſued the priſoner into Moorfields, and caught him, and he took the watch out of his pocket.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

120. CHARLES MEDLEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 21ſt of November laſt, one ſilver watch, value 20s. and one key, value 1d. the property of Solomon Greentree.

SOLOMON GREENTREE ſworn.

I loſt my watch the 21ſt of November, it hung in the bar, the priſoner was in the houſe, the time it was loſt, I do not recollect any body elſe being there, I had a little girl in the bar, who was aſleep, I was in the cellar, the priſoner came back in about an hour and a half, I accuſed him of taking the watch, he denied it at firſt, when the conſtable came, he owned he took it.

Court. Did you make him any promiſe?——Yes I did, upon that he told me where it was, I found it at a houſe in Chick-lane.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

121 JAMES HARVEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 16th of November laſt, one bricklayer's ſcreen, value 10s. the property of John Mills.

The parties not appearing, the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

122. SARAH MASON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 2d day of November laſt, two aprons, value 1s. the property of William Smith; and one other check apron, value 6d. the property of Elizabeth Hannible.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

123. THOMAS MORRIS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 2d day of December laſt, five pounds of tobacco, value 5s. the property of Samuel Pearſon.

Edward Ogle not appearing, the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

124. CATHERINE HART was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 21ſt of November laſt, three gowns, value 20s. a ſilk petticoat, value 3s. a dimity petticoat, value 3s. five ſhirts, value 20s. four ſhifts, value 8s. three bonnets, value 3s. the property of John Norfolk, in his dwelling houſe.

JOHN NORFOLK ſworn.

I am a fiſhmonger in White-roſe-court, Coleman-ſtreet, on Sunday the 21ſt of November, my wife and me went to church in the morning, and left the priſoner, who is our ſervant, at home, ſhe had lived with us about three weeks; when we returned about one, I found the door upon the ſingle latch, the houſe ſtripped, and the priſoner gone; I found her afterwards at the Waggon and Horſe, at Tottenham, ſhe had ſome of my wife's things on; ſhe took the conſtable to a houſe juſt by, where the property was.

JOHN

JOHN CLARK ſworn.

I found the things at the houſe of one John Howard, there was a company drinking with the priſoner, I took her out, and ſhe told me the things were very near, I told her to go before, ſhe got from me; I found her in half an hour.

(The things depoſed to.)

JOHN HOWARD ſworn.

I live at Edmonton, the priſoner left this bundle at my houſe, I have no acquaintance with her; ſhe was taken before ſhe came back; I never ſaw the bundle open till ſhe was taken.

Priſoner. I leave it to you, Sir, and the Jury.

Court to Proſecutor. What may be the value of theſe things, if they are above forty ſhillings value, it will be a capital offence.

Proſecutor. My Lord, I value them at thirty ſhillings, in order to ſave her life, becauſe the wretch's life is no value to me.

GUILTY, 30s.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

125. WILLIAM DEADMAN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 11th of November laſt, four braſs cocks, value 20d. the property of Thompſon Warner.

GUILTY.

Privately whipped and diſcharged.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

126. THOMAS HALL and EDWARD HALLARD were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 3d of December laſt, ſeven quart pewter pots, value 4s. one pint pot, value 1s. the property of John Long.

The Proſecutor not appearing, the priſoners were

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

127. THOMAS HALL and EDWARD HALLARD were again indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the ſame day, one pint pot, value 1s. and a half-pint pot, value 6d. the property of Timothy Smith.

The Proſecutor not appearing, the priſoners were

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

128. JOHN BURNE and GEORGE VARLO were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 20th of November laſt, twenty ſquirrel ſkins, value 12s. the property of John Daniel, and William Paul.

BOTH GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

129. BENJAMIN CHAMBERS and WILLIAM BANISTER were indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting John Green, on the King's highway, on the 8th day of December laſt, putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will, eighteen mock pearl waiſtcoat buttons, value 6d. a penknife, value 2d. and two rings, value 1d. his property.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

130. ELIZABETH HYNDES was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 4th of November laſt, one cloth coat, value 5s. one Mancheſter waiſtcoat, value 5s. the goods of John Cooper, privily in his ſhop.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council, aſking the proſecutor if he had a partner, and it appearing he had, and his name not being in the indictment, the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

131. ELIZABETH GEARISH was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 6th day of November, one ſilver watch, value 4l. a baſe metal watch chain, gilt with gold, value 5s. one key, value 1d. a ſtone ſeal, value 2s. the property of David Davis, privily from his perſon.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Lord LOUGHBOROUGH.

---

132. JOHN SIMMS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 2d day of December laſt, one hundred pounds weight of lead, value 50s. belonging to Francis Bullock and Thomas Bullock, then and there fixed to a certain building of theirs, againſt the ſtatute.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Lord LOUGHBOROUGH.

---

133. CHARLES HOWARD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 20th of November laſt, one hempen ſack, value 12d. containing four buſhels of oats, the property of John Auſtin.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

134. ELIZABETH FOGERY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 23d day of July, one pair of ſheets, value 6s. the property of Mary Salway.

This being in a lodging room, and the priſoner being indicted generally, ſhe was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

135. WILLIAM COOPER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 30th of October laſt, one wooden box, value 18d. and ſixty pounds weight of wax candles, value 6l. the property of Alexander Barclay.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

136. HENRY BOTHAM was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 29th day of November laſt, four cotton bed curtains, value 40s. and ſeveral other things, out of his lodging rooms.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

137. JOHN MORGAN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 24th of June

June laſt, one glaſs lamp, value 2s. and one tin lamp-rim, value 2d. the property of Thomas Macemore.

GUILTY, 10d.

Whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Lord LOUGHBOROUGH.

---

138. JOHN SEALY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 4th of November laſt, fourteen yards of printed callico, value 5l. the property of Meeſon Scholey, in his dwelling houſe.

NOT GUILTY.

To be detained till next Seſſions.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Lord LOUGHBOROUGH.

---

139. THOMAS GLOVER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 3d day of December laſt, one live cow, price 8l. the property of James Ward and John Arthur.

The priſoner being ſtopped with the cow in Diot-ſtreet, ſaid the cow was not his, but he found it in Long-acre, and gave his direction, where he was afterwards taken; there being no proof of the ſtealing, he was not put on his defence.

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Lord LOUGHBOROUGH.

---

140. JOHN LEAPER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 29th day of October laſt, four linen bags, value 2s. and twenty pounds weight of hard ſoap, value 14s. the property of John Dupois.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Lord LOUGHBOROUGH.

141. JOHN FITZGERALD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 4th of December, one cloth coat, value 8s. one waiſtcoat, value 4s. and one pair of breeches, value 3s. the property of Patrick Hewngley.

The Proſecutor not being able to ſwear to the things, the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Lord LOUGHBOROUGH.

---

142. THOMAS M'CAN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 2d day of November laſt, a ſhag waiſtcoat, value 6s. the property of Iſaac Levy.

GUILTY, 10d.

Whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Lord LOUGHBOROUGH.

---

143. MARY BIRCH was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 18th of November laſt, a cloth coat, value 12s. a dimity waiſtcoat, value 7s. a hat, value 3s. a pair of ſhoe buckles, value 3s. the property of John Wheeler.

GUILTY, 10d.

To be privately whipped, and confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Lord LOUGHBOROUGH.

---

144. ELIZABETH PRITCHARD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 23d of October laſt, one ſilver watch, value 20s. two ſeals, value 1s. the property of Joſeph Young.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped, and confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Lord LOUGHBOROUGH.

145. WIL-

145. WILLIAM RUSSELL was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 30th of April laſt, ſix buſhels of oats, value 12s. ſix truſſes of hay, value 3s. three buſhels of horſe beans, value 3s. the property of George Addis and Thomas Winſlow; and JOHN BREWER was indicted for feloniouſly receiving the ſame, knowing them to be ſtolen.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Lord LOUGHBOROUGH.

---

146. WILLIAM BACOT was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 10th of December laſt, one ſilver watch, value 20s. the property of William Thompſon.

Mrs. Thompſon found the priſoner ſitting in the kitchen, he went out ſoon after, and ſhe miſſed the watch, which her huſband left at home, and ſhe found it the ſame day at the pawnbroker's.

And Reynolds, a pawnbroker, produced the watch, which he took in the ſame day of the priſoner.

The Priſoner called one witneſs who gave him a very good character.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Lord LOUGHBOROUGH.

---

147. WILLIAM BINGHAM was indicted for ſtealing, on the 17th day of December, one paſte pin, value 2s. and 6s. the property of Ann Plant.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Lord LOUGHBOROUGH.

148. JOHN HOWE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 8th day of December, eight pounds of lump ſugar, value 5s. the property of John Robinſon.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Lord LOUGHBOROUGH.

---

149. ISAAC DUPRE was indicted for ſtealing, on the 6th of November laſt, eight pounds of tobacco, value 8s. the property of Thomas Gerrard..

GUILTY.

Whipped:

Tried by the ſecond London Jury, before Lord LOUGHBOROUGH.

---

150. JOHN HARFORD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 2d of December laſt, two caſks, value 3s. and twenty gallons of geneva, value 4l. the property of Alexander Gordon and Malachy Foot.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

151. DANIEL MACAWAY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 23d day of November laſt, one callico ſhawl, value 10s. the property of William Gibſon.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

152. PETER FINNEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 26th day of November laſt, ſeven pounds weight of American American leaf tobacco, value 12s. the property of Iſaac Delmally.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

153. JOEL ABRAHAMS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 29th of of October laſt, a wooden box, value 1s. and a quantity of linen, value 5l. the property of Robert Wrangle.

GUILTY.

Fined, 1s.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

154. EDWARD BOND was indicted for ſtealing, on the 24th of November laſt, one loaf of ſugar, value 15s. the property of Thomas Sheireff.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

155. DANIEL MURPHY was indicted for ſtealing, on the 11th of November laſt, half a pound weight of American leaf tobacco, value 6d. the property of Joſeph Jackſon.

GUILTY.

Privately whipped.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

156. ISAAC DUKES was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 17th of November laſt, eight pair of ſtockings, value 12s. the property of Edward Porter.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

157. GEORGE NEWTON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 1ſt day of November, one pair of leather boots, value 8s. the property of Simon Leach.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

158. MARY BRAMHAM was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 16th day of November laſt, two ſtuff petticoats, value 20s. one pair of ſtays, value 18d. four yards and a half of cloth, value 5s. one waiſtcoat, value 3s. one cap, value 6d. one pair of cotton ſtockings, value 2s. one pair of nankeen breeches, value 2s. and one cloth cloak, value 5s. the property of John Kennedy.

Ann Kennedy depoſed, that ſhe took the priſoner to mind her children, and ſhe robbed her of the things in the indictment, while the proſecutor was gone to Covent-Garden market, and left the houſe and her child crying in the cradle; ſhe ran over to the pawn-broker's, Mr. Lane's, and found the buckles and the reſt of the things at different pawn-brokers. Several pawn-brokers produced the things pawned by the priſoner.

(The things depoſed to.)

Priſoner. I have nothing to ſay.

The priſoner called two witneſſes, who gave her a very good character as a very dutiful child.

The priſoner's mother was ſworn, and ſaid, the priſoner was not fourteen, and had been deluded from her ſix weeks, and knew nothing of her till ſhe found her at the proſecutor's houſe.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

159. ROBERT JONES was indicted for feloniously ſtealing on the 3d of December laſt, two pair of linen ſheets, value 4s. one cloth cloak, value 6s. one coat, value 2s. one great coat, value 6s. two linen bed curtains, value 2s. the property of John Jones.

The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoner.

ELEANOR JONES ſworn.

I caught the priſoner in my room, I ſeized him by the collar, he gave me a violent puſh in my ſtomach, and puſhed me on one ſide and run out, but ſtumbled over the ſtep; I cried out ſtop thief! and he was ſtopped in about a hundred yards, and I ſaw the priſoner drop the things mentioned in the indictment, and other things.

John Eades aſſiſted in ſeizing the priſoner, and was ſure to the man.

PRISONER's DEEENCE.

I was coming down Long-Acre, it was very dark, and a man run by me, and they came and took me.

Proſecutor. The priſoner was never out of my ſight.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Court to Priſoner. Your own conſcience will tell you what I am informed of, that you have been here three times before.

Priſoner. I never was, my Lord.

Court. You have been in impriſonment and have broke priſon, therefore make a particular memorandum, that it may be reported ſpecially to the King, that he may be tranſported ſeven years to the coaſt of Africa, among the Blacks.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

160. ELIZABETH DIXON was indicted for feloniouſly receiving, on the 20th of September laſt, one gold watch, value 5l. two gold watch keys, value 8s. one hook, value 2s. and three gold rings, value 6s. the property of one Thomas Andrews; whereof Alexander Dixon was, at the laſt general ſeſſions holden for the town and port of Dover, convicted of feloniouſly and burglariouſly ſtealing.

A Second Count for feloniouſly receiving, comforting, and maintaining the ſaid Alexander Dixon, well knowing him to have committed the ſaid felony and burglary, aforeſaid.

Thomas Andrews ſworn, proved the conviction of Alexander Dixon.

BENJAMIN BARBER ſworn.

In conſequence of a robbery at Dover, Dixon's father was taken with the property that had been ſtolen at Dover; he was aſked where the watches were, and he ſaid, he was ſent there to fetch them, innocently, and knew nothing where they were; and then ſaid, that if they would not hurt him, he would give them information where they might find the watches; he wrote a letter to his wife the priſoner, deſiring her to give the particulars of the burglary done at Dover.

Mr. Garrow. Have you the letter?—Yes.

Produce it?——She denied having any knowledge of it, and ſaid ſhe knew nothing of the property, or any thing about it; we preſſed her very much upon it, and told her if ſhe would reſtore us the property, it was all we wiſhed or wanted of her; but ſhe ſtill perſiſted in being ignorant, we went about the houſe to ſearch, and Jealous and me were in the kitchen, and left Mr. Andrews and her in the parlour; in that parlour I found ſome drawers that were locked and could not get into them, and we went out of the room, and returning we found the drawers open, and her at them: there was the ſilver watch which Mr. Andrews ſwore to, we inſiſted on ſearching her, ſhe refuſed, but we did ſearch her, and Mr. Carpmeal took a watch out of her boſom, and Jealous found ſome rings.

Mr. Garrow. This was the houſe of Dixon the father?——So I underſtood.

The father was admitted evidence againſt the ſon, and the ſon was executed?—Yes.

This woman denyed knowing any thing of the burglary at Dover?——Yes.

The Priſoner was not put on her defence being conſidered as cautious, leſt ſhe ſhould diſcover any thing that might affect her huſband.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

161. MARY MORRIS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 27th of November laſt, twelve yards of ſilk ribbon, value 12s. the property of John Gilſon Bambridge, privily in his ſhop.

MARY BAMBRIDGE ſworn.

I am a milliner in Taviſtock-ſtreet, on Saturday evening, the 25th of November, between ſix and ſeven, the priſoner came to my ſhop, ſhe came in alone, and asked for ſome ribbons, ſeveral boxes were ſhewn her; I did not ſerve her; ſhe ſtood three or four minutes before I was informed of the robbery, ſhe did not buy any thing before ſhe went out; I was informed by the next witneſs.

Mr. Peatt, Council for the Priſoner. Tell the Court what you know, not what you was informed?—This piece of ribbon was miſſing, and I went to her, and from under her cloak, under her right arm, I ſhook this piece of ribbon; the next witneſs ſaw her take it, there was fourteen yards, or rather more.

Court. What may it be worth a yard?—It coſt one and twenty pence a yard, I am ſure of the ribbon by my huſband's writing upon it "21," the word and figures, "18 yards," alſo are his hand writing.

Court. What did the priſoner ſay when the ribbon dropped from under her cloak?——She denied it; I immediately took her into cuſtody, I am ſure it dropped from under her cloak.

Mr. Peatt. It was between ſix and ſeven?——Yes.

Then you had candles on the counter?——Yes, I was on the right hand, not far from her.

Had ſhe frequented your ſhop?——I never ſaw her in my ſhop before, I ſaw nothing of this tranſaction before I was told of it, there were four cuſtomers in the ſhop when I came up to her; I ſuppoſe there might be eight or nine at firſt, but not near her; I came from behind the right-hand counter, ſhe was ſerved at the left-hand counter; there was nobody near her when I came up to her, ſhe had a black cloak on, but not a long one; I ſaw it drop from her, it was rolling from her right heel.

Is not it a common pattern?——I can ſwear both to the figures and the words.

Have not you ſold a great many ribbons of that pattern before?—Never.

Is not that a uſual length?——It is half a piece.

I ſuppoſe other ſhop-keepers mark their ribbons in the ſame manner?——I do not know what other people do, I never ſaw any marked in the ſame ſtile that that is done.

How long before this evening was it that you ſaw this ribbon in the drawer?——I had taken it out of the window before candle-light that very evening.

Was you before the Magiſtrate?——I was.

The Magiſtrate thought very ſlightly of the circumſtance, as it was then made out in evidence did not he?—I did not underſtand him ſo.

Did he offer to take bail?—I never heard a word about it.

ANNA MARIA OLIVER ſworn.

I am apprentice to the laſt witneſs, I remember ſeeing the priſoner perfectly well; ſhe came to our ſhop on Saturday the 27th of November, between ſix and ſeven, I ſerved her, ſhe aſked for ribbons, I ſhewed her ſeveral drawers, ſhe did not buy any; ſhe fixed fixed on one, and aſked the price of it, ſhe took a piece with her left hand; I do not recollect the price of it, I was ſo confuſed, but I ſaw her put her right-hand and take a piece out of the drawer, and conceal it under her cloak, the piece ſhe had in her left hand ſhe gave to me; I went and informed Mrs. Bambridge, ſhe immediately went to the priſoner, and ſhook her, and the ribbon fell from her; I was by, it appeared to fall from under her petticoats: this is the piece of ribbon, I ſaw her put it under her cloak, but it dropped from under her petticoat.

Mr. Peatt. You was very much confuſed?—Yes, there were one or two more women there, and a man came into the ſhop, I miſſed two or three pieces more; I am ſure the priſoner was the perſon; I ſaw the piece under her cloak; my miſtreſs was at the oppoſite compter.

Was not you directing your obſervation to your miſtreſs?—No, I could not, there was another lady ſtood before me, they were at the other counter, about a yard and a half off.

Are you ſure it dropped from under her petticoat?——I am not ſure, but it ſo appeared.

Which ſide did it drop, near the ladies, or near the door?——Near the ladies.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I went into the ſhop to buy ſome ribbon, and that young lady ſhewed me a box, that was too low a price, ſhe ſhewed me ſome at another price, I agreed for two yards at one ſhilling a yard, I laid down two ſhillings, I thought ſhe was gone round to cut it off, and ſhe went round to tell her miſtreſs ſhe was robbed; ſhe ſaid ſhe miſſed a piece of ribbon, ſays ſhe, whether it was the lady that went out, or this lady, I cannot ſay, but I ſuſpect this lady; I believe there were ten or twelve people in the ſhop, they took me backwards and ſtripped me, and found nothing at all upon me; when they came back, they found ſuch a piece of ribbon; they kept me from ten minutes after five till eight.

Court to Mrs. Bambridge. Did the ribbon drop before you ſearched her?——From my ſhaking her; ſhe went into a little room, and I followed her, miſſing other things, but no other than this we found upon her or near her.

Court to Miſs Oliver. You did not ſuſpect any of the reſt of the company?——No, I told Mrs. Bambridge I ſaw her take it.

The priſoner called three witneſſes who gave her a very good character.

GUILTY.

Of ſtealing, but not privately.

To be privately whipped, and diſcharged.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

162. JAMES COATES was indicted for ſtealing, on the 1ſt of December, one linen handkerchief, value 2d. the property of Thomas Lamb.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

---

163. WILLIAM THOMAS was indicted for ſtealing, on the 31ſt of October laſt, two iron gudgeons, value 30s. and two iron ſpades, value 3s. the property of Ralph Royal, and others.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

---

164. JOHN HOW was indicted for ſtealing, on the 30th of November, one pound three quarters weight of cotton, value 1s. 6d. the property of Thomas Wagg.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

165. JAMES

165. JAMES COOK was indicted for ſtealing, on the 25th of November, four ſwing looking glaſſes, value 16s. the property of Thomas Holmes.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

The preceding four tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

On Monday the 21ſt of December, being the eleventh day of this Seſſion, a Third London Jury were ſworn, as follows:

John Daviſon,	Archibald Hamilton,	Joſeph Smith,
Thomas Langford,	Thomas Evans,	John Lee,
Henry Cox,	Thomas Hall,	Richard Lumley,
Thomas Ovey,	John Pearl,	William Robins.

166. JAMES KEATES was indicted for ſtealing, on the 8th of December, one cuſhion of a ſedan chair, value 3s. the property of Lee M'Langley and John Crokan.

NOT GUILTY.

---

167. CUTHBERT RUTLEDGE, NATHANIEL DAVIS, and JAMES COLLINS, were indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Patrick Barret on the King's highway, on the 17th of November laſt, and putting him in fear, and taking from his perſon and againſt his will, one man's ſhoe, value 1s. one ſilver ſhoe buckle, value 8s. and one man's hat, value 5s. his property.

ALL THREE NOT GUILTY.

---

168. DANIEL HUGGINS was indicted for ſtealing, on the 31ſt of October, two lumps of ſugar, value 30s. the property of Charles Monery.

NOT GUILTY.

---

169. THOMAS CLARKE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 4th of November laſt, two table ſpoons, value 20s. the property of Thomas Rowney.

The priſoner came in to take out duſt, and two ſpoons were loſt, which one of the witneſſes, James King, ſaw in the kitchen when the priſoner was below: the priſoner ſent up the maid for a broom, and followed her, and flung down the baſket of duſt, and made off; the ſpoons were never found: the priſoner was taken next day.

Priſoner. The cart went on, and the horſe's ſhoe came off, or elſe I ſhould have come back.

King. He ſaid before the Juſtice, he had not been duſting for five days.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

The preceding four tried by the third London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

170. THOMAS FOSGATE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 18th day of October laſt, one ſilver ſnuff box, value 10s. two ſilver watches, value 40s. two ſilver pepper boxes, value 30s. one ſilver pepper caſtor, value 3l. two pair of ſilver ſugar tongs, value 20s. eight gold rings, value 4l. eighty-four ſhirt buckles, value 5l. four pair of ſilver ſhoe buckles, value 40s. forty pair of ſilver ſleeve buttons, value 3l. twenty-four ſilver ſtock buckles, value 4l. twelve ſilver thimbles, value 9s. ſeven ſilver punch ladles, value 4l. two tortoiſeſhell tooth-pick caſes, value 16s. one gold pen, value 8s. one ſilver boatſwain's call, value 2s. ſix ſilver claſps, value 4s. ſix ſilver handle knives, value 4s. ſix ſilver handle forks, value 4s. one braſs mortar, value 10s. thirty ſix-pair of ſtone knee buckles ſet in ſilver, value 5l. two hat buckles, value 8s. twelve ſilver watch keys, value 18s. one glaziers diamond, value 8s. one golden balance, value 5s. twelve pair of ſciſſars, value 8s. one glaſs bottle covered with leather, value 1s. thirty ſilver tea ſpoons, value 4l. and ten pounds in money numbered, the property of George Author in his dwelling houſe: And JOSEPH WILKS was indicted for feloniouſly receiving on the ſame day, one glaziers diamond, twelve tea ſpoons, ſix ſtock buckles, ſix pair of ſciſſars, two ſilver ſalts, two punch ladles, ſix pair of knee buckles, one hat buckle, twelve ſhirt buckles, one tortoiſeſhell toothpick caſe, and one gold pen, being part and parcel of the above goods, knowing them to have been ſtolen.

GEORGE AUTHOR ſworn.

I keep a ſilverſmith and toy ſhop, on Tower-hill, I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment on Monday morning the 18th of October laſt, about five minutes after ſix, I came down ſtairs and found the ſtreet door open, and my own ſervant was gone, my ſhop window was ſtripped, and both my tills were broke open; my ſervant's name is James Royer, he is now an evidence; I immediately went to his mother's in Old-ſtreet, and acquainted her of her ſon's robbing me; ſhe directed me to the priſoner Foſgate, I immediately went to his houſe, and his brother was in bed, I told him I would give him five guineas to obtain a ſight of my ſervant and my property, we went and ſearched about and got a conſtable, and gave charge of the brother, as I thought he was the principal perſon, and the brother acknowledged.

Mr. James, Priſoner Foſgate's Council. I beg to ſubmit in ſuch a caſe, whether your Lordſhip would not wiſh the accomplice to withdraw.

Court. Certainly.

Mr. Author. We ſearched after the priſoner till Wedneſday, the priſoner Foſgate was apprehended at Bath, I was ſent for to Bath, I had been twice at Briſtol, I found my property at Bath, at the Mayor's office; the priſoner Foſgate was then in cuſtody, the other priſoner was not in cuſtody, I know nothing of Wilkes; a ſilver nags-head I ſwear to, here is the ſeal to my watch, and chain that I wore two years, theſe things had been in my own houſe five or ſix years at my own table; in ſhort, the whole of the things are mine, therefore I can ſwear to every thing that is here; they were brought into Court and delivered up to me.

What is the value of thoſe things that you produce?——I ſuppoſe ten pounds, theſe things were in my ſhop window.

Mr. James. James Royer was your ſervant?——Yes.

In what capacity?——To clean ſhop, knives, &c. at ſix guineas a year, he boarded and lodged in the houſe.

What part of the houſe?—In the garret.

I need ſcarcely aſk you this queſtion whether Royer had not at all times acceſs to the property in your ſhop?——He had, excepting the tills that were locked.

This property was miſſed on the Monday morning?——It was.

You did not diſcover any part of that property, or where it was?——No, Sir, not till the 17th of November.

CHARLES STEWART ſworn.

I ſaw ſome young fellows come in, and they brought in a box, and had three pots of beer and ſome bread and cheeſe at my maſter's houſe; I live at the ſign of the Walnut-tree, Mr. Smallwood's, it was on Monday, but I cannot ſay the day of the month.

Was it laſt month, or in October?——It was laſt month.

How long ago?——I cannot recollect indeed the time it was, it was not two months ago, the priſoners are the two young men I ſaw.

What time in the morning?——As near as I can recollect it was between eleven and twelve, and one ſaid to the other make haſte, for the ſtage is going away, and they aſked my miſtreſs for lodgings; ſhe did not chuſe to give them lodgings becauſe they were ſtrangers, they ſtopped about three quarters of an hour, they were in a great hurry.

What ſtage were they enquiring after?—They did not mention any ſtage, but one ſaid to the other, we muſt make haſte for the ſtage is going; theſe two young men, and one James Royall all came in together, and that priſoner (Wilks) went out, and brought the box in, it was ſuch a box as that, I cannot ſay where they brought it from, they took it away again.

Court. Did you ever ſee any of theſe young men before?——I never ſaw them before in my life.

What induced you to take ſo much notice of them?——Nothing, I knew them when I ſaw them before the Lord Mayor.

How long after was that?—It was about a month, I am very poſitive they are the men, I knew them again immediately in my Lord Mayor's office.

Mr. James. You are very ready with the name of Royall, did you never ſee him before?——I never ſaw any of the three, I only ſwear to ſeeing them then, I never opened my mouth to them at all, I do not know the names of theſe men.

You ſay that man (Foſgate) ſtaid?——Yes, they were not above ten minutes gone, they were about three quarters of an hour in the houſe.

Mr. Knowles, Council for Priſoner Wilks. How long ago is it ſince you ſaw theſe young men at your houſe?——About five weeks.

Is your houſe a houſe of much cuſtom?——I have not been above two months there, in the winter time it is not, but in the ſummer time there is a good deal of company.

I ſuppoſe you may have twenty people there in a day?——No.

Is it not a public-houſe?—Yes.

How came you to recollect theſe three men?——Only by hearing the robbery was committed, we knew they were in the houſe, becauſe they brought in the box.

Should you have known them if you had met them in the ſtreet?——Yes, becauſe they came in with the box.

Have you ſeen Royall lately?——Yes.

Have you had any converſation with him lately?——I never ſpoke to him in my life, I have not ſeen him till to-day.

RICHARD DAWSON ſworn.

I keep a barber's ſhop, I uſe this houſe; about the 18th day of laſt month, I cannot be particular to the day, Robert Foſgate and James Royall came to my houſe at Stepney, they came down there in the morning, and they aſked the favour to leave a box, and this James Royall ſaid he had a very good place to go to, he wiſhed to leave the box there; they had ſome breakfaſt, they then went and bought ſome clothes, they dined and went away, and the Tueſday after James Royall came for the box, that was the very next day; I went with him in the coach to Whitechapel-church, he had taken a place in the Stepney ſtage: I carried it down to Whitechapel-church, and there he took a coach, and we went to Friday-ſtreet, and there he took it out, he ſaid he was to go by his maſter's coach to the other end of the town, I never ſaw him again till I ſaw him before the Alderman.

Court. Was Wilks the other priſoner there?——I did not ſee him.

Court. They cannot be ſpeaking of the ſame time?——Royall and Foſgate breakfaſted and dined at my houſe.

RICHARD TILLCOCK ſworn.

I apprehended the priſoner Wilks at the French-horn in Wood-ſtreet.

What

What day was it?——I do not recollect the day, it was the day after he came from Bath I found nothing upon him.

JOHN NEWMAN ſworn.

On the 18th of October the proſecutor called upon me, and I took charge of Foſgate, and I went and ſearched his lodgings, and in his room I found this ſilver buckle, which the proſecutor ſaid was his, I found it on the mantle piece concealed with ſome dirt over it.

(The buckle depoſed to by the proſecutor.)

I can ſwear this was among the plate taken out of my ſhop.

Newman. At Wilks's lodgings I found nothing, theſe four tickets were at the bottom of a box that was found at Mr. Royall's, they are price marks of two dozen ſpoons.

Proſecutor. They are my hand writing.

Mr. James. Who did the proſecutor give charge of to you?—Of young Foſgate.

Who do you mean by young Foſgate?——The brother of the priſoner at the bar.

Proſecutor. This box is mine, it was in my ſhop with plate, it was in my poſſeſſion the Saturday before, and there was a pin in the box very particular that I could ſwear to, it was in my poſſeſſion on Saturday.

JOHN HART ſworn.

I only know of the taking of Wilks this day fortnight at ſeven at night, I took him at the Roſe and French-horn in Wood-ſtreet; I found nothing upon him I was not at his lodgings.

Court to Proſecutor. Who is there here that proves theſe things were taken on the priſoners, or delivered up by them?——There is nobody in Court but myſelf who ſaw ſome of the things brought into the Mayor's office at Bath.

Court. That will not do, we do not know they were taken on the priſoner?—I have a letter from the Mayor at Bath.

Court. That will not do.

Proſecutor. Here is Royall the accomplice.

Court. That will not do, here is nothing to reach theſe people at preſent.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, we are very ſorry for it for the ſake of public juſtice, it is a great robbery, but here is a very material gap in the evidence.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Court to Priſoners. You have had the narroweſt eſcape I have known, and I repeat it to you, if you had been convicted, one of you would have been certainly executed, and the other tranſported for fourteen years; therefore let this be a very ſerious warning to you, and bleſs the humanity of the law; you ſee your lives are ſaved by that law you are trampling on every day.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

 The next Part will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 8th of DECEMBER, 1784, and the following Days;
Being the FIRST SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,
PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER I. PART X.

LONDON:
Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)
And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and
S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.
M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

171. BENJAMIN WEST was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Hannah Day on the King's highway, on the 18th day of November laſt, and putting her in corporal fear and danger of her life, and feloniouſly taking from her perſon, and againſt her will, one linen napkin, value 1s. and three pounds of mutton, value 3d. the property of Michael Deſchamps.

HANNAH DAY ſworn.

I am a ſingle woman, I live ſervant of all work with one Mr. Deſchamps, No. 15, in David-ſtreet, he is a French teacher, I have lived there almoſt a twelvemonth.

Did any thing happen to you on the 18th of December?——I was coming through Major Forbes's paſſage, Carnaby market, candles were lighted, and all the ſhops were open, there is a large linen-draper's; the priſoner came and looked in my face twice, but he never ſpoke to me, he did not meet me, but he puſhed me, he came from behind me, I was going home from towards David-ſtreet, I never ſaw him before that time; he was dreſſed in a kind of a drab-coloured coat, he had ſome ſplaſhes upon his face, there was ſomething black, more large than the other, but whether it was a mole or not I cannot ſay; he had a round hat on, it was not much drawn over his face, it was one of them that turn up, he only puſhed me and ſnatched the bundle, and run away, he puſhed me from him, and I ſaved myſelf from falling, the bundle was under my arm, I found it go, and I ſaid the man has got my bundle; a gentleman followed him and took him, he was out of my ſight a little while, he turned on the right hand of King-ſtreet.

You ſaw him after he was in King-ſtreet?——Yes.

Are you ſure from the view you had of him in the paſſage, that the man you ſaw was the ſame man?—The man that robbed me of the bundle was a little man, I am ſure it was the priſoner, the bundle was brought to me in King-ſtreet, it was my bundle.

WILLIAM PICKERING ſworn.

Between five and ſix I heard the cry of ſtop thief, I took the priſoner, and the proſecutrix came up and ſaid he was the man that robbed her; the priſoner ſaid it was the man that was with him, and not himſelf, which other man followed us to the magiſtrate, and I took him into cuſtody, and then the priſoner denied knowing the man.

Priſoner. I never ſaw the woman before in my life.

GUILTY.

Of ſtealing, but not violently from the perſon.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

172. WILLIAM MILLER was indicted for ſtealing on the 22d of October, eight tobacco ſtoppers, value 3s. the property of Anthony Andrews.

There being no evidence but the priſoner's confeſſion obtained under promiſes of favour, he was

ACQUITTED.

---

173. NICHOLAS ENGLISH was indicted for ſtealing on the 28th of October laſt, twenty eight pounds of hair powder, value 14s. the property of William Crookſhanks and George Adams.

GUILTY,

Tranſported for ſeven years.

---

174. HARRIOT ALLEN and MARY ALLEN were indicted for feloniouſly conveying on the 28th of November laſt, divers womens cloaths into the gaol of Newgate, to John Stockdale then under ſentence of tranſportation, being a diſguiſe proper to facilitate the eſcape of priſoners, with intent that the ſaid John Stockdale, might eſcape out of ſuch gaol, and by which means the ſaid John Stockdale attempted to make his eſcape out of the ſaid gaol.

Mr. Garrow, Counſel for the Priſoner, contended that it was not proved that the priſoners conveyed any thing into the gaol to Stockdale, but merely that they came into the gaol, and that afterwards one of the priſoners came to the gate with Stockdale, dreſſed in womens cloaths, and the charge being for conveying certain ſpecific articles, (particularly named in the indictment) into the ſaid gaol to Stockdale, the priſoners were

BOTH ACQUITTED.

---

175. JAMES otherwiſe STEPHEN COX was indicted for ſtealing on the 2d of November, twenty-five pounds weight of leaden pipe, value 2s. belonging to Joſeph Wells, and fixed to his dwelling houſe.

A ſecond count for ſtealing on the ſame day, a ſaw, value 4s. 6d. the property of James Williams.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

---

176. WILLIAM WILD was indicted for ſtealing on the 10th of December, one bundle of ſteel bars, value 20s. the property of William Homer, and Alexander Raby.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

---

177. WILLIAM HOW was indicted for ſtealing on the 8th of November, one pound and a quarter of Spaniſh wool, value 18d. the property of Mark Wayland.

A ſecond count, laying it to be the property of perſons unknown.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

---

178. JOSEPH MARQUIS and JAMES KELLY were indicted for ſtealing on the 29th of November laſt, one iron grate to a cellar window, value 9s. the property of Thomas Priddle and Ralph Allen Mould.

BOTH GUILTY.

Privately whipped.

---

179. EDWARD WRIGHT was indicted for ſtealing on the 27th of November laſt, one cane, value 2s. the property of Samuel Sanxter.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

---

180. JOHN HALWAY was indicted for ſtealing on the 6th of December, one deal deal box, value 6d. and twenty-four pounds of jar raiſins, value 20s. the property of John Butler.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

---

181. JOHN EVANS was indicted for ſtealing on the 26th of October laſt, one linen handkerchief, value 10d. the property of John Bricknell.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

---

182. JAMES MATTHEWS was indicted for ſtealing on the 2d of November laſt, one linen handkerchief, value 1s. the property of Edward Overton.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

---

183. JOHN OSBORNE was indicted for ſtealing on the 14th of November, one pint pewter pot, value 12d. the property of Robert Jones.

GUILTY.

Privately whipped.

---

184. JOHN TAYLOR was indicted for ſtealing on the 27th of November, one pair of ſheets, value 8s. the property of William Bolton.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

The preceding thirteen were tried by the third London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

185. NICHOLAS GREENWELL and ROBERT FREEMAN were indicted for that they, on the 22d day of November laſt, with force and arms, with a certain offenſive weapon called a piſtol, value 5s. which the ſaid Robert Freeman had and held in his right hand, in and upon James Sommerfield, felonioufly, malicioufly, and unlawfully did make an aſſault, and him on the King's highway, did in bodily fear put, with intent to ſteal his goods and money.

JAMES SOMMERFIEDD ſworn.

I am a drover; in November laſt, but I cannot tell the day, it was on a Monday, I was with three more going to Barnet, in a return chaiſe, the priſoner Freeman came to the ſide of the horſes, and preſented a piſtol to the poſt-boy, and ſaid if he did not ſtop, he would blow his brains out, I did not hear him aſk for any money, it was moon light, he had a light coloured coat on, I did not ſee his face, I did not ſee anybody on the other ſide of the chaiſe, I cannot ſwear to his face, the poſt-boy drove his horſes to the next publick houſe, and he purſued after them, and took them in about a quarter of an hour, I was not at the firſt taking them.

JAMES PLATT ſworn.

I am a drover, I was with the laſt witneſs, about nine at night, the chaiſe was not quite ſtopped, the boy kept going on.

How long had you been in ſleep?——Not at all.

Did not you fall aſleep in the chaiſe?—No Sir, we had not got a mile.

Who bid the poſt boy ſtop?——The priſoner Greenwell.

Which ſide was he?——The near ſide as we went from Highgate.

Did you ſee any arms?——I ſaw a ſtick that he had, I ſaw nothing elſe.

Was it a tuck end?—No point to it.

Did you ſee his face?——No I ſaw his dreſs, when he ſtopped us, the other came up by the ſide of the poſt-boy and bid him ſtop, he ſaid ſtop, damn you, or I'll blow your brains out; then the poſt-boy ſaid blow and be damned, and hit the horſes a good lick, and flew away from them, they did not aſk us for any thing, I know Freeman by his dreſs, we drove up to the houſe, about two or three hundred yards, then the poſtpoſt-boy mounted his horſe, and bid us go on, and he would follow theſe men, and we found them hid in a place like a well, Freeman ſtruck at me, and I knocked him down, and there was a piſtol lay, and another man took it away.

Which of them was it you knocked down?——Freeman, I ſaw the piſtol taken from him, Greenwell was in the well alſo, he run away directly, and was taken ſoon after, Greenwell had a blue coat on; the other had a whitiſh coat on, they had both aprons on, we overtook them about a mile, I was ſure when I overtook them, they were the two men, they ſtood by the ſide of the well.

Were they laid down, or were they ſtanding up?——Rather ſtooping down, it is juſt cloſe by the path.

Mr. Chetwood, council for the priſoner Freeman. What time was this when you was in the chaiſe, when you was attacked by ſomebody?——About nine, as near as I can gueſs.

Was it light enough to diſtinguiſh one man's face from another?——I knew them by their dreſs.

Could you diſtinguiſh the colour of a man's coat at that time?—Yes.

Did you deſcribe what kind of cloaths, either of them had at the dirt houſe?——No.

Was not there a perſon on horſeback?——Yes.

Why could they not have got out of your way, ſo that you could not have overtaken them?—They could have got over the hedges, if they pleaſed.

Was it not a dark night?——No, it was moon light, Freeman came on my ſide.

FRANCIS ANNELL ſworn.

I was at the bar of the chaiſe, on the outſide, at this time the priſoner Greenfield, came firſt to my horſes heads with a ſtick, and attempted to ſtop me, and bid me ſtop, Freeman came up with a piſtol, and clapped it to my ſide, and ſaid damn you if you do not ſtop, I will blow your brains out; I ſaw their faces, I can ſwear to them, the priſoners are the men, Freeman had a cocked hat, the other had a flapped hat.

What ſort of cloaths had they?—Greenwell had a dark colour, and the other a light, Freeman had two coats on, he had a light colour drab on the outſide; I mounted my horſe and purſued, and overtook them, juſt going up Highgate-hill, I rode by them, and knew them, there were four in company, therefore I did not offer to ſtop them, I put up my horſe at the Bull, intending to meet them, I could not leave my horſe upon the road, I found them down in the well, by the old ſtore houſe; I did not ſee them ſearched.

Mr. Chetwood. There were four of them?——Yes.

Could you diſtinguiſh their faces, did you ſee either of them, as you rode?—Yes, I never ſpoke to them, I was three yards diſtance, I know them again.

EDMUND COLLEYBRIDGE ſworn.

I heard the cry, and came out to help him to take Freeman, he was out of the well, the well belongs to my garden.

Court. Is the well ſo much in the foot way, that a man, or two might walk into it by accident?——It lays very ugly, I ſuppoſe the well is about two feet lower than the foot path, there is a quick and walls, to prevent people getting into my garden.

Jury. Are there any rails between your well, and the foot path?——No.

EDWARD PRATT ſworn.

I was at the taking of Freeman, he was juſt by the well.

FRANCIS HUDNELL ſworn.

I helped to take Greenwell, juſt at the upper end of the old Storehouſe, I ſaw him in the well, with the other priſoner, but he made his eſcape, I overtook him, he had no fire arms upon him.

The priſoner Freeman called his maſter Mr. Wright, who gave him a very good character, and ſaid he worked with him till he was taken up, and the foreman confirmed the ſame.

PRISONER GREENWELL'S DEFENCE.

I worked till nine that day, and then I went to ſee the fight; coming home Freeman overtook me, and coming to Highgate, we went to a ſpring well, and ſtopped to drink, and ſome men came up and took us.

Jury. Can you deſcribe the aprons?—One I took had a green linen or woollen, and the other, a black leather apron.

Which had the green one?—Freeman.

BOTH GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

186. ELIZABETH BURLEY was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Chriſtopher Inge on the King's highway on the 7th of December, and putting him in fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon, and againſt his will, one gold watch, value 10l. 10s. one compoſition ſeal ſet in gold, value 20s. the property of the ſaid Chriſtopher.

CHRISTOPHER INGE ſworn.

On the 7th of this month, I was out in the evening, and returning home about one in the morning, to where I live, which is in Chequer-court, Charing-croſs, at John's Coffee houſe, and in the middle of the paſſage to our own door I ſaw the priſoner ſtand; ſays ſhe, where are you going, I want to ſpeak to you; ſays I, I do not want to ſpeak toy ou, ſhe dropped her hand, and in half a moment ſhe had my watch out of my pocket; I felt my watch go by the chain, I held her faſt and called the watch, the watch came and the beadle took her, when I laid hold of her ſhe cried out murder! the watchman came up, and I ſaid take care of this woman; the beadle ſearched her and found the watch upon her, he found it under her arm as he told me; I never releaſed her till he came up.

Priſoner. Whether he did not give it me?——No.

JOHN ATKINSON ſworn.

I am beadle of St. Martin's, I was going my rounds about a quarter after one, on the 7th of this month, and I heard the call of watch, and the woman crying murder! I heard where the voice came from, and I found the proſecutor with his hat off having hold of a woman, and he charged her with robbing him; I directly laid hold of her too, ſhe ſaid, ſhe had no watch about her, I ſearched her and found the watch between her ſhift and her gown.

Look at that watch?——I do not know the maker's name nor number, the ſeal was a Wedgewood ſeal, nothing more than a chain and key.

ADAM LINSEY ſworn.

I am a watchman, I ſaw the watch taken out from under her left arm, as clear as I ſee your Lordſhip.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

The proſecutor and I, and another young woman, were together about twelve, we went and had two pints of purl and ſome gin in it; he had but ſixpence, he ſpent it, then this man and I went up this court where he lives; he had only a bad ſhilling, I ſaid that was of no uſe to me, he ſaid, he would go home with me, and we went up that court and he gave me his watch, and afterwards he wanted his watch back, he tore my handkerchief, and I ſcratched his neck, I ſaid, I would ſooner go to the watch-houſe than deliver it, after he had uſed me ill.

GUILTY.

Of ſtealing, but not violently.

To be privately whipped, and confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

187. DENNIS HAYES was indicted for that he, on the 2d of November laſt, on the King's highway, with a certain offenſive weapon and inſtrument, called a knife, on Abner Wyman, did make an aſſault, with intent his goods and monies, from his perſon and againſt his will, feloniouſly to ſteal, againſt the form of the ſtatute.

ABNER WYMAN ſworn.

The 2d of November I was coming from work, about half after nine I parted from my friend, and in about three parts of the way I was ſtopped by the priſoner, he caught at my watch chain, and another came up and damned me, and one of them cut me through the lips, but which of them cut me I cannot ſay; I was ſurpriſed, and I took notice of the perſon that took hold of my watch chain, there was a noiſe of a coach coming, and they made off, I cried out thieves! it was very near a lamp, but the night was neither dark nor light, it was about three parts from the turnpike, to Well Cloſe-ſquare on the road.

Are there many many houſes thereabouts?——Yes, it is a ſtreet, I purſued them about two hundred yards, and juſt as I got up there was a man ſaid, they are taken into this houſe, I went in and the landlord puſhed me out of doors, and ſaid, nobody came in there; I then went to Mr. Green's, and deſired they would ſend ſomebody out with me, but as I had not been robbed of any thing they would not, then I took a gentleman with me, and we ſaw the landlady, who ſaid, ſhe did not know us; and I ſtood in the tap room, the priſoner was there, and I went and laid hold of his collar, and ſaid, this is the man that ſtopped me firſt, he ſtood by the fire ſide; I am ſure that is the perſon that ſtopped me, becauſe I caught him for half a minute; when I had hold of his collar, he ſaid to me directly, it was not me that cut you, it was the other; a gentleman that was with me went for the conſtable, and the priſoner was taken into cuſtody.

Who was the perſon that was with you?—His name is Harkneſs, he is not here.

Priſoner. Did I offer to ſtop you?—He did not ſpeak to me, he took hold of my watch chain, and I took hold of his collar.

—— TAYLOR ſworn.

I am a conſtable, on the 12th of November I had charge of the priſoner at the bar, the priſoner ſaid to me, Mr. Taylor, it was not me that cut the gentleman, it was one Charles Younge, Charles Younge was taken up, and the proſecutor could not ſwear to Charles Younge, we took him before the Juſtice, and he owned he was the perſon.

Court. What public houſe was it?—The ſign of the Sailor's-return, in Cable-ſtreet, the landlord's name is John Martin, he has left the houſe, and is gone ſince, he kept out of the way in conſequence of this.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I never was in this place before.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Lord LOUGHBOROUGH.

---

188. JONATHAN PAYNE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 1ſt day of October laſt, one watch, with the inſide caſe made of ſilver, and the outſide caſe made of tortoiſeſhell, value 20s. and one ſilver boatſwain's call, value 5s. the property of John Robins.

JOHN ROBINS ſworn.

I am a ſilverſmith in the pariſh of St. George's, Middleſex; to my misfortune I know too much of the priſoner. I knew him a child in arms, I knew his father and mother before he was born; he came up from Briſtol, where his mother is, and brought a letter deſiring me to get him ſome employ; I took him into my houſe to bed and board for three weeks, and then got got him to work at a ſhip, and gave him board; he abſented himſelf one day and ſaid he had been at Blackwall, I reproved him, he made no anſwer but went away; he got privately into the houſe and ſtole theſe things, then he run out backwards, and we purſued him and found him concealed in a court; the magiſtrate told him it would be better for him if he would confeſs, for which reaſon he confeſſed where he parted with the watch and the boatſwain's call, he firſt pawned the watch in Newgate-ſtreet, and afterwards ſold it out to the perſon he then lodged with.

Court. Who was the magiſtrate?——Mr. Juſtice Smith.

What did the magiſtrate mean by ſaying it would be better for him?——I cannot tell.

How did he explain that?——I do not know.

Where was it that the watch was pawned?——In Newgate-ſtreet, at Mr. Fleming's, it was ſold to one Stokes, the man is here.

Court. Send for the pawn-broker.

Proſecutor. I ſtand before your Lordſhip in a double capacity, firſt as proſecutor, next as a friend to the priſoner; ſo far from wanting to take his life, I wiſh to ſave it; the indictment was found againſt him yeſterday was ſe'nnight, he is a native of the iſland of St. Helena, I went to the Eaſt-India houſe and drew up a petition to get him ſent there; they could not do that, but ſaid they were agreeable to ſend him to Bencoolen.

Court. We muſt firſt diſpoſe of him here according to law.

JOSEPH STOKES ſworn.

I did not know the priſoner till he came to lodge where I do, at No. 60, Lower Thames-ſtreet, at Mr. Weſt's; when he came there firſt he had a watch and money in his pocket, and he ſtaid there till he ſpent his money, and pawned his watch at Mr. Fleming's for ſixteen ſhillings; he came to aſk me for work at the water ſide, he ſaid he had pawned his watch, and would ſell it out and out, and he aſked me to buy it; I aſked him if it was his own property, he ſaid he had loſt the duplicate; accordingly he went to the Juſtice's, and took an oath that he had pawned this watch for ſixteen ſhillings, and that it was his own property; the watch ſtood me in one guinea altogether, he was in a ſailor's dreſs, the watch was pawned in the name of John Jones.

(The watch depoſed to.)

Proſecutor. It is a watch that came to me to be repaired.

Was it in your ſhop?——Yes.

The PAWNBROKER ſworn.

I live with Mr. Street at Wapping, this was brought to our ſhop about a month before the priſoner was taken up, he had a blue jacket on then; I never ſaw him before, but I knew him directly.

Proſecutor. I cannot ſwear to the caſe, but I believe it to be the ſame.

Court. Had you ſuch a one in your ſhop?——Yes.

Priſoner. I have nothing to ſay.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

He was humbly recommended to mercy.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury, before LORD LOUGHBOROUGH.

---

189. SUSANNAH HADD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 6th of November laſt, one pound of bacon, value 6d. and ſeven pounds of Cheſhire cheeſe, value 2s. the property of Thomas Jones.

And MARTHA WADMORE was indicted for feloniouſly receiving on the 7th of November laſt, ſeven pounds of cheeſe, part of the ſaid goods, knowing them to have been ſtolen.

And MARY MIDDLETON was alſo indicted for feloniouſly receiving on the ſame day, one pound weight of bacon, value 6d. other part of the ſaid goods, knowing them to have been ſtolen.

THOMAS

THOMAS JONES ſworn.

I live at Hammerſmith, I am a cheeſemonger; on the 6th of November I heard a noiſe in the maid's bed room, I went in and could not ſee any thing, at laſt I put my foot on the bedſtead and raiſed myſelf up, and upon the top of a large ſafe which ſtands in a paſſage and bulges out of the bed-room, there was a large piece of Cheſhire cheeſe; I went out of the room immediately, and acquainted Mrs. Jones with what I had ſeen, and ſhe adviſed me to take it back; I ſaid I would not, I would mark it, and when I had occaſion to ſend the maid out, I would ſet a watch to ſee who took it away, and accordingly I marked it, to be able to ſwear to it; on the morning I informed my young man, and deſired him to go with me; the next morning when we were going to church, I deſired this young man to watch, I took the young man to ſhew him the cheeſe and the mark, then there was a piece of bacon added to it, I marked the bacon before the young man; it appeared to me to be about four or five pounds, I gueſſed it to be, I expected it would be taken away while we were at church; when we came home he informed me, and I applied for a ſearch warrant, and found a piece of bacon boiling in a pot in Mary Middleton's apartments, that was on the ſame day, and there was that corner of the bacon that I had marked; we took the bacon and the woman, when we found that piece we did not ſearch for any more; we went to Mrs. Martha Wadmore, and in her houſe we found a piece of Cheſhire cheeſe on the dreſſer covered up; that piece of cheeſe was marked with an iron, with a croſs at the bottom of it; we brought away the woman and the cheeſe.

JAMES HARROW ſworn.

I am a conſtable, I live at Hammerſmith, I went with a ſearch warrant and found the cheeſe in the priſoner Wadmore's houſe, and the bacon in Mary Middleton's, in a pot boiling upon the fire.

WILLIAM PURCHASE ſworn.

On the 7th of November, which was Sunday, my maſter ſhewed me ſome cheeſe, and ſome bacon in the maid's room, and he took the rind and ſlipped it from the fat, my maſter and miſtreſs went to church, I waited at home to ſee who came, and in about a quarter of an hour Mary Middleton came to the back door to the ſervant, and ſhe and another man ſervant went to play and talk together, and juſt as they were talking together, the ſervant ſaid to Middleton, come here, I want you, and Middleton did not care to go, and ſhe ſaid again, I want you, and ſhe went up to her room, ſhe went away afterwards; when they came back Middleton came in by my ſide, and her right hand pocket ſeemed a little fuller than her left, then ſhe let Middleton out, then Wadmore came in with a baſket, and there was the maid and me in the room, and ſhe came down by my ſide, and ſhe looked up at the ſervant, but whether they ſpoke I do not know, and the ſervant went away towards her room, and Wadmore followed her; then I went out of the back door, I did not ſtop but a few minutes, and ſhe came out again with a baſket.

Can you ſwear to either the cheeſe or the bacon?——There was a croſs upon it.

(The cheeſe ſhewn him.)

Jury. Did you never ſee ſuch a mark before upon a bit of cheeſe?—Yes, we generally mark our cheeſe in that way.

Do the other cheeſemongers?——Yes, generally.

Then how can you tell that piece was not cut out of another cheeſe that was marked ſo?—It is not poſſible, that is the ſame cheeſe.

Suppoſe another piece of cheeſe had been produced to you that was croſſed with a cheeſe iron, how would you know the difference?—When we mark a cheeſe we generally mark the ſtroke longer.

(The cheeſe ſhewn to the proſecutor.)

Proſecutor.

Profecutor. I am poſitive that is the cheeſe and the mark.

Court. Look at the bacon, can you ſwear to the bacon?—Yes, I am as ſure of the bacon as of the cheeſe.

Jones. I am ſure I know the bacon as well as I know the cheeſe.

Jury. Why this rind of bacon is drawn up all round, and you ſay only at one corner, did you find the other part that was not boiled?—No, Sir.

Priſoner Hadd. I have nothing at all to ſay, I have people to ſpeak to my character.

Priſoner Wadmore. I know nothing at all about it, I have people to ſpeak to my character.

Priſoner Middleton. I know nothing at all about it, I have people to ſpeak to my character.

The priſoner Hadd called four witneſſes, who all gave her a very good character.

The priſoner Wadmore called five witneſſes, who all gave her a very good character.

The priſoner Middleton called two witneſſes, who gave her a very good character.

ALL THREE NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

190. ROBERT MITCHELL was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting, on the King's highway, Simon Sheppard, on the 22d of October laſt, and putting him in fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will one half guinea, value 10s. 6d. and 6s. in monies numbered, his monies.

The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council.

SIMON SHEPPARD ſworn.

I live in Downing-ſtreet, Piccadilly, I was going to work about a quarter before two, I went out and locked the door, thinking no harm, the priſoner and two others came and threw me down to the ground, and robbed me of ſixteen ſhillings and ſixpence; Mitchell, as ſoon as I had locked my doors and three others, attacked me, one took my money out of my pocket, and the other held me down to the ground.

What money did you loſe?——Half a guinea, one ſhilling, and two half crowns, I know I had the money in my pocket, they had no weapons, I cried out, and the priſoner Mitchell wanted to murder me.

How do you mean?——He cried out, kill the old buggerer, kill him, three times.

But he had no weapon to kill you with?——He was going to take a knife out of his pocket, and the neighbours got up, and cried out of their windows, for ſhame; there were many neighbours.

Did he take out his knife?—He had got his knife in his hand, and would have done it, if it had not been for the neighbours, who cried out for ſhame, and begged him to have mercy upon me; I am ſure he had a knife out, I ſaw it.

When the neighbours cried out, what became of them?——They ran off, they were with me the ſpace of half an hour.

What were they doing all that time?—They were dragging me about the yard, and beating me like a dog, as I had no more for them, and knocked my teeth out of my head.

How many teeth did they knock out?—One.

Was it half an hour before you could alarm any body with your cries to get any aſſiſtance?——Yes.

Did you make any reſiſtance all this time?——I begged for mercy, I fought and ſtruggled as much as I could; when they ran away, I went to my neighbours, and told them what accident I had met with; they were taken up the ſame morning out of their beds; I told them who to take, I knew them both from children.

And they knew you well enough too?—Yes.

You

You knew where they lived?——Yes.

And they knew that you knew where they lived?——Yes.

What did they firſt ſay to you when they attacked you?—They ſaid nothing to me till they got me down to the ground.

How far did they live from you?—About twenty or thirty yards, one of them did; and the other lived further off.

What are they?——One was a lamplighter, the other uſed to mangle for people, and uſed to carry burthens.

What time had you gone to bed that night?——About ſeven.

So theſe people that knew you ſo well, and knew that you knew them ſo well, robbed you and went home to their beds: did you loſe any thing elſe but money?——No.

Had you any watch?——No, I had nothing but money; when they were taken up they ſaid they knew nothing about it, they were not concerned in it, they denied being there.

Was it a light night?——It was a very good ſtar-light.

Any lamps near?——Yes.

Could the neighbours ſee them as well as you from the windows?—Yes.

It was at the beginning of this ſtruggle that they got the money from you?——Yes.

That was before the neighbours were alarmed?——Yes.

So all that the neighbours ſaw, was them and you ſtruggling and fighting?——Yes.

What did you cry out, when you did cry out?——I cried out, pray Bob, do not murder me, have mercy upon me.

You called him by his name?—Yes.

What words did you uſe?—I cried out, murder.

What did you firſt ſay to the neighbours?——I told them, that Bob Mitchell and John Lucas had robbed me of ſo much money before they came down.

What did the two men ſay?——They made off as faſt as they could, I did not know the third man.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. Here my old friend, a word with you; ſo they beat you for half an hour?—They beat me like a dog.

Was it with a knife that they beat you?——No, with their fiſts, and kicked me with his foot, he knocked out my teeth with the toe of his ſhoe; one tooth, Sir.

What ſort of a knife had he?—A long ſnig-a-ſnee knife, a ſpring knife.

He took it out deliberately, and opened it before all the people?—Not before all the people, but before the people in the yard.

How long might theſe people be looking out of their windows?——Ten or a dozen minutes.

They made ſuch a noiſe, that the people were waked out of their beds?—Yes.

What, they threw up their ſaſhes, and called out, have mercy on the poor old man, do not kill him?—Yes.

Then they ſaw theſe lads kicking you in this unmerciful way, as if you was a dog?—Yes.

How often have you had the misfortune to be robbed in your life?——Four or five times.

So I thought: how often have you been a witneſs here of robberies on your own perſon?—Two times.

How many of the people you have proſecuted have died in Newgate?——Only one.

Upon an average, how many proſecutions had you in the courſe of the laſt two years?——One before this.

They have been both within the year?—Yes.

Did you convict the laſt man?——Yes.

What did you get for it?—I cannot tell, I got nothing at all.

Upon your oath, Sir, what did you get, do not you remember that was added to the ſtock of ſixty you had before?—Pleaſe you, my Lord, only my expences.

Court. How happened that?—I do not know.

What was his name?——Joſeph Baker, he died in Newgate, I had no more than my expences, expences, he was indicted for privately robbing me, he took forty-ſix pounds.

Do you mean to ſwear you had no more allowed you but your expences?——Lucas is dead.

Mr. Garrow. Then you will not get above forty if you convict now, my old friend, you will not get eighty this time?——No.

That is unlucky; you will not be able to make up eighty this go; what are you thunder-ſtruck?—No.

Have not you a word for me now?

WILLIAM WARREN ſworn.

I live in Downing-ſtreet, Piccadilly, I keep two houſes, I am ſometimes in one, ſometimes in the other, on the 22d of October, I heard Sheppard had been robbed, he told me the man, I went to the priſoner's door, his mother denied letting me in, I told her I would come in, ſhe told me he was not there, I ſearched round the room, I found him on the other ſide the bed.

Was he aſleep?—I do not know, I think he could not, ſo much as I rattled and knocked to get in, I took Lucas the ſame morning at work.

Mr. Garrow. Have you two houſes?—I have one houſe in Park-lane, and the other in Downing-ſtreet.

Have you two trades too?——No.

This old man, your friend the proſecutor, has been robbed before by one Baker?——I was witneſs for him, he died in gaol.

How much was you allowed for your appearance?—Fifteen ſhillings, the old gentleman had one and twenty ſhillings.

What buſineſs are you?——I keep carts and horſes.

A few jockey carts, I take it for granted?——No, I keep all ſorts.

A few of the handy poultry carts, that take a trip now and then?—I do not know what you mean.

What buſineſs is your old friend?——A milk-man, he works among the cows.

He has been robbed of a large quantity of money?——He has been robbed different times.

In what way does he live?—He lodges at a houſe of Mr. Litchfield's, I have known him ſixteen or ſeventeen years, I am a conſtable.

How long?—Theſe four years.

A ſort of ſtanding conſtable?——It is a troubleſome office.

What ſhop do you attend?—I attend no ſhop as I know of in particular, I go where I pleaſe.

PETER HOBSON ſworn.

Where do you live?—I live with William Litchfield, in an out-houſe, I ſleep in the ſame bed with Sheppard.

Are you any relation to Sheppard?—No; I was in bed with Mr. Sheppard, I did not hear him get up from me, I heard ſomebody cry out, I could not tell who it was, I put my hand out, and I found he was gone; I heard him cry out murder, I knew his tongue, I thought ſomebody was robbing him, and I got up directly.

How came you to think that?—Becauſe he had been robbed ſo many times.

Then he made a practice of being robbed?—I do not know any thing of that; I went down into the neceſſary, and there was a large hole through the boards into a back place into the yard; I came down out of the place, there is a little door that falls down, and a wooden ladder that lets down, I lifted the door up, it is never locked.

Is there any other door to the room?—No, only what goes into the back room, and I ſaw three men upon Simon, but I could not tell who they were juſtly; the priſoner turned himſelf round cloſe to me, I could have touched him with my hand through the hole; then I ſaw it was him, knowing him ſo long before, he lives in that neighbourhood, and is well known there, I have known him almoſt a twelvemonth; and Simon Sheppard begged mercy on him, and called him by his name, and Robert Mitchell made anſwer to him when he cried for

for mercy, ſays he, damn him, an old buggerer, kill him, kill him, kill him, three times.

Did you underſtand by their talk what they had quarrelled about?—No, I could not, they ran away directly after they had made that anſwer.

Had you time enough to ſee who they were?—Yes.

Are you ſure of that; how long might you ſtand looking?—I think about four or five minutes.

Then when your friend and bedfellow was crying murder, and three men upon him, you ſtood looking at them till they ran away?—Yes.

What became of you after?——Simon went to his buſineſs, and I went to bed again, I could not get out any where, becauſe I was locked in.

How were you locked in?—I could not get into the ſtreet no way.

Was this in the yard?——It is a ſtreet, becauſe there is no gateway to ſtop any perſon going up.

What hindered you from getting out?—Becauſe after he came out of his own room at the back door, he locked it after him.

Where does this ladder come down to?——It comes down, by lifting up the trap door, it comes upon the ground, the back place from the dwelling houſe.

How is that ſurrounded?—It is behind the dwelling houſe, going into a back opening, and there is a door from the little yard into the other yard.

Did you try that door?—Yes, I wanted to get out to help him.

Did you call to him?——No; when I ſaw him in that ſituation I was afraid, for fear they ſhould break in, the boards were very thin.

Mr. Garrow. I ſuppoſe it was the piſtol that Lucas had that frightened you?——I ſaw no piſtol at all.

What ſort of piſtol had the priſoner?—I ſaw none.

If he had had one, you muſt have ſeen it, if he had beat Simon's eyes about; what was it he beat Simon's tooth out with?——I do not know, I did not ſee.

Which of his eyes was it that was ſo black and blue?—It was the right eye, that was the only thing he complained of.

His right eye was very much ſwelled?—Very much, and all ſcratched down the right cheek.

How long had you and Simon been bedfellows?——About a week or ten days.

What ſort of lodging is this?——It is very well for ſuch as we.

What buſineſs may you be?——I am a groom when I am in buſineſs.

What are you when you are not a groom?——I draw beer for Litchfield: this is not a hay-loft, it has a bed in it, but I have ſeen many a better hay-loft.

Simon is worth a good deal of money?—I do not know.

He gets up early?——He always gets up about that time.

They had nothing but a pitch-fork?——I ſaw none.

Is not that honeſt man, Mr. Warren, what they call a running duſtman?—Sometime he is.

MARY BUSKIN ſworn.

What are you?——I go out a waſhing and cleaning, I live in Downing-ſtreet, I happened to hear Sheppard cry out murder, ſeveral times, and I called out to him, and he ſaid it was Bob Mitchell, and Jack Lucas were robbing and murdering him, and I told him I was coming down to him, I ſaw no more, and they run away; after they run away, I ſaw one man by the glimpſe of the lamp, having light cloaths, I ſaw Simon after it was done, I ſaw them have no piſtol.

Mr. Garrow. Which of Simon's hands was ſo cut?——I did not ſee, he complained he was cut in the face, and his eye beat all to pieces, and his face all over blood.

Do you know the other good looking lad, that was at this man's maſter's?——I know nothing of him.

Was not he to have been taken up for the robbery, till he found out this lad?—I do not know.

How much of the reward did you expect?——I expected to be paid for my trouble, for I have been ſeven days out of work.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was in bed the ſame time the robbery was done, our landlady was here to day at two o'clock, I do not know whether ſhe is here now or not.

ANN FREEMAN ſworn.

I have known the priſoner about ten years, I never heard any thing amiſs of him, till this time, he would have taken out a warrant for theſe two boys at the time that Baker was taken; he ſaid in the morning he would go and fetch a warrant for Robert Mitchell, Jack Lucas and Jack Palmer; Baker was convicted, and died in gaol; I begged of him to be merciful and careful, before he took up the lads, I aſked him who laid with him, he ſaid Baker, then I ſaid you had better look to him.

Where does this lad live?——In May's Buildings, cloſe by.

JOHN DARKNELL ſworn.

I live in Downing-ſtreet, I have known the old man a good while.

Who did he ſay robbed him?——Firſt me and my brother and John Lucas, and Robert Mitchell, he was going to take us up, if we had not found Baker.

Do you know the lad?——He is a hard working honeſt lad, he is a lamp-lighter by trade, Mr. Freeman told me he was going to take me up.

Did Simon ever tell you ſo?——No, he never accuſed me of it, he accuſed my brother of another thing.

Did he ever accuſe you of the robbery that Baker was convicted of?——No.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

191. ROBERT JONES was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 1ſt day of December, four live pigs, value 40s. one live ſow, value 20s. the property of Edward Moſs.

EDWARD MOSS ſworn.

I live in Hangers-lane, Stamford-hill, I am a Farmer and Butcher, I loſt four pigs, they were three ſow pigs, and one barrow pig, and a ſow; the ſow pig was taken out of the yard, I ſaw them the ſame afternoon, before they were taken, I believe they were taken in the night time, I found them again at Mr. Iſaac's houſe.

——PARTRIDGE ſworn.

I work with the proſecutor, I remember the time the pigs were miſſing, I had ſeen them there the night before, and I miſſed them the next morning between nine and ten, as ſoon as we heard of this, we tried to track them, and we traced them down a lane, by a man's foot, near three miles to Devals-lane, they went directly to the houſe of the priſoner; Stephen Johnſon the officer found them, we tried to track them out of the fore gates, but we could not, there had been a horſe and cart gone out and we ſuſpected they had gone out in that cart, then we went up to London, for a Juſtice, and we found them in a ſhed, where they were concealed, we could not ſee them without we opened the door, the place appeared ſomething like a pig-ſty, we drove them to Mr. Iſaac's houſe, about two miles from the place, Iſaacs, is a conſtable, we ſaw the priſoner coming, a little diſtance from his home, and almoſt the ſame inſtant, the ſervant maid came out, to ſhew us where the pigs were.

Mr. Silveſter, Priſoner's Councel, to Proſecutor. When were theſe pigs loſt?—Between the 30th of November, and the 1ſt of December, I ſaw them about five, on the 30th, and I think they were gone in night.

——JOHNSON ſworn.

I went to look after theſe pigs, and I ſaw a man's foot ſtep in the pen, and I traced traced them all the way to where I found them in the yard, we traced the man's foot in the ſty, and he muſt have got in, to have opened the door, they were fattening pigs, I ſaw a little ſty, and I made up to it, and there I ſaw ſomething white, and there was a little partition at the far end, it appeared to be a pig-ſty; the firſt part of it was light, but the other was dark, I raiſed them, and found they were pigs; this was between three and four in the afternoon, there were four pigs, and I ſaw the ſow, I knew her perfectly well, being in our yard very often, and having her ears torn by the dogs, I have been long acquainted with her, I ſaw the priſoner coming home, and ſomebody ſaid it was Mr. Jones coming, I cannot poſitively ſay who it was.

Mr. Silveſter. Have not you ſeen the ears of other pigs torn?——Yes, it is a common caſe.

The priſoner was not at home?——No.

Somebody ſaid he was coming?—Yes: I really believe it was the proſecutor's ſow, I have no doubt of it, I have known her from a little pig, ſhe belonged to my neighbour.

THOMAS ISAACS ſworn.

I live at the Angel, in Clerkenwell-cloſe, I am a publican and conſtable, I went to apprehend the priſoner, at the deſire of Partridge, and I underſtood it was Mr. Jones's houſe, they were at the end of a low houſe, or ſtable, penned up in a place like a pig-ſty.

Was there any trough to feed them?—I did not take notice.

Johnſon. I did not obſerve any thing of the kind, I did not look particularly.

Iſaacs. I then enquired for Mr. Jones, and the boy or the maid ſervant ſaid, here is my Father coming, I went and told him I had a ſearch warrant againſt him, and took him before a Magiſtrate, and he was committed, Jones ſaid he did not know any thing of them.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

On the 30th of November, in the evening, I happened to be out very late at a public-houſe, which I very ſeldom go to, I was out till paſt eleven, and pretty much in liquor, I went home as faſt as poſſible, and went to bed, my houſe-keeper brought my young child, who always lays with me, in the courſe of the night, the child cried, and ſhe came again to ſee what was the matter with him, I fell aſleep, and knew no more till about ſix I waked, and called for Hannah Bailey, to call my eldeſt ſon to get a pound of cart-greaſe; about eight I got up, and went to London a little before nine, I went to ſeveral places, and came home with the man at the ſluice houſe, I ſaw two or three people at my houſe, but I did not know who they were, the firſt man I ſaw was Iſaacs, who met me before I got home, he ſaid you are my priſoner, what for, ſays I, ſays he I will let you know what is the matter, and he ſhook me very roughly, I told him I had not been at home all day, the night before I happened to ſtay out late, and went to bed as I told you; I know nothing of them, the pigs were not there with my own will, I went out in the morning.

JOSEPH LAWSON ſworn.

I live at the Red Lion, at Holloway, I have known the priſoner many years, on the 30th of November, he was at my houſe till half after eleven, he came in at half after eight, I know it becauſe the patrol of Sir Sampſon Wright came into my houſe that night.

What is the man's character?——I never heard any bad character of him, but a hard working honeſt man, he keeps a boar, a very good one, and has for ſome time, he bred the boar I believe, a great many people ſend their ſows there, and ſometimes they ſend the boar to people's houſes, and leave him for a day or two.

HANNAH BAILEY ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Jones, my maſter came home at night between eleven and twelve, and went to bed; I took the child and

and put to bed to him; he was undreſſed, and his cloaths upon the bed, when I went in, and at three the child wanted to get up, and he called me up, he was then in bed, and his cloaths on the bed; at ſix he called me to call his ſon up, to go to Iſlington for a pound of cart-greaſe, and I got the breakfaſt ready about eight, and he got up and breakfaſted, and about half after nine or ten he ſet off for London; after he was gone there was a ſow and pigs came into the yard, I thought they were Mr. Bonnick's pigs, as he had a ſow there the week before, and was angry with me about the ſhilling I had for every ſow that comes to the hog; I did not ſee any more till about four in the evening, then there came three men and aſked me if that was Mr. Robert Jones's, I ſaid yes, they aſked if I was his wife, I ſaid no; they aſked who was his wife, I told him he had none; they aſked if them was his children, I ſaid yes, the children ſtood by the fire ſide, and one pulled a paper out of his pocket, and ſaid I come to ſearch the houſe for ſome hogs, the eldeſt ſon ſaid I will go and ſhew you them, and the young ſon about eleven, went out and ſaid here is my daddy a coming, with that the officer took Mr. Jones, the other boy went out to ſhew them the pigs, but the men had got there firſt, and opened the door, the man Johnſon went to the ſty, and drove the pigs out, the door was not locked, he got to the door before the boy.

Where was the boar when they came?——In the yard.

What aged child was this you put to bed to Mr. Jones?—Three years old the 10th of December.

Where was the child when Mr. Jones came home?—In bed with the reſt of the children.

Why did you take it out?——It was always ailing, it will never lay with any body ſince his mother died, but its father, it lays with Mr. Jones every night.

Where do you lay?——I lay in the next room, there are four rooms on a floor, I can hear him if he knocks againſt the wainſcot.

Jury. Has Mr. Jones any pigs of his own there?—Yes, three ſows and a boar.

Court. Then from three you heard nothing of him till he called you up at ſix?——No.

What time do you think the pigs came in?——About half after nine, as nigh as I can gueſs, they came out of Mr. Thompſon's field together into the yard, I did not ſee any body with them.

Does that field join to the yard?—Yes, one gate comes into the yard, and another gate goes on the common.

Recollect a little, are you ſure you told them that was Mr. Jones's houſe, the firſt queſtion they aſked you?——Yes ſir, they aſked me if it was Mr. Robert Jones's houſe, and I told them yes.

You are ſure you did not mention any other perſon's name but Mr. Jones's?—No.

Then you did not ſay that you knew nothing of any pigs?——I did not.

You ſaw thoſe pigs in the yard for ſome time, can you deſcribe them?——They were ſpotted pigs, ſo were Mr. Bonnick's.

Was the ſow ſpotted?——It was a little white ſow, the very picture of Mr. Bonnick's.

Jury. Had Mr. Moſs's ſow ever been down to your boar before?——Not to my knowledge.

Court. Is there a common road that leads into this yard?——There is a gate opens from the Common, that comes from Hornſey, and Crouch-end.

Lawſon. This houſe is upon the Common, and there is a road goes right along, takes you to Hornſey, or Crouch-end, or any way, there are many different lanes, and you may ride up, and drive a cart in Summer time, but in Winter it is a naſty dirty road.

Court. Is this any direct road, that goes from Moſs's to Jones's?——A common road, I have been there with a cart.

Does that common road go through Mr. Thompſon's piece?——You have no call except you go through Jones's yard, ſometimes the fences are down, there is no road through Mr. Thompſon's field, they have a road that they have made themſelves, that is for their own private uſe, but they let a friend or a gentleman ride up.

Jury

Jury to Bailey. You ſay your maſter went to the publick houſe, between ſeven and eight in the evening, where was he before that?—He was at home, and drank tea at five.

Was he at home from five to ſeven?—Yes.

WILLIAM MATHEWS ſworn.

I live at Iſlington, I ſaw the priſoner that morning about ten, he was at my houſe.

How long have you known him?——About ſeven years, he has a very good character, I have truſted him with many hundred pounds worth of goods, and he always brought me a juſt account; I gave him ſome orders and he went to London, and he returned home in the afternoon about four.

THOMAS CROOK ſworn.

I have known him three years, a very honeſt induſtrious man, and always brought up his family decent; I keep the three Nightingales, at Hornſey.

WILLIAM HUSON ſworn.

I am a grocer in Newgate-ſtreet, I have known the priſoner three or four years, I looked upon him as a very honeſt man, he has had great opportunities in my ſhop and warehouſe, I have often truſted him, and ſhould not heſitate to ſend out goods by him at any time; I look upon him as a very reſpectable character.

Jury. Did you truſt him alone in your ſhop and warehouſe?—Yes, always, I never took the leaſt account, he might go where he pleaſed; he keeps a little cart, and has carried goods from my houſe to Mr. Matthews for ſeveral years, and for people in Oxford-road.

Court to Moſs. What time was it in the morning you miſſed your pigs?——About nine or ten.

You had not been at your ſty before?—No, nor none of my people that are here, I did not track them myſelf, but as to the place they were tracked to, there never was ſuch a place ſeen in the world.

Court to Partridge. How did you track theſe pigs?—By the foot in the lanes, and roads by the back lanes, that goes from Hornſey-houſe.

Were they ever out of the lanes?—No, not till they came to Mr. Jones's houſe, they turned out within three fields of Mr. Jones's houſe.

What three fields were theſe?——Graſs fields.

But there is a road that goes all the way up to Jones's houſe?——None that I know of.

Do you know Thompſon's fields?—No.

Is there a gate out of that field, into Jones's yard?——Yes.

Did they come through that gate into Jones's yard?——Yes, through the fields, and in at that gate that goes into Jones's yard.

What ſort of partition or gates are there between the firſt field, and the three fields?—I believe in every one there was a gate.

Were the gates ſhut or open?——They were all ſhut, I cannot ſay the firſt gate was faſtened, but we were obliged to get over that.

Did you trace them through theſe fields, are you ſure that the pigs went through that gate that was faſtened?——Yes, I am ſure, of that.

Are you ſure they went through the other gate that was ſhut?——Yes, I am ſure of that.

Jury. Were there no gaps out of the lane into the field?—None, that I could ſee, there was a large ditch between the road and the field.

Court. You have told us that you traced the man's foot with the pigs, as far as you traced the pigs?—Yes, from the very ſty where we traced the pigs, we could ſee where the man walked up to open the gate, to let the pigs in.

Was it wet weather at the time?—Yes, our watchman at paſt four o'clock, cried a rainy morning.

Court. You mean that gate into the yard?——Yes.

And you are very poſitive they went through all the gates?——Yes, the man muſt have got over, and opened the gate to let the pigs in.

Was you near enough, when any body enquired of the woman, whether Mr. Jones lived there?——Yes.

Did you go up to the woman Hannah Bailey?——I went into the paſſage adjoining, and ſtood as nigh as I am to this table, ſhe ſaid, yes.

Did they aſk about any pigs?——Yes, the officer aſked her about ſome pigs, after a little diſcourſe, ſhe ſaid, ſhe had none at all, only three ſows and a boar, and ſhe ſaid, they were upon the common.

Are you ſure of that?—Yes, ſhe knew none elſe.

Court. She ſaid they were on the common?—Yes.

You were there at the time Johnſon found theſe pigs?——Yes.

Did any body go to ſhew Johnſon where theſe pigs were?—No, I am ſure of that, becauſe we were all in the houſe talking to the woman, when Johnſon went out and found them unknown to any body.

How many were there in the houſe?—I cannot poſitively ſay; there were ſome children, and the woman, and Mr. Iſaacs and myſelf.

Was there any body there beſides?——Not as I ſaw, I did not hear the little boy ſay, there is my daddy.

Mr. Silveſter. Did you ſee a lad there about eighteen or nineteen?——Yes.

Did you ſee him go out in the yard?—Yes, after we had found the pigs, the boy of nineteen was in the houſe, and he was going to ſhew Mr. Iſaacs where the pigs commonly lodged; and as we were coming out of the houſe together, they ſaw Mr. Jones coming up, he was juſt come out of the door, Mr. Iſaacs, and I, and the boy, with the woman with a child in her arms, in order to ſhew where the hogs generally were.

Court to Johnſtone. Recollect yourſelf, and take care you do not miſtake, you told us you traced the hogs, and you yourſelf got into the ſty?—Yes, and I ſaw a man's foot in the ſty.

Then you found the track of the pigs, with the other man Partridge?——I did.

Did you ſee the track of the man all the time that you tracked the pigs?—In general, I did not look every ſtep.

Did you ever ſee the track of the pigs and take notice of them, without ſeeing the track of the man?—No.

You are ſure of that?——Yes.

How far did theſe pigs go in lanes?——The ſpace of three miles, as near as I can gueſs.

Where did they go then?—They turned into a graſs-field, through a gate that led out of the lane.

Was there any road there?——None at all, it was as much as we could do to track them there; we could not do it but here and there a place, and there we tracked them exactly the man's feet and hogs, and the gate ſhut again, and we made away from gateway to gateway, thinking they muſt drive them through the gates, and we found them at every gateway.

How many gates were there?——From the firſt to the laſt, I believe there were four.

How were they firſt got out of the lane?——I cannot poſſibly ſay, we looked and got over the gate, they had gone through.

How was that gate faſtened?—I cannot ſay as we knew they were gone through there, we made directly after them.

How was it faſtened, was it looked?—I cannot ſay.

Were all the gates ſhut?—All put to, ſome of them had only a bit of wood, I believe no faſtening.

Did the gates open towards the field, or towards the yard?——I cannot ſay, there are three fields and four gates, one going out of the road, and one going into the yard.

Do theſe gates lay pretty near in a line towards towards the yard?——All leaning in a line towards the yard.

Could the hogs have got under the gateway, from the lane into the firſt field?—No, I do not think they could.

Court to Partridge. What do you ſay to that?——I do not think they could, one was too big.

Court to Lawſon. Could the ſow get under the gate?—I think it was impoſſible.

You heard nothing that paſſed between the woman and the officer?—Only this, we made enquiry if that was Mr. Jones's, ſhe ſaid, yes, he is gone to town, then I directly turned out of the houſe, and went to make ſearch after the pigs, and found them; I heard no other converſation.

Mr. Silveſter to Johnſon. The only tracks that you found was it at different gates?—No, there was only one track over the gates.

Court to Lawſon. This firſt field opens firſt into the lane?——The two firſt fields adjoin to Mr. Thompſon's, beſides another gentleman's; ſometimes the gates are all thrown open to go all over the farm, becauſe Mr. Thompſon is taking in droves both bullocks and ſheep; Jones rents this place of Thompſon.

Then Jones has the liberty of driving any thing not to do damage?——Yes.

The graſs is over the ſhoes in different places?——It has been a growing ſeaſon.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

192. THOMAS LUCAS was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Lazarus Levy, about the hour of ſeven in the night, on the 15th of November laſt, and feloniouſly ſtealing therein two watches with the inſide and outſide caſes made of ſilver, value 5l. the property of the ſaid Lazarus Levy.

(The witneſſes ordered to withdraw, by the requeſt of Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council.)

LAZARUS LEVY ſworn.

I live at Ratcliff-highway, No. 41; my windows were broke open, on the 15th of November laſt, between ſix and ſeven in the evening; I ſhut up five of the ſhutters there are ſix, I leave up the biggeſt, and there is a ſmall ſpace between each, ſo that the light ſhines through, I ſhut up ſhop at about half after four, and I was ſitting in my ſhop by the fire, and ſaw the corner ſhutter move, there is a gentleman next door and there was a boy at the door, I ſaid to him, you have medled with my ſhutters; he ſaid; I am ſure I did not meddle with your ſhutters, there is a man gone paſt, I ſuppoſe he did it, I went in again and ſat down, about ſix or ſeven minutes after, all at once four ſhutters were ſhut up, and bounced out two of the paynes of glaſs, there were twenty watches hung all in a line on braſs wire, and every watch had a hook, when the glaſſes were puſhed in, I ſaw two hands coming in with gloves, and a drabiſh colour great coat, pull ſome watches down, I run out of doors, and the man run away; I followed him, and cried out ſtop thief! he run better than I, but he was purſued and overtaken, but he got out of my ſight when he turned round the corner, after I came up they had him faſt; I ſaid, that is the man that run away with my watches; he had another coat on then, I did not ſee his face, I ſaw his clothes; he had a round hat, a light colour great coat with bright buttons, and a pair of gloves on.

Was there any thing of your's found upon him at any time?——No.

Can you ſwear that is the man?——I ſwear by the clothes, he run before me, and another man followed him; all I know is, that the man was brought back in the ſame clothes; I loſt two watches.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. I think we have gone ſo far that nothing was found on the priſoner?——Nothing.

When you went out the firſt time you ſuſpected it was a boy?——Yes.

Who is that boy?—I do not know, he is is not the boy that is now to give evidence, I went into the ſhop, I did not think of any harm.

You jumped up in a hurry for fear they ſhould get all the watches?——There was a great bounce made by the four ſhutters, then in the inſtant two panes of glaſs was broke, the priſoner immediately run away, and run much better than me.

How far had he to run, till he came to the corner of Denmark-ſtreet?——I believe I could run it in a minute.

Four out of five of your ſhutters were cloſe?——Yes.

Were the other ſhops in the ſtreet open or ſhut?——There is a watchmaker's ſhop ſhut up at ſeven.

Did the other ſhop ſhut up before you or not?——They may do as they like.

But did they?——My neighbour never ſhuts up her ſhop till nine, as to the other ſhops, I do not know whether they were ſhut or not.

Did you obſerve the man's coat?——I obſerved it was a little drabiſh.

How many of your neighbours might have the goodneſs to join in the purſuit?—Nobody run but one, but a little higher up there was a few.

Is the boy to whom you had ſpoke, one of them?——He might.

Was you at your tea?——No, Sir.

The perſon that run from your door, had a round hat on, flapped?——It was not flapped, I ſuppoſe it was a little flappiſh, I am not a maker of hats, I call it a round hat.

Now a man with a round hat of whom you had about the third part of a minute, running from you with his back to you, you undertake to ſwear to?—He was not above thirty yards off.

What ſort of a night was it?—It was not moon light.

Was it rainy or fair?——It was a little ſprinkle of rain.

A little ſprinkliſh?——It was not very dark or light.

It was a little darkiſh, ſo upon a darkiſh night about one third part of a minute a man running from you, with his back towards you, with a hat flapped on, you ſeeing him for only twenty ſeconds, undertake to ſwear to him?—He had two white buttons on his ſide.

That is right, now you can ſwear to them, two white buttons upon his hip; to be ſure a man with two whitiſh buttons upon his hip, is the moſt remarkable creature in the creation; I will not keep you any longer Mr. Levy, good night to you?——Good night to you.

JAMES READ ſworn.

On the 15th of November, between ſix and ſeven, I had juſt left work, and paſſing by the end of Denmark-ſtreet, I heard the cry of ſtop thief! I took no notice of it, at laſt I ſaw the priſoner at the bar come up between the poſts, there is a bar at the end of the ſtreet, he came into the new road from Denmark-ſtreet.

Was he walking or running?——He came running up to me when I ſtopped him.

When you firſt ſaw him, was he walking or running?——He might be ſtanding ſtill when I firſt ſaw him, it was dark, and I could not ſee him.

When you firſt ſaw him what was he doing?——He was coming through the poſts, I was about twenty yards from the poſts, he came running up to me, and I ſtopped him, I took hold of him, he aſked me why I ſtopped him, I told him I did not know, I ſuppoſed he was the thief; ſoon after Mr. Trevallion who keeps cows came up, and deſired me to keep faſt hold of him; then Mr. Levy came up and ſaid, that was the man; we took him to Denmark-ſtreet, to the ſign of the Kettle-drum, an officer was ſent for, but no property was found upon him.

The Remainder of this Trial in the Eleventh Part, which is the laſt, and will be publiſhed in a few days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 8th of DECEMBER, 1784, and the following Days;

Being the FIRST SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER I. PART XI.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE NINE-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of Thomas Lucas.

Mr. Garrow. How far might you be from the priſoner when you firſt ſaw him?——About twenty yards.

It was ſo dark you could not ſee whether he was running or not?——He ſtopped at the poſts, he might run after he came through the poſts, and he certainly did.

Was it a rainy night?——No, it did not rain at all.

Now do you mean to ſwear that?——It rained afterwards, that ſame evening.

Nay man, never blink it, did it rain or not?—I cannot poſitively ſay.

Recollect yourſelf a little?—I cannot ſay.

May be it was a light night?——It was dark, but not ſo dark but I could diſtinguiſh the man coming through the poſts, he had a drab coloured coat and metal buttons.

After you took hold of him, you took care he threw nothing away?—The conſtable took him away, there were no watches found upon him.

JOHN TREVALLION ſworn.

I am a cow-keeper, I live in Denmark-ſtreet.

How near is that to Levy's houſe?——About fifty yards, I cannot ſay how long the ſtreet is, it is a longiſh ſtreet, I heard the cry of ſtop thief, I ſaw a young fellow in a light coloured great coat, with metal buttons, and a blue coat under it, run along, there was a lamp, I ſaw him very plain, I run after him and fell down on one knee; I made a ſtumble at the top of the ſtreet, a young man ſtopped him, and we took him to the public-houſe and ſearched him, he had a bit of myrtle in his mouth.

Had you ſight enough of him to know that the man that was ſtopped was the ſame man?—Certainly, he never was out of my ſight, he had not got by the door when I ſaw him; when I turned out of my door he ſtepped over my cellar window; there was a knife in his pocket; Mr. Levy came up crying ſtop thief, and partly out of breath.

Did you ſee any boys running?——Yes, towards the top of the ſtreet.

Mr. Garrow. The boys were a head of the perſon that came paſt your door?—No, Sir.

Do you know any thing of theſe boys that were running?—I ſaw no boys till the cry of ſtop thief, there are many alarms in that ſtreet, the priſoner was taken at the upper end of the ſtreet in a back lane, the boys ran after me, and ſome overtook me; I keep a chandler's ſhop at home, and carts and cows.

Stand up that the Jury may ſee you, you keep carts; what the handy jockey carts, do you keep any of thoſe convenient things for the benefit of the country poultry?——No, Sir, I do not.

Do you deal in any other animals, do you deal in horſes?—I never buy any but what I buy for my buſineſs, I buy them with a good face.

Was you in your front room that you was drinking tea?——My rooms are all in front, I have but three rooms.

Did

Did you hurt yourſelf much?—No, Sir, not a great deal.

Was it a moon light night?—It was not.

It was a dry night, that you recollect?—I will not be poſitively ſure of that, to the beſt of my knowledge it was a dry night.

Did not it ſprinkle a little?—I did not know, if it did I forgot it.

Did you dirt yourſelf much in falling down?—I did not.

Did you trace back the way that the perſon had run from Mr. Levy's houſe?—No, Sir, they brought the priſoner back, I ſaw him make a halt back; I ſent Mr. Levy back, it was not my buſineſs, there was nothing found on the priſoner.

WILLIAM HAY ſworn.

I live in Ratcliff-highway, within three doors of the proſecutor, I was going out with ſome goods, I ſaw that perſon about Mr. Levy's window, I ſaw him walking backwards and forwards, looking at the things that were in the window.

What did you ſee him do?—I ſaw him do nothing but look at the things.

How long did you obſerve him?——He might be ten minutes, or better.

What might you be doing all the time?—I went out with ſome goods, and when I came back he was in the ſame place.

What are you?—A grocer, I live with Mr. Jollands, I am errand boy, I have lived there two years and three quarters.

Did you ſee Mr. Levy come out of his ſhop at all?—No, Sir, I did not, I went and told my maſter that there was a perſon lurking about, and I did not like him, but my maſter being buſy in the ſhop, did not take much notice of it.

How do you know it was the priſoner?—Becauſe I am ſure of it, I went cloſe by him, he had a bit of myrtle in his mouth, and a light great coat on.

Did you take notice of that?—Yes, Sir.

How came you to take notice of ſuch a circumſtance?—I did take notice, he was walking backwards and forwards, and I looked at him.

What ſort of a bit of myrtle was it?—A little ſprig.

Was this a very light night that you ſaw a little bit of myrtle?——He was near the windows, and by the lights you might ſee his face very plain.

What led your attention to him ſo much to obſerve he had a bit of myrtle in his mouth?—Becauſe he looked at me, I went in doors and ſaw no more.

Mr. Garrow. What time of night was this?—Between ſix and ſeven, all the ſhutters were up excepting one, and there was a little ſpace between every one, I did not ſee any body thereabouts.

Do you know the lady that lives at next door?——Yes, the priſoner was looking at her ſhop as well as Mr. Levy's.

Did you ſee any body with him?—No, Sir, I did not.

It was a moon light night?—I cannot ſay directly, the lamps were alight.

It was a dry night?—No, Sir, it was a wet night, it rained ſmall rain a good pace, that made me look the more, becauſe the perſon ſtood ſtill in the rain.

You frequently have been alarmed in that neighbourhood with thieves?——I cannot ſay.

(The priſoner called four witneſſes, who all gave him a good character.)

Court to Read. Was you preſent when the priſoner was ſearched?—Yes.

Did you ſee what was found upon him?—I ſaw nothing found in his pocket, he had a pair of gloves on his hands, I am poſitive of that, I took particular notice of it.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

193. JOHN MILNE and SARAH STEWARD were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing one pair of linen ſheets, value 5s. the property of Thomas Shaw.

THOMAS SHAW ſworn.

I am a ſhoemaker in Lewkner's lane, I loſt ſome ſheets, and Charles Young told me there was a pair of my ſheets at Litchfield-ſtreet, in the office, there was my mark on them, my name was at length, and where I lived, in large print letters at length: I went and owned the ſheets, I knew them to be mine; theſe are the ſheets, and here is the mark, they are marked with a ſtamp and India ink, Thomas Shaw, No.

No. 3, Lewkner's-lane, Drury-lane, one with red ink, and the other with black.

——— BLACKETER ſworn.

I had theſe ſheets from Mrs. Steward the priſoner, we had information that there were ſome ſtolen goods in her room, and we went to ſearch her houſe.

Is ſhe married or ſingle?—I do not know, ſhe lives along with Milne.

How do you know that?—She told me ſo herſelf, his clothes were there, which he owned to afterwards, his breeches was hanging over a chair; he came in, and I aſked him whoſe thoſe clothes were, there was a coat and a pair of breeches, and I am not ſure whether there was not a waiſt-coat; in ſearching we found theſe ſheets, with this man's name upon them.

Where did you find the ſheets?——At the door on the landing place, laid in a handkerchief.

Were his clothes laid in the ſame place?——No, they were hanging on a chair by the bed ſide.

But theſe clothes were not in that room?——No, we aſked how ſhe came by them, and ſhe ſaid they were a pair of ſheets Mr. Milne had bought early in the morning; I aſked Milne whether they were not his ſheets, and he denied them.

Was he by when ſhe ſaid he bought them?——No, that was juſt before he came in, we found ſome picklock keys in the cupboard, in the ſame room where Mrs. Steward lives.

Was the cupboard ſhut or opened?——I do not recollect.

JOHN SAYRE ſworn.

I belong to the office; on the 2d of November, Young, I, and Dixon went to the lodgings of Mrs. Steward, with a ſearch warrant after ſome ſtolen goods; ſearching the room for them, I ſaw Dixon take theſe picklock keys out of the cupboard, at the further end I ſaw a hatchet, I went out with a candle, and went to ſee if there was not a cockloft on the ſtaircaſe; and I found theſe ſheets under a table at Mrs. Steward's door, ſhe lodged in a garret; I aſked Mrs. Steward if ſhe knew any thing of them, ſhe made anſwer, they were dirty ſheets Mr. Milne had brought home that morning; they were very dirty, we have been obliged to get them waſhed.

CHARLES YOUNG ſworn.

I went with the two laſt witneſſes and Dixon to ſearch Mrs. Steward's lodgings, No. 9, Tottenham Court-road, and Sayre brought in theſe ſheets from the outſide of the door; ſays he, Mrs. Steward, what are theſe ſheets; ſays ſhe they are dirty ſheets that Milne left here this morning; I ſaw Dixon take theſe keys out of the cupboard, and when I ſaw the proſecutor's name on the ſheets, I went and fetched him.

PRISONER STEWARD'S DEFENCE.

I cannot expreſs my affairs ſo well as I could wiſh, for I am deprived of council by theſe men who had my property; this day ſix weeks, the 2d of November, they approached my apartment forcibly; I was a waſhing, I had a great waſh; I aſked them for their authority, they did not produce it, they would not let me have it in my hand; I ſaid do nothing raſhly, let me have ſome perſon to be witneſs, if it is only the conſtable of the pariſh; this gentleman packed up my wearing apparel, I had a mangle in the houſe, I take in mangling and waſhing, they then picked up a trunk which they called a Peter, I paid eighteen ſhillings for the trunk, I have the receipt; I ſaid here is nothing but what I have a receipt to prove; there were ſix ſilver tea ſpoons, tea tongs, buckles, ſeven gowns and my ſheets, and two counterpanes, one never wetted; they acted like lions, had I been a Turk or an Infidel, they could not have acted with more barbarity; I have been ſix weeks in priſon, I have had this man out of compaſſion to ſupport, he was a ſufferer, and a great one, he came inadvertently to the place during the interview they had with me, and he ſaid Gentlemen, what demand have you with Mrs. Steward; ſays he, Gentlemen, ſend for the conſtable of the pariſh and ſee her righted, as ſhe is without a friend, or any perſon preſent: I ſtand here as a priſoner, it is really truth though you may not believe it; Blacketer packed up my truuk, and there was three ſilk gowns, that any Gentlewoman in London might put on, and ſix ſilver tea ſpoons with S. S. engraved, which I paid for; they they had my undeniable character in the neighbourhood; they even brought my fender and a ſet of fire irons, they were going to unſcrew a pier glaſs; I ſaid, Gentlemen, do not ſpoil the frame of my glaſs, which I worked very hard for, and eat a cold dinner of a Sunday; they only unſcrewed one ſcrew of the pier glaſs, which was to go before the magiſtrate, I deſired them before the magiſtrate to commit me bailable; he then took four or five keys from a cupboard; now this man deals at Mr. Perrott's, and ſeveral ironmongers, he has iron to turn to the beſt advantage, he has imported them abroad by the dozens together, they are no picklock keys, and they were looſe when they had them. I will endeavour to ſubmit to your command, be it what it will, and the will of God, if you will but pleaſe to releaſe this man, he is an innocent man; I am willing to ſubmit to your command, was it death, ſo you pleaſe to releaſe this man, he is innocent, and I am innocent, they brought my clothes to priſon, after being in priſon thirteen days; this Blacketer that appears againſt me, is acquainted with a Jew woman that deals in old clothes; there is a God above that knows the ſecrets of all hearts; there was a little boy that lives in our neighbourhood, with one Mr. Roper an auctioneer, this man after I tried to get him into place, the huſband of this Jew woman ſuffered, and ſhe had received a duplicate of this poor boy whom I kept from deſtruction, and this Mr. Milne out of charity gave the boy a ſhilling to bring her before Mr. Fakney, one of the Juſtice's of the rotation; he had a ſearch warrant againſt me, theſe ſheets were laid at my ſtair head out of villainy, and no other; I am as innocent as the baby unborn, I am willing to ſubmit to the will of God; this woman gave an information of me in Tottenham Court-road; my impriſonment has brought me to deſtruction entirely.

Court. What became of the clothes?—After thirteen days I had ſome of them ſent, I was ſtarving in the priſon for eight days, and had nothing to relieve me, nor had this innocent man, my ſpoons and tea tongs were returned by Mr. Blacketer.

PRISONER MILNE's DEFENCE.

My Lord I live in the City I am a porter to auctioneers and brokers, I never was before a Judge or Juſtice in my life before, I gave a ſhilling to this boy, the ſheets I never ſaw, as there is a juſt God in Heaven; theſe things were adverti ſed on the 6th of November, on the 9th Blacketer brought down a porter with her trunk, and ſome apparel, and ſome plate, he charged two ſhillings, ſhe paid him one and nine-pence, then he comes on the 13th teenth, and ſays, will you ſell your fire irons and fender to Mr. Fletcher, no ſays ſhe; ſaid he, if I had known this I would have brought ſomething againſt you, then he forcibly took from her, a Princes metal candleſtick, between the gates of Newpriſon.

Court to Blacketer. Did you receive any money for the things that you carried?—I received two ſhillings, then I came down again with a load of wet linnen, and poker, tongs and ſhovel, I gave the man one ſhilling each time, and I had nothing for my trouble at all.

Who was the man that brought it?—A porter that came along with me from the office.

Court. I ſhould be glad to know if you take away things out of her houſe, is ſhe to pay for bringing them again; upon my word an innocent perſon may be in a very pretty ſituation, if that is to be the caſe?—I brought them to priſon by her deſire, ſhe promiſed to pay me, I paid the man two-ſhillings for bringing them down, upon my oath I paid two ſhillings, and I never had directly or indirectly any of that again.

You have the man here I ſuppoſe?——No I have not, he ſaw me have no more than two ſhillings, I never put it into my pocket.

How came you to keep theſe things fourteen days?—I do not recollect that they were ſo long, they were advertiſed three times.

Sayre. There were three or four pair of wet ſheets, they were advertiſed, and people came and could not ſwear to them, when we were at Mrs. Steward's lodgings, ſhe begged we would not let the woman of the houſe know, I ſaid it was fit ſhe ſhould know; this woman has been convicted before.

Court. But that you are not to ſay.

Priſoner Steward. I never was?——I dare ſay ſhe was.

Court. Do you know it yourſelf?—For ſhoplifting once.

Do you know that of your own knowledge?——Yes, Mr. Akerman's ſervants know it.

That man was not in the houſe when you firſt came in?——No he came in, in about ten minutes after the ſheets were found.

Court to Priſoner Steward. You was ſaying juſt now, that you had people that knew you, I ſuppoſe you have ſomebody to your character?——My landlady is not well my friends have attended all laſt week, I am innocently accuſed, but I am willing to ſubmit to your pleaſure, ſo as you will pleaſe to releaſe this man.

Priſoner Milne. The late Sheriff Skinner has known me theſe twenty-two years, he is not in town this day, the Lord Mayor has known me ten years.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

194. TAMSIN ALLEN was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Joſeph Taylor, on the King's highway, on the 21ſt day of November laſt, and putting him in fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will, one watch with the outſide and inſide caſes, both made of ſilver, value 30s. his property.

JOSEPH TAYLOR ſworn.

I was going through George Alley, the 21ſt of November laſt, on Sunday night, a quarter paſt twelve, the priſoner and another woman were ſtanding at the top of the alley, and the priſoner on my right hand, and the other on my left, the perſon on my left hand caught hold of my coat, and aſked me where I was going, I ſaid what was that to her, ſhe ſaid ſtop, I want to ſpeak to you, ſays I, what do you want, ſhe immediately with her other hand catched the watch out of my pocket, ſhe kept hold of my coat with one hand, I accuſed her with taking my watch, I felt her take it, ſays ſhe, I will have your watch, yes, ſays I, you ſhall not have it, I ſeized her by the hand, and I got hold of the chain of the watch, and the priſoner was going by at the ſame time, and ſtepped up and caught hold of me, by the hand which I held the watch chain with, and immediately gave me a ſhove, and I fell with my ſhoulders againſt the wall, which cauſed the chain, by the force of her ſhoving to break; the other immediately run away with the watch, the priſoner was then ſtanding by me, and I called out for the watchman, and Mr. Morris was coming down the court at the ſame time, I had hold of the priſoner, and gave charge of her, ſhe was taken into cuſtody, the other got off.

You never found the other?——She was taken up, and I really believe her to be the perſon, but it being dark in the alley, and ſhe having a hat and cloak on, I could not ſwear to her, but the priſoner was never out of my ſight and had no hat or cloak on, I delivered the chain to Mr. Morris.

Priſoner. Whether I ever was in his company or not, or ever ſaw him, till he came into my apartment, and gave charge of me?——After I gave charge to the officer, he took her.

Priſoner. He was very much in liquor, ſo was the conſtable.

GEORGE MORRIS ſworn.

I was officer of the night, on Sunday night, I was going round and heard a diſturbance in George Alley, and knowing what a bad place it is, being infeſted with nothing hardly but whores and thieves, I went down, and there was the proſecutor, who ſaid he had been robbed of his watch; by a woman that was run away with it, but this woman had come in and interfered, and prevented his following her.

Did

Did you find them ſtruggling?——No, they had left off ſtruggling when I came, ſhe was cloſe by him, we went into her apartment to ſee for the other woman, I came out in a hurry to day, and forgot the chain, the proſecutor had a broken watch chain in his hand, it was a common ſteel chain.

Priſoner. My Lord, I had been down the court for a pennyworth of beer, and coming up the court with a lighted candle in my hand, I heard a great noiſe in the court, there was the proſecutor, and the conſtable in the court, I went to unlock my door, they came up and ſaid, is this one of the women that robbed you, the proſecutor ſaid yes, I believe this is the woman that ſhoved againſt me, there was another woman in cuſtody, and ſhe was cleared, I never ſaw him till he came into my room, I never was with any woman, I was in my own apartment, when they came I had been down the alley, and coming up with a lighted candle in my hand, they followed me up in my own room.

Morris. My Lord, they were in the alley coming up George ſteps, he ſaid that was not the woman that robbed him, but ſhe came in between.

Priſoner. I have ſent for my witneſſes, but they did not know of my trial coming on, there is a woman that can give an account.

MARY WILLIAMS ſworn.

I was not at home when this man brought three women to our houſe, he found his watch on the bed, and he ſtaid till he was very much in liquor, and he would have more gin, this was in George-yard, Field-lane.

Court. Be careful what you ſay, you know you are upon your oath, and if you ſwear falſly, you will be liable to be committed and proſecuted for perjury?—This man came to our houſe in George-alley, on Sunday night, about nine.

What man?——Taylor, that ſtands here.

Who keeps the houſe?——I keep the houſe.

What is the number of your houſe?—No. 2.

Is it a public-houſe?—No it is a lodging houſe; and he brought in a luſty woman with him, not the priſoner at the bar, they went into a room together, there were three of them together, and he came again, and ſaid he had loſt his watch in the houſe, and I called in the patrol, there were two more women came in with him, they followed the other two.

How long did they ſtay in your houſe?——Two hours, then the women and he went altogether out, they were wrangling about a watch.

How ſoon did they begin to wrangle about the watch?——Directly, almoſt as ſoon as I came in, I do not know how long they had been there before.

Who began the wrangling?—The man ſaid he had loſt the watch in the houſe.

How ſoon after he came in was that?—I do not know how long he had been in the houſe before I came in.

Then how do you know that he brought three women with him, if you was not there when he came in?——I ſaw the three women in the houſe when I came home.

You did not ſee him come in?—No, I did not.

How came you to tell me then, that the luſty woman came in firſt, and the other two followed her?—The maid that I kept told me ſo.

Is ſhe here?——No.

What time of night was it when you came home?—It was a little after nine.

What time of night was it when you ſent for the patrol?——It was about half after nine.

Did any of the patrols come?——They came in and told me they had no right to come in without a charge.

Which of the patrol?—I do not know the man's name, he is a tall man; the patrol went away, and the man found his watch on the bed directly after the patrol went went away, then the man said I will treat you with any thing you please, but he did not treat them; there had been half a pint of gin sent for, the man did not pay for it, but he drank some.

Who paid for it?——I paid for it out of my own pocket.

How long was it before he went out of your house again?——He went out directly then, and was satisfied, and wished us all a good night.

How long did the patrol stay?——The patrol did not stop at all.

How long was it after the patrol went out that the man found his watch on the bed?—In less than five minutes.

Was it immediately after the finding of his watch that he was good company, and said he would treat them with any thing they pleased?—It was on a Sunday night, and the girls asked him to treat them with a drop of gin, the gin was sent for directly, he went away directly after he had the gin, it was about half past nine when the patrol came in.

Do you know how long he had been in your house then, was not you informed of that?——No.

How came you to say, in the begining of your evidence, that he brought in this woman with him, and staid two hours, and now you say you came in a little after nine, and about half past nine the patrol came in, and they went away in five minutes; what time was it when he went out of the house?——About half after nine, or it might be eleven.

But what time was it?——As near as I can tell, it was near about eleven.

Was he drunk or sober when he went away?——He was very much in liquor.

Did the patrol that came in, attend constantly upon duty at your part of the town?——He does.

Do you know any of these women that were in the house with this man?——The first woman that brought him in, as our girl said, I was taken up to find her, and I did, and he discharged her; one of their names was Elizabeth Waldon, and the other's name Sarah, I do not know her other name.

Was this prisoner one of the three that you saw?——No, my Lord, I did not see her all the night, another of their names was Catherine Williams; the man had his watch when he went out, and all the three women followed him.

Do you know any thing more after they went out of your house?—No.

Court. Do not let that woman go out of Court till the Jury have found their verdict.

Court to Prosecutor. Was you in liquor, or sober?—I had been drinking at the Bell, in Holborn, but I was not in liquor, the officer was.

What time did you leave the Bell?——About half past nine.

Where did go from the Bell?——I was going down Holborn to go home.

Where do you live?—At Shadwell, there was a woman standing at the end of Union-court, asked me where I was going, and she asked me to go along with her, and I did go to the house where this woman mentions; I do not charge the prisoner with any thing of this, but what was afterwards.

How long did you stay at Williams's house?——I had not been in the house five minutes before I missed my watch and money, I immediately made an uproar in the house, and said I was robbed.

How many women were there in company?—There were four, I believe; I insisted upon not going out of the house till I had my watch and money, I was in the house from about ten till about a quarter after twelve.

Did the women that were in the house with you follow you out?—No, they were gone out before.

Was the prisoner one of those in the house?——I cannot say whether she was or not, I do not remember her face there.

How long had you been out of the house before what you say happened?——I had but just got out of the house; when they found found I insisted on my property, they said, why, damn you, why did not you go and look in the room, and I went, and I found it underneath the bed, between the bed and the mattrass, after that I was going up the alley again, I met with the two women, the prisoner at the bar and another, I believe they were not the same women.

Morris. My Lord, I only beg to say, the patrol never comes on duty till past ten o'clock.

The prisoner called one witness to her character.

Court to Morris. Did the prosecutor appear to be drunk or sober?——He was sober, to the best of my judgment, he shewed me the house where he had been before; when I first came up, the prisoner and he were together.

When you first saw them, had he hold of her?——Yes, she did not offer to resist, she was not above five or six yards from her own lodging, they all lodge in one court.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

195. JOHN HUGHES, SAMUEL GILBERT, and WILLIAM STEWART, were indicted for burglariously and feloniously breaking and entering the dwelling house of William Brown, on the 24th of October last, about the hour of three in the night, with intent his goods, chattles, and monies, then and there being in the said dwelling house, burglariously and feloniously to steal.

A Second Count, laying it to be the house of Charles Brown and William Brown.

The witnesses examined apart, at the request of Mr. Garrow, Council for the prisoners Hughes and Stewart.

WILLIAM BROWN sworn.

I live in Pall-mall, the house is my brother's and mine, his name is Charles Browne we are seal engravers, I and my family live in the house, my brother does not live there, but he pays half the rent, we hold the house by a lease in our joint names, I sleep in the back room up two pair of stairs. On the 24th of October, a little after three, I was awaked by a noise, I directly heard people running out of the court, which is behind the house, I got up and threw up the sash, my window looks towards the back court; by the time I opened the window, the persons were got out of the court, so of course I saw nothing; it is Union-court, which leads to the Opera-house, there is a small paved yard which leads from my parlour to the court, and there is a door out of my yard into Union-court; in about half an hour or more, the watchman returned from the watch-house, who had secured some thieves, he gave no alarm by crying thieves, but I heard his rattle, and when the watchman and witness returned, they acquainted me with what had happened; I came down stairs, and found the parlour door, which looks into the back yard, bored through by the centre bit, this is a part of the pannel which I had taken out. (Produces it.) I was last in the room, and bolted the door myself, as I do every night, and take up the keys of the house; I locked the parlour door, which is next the passage, and took up the key.

Court. Was the door next the yard unbolted?——No.

Was that hole near one of the bolts?——It was, if they had been two minutes longer, they would have been in the house.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, I believe there is an end of the indictment.

Court. Were the pieces of this door on the outside or inside?——I picked up this piece within the parlour.

Court. We are upon very nice ground, here is a clear breaking, but in order to constitute this offence of burglary, there must be an entering as well as breaking; if there be any evidence of these people putting in their hand, there would be an entering;

as for the entry, any, the leaſt degree of it, with any part of the body, or an inſtrument held in his hand is ſufficient, ſo as to ſtep over the threſhold, to put in a hand, or hook, or a piſtol, to demand one's money, are all of them burglarious entries; but here they might cut theſe pieces out of the door without theſe pieces being in the parlour.

Jury. The centre bit muſt go through, and ſo muſt the hand go through.

Mr. Garrow. I fancy, my Lord, we have now got far enough for me to trouble your Lordſhip with an objection.

Court. Go on.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, I take it to be a principle, and it is the practice of the law of England, that all points may be uſed in order to ſave the lives of priſoners; but I am perfectly convinced, that by your Lordſhip and by the Jury, many of whom are known to me to be men of good ſenſe, and great humanity, no point will be preſſed againſt the lives of the priſoners, I am perfectly convinced, that if this caſe depends on the queſtion, whether half an inch or a quarter of an inch of the point of an inſtrument, has penetrated through the door, the lives of the priſoners are perfectly ſecure; but, I am to addreſs myſelf to the queſtion of law, and I will endeavour to confine myſelf very ſtrictly to that queſtion: I take the liberty of ſtating with great ſubmiſſion, that according to the ancient common law notion of burglary, it was indiſpenſibly neceſſary, that there ſhould be a breaking, accompanied by an actual entry, that I take to be the ancient common law of England; the reaſon that burglary is conſidered as an offence highly criminal is, that it is an invaſion of the ſecurity of the ſubject in his caſtle; I am aware that there have been ſome determinations, in which that ancient principle has certainly been conſidered with a degree of latitude in the conſtruction, that is not always to be found in the determinations of the Judges, in queſtions of life; I am aware of thoſe deciſions which hold, that where a pane of glaſs is broken, and an inſtrument introduced noctanter, that that is a burglary; but, I may ſay without offence, that there are very great authorities, who wiſh it was a new queſtion, and had not been ſo held; but, I take it the principle of all theſe new determinations is this, there is ſuch a breaking of the caſtle of the proprietor, that his property may be taken out through the aperture; and I take the principle of thoſe determinations, which ſpeaks of an inſtrument introduced, to mean not the inſtrument by which the breaking is made, but an inſtrument by which the property of the proprietor is removed, introduced ſubſequent to the act of breaking, and after it is complete; here the introduction of the inſtrument is part of the act of breaking, and no man living can ſay, that this centre bit was introduced for the purpoſe of taking out the property of the proprietor, no, it was for the purpoſe of breaking into the domicile of the proprietor; and I admit that, as to that branch of the crime it is complete, but the Court will not ſay, that the introduction of the inſtrument for breaking, was for the purpoſe of taking out the property; if there had been the leaſt property of Mr. Brown near this hole, that the hand or a hook could have removed if introduced, ſubſequent to the breaking, I do admit I could have had nothing to ſay on the ſubject; as to all the caſes that have been mentioned of the introduction of a hand, a foot over the threſhold, or a piſtol, they all ſeem to proceed on the idea, that the breaking is precedently complete, and this is conſidered as an act of dominion over the property of the owner, acquired by the breaking; as where a piſtol is introduced, by which terror is applied to the true man to compel him to part with his goods; but there is no caſe which has ſaid, that the introduction of an inſtrument in the act of breaking, ſhall ſatisfy both the diſtinct requiſites of the offence, namely breaking and entry to ſteal; ſuppoſe inſtead of being the caſe of a door, which is pierced with the centre bit, this had been a brick wall, broken with a pick-ax, and it had appeared that the pick-ax had neceſſarily been within the wall, would the Court have held, that this, beſides being a breaking, was an entry into the dwelling houſe to ſteal? I aſſure myſelf that however imperfectly, I have on the ſudden, ſtated the argument, the Court will not in a caſe of life, extend the law one iota beyond the letter of former determinations, and will not think themſelves warranted to conſtrue this caſe upon the evidence to come within the definition of a burglary.

Court

The Judges concurred with the Council, and directed the Jury to acquit the priſoners on this indictment; and ordered another indictment to be preferred againſt them, for breaking the door in the night time, with intention to commit a felony.

ALL THREE ACQUITTED.

They were tried at the Seſſions Houſe, Clerkenwell, on ſuch indictment, convicted, and ſentenced to be impriſoned three years in Newgate.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

196. FRANCES CRABB was indicted for that ſhe, on the 4th of November laſt, with force and arms, knowingly, unlawfully, wickedly, and maliciouſly did ſend a certain incendiary letter in writing, directed to one Thomas Vaughan, of Peter-ſtreet; threatening to ſet his houſe on fire, againſt the ſtatute.

A Second and Third Count laying it in a different manner, againſt the ſtatute.

THOMAS VAUGHAN ſworn.

The 14th of November laſt, a letter was ſent to me, between ſix and ſeven in the evening, delivered to a little boy about eight or nine years of age, juſt before my door.

Did the boy belong to you?——No.

You did not ſee it delivered?—No.

Who did the little boy deliver the letter to?—To my ſervant, I was in the kitchen, ſhe delivered it to my daughter, I cannot ſay I ſaw her deliver the letter, but I ſaw my daughter break open the letter; as ſoo as ſhe broke open the letter, and ſaw the top of it, ſhe delivered the letter to me, I ordered the door to be ſhut immediately, till we had examined the boy, to know from whom he had it; I have the letter now, it was left at the Old Bailey, where I went to find the bill, with the perſon that drew the indictment.

Did the boy ſhew you any perſon from whom he had received that letter?—Yes.

Did you go with him any where?—No, the girl was taken up before the Juſtice, and he picked her out before the Juſtice, and ſaid, that was the girl; on Sunday night the letter was delivered, and the Monday night the girl was taken up.

Was you preſent when ſhe was taken up?——Yes, the conſtable would not go by himſelf.

Where was ſhe found?——In her father's houſe.

Where does her father live?——In Cooper's Street, Weſtminſter.

Was ſhe carried before a Magiſtrate that night?——Yes.

What Magiſtrate?——Juſtice Haines.

Did you inform her what ſhe was charg with?——The conſtable informed her.

What did ſhe ſay?—I cannot ſay, I was ſet upon by five or ſix of them, and like to have been torn to pieces, all my face was torn in a moſt abominable manner.

Was there an attempt made to reſcue her?——Upon my coming in, the father and mother both fell upon me, and there were two or three women in the houſe beſides; my nephew and the conſtable and I, went together, and we brought her away.

Was the letter produced in her preſence before the Juſtice?——Certainly it was, and read before him by the clerk.

What did ſhe ſay?——When ſhe was before the Juſtice, ſhe denied the writing of it, one of the lodgers came in, and was aſked whether it was her hand writing, he ſaid, he had ſeen her write cleverer; the Juſtice made her write twice over in the office, the boy picked her out before all the reſt, and ſhe ſtill continued to deny it; the Juſtice's clerk told her not to own it, but deny it, I cannot tell her anſwer, ſhe never acknowledged it.

the

You knew the priſoner before?—Yes, I have ſeen her before, ſhe has been a great affliction to my family, by ſome particular connection with my ſon.

Had ſhe ever at any time previous to this, expreſſed any reſentment againſt you or your family in your hearing?—No, when I found their connections, I bound my ſon apprentice to Mr. Moulton, ſtationer, in Chancery-lane; in a fortnight after he was bound, this girl would not let him alone.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council. Is your name Thomas Vaughan?—Yes.

Have you a brother of the name of James Vaughan?—Yes.

Have you been under any ſuſpicion of taking bacon or thread, or any thing of that ſort; this brief is this moment put into my hand: was you committed for any ſuch charge, for ſtealing thread or bacon?—No, Sir, never in my life, I am too well known to be guilty of any ſuch action.

What time in the evening was this that the boy came to you?—Between ſix and ſeven, as nigh as I can gueſs.

Do you know any thing of the boy?—I never ſaw him before to my knowledge.

Did any converſation paſs between you and the boy, previous to the going to this woman's houſe?——There was no occaſion for any.

Did you ſuppoſe he came from the priſoner at the bar?—He ſaid this young woman came over juſt to my door, and delivered it to him to deliver it to me, the boy did not know where the priſoner lived.

Nothing particular paſſed between you and the boy?—No further than aſking his name and where he lived, the Juſtice gave the boy ſtrict charge to be in the way when he was wanted, inſtead of which, he was ſent out of the way, and ſent down to Scotland: the boy's name is Theophilus Bourne.

Did you give him any money?——No.

Did you offer him any?——No.

Did ſhe deny her hand writing before the Juſtice deſired her to write?——Yes, ſhe did.

Where is Theophilus Bourne?——We have not been able to find him.

Court. Has the boy any father?—I believe not.

The Magiſtrate ſhould have bound over the boy?——Yes, he ſhould, but inſtead of that he was ſent out of the way.

JAMES VAUGHAN ſworn.

I am nephew to Thomas Vaughan, the laſt witneſs.

What do you know of this matter of your own knowledge?——I am almoſt ſure it is her hand-writing.

Have you ever ſeen her write?——No, I cannot ſay I ever did, I have ſeen her hand writing.

That you cannot tell, unleſs you had ſeen her write.

SARAH BULLER ſworn.

I am daughter to Mr. Vaughan.

What knowledge have you of this matter?——Sir, I have ſworn that I really believe it to be her hand writing.

Have you ever ſeen her write?——No, from the expreſſions I believe it to be her's.

What have you heard her ſay reſpecting the letter?—The words mentioned in the letter, excepting ſetting the houſe on fire, all that infamous language, the latter end of laſt ſummer, going by my door, to me and our ſervant.

How came ſhe to make uſe of this ſort of language to you?——Upon the account, I imagine, of my brother, ſhe lived with him; ſhe threatened one night, but I cannot tell the day of the month, that ſhe would go and get drunk and break the windows, and threatened to come and cut our maid's bloody melt out; I have heard her make uſe of very indecent expreſſions, in the very words of that letter.

You have read the letter?—I have, Sir.

Do you mean to ſay, you have heard her make make uſe of the ſame expreſſions as thoſe in the letter?—I have.

Or of expreſſions of a like tendency?——The ſame words partly, Sir, what are in the letter, them infamous words; I have never ſeen her write, but I have ſeen her writing in books and things.

Did you ſee her on the day this letter was brought?—No.

Court. I do not wiſh to aſk her to repeat the words unneceſſarily; do you know any thing of this boy that brought this letter that you are ſpeaking of?—No, on the 14th of November he brought this letter, I never ſaw him before; the boy ſaid before Juſtice Haines, ſhe gave him a halfpenny to deliver the letter.

ANN MALLARD ſworn.

Have you any knowledge of this buſineſs yourſelf?—I know the priſoner very well, and I really believe ſhe is the perſon that ſent the letter.

Do you know any thing yourſelf reſpecting the ſending or writing?——A child knocked at my maſter's door with the letter, and I took it from a little boy, I did not ſee the priſoner then; I never ſaw her write, I never heard her ſay ſhe would ſend a letter, ſhe has threatened me, ſhe has called me a bloody old mare.

Court. Any expreſſions made uſe of by the priſoner are admiſſible evidence, but whether they are relevant, will be a point afterwards to be conſidered. You have heard her make uſe of expreſſions ſimilar to thoſe that are in the letter?—Yes.

Did you ever hear any particular threat of revenge againſt Mr. Vaughan?——She has uſed him exceedingly ill, and called him equal and worſe, I can ſafely ſay, than what was in that letter.

Court to Vaughan. Have you any knowledge what became of this boy, after he had been examined before the Magiſtrate?——The woman where he lodged, took him with her out of the place, afterwards I never ſaw him.

Have you ever heard the priſoner ſay any thing about him ſince?—I never ſpoke to the priſoner but once, and that was when ſhe made her eſcape out of Bridewell, and I heard her ſay nothing; I did not mean to touch her life, but to chaſtiſe her for her inſults.

Court to Jury. The jit of the offence, is the threat, and the letter being without a name, for the writing an indecent letter *, however groſs the offence may be againſt public decency, is not the offence againſt this ſtatute: now, this boy being out of the way, there does not appear to be ſufficient evidence to call upon the priſoner for her defence; the only evidence is, that ſhe has been heard to make uſe of expreſſions groſsly indecent, ſimilar to thoſe contained in a part of this very abominable letter, but with an exception to that part which is the threat to burn the houſe; therefore, it would be too much to preſume, from perſons having heard the priſoner make uſe of the very indecent expreſſions that reſemble thoſe in the letter, that ſhe either wrote or ſent this letter: the perſon who brought the letter being out of the way, there is no ſort of evidence who ſent it, nor who wrote it; but if you think it neceſſary, I will call on her, and hear her defence.

Jury. There is no occaſion now, my Lord.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

197. EDWARD GREENWOOD was indicted, for that he, on the 4th of November laſt, maliciouſly and feloniouſly did make an aſſault on Samuel Swift, and in a forcible and violent manner did then and

* The letter itſelf was ſet forth in the indictment, and, of neceſſity, read in Court, but being totally improper for publication, is therefore not inſerted in this Trial.

there demand his monies, with a felonious intent the ſaid monies from his perſon and againſt his will feloniouſly to ſteal.

SAMUEL SWIFT ſworn.

I am pariſh-clerk of St. Saviour's, Southwark, I know the priſoner; on Thurſday the 4th of November, I was going from the Borough, where I live, to Old-ſtreet, and going up Moorfields, the upper end of the Artillery-ground, the priſoner came up to me on the ſide of me, and held down his hand, which rather alarmed me, and I kept walking on, he then told me that he was a young fellow in diſtreſs, and that I appeared like a humane man, and he deſired that I would relieve him; he then fixed his ſum at a guinea at leaſt, he told me his clothes were ſtopped at his lodgings for ſixteen ſhillings, and that nothing leſs than a guinea would do for his purpoſe, and that he muſt have that of me: I told him I much wondered at his aſking me for a guinea, who was a ſtranger, and that I had not one; he told me if I had not one, I could get one; I went to a houſe on purpoſe to ſecure him, but there were only two women in the houſe; he told me he would not leave me without it, and kept following me ſtill, and ſwore he would not leave me without the money, I then kept forward to Smithfield, and in my paſſage through Bull and Mouth Street, he ſtopped me, and told me, he would be damned if he left me, and aſked me why I did not get it; I went to the coffee-houſe in Smithfield, and deſired the landlord to aſſiſt me in taking him, he put his hat on, and met the priſoner in the paſſage coming in, ſo he was ſecured and put into the Compter: he put me in very great fear, I did not know what his intention was, I did not know but he had arms about him, and I have a large family of children, which are dependant upon me; he ſaid he would follow me home, and if he did, he ſhould have too much honour ever to come again; and in Bull and Mouth Street, he ſtopped me and fully demanded my money.

Court. Did he touch you?—He took hold of my arm.

But not with violence?——I cannot ſay he did.

What time of night was it?——About half after ſix, or a little better, when he firſt came up.

He walked a great way with you?——From Old-ſtreet to Smithfield.

A good many people were in the ſtreet at the time?——There was no watch.

Where did he firſt meet with you?—In Moorfields, and from thence to Old-ſtreet, then to Smithfield.

He kept cloſe to you?——He ſwore he would not leave me without it; he offered no violence, farther than taking hold of my arm.

What is Crank?—He is the perſon that took him.

He committed no violence in Smithfield?——None at all.

Mr. Silveſter, Council for the Priſoner. Where was the place you firſt met this man?—In Moorfields.

Recollect yourſelf, was not it in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet?—No, it was not.

You did not go through Auſtin-friars together?—No, not to my knowledge, I was no ways in his company, nor knew any thing about it.

There is a print-ſhop, where he ſtood behind the 'Change, now recollect yourſelf?——I recollect very clearly he did not, I did not ſee him.

Then from Moorfields you walked into Old-ſtreet-road, behind St. Luke's?——Yes.

Which way did you go to Smithfield?——We came back through Alderſgate-ſtreet, and then he would follow me into Bull and Mouth Street till we turned off, and we turned into Smithfield through one part of Little Britain; I was very much confuſed.

How many hundred people did you meet in your way?——I met ſeveral, no doubt, and I thought making an alarm might be of conſequence.

What

What was you afraid of?—I was afraid of my perſon, he was a more active man than I.

The ſhops were not ſhut?—I was afraid he would have done me ſome injury.

What injury could he have done to you by calling people to your aſſiſtance?——I thought it was more prudent to let him go to where I was known, I did not apply to any perſon to take him into cuſtody.

When he told you his clothes were in pawn, did he tell you his name and where he lived?—No, he did not.

When you went into Smithfield, he waited for you?—Yes, and he came into the door after I had ſpoke to the man to aſſiſt me.

What was it that he ſaid; was you given charge of that night?—I gave charge of him.

Did he give charge of you?——I believe he might after he was in cuſtody, he charged me with nothing, not a word of any thing that night, the charge he made againſt me was before the ſitting Alderman, after he was going to be committed.

Did not you think it very ſtrange, that a man ſhould follow you through all theſe populous ſtreets, and that he never once pulled out a piſtol, or any one ſingle thing to intimidate you?—So it was.

When he was taken into cuſtody, was he ſearched?——Yes, there were no arms.

Then you did not tell him after he told you his ſituation, that you would relieve him?——I told him at laſt, being very much intimidated, that if I could borrow a guinea, I would relieve him?——I was going to Helmet-row, to Mr. Dobſon, the Pariſh Clerk of St. Luke's.

What part of Moorfields was you in when he ſtopped you?—The part next the Artillery-ground next the rails.

Then you was not afraid to walk in a loneſome ſtreet?——I was obliged to walk, I could not lay down.

What do you mean by laying down?—When he demanded this money, I was a good deal of this ſide Chiſwell-ſtreet.

Now ſir, that night when you charged him with the watch; upon your oath, did not he charge the watch with you?——Never ſir, till after the conſtable had come and got him in cuſtody, and was taking him out of the door, he then ſaid I charge you with that gentleman.

How came you not five minutes ago, to ſay that he did not charge you at all?——That is a matter that did not ſtrike me, I meant a charge againſt me for any crime, he ſaid nothing about any crime.

What did he tell the conſtable to take you into cuſtody for, did not he charge you with a crime, or an attempt to commit a crime?——That I attempted to commit an unnatural crime upon him.

And did not he that very night Mr. Swift, when you was taken into cuſtody?——He did not.

Take care what you ſay?—He did not, no ſir, I bleſs God, I pay ſome regard to my word, and my oath, it certainly was not ſaid for what the charge was made.

Then you never heard for what the charge was made, till you came before the Magiſtrate?——Never.

Court. You came from the Borough?—Yes.

You was going to a friend of yours in Old-ſtreet?—Yes.

How did you get into Moorfields?—It is the road I generally go, through Auſtin Friars, I went to ſpend two or three hours with my friend, he was not at home.

Why did not you go home again?—I intended to go round to Smithfield, as this man was with me, and intended to follow me.

What carried you into Smithfield?—This man ſaid he would follow me, and perſiſted in it, and I thought I would let him follow me.

All London lay between Old-ſtreet, and the Borough, in the direct road home again?——I thought I would take him to where I was known.

Smithfield was very much out of your way?——I often call there.

Had you any intention of calling there that night?——I believe I had, I often call there of an evening.

That is no anſwer to my queſtion?——My

My particular view certainly was in taking the man there, as he was determined to follow me, I knew nobody between there and Old-ſtreet.

Between ſix and ſeven at night, in the evening, all the houſes were open, why did not you call for aſſiſtance?——I was fearful of the conſequences.

Court to Jury. Gentlemen, would you have this caſe go any further.

Mr. Bolton, one of the Jury. My Lord, we are all aſtoniſhed the proſecutor did not call for aſſiſtance.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Lord LOUGHBOROUGH.

---

198. JOHN MURRAY was indicted for that he, on the 8th of September laſt, did appear in his proper perſon, before the Worſhipful Andrew Coltee Ducarell, L. L. D. then ſurrogate to the Right Worſhipful Dr. Calvert, and did produce and exhibit a certain paper, partly printed and partly written, with the name William Hoar, thereto ſubſcribed, and then, and there, feloniouſly did take a falſe oath, to the purpoſe and effect following, that is to ſay, that that paper contained the laſt will and teſtament of William Hoar, and that he was the executor; whereas in truth and in fact, it did not contain the ſaid laſt will, and he was not executor thereof, with intent to obtain the probate, in order to receive the wages and pay due from our ſaid Lord the King againſt the ſtatute.

The indictment opened by Mr. James, and the caſe by Mr. Silveſter.

THOMAS STEBBING ſworn.

I belong to the Navy-office.

Have you the books of the Gibraltar there?——Yes.

Can you inform the Court whether there was ſuch a man as William Hoar, as quarter-maſter?——No.

Does there appear upon the book, a man of the name of Orr?——Yes, as quarter maſter, entered the 18th of January, 1782. and died the 20th of June, 1783.

Does there appear any ſuch name as Hoar, before that time?—There was not, there books are kept by the Captains of the ſhips, and returned to the Navy-office, ſigned by the Captain, and three other officers.

Court. Have you looked over theſe books?——Yes.

You have examined the books of the Gibraltar carefully?——Yes, I find William Orr comes from the Fortitude, to the Gibraltar, and is there entered a quarter-maſter.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. Are there two Gibraltars in the ſervice?—This Gibralter was the Phœnix.

Was there an old Gibraltar?—I believe there was, a great many years ago.

Was there a Gibraltar during the laſt war, diſtinct from this?—I believe I have heard of a Gibraltar armed brig.

Was there another Gibraltar in the year 1781?—I really cannot ſay.

Court. You have been deſired to examine the book, is there any perſon of the name of Hoar, or Hore, or Hoore?——None reſembling the name, except this William Orr.

Mr. Garrow. You have told us that you are in the Navy-office?——Not at preſent.

In what department?——In the ticket-office.

What relation has that ticket-office to the book, that you now produce?——The books are produced in that office, ſigned by certain perſons.

Did you ſee them ſign it?—No.

Do you know their hand writing?——No.

Do you know from whom it came?—It came from the Captain of the ſhip.

——SPECK ſworn.

I am clerk to Meſſrs. Marſh and Abbot, Proctors, in Doctors Commons, on the 8th 8th of September laſt, the priſoner came to the office accompanied by Mr. Lacey, he brought another perſon at the ſame time, to prove a will, he had brought ſeveral, I wrote the oath on both the wills, and took him before Doctor Ducarell, to get hin ſworn, as the executor in thoſe wills, when I came back to the office, Mr. Lacey deſired I would expedite them as faſt as I could, he aſked me if I could get them done in the courſe of the afternoon.

When this man came to prove the will, you ſay you wrote the oath on the back of the will?—Yes, and took him to Doctor Ducarell, who is the Surrogate.

——— FLETCHER ſworn.

This is the will of William Hoar, I brought it from the Prerogative office.

Speck. This is my hand writing, "James Murray the ſole executor named in the within will, was duly ſworn, as ſuch, and that the whole of the deceaſed effects, will not amount in value, to the ſum of one hundred pounds.

Did you attend before my Lord Mayor, when this man was examined?——Yes, he denied ever having been in the Commons, or ever having ſeen me any where.

Now look upon him?——I am ſure as to the man, I have one very particular reaſon to explain to you why I think it; when I had him before Doctor Ducarell, and he kiſſed the book, he put his thumb in this manner, and kiſſed his thumb twice, I aſked him what he meant by that, and I made him kiſs the end of the book, the third time, he ſaid nothing elſe before my Lord Mayor.

Court. You are a witneſs to this oath?—Yes.

Then you was preſent with the Surrogate, and ſaw the priſoner ſworn in the uſual manner?—Yes.

And all that is at the back of the will, excepting the ſignature, is your hand writing?——Yes.

Who gave you inſtructions for writing what is below the atteſtation?——Nobody in particular.

How came you to put it down?—We always give them the deſcription what they were on board of ſhip, I aſked the priſoner, and in conſequence of his information, I wrote that deſcription on the paper.

Mr. Garrow. I ſee that the Doctor's certificate is, that ſomebody, whom you take to be the priſoner, ſwore that he was the executor, and that the effects of the teſtator did not amount to ſuch a ſum?—Yes.

That was the purport of the oath?——Yes.

And that was all?—Yes.

How many people do you think, you have carried ſince September, and in September, down to the preſent time, to be ſworn?——It is impoſſible for me to tell.

Some hundreds?—There may be ſo, but not ſo many of late, owing to ſo many having ſuffered.

Not ſo many of late, but you cannot tell what it is owing to; is it at all ſingular for a man to kiſs his thumb inſtead of kiſſing the book, I know it happens in the common law courts frequently?—I took particular notice of it.

Who is this Lacey, he ſeems a wholeſale dealer?—He came frequently.

Generally with people that cannot read or write?—I have ſeen marks.

Did you ſee the priſoner ſign any name?—No.

But you ſaw him make a mark?——Yes.

Court. Did the priſoner at the bar, put his mark to any thing?——Not that I ſaw.

Why you have ſworn that he did put his mark?—He brought a will ſigned William Hoar.

You do this buſineſs ſo often, that you cannot miſtake it?—No, I ſhould think not, I never ſaw the priſoner but twice.

——— KNIGHT ſworn.

I attended before my Lord Mayor.

Are you confident of the perſon of the priſoner?—I am very ſure he is the man; on the 3d of November I happened to be before my Lord Mayor, and a perſon of the name of Griffin was under examination, he is now in cuſtody, for a forgery on the East-India Company, this man appeared as an evidence on behalf of that Griffin, he appeared to give an account of the manner in which Griffin obtained the poſſeſſion of the will, he was then under examination, for upon his name being called John Murray, and my ſpeaking to my Lord Mayor, my Lord Mayor aſked him if he ever proved any will in the commons, he ſaid no, he never proved a will in his life.

Court. Was his examination taken in writing?——No, my Lord Mayor deſired him to ſtand on one ſide till Griffin's examination was over, but he took an opportunity to quit the room, and was not ſeen for two or three days after; when Griffin was again examined, I mentioned my ſuſpicion, and the Lord Mayor ordered him to be taken into cuſtody, he was then aſked, and alſo upon his examination, which I believe was the 6th, he was aſked whether he ever proved that will, he ſaid no, he never did, he was aſked whether he was deſcribed in the will, as the well beloved kinſman of the deceaſed, if he knew the deceaſed William Hoar, he ſaid he never knew any ſuch perſon; I deſired the laſt witneſs to be preſent at the examination, and Mr. Speck upon that gave evidence, poſitively ſwearing he had been to prove the will of William Hoar, he ſaid he never ſaw Mr. Speck, or knew any thing of the tranſaction.

Did the priſoner ſay any thing more reſpecting this buſineſs, or reſpecting himſelf?——It does not occur to me he ſaid any thing more.

Then the firſt time he attended as a voluntary witneſs?—Yes.

He was apprized of your ſuſpicion?—I do not know.

At the diſtance of two days he came again, as a voluntary witneſs?—He did.

Do you know Mr. Lacey?—I have ſeen him once.

You know him in your official character?—I believe Lacey has been the forger of a great number of wills.

JOSEPH MANGROVE ſworn.

I was a ſeaman on board the Gibraltar, I knew William Orr, he was quarter-maſter.

Did you know him on board any other ſhip?——No.

How long did he ſerve?——About two years, he made a will juſt before the action came on, that was in June, I ſaw it after it was done, he often told me he had a father.

Did you know on board that ſhip, any man of the name of Sullivan, or John Murphy?——No.

Mr. Garrow. How long was you on board?——Two years and a half.

Mr. Silveſter. Was there any ſuch man on board that ſhip as William Hoar?——Only one, and he was quarter-maſter.

You do not pretend to remember all the names?——I remember only one.

Do you ſtate the names of all the people that were preſſed in, and turned out?—No.

How many was the complement of that ſhip?——I cannot ſay.

Upwards of ſix hundred, was not it?—I believe it was.

It was an eighty gun ſhip?—She was.

She was in the room of one that was loſt?——I believe ſhe was.

Do you know the Gibraltar brig, and ſtore ſhip?——No.

It appearing that this oath was taken in the name of James Murray, and he being indicted by the name of John Murray, it was not charged in the indictment, that he pretended to be James Murray, and took an oath as ſuch, although he was a different perſon, and the names of William Orr and William Hoare being ſo eſſentially different, the Court informed the Jury that there was nothing to put the priſoner on his defence, and he was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Lord LOUGHBOROUGH.

---

199. THOMAS WAGG was indicted, for that he, on the 27th of October laſt, feloniouſly did utter and publiſh as true, a certain falſe, forged, and counterfeited will and teſtament, partly printed and partly written, written, ſubſcribed by one Charles Lightowler, as, and for his laſt will, with intention to defraud our Lord the King.

A Second Count, for uttering the ſame with intent to defraud Samuel Day.

The witneſſes examined ſeparate, at the requeſt of the priſoner.

WILLIAM DICKENSON ſworn.

I was clerk to Mr. Jones, when the priſoner came to the office, which was in October, I perfectly remember the man, he came to obtain a probate of a will, he ſaid he was the executor, he ſaid nothing about any perſon whoſe will it was; he was ſworn, he went before the Surrogate, and the uſual oath was admininiſtered.

THOMAS CARPMEAL ſworn.

I am one of the officers of Bow-ſtreet; (Produces the will) this was given to me by Juſtice Addington, who had it from the priſoner and Mr. Burgeſs. Mr. Reynolds has had it, but it is the ſame will, I was preſent when the priſoner ſigned it, and when Mr. Burgeſs ſigned it before the Magiſtrate.

(The will ſhewn to Mr. Dickenſon.)

Mr. Dickenſon. It is the ſame will, I know it by the writing that appears on the back, I wrote the Jurata, which is on the back.

(The will read.)

Mr. Silveſter. Did you hear what the priſoner ſaid before the Magiſtrate?—Yes, they came to the Brown Bear.

Court. Hand me up the will; who wrote thoſe words, "the deceaſed belonged to his Majeſty's ſhip," &c. who gave you that deſcription?—The priſoner at the bar.

Are you ſure of that?——Very ſure.

You are clear you took that deſcription from him?——Very clear.

Carpmeal. Burges and the priſoner came to me, and aſked me if I knew Mrs. Lightowler, I ſaid yes, ſhe lived next door to me, they ſaid ſhe had taken a falſe oath, by taking out adminiſtration, for young Lightowler had made a will to this man.

BENJAMIN JONES ſworn.

Was there adminiſtration granted to the mother of this man?——I only ſaw that the clerk had made ſuch a notification, probate was refuſed to the priſoner on account of the adminiſtration.

Court. How came they to adminiſter the oath to this man if they had granted adminiſtration?—It was not known till it came into the office.

Carpmeal. Knowing the mother before he went out, the priſoner and Burgeſs ſhewed me the will, and told me they had been to the Commons, and found ſhe had adminiſtered; I told them they had better wait till the Magiſtrates ſat, and then acquaint them with it, in the mean time I applied to Mrs. Lightowler, her name is Day now, and I acquainted her, that there were two people with a will of her ſon, who I underſtood was loſt in the Ville de Paris.

Did they wait to ſee Mrs. Day?—They were waiting to go before the Magiſtrate, and I told them they had better go and aſk him.

What did they complain of?—They wanted to ſee Mrs. Lightowler, they complained ſhe had taken a falſe oath, for the priſoner had a will and power, and they waited to ſee her, they waited three or four hours, and when the Magiſtrate ſat, they went over with Mrs. Day and her ſon, when Mrs. Day came to the Office, they produced the will, the priſoner ſaid he had the will from Charles Lightowler, at New York, that Lightowler was ſick at quarters, and this priſoner attended him; he told the Magiſtrate he lent Lightowler ſome money while he was at ſick quarters. Mrs. Day then produced ſome letters of her ſon's writing; I cannot be ſure that he mentioned the name of the ſhip.

Was this man's examination taken in writing?——I do not know, the priſoner was aſked what ſort of man he was, he ſaid, he he appeared to be about eighteen or nineteen, that he was a man of about five feet ſeven, pitted with the ſmall-pox, and dark hair, he ſaid dark hair, and we all ſaid, that we knew him perfectly well, many years before he went out, and that he had light hair, and was not marked with the ſmall-pox.

RICHARD JEFFRIES ſworn.

I knew Charles Lightowler perfectly well, I have ſeen him write often, I was acquainted with his hand-writing.

Are you ſufficiently acquainted with his writing, to tell us whether this is his?——I knew him from the firſt time that ever he wrote the firſt copy.

Court. Did he write a pretty good hand?——Yes, a very good hand. (Looks at the will.) I do not believe this to be his ſignature, to the beſt of my knowledge: I was preſent at Bow-ſtreet.

Court. Tell us what paſſed; was what the priſoner ſaid taken down in writing?—Yes, I believe it was.

What reaſon have you for believing the name of Charles Lightowler, ſigned to that paper, not being his writing?—By ſo often having ſeen his writing, and I was ſo well acquainted with his writing I thoroughly knew it.

Is that the ſame kind of writing?—No.

What particular reaſon have you for thinking this is not his hand writing?——He always left the letters open, the L and H open at top, and the R's were not the ſame, to the beſt of my knowledge I do not believe it to is his hand writing; I believe he had been abroad about three years.

Mr. Alderman Watſon. You ſay you have examined the written part of this will?—I have.

Do you think that any part of the written part of this will is the hand writing of Mr. Lightowler?—I do not.

JOHN FOWLER ſworn.

I know Charles Lightowler, the ſon of Mrs. Day, I taught him to write five or ſix years ago, I ſuppoſe he was then about thirteen or fourteen; I have not had occaſion to know much of him ſince.

Look at that will.——It does not appear to me to be any part of his hand writing.

Court. Has it often happened to you to know theſe young perſons hands whom you have taught, ſome time afterwards?—Yes, it has.

Then pray, Sir, have you not very frequently obſerved the hand writing of perſons to change very much, after they have learned to write?——Yes, I have.

ANDREW M'LANE ſworn.

Did you know Charles Lightowler?—Yes.

Have you ſeen him write?——Many a time.

Look at that ſignature, and tell us if that is his hand writing?—It is different from his general mode of writing, I ſhould think it was not, but I will not ſwear to it poſitively; I was ſhip's ſteward when he was on board, then I was Captain's clerk after he went away.

Was he ever at ſick quarters at New-York?——Never, we were at New-York from about the 14th or 15th of November to the 1ſt day of December, 1780, he never was at ſick quarters during that time.

Can you undertake to ſay poſitively, the deceaſed was never on ſhore at New York?——I cannot ſay he was not on buſineſs or pleaſure.

Have you not been frequently at New York?——I have been frequently on ſhore there.

Do you remember there was any ſeaman on board the Prince William of the name of James Murray?—I do not remember any of that name.

Any body of the name of Thomas Williams?——I do not recollect whether there was or no, I do not recollect any ſuch perſon as James Murray on board.

BENJAMIN SWIFT ſworn.

I was ſurgeon's mate on board the Prince William.

Did

Did you know Charles Lightowler?—I did, he was Captain's clerk, I knew his hand writing. (Looks at the will.) That is not his hand writing; I was with him at New York, I meſſed with him ſome part of the time, we were there three months.

Was there any perſon on board of your ſhip of the name of James Murray or Thomas Williams?——No.

Court. You have often ſeen him write?——I have frequently.

Are you well acquainted with his hand writing?——I know it perfectly well.

Do you think it quite unlike his hand writing?——I do.

RICHARD LIGHTOWLER ſworn.

What relation are you to the deceaſed?——Brother.

Have you given a releaſe; do you mean to claim any part of the effects?——I have releaſed all claim; when the priſoner was examined before Sir Sampſon, I did then ſay, that I believed the two firſt lines were the writing of my brother, but I had not ſo good a view as I have had ſince.

Was the examination taken in writing?—I cannot ſay.

Priſoner. When I firſt ſhewed him the will, did not he acknowledge it to be his brother's hand writing, and aſked me how I came by it?——I did not.

A WITNESS ſworn.

I knew Lightowler, I ſerved on board the ſame ſhip. (Looks at the will.) I do not think it is his hand writing.

Court to Lightowler. Then when you was examined, you rather inclined to think it to be his hand writing?——Yes, upon a former examination.

Court. Suppoſe you had ſeen this piece of paper, or that piece of paper, could you have doubted whether it was his hand writing?—I could not, I believe that paper to be my brother's.

THOMAS FAWCETT ſworn.

I know his hand writing, that is not at all like his hand writing.

Court to Swift. How long was the Prince William at New York?——I think about three months, I cannot charge my memory, we left New York ſome time in December, it was either the latter end of November, or beginning of December.

Court. I ſuppoſe the men were frequently on ſhore at New York?—I recollect his once going on ſhore, on the 14th of November, 1781.

RICHARD BURGESS ſworn.

Relate all you know of this.—On Wedneſday the 3d of November, the priſoner at the bar made application to one Mr. Comford, a dealer in clothes, he ſays to him, you have known me a good while, I was committed to Tothill-fields, Bridewell.

Court. I will not examine him to the declarations of the priſoner; do you know any thing of the matter, except what the priſoner has told you?—Yes; I was in perſon with the priſoner at the Brown Bear, by Mr. Jones's deſire, it was wrote upon the will, "Mrs. Day, dealer in clothes, Bow-ſtreet, Covent-garden." Mr. Jones ſaid he ſhould be glad to ſee Mrs. Day, then I went with the priſoner to Mrs. Day, at the hoop and petticoat warehouſe; I went in and aſked if that was Mrs. Day's, ſhe was not at home, the priſoner aſked young Mr. and Mrs. Lightowler, whether they had not a brother caſt away in the Ville de Paris; they ſaid they had; I ſaid, Mr. Jones, the proctor would be glad if Mrs. Day could come to him; they both of them looked at the will, and they ſaid they believed that muſt be a forged will; young Mrs. Lightowler ſays to her brother, go next door and fetch Mr. Carpmeal, the officer; the man ſaid they might fetch whom they would: no officer came, and we were at full liberty; Mrs. Day ſaid, at the examination, ſhe looked upon ſome part of the will to be her ſon's hand writing: we went into the Brown Bear.

What ſhip did Wagg belong to?——I do not know.

Court. Look when the deceaſed was turned over from the Triumph to the Prince William?——The 21ſt of June, 1781.

Lightowler. I ſaw my brother the 5th of November, and twenty-four days before this was executed, my brother came on board the Barfleur to ſee me, he was then upon very good terms with all the family.

Priſoner. Aſk him, whether he did not acknowledge the hand writing to be his brother's hand writing?

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

In the firſt place, when I ſaw Mr. Lightowler, he was very genteelly dreſſed; he was going to ſell a white ſhirt that very day, when I firſt became acquainted with him, I did not belong to a King's ſhip, he had a blue coat on, he uſed to uſe a houſe that I did, ſeeing he was a man of war's officer, I lent him money many different times; when I was going away from New York to Charles Town, he ſaid to me, I will make you a will to take to England.

Who was James Murray?——He was a man that lived on me, and Williams kept the Plate of Oyſters, in the Fly Market at New York; I told Mr. Lightowler my witneſſes were at New York.

GEORGE COMFORD ſworn.

I have known the priſoner a great many years, I never ſaw any thing of him but a very honeſt man, as far as ever I knew.

What are you?——I keep a clothes-ſhop in Roſemary-lane.

What is the priſoner?——A ſeaman.

Can he read and write?——Not that I know of, I never ſaw him write.

JANE WRIGHT ſworn.

I have known the priſoner, he has lived with me two years.

What character does he bear?—A very good one, he was a very ſober, honeſt man.

Where do you live?——In Virginia-ſtreet.

Court to M'Lane. I think you ſay you ſucceeded Lightowler as Captain's clerk?——Not immediately, there was one intervened, I was on board when Lightowler was turned off as Captain's clerk, the 15th of April 1782, he continued Captain's clerk till he left the ſhip.

In what ſituation did he go on board the Formidable?——In the ſame ſituation.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

200. LAWRENCE CARTER was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting John Howarth, Eſquire, on the 14th of November, on the King's highway, putting him in fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will, one ſteal watch chain, value 12d. one white cornelian ſeal, ſet in gold, value 20s. one red cornelian ſeal, ſet in gold, value 20s. and one cryſtal ſeal, ſet in gold, value 20s. his property.

JOHN HOWARTH, Eſq; ſworn.

On Sunday evening, the 14th of November laſt, between ten and eleven, I was going home down by Charing-croſs, on the ſide next Whitehall, I had a gentleman with me in company, my chain hung out of my pocket, a man ſnatched at my watch, I had then no great coat on, and my watch chain was very viſible; I put my hand, and found the ſeals were gone, but my watch was left; I cannot deſcribe who took them.

John Cooper, a pawnbroker, produced one of the ſeals, which had been pawned by Anna Maria Bouſted, who ſaid ſhe had them of the priſoner, and the priſoner ſaid he picked them up under ſome hay, near Johnſon's-court, Charing-croſs.

Bouſted depoſed to the ſame effect.

Priſoner. I found the things.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

201 JOHN

201. JOHN CHAMBERS was indicted, for that he, well knowing that one James Witty, deceaſed, had lately ſerved our Lord the King on board the Exeter, and that certain wages and pay were due to him, on the 23d of October laſt, feloniouſly did utter and publiſh as true, a certain falſe, forged, and counterfeited paper, purporting to be a laſt will, dated the 4th of December, deviſing the ſame to the ſaid Thomas Chambers, and appointing him executor thereof, in order to receive the ſaid wages and pay, due to the ſaid James Witty.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. The will purports to be a laſt will.

Mr. Silveſter, Council for the Proſecution. The act ſays, "if any perſon ſhall forge a will."

Court. But it muſt be the will of ſomebody.

Court to Jury. Gentlemen, as we are of opinion, in this caſe, the indictment is defective, it is unneceſſary to trouble you with evidence.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

202. JOHN MILES was indicted for that he, on the 5th day of October, feloniouſly and falſely did make, forge, and counterfeit, a certain deed, purporting to be a bill of ſale, of Robert M'Cormick, ſeaman, lately belonging to the Eaſt India ſhip, called the Earl of Talbot, in conſideration of ten pounds eighteen ſhillings, paid by Daniel M'Cartey, purporting to be a bill of ſale to the ſaid Daniel M'Cartey, of all his wages and pay due to him, as his, and their own proper goods and chattles, and to his and their own proper uſe and uſes for ever; which ſaid bill of ſale was dated the 5th of October, 1784, and ſealed and delivered in the preſence of Nathaniel Darby, and Keefe O Keefe, with intent to defraud the ſaid Daniel M'Cartey.

A ſecond count for uttering the ſame, with a like intention.

The proſecutor and one of the ſubſcribing witneſſes could not identify the priſoner, but the other ſubſcribing witneſs ſwore poſitively to him, the priſoner in his defence ſaid M'Cormick owed him five guineas, and gave him a note for that ſhip, which he ſold to the proſecutor, as other young fellows had done, he went on board the next day to M'Cormick, who paid him what he owed him, and gave him half a guinea for his trouble.

The Priſoner called one witneſs who gave him a good character.

The Jury retired for a ſhort time, and returned with a verdict

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

203. LEWIS HENRY SCIPIO DUROURE, late of St. Paul's, Covent Garden, in the County of Middleſex, Eſq; was indicted for that he, being an evil diſpoſed perſon, and of a wicked diſpoſition, after the 1ſt of June, 1723, to wit on the 21ſt of November laſt, with force and arms, in the Pariſh aforeſaid, with a certain piſtol, loaded with gunpowder, and a leaden bullet, which piſtol he then and there had and held in his right hand, unlawfully, wilfully, maliciouſly and feloniouſly, did ſhoot at one Huxley Sandon, Eſq; the ſaid Huxley Sandon, then and there being in the peace of God and our Lord the King, in the dwelling houſe of James Brewer and John Sandy, againſt the form of the ſtatute, and againſt the King's peace.

The indictment was opened by Mr. Chetwood as follows.

My Lord and Gentlemen of the Jury, This is an indictment as you have heard againſt the gentleman at the bar, for wilfully and maliciouſly firing at Huxley Sandon, Eſq; a loaded piſtol: Gentlemen there is no attempt on the part of the proſecutor, to carry this further than the facts will go, therefore therefore I ſhall only ſay in opening this caſe to you, that the proſecutor and the priſoner, had been for a long time in habits of friendſhip, the priſoner always had acceſs to the houſe of the proſecutor, and they were in great friendſhip and intimacy; ſometime ſince it was ſuppoſed the priſoner was going to France, or Italy, and he went to the houſe of the proſecutor, and prevailed on the wife of the proſecutor to accompany him to Dover, and accordingly ſhe did accompany him to Dover; the proſecutor enraged and angry at that time, no doubt of it, purſued his wife and his friend to Dover, however they eluded the ſearch, and came back to town: Information was given after ſeveral endeavours to find them, that they were at a Bagnio, in Long Acre, the proſecutor and his friends went to ſearch there, they were denied, but the proſecutor and his friends had reaſon to think that they either were in the houſe, or coming to the houſe, as they had been in the houſe, and were very well known there, the man ſaid at firſt they were not there, and he did not know them. However from ſeveral expreſſions, the proſecutor and his friends were convinced that they did know the priſoner, and in a little while after they heard the feet of two people walking, as if in great confuſion over their heads, and they were then pretty well ſatisfied, that the priſoner at the bar was in the houſe, and was in company with Mrs. Sandon, who has been the unfortunate cauſe of this proſecution; Gentlemen, the proſecutor and his friends went up ſtairs, there they met a ſervant, coming out of a room with a candle in her hand, and one of the friends of the proſecutor took a candle from her, and they were going to enter the room, Mr. Sandon the huſband, was going in firſt, he was willing and deſirous to be thoroughly ſatisfied, whether the priſoner and his wife were there or not, and immediately a piſtol was fired by ſomebody; that it was loaded, was moſt certain, becauſe the ball paſſed through a part of his hat, there was no light in the room at the time, but however, he ſaw by the firing of the piſtol, that it was perhaps the priſoner at the bar, he was pretty poſitive at that time, however, they called freſh aſſiſtance and took the priſoner and Mrs. Sandon; the witneſſes will inform you, in what ſituation they found the priſoner at the bar, and how they found Mrs. Sandon, I believe they were both armed at that time, Mrs. Sandon had piſtols loaded in her hand, as well as the priſoner; whether or no, the priſoner was the perſon that fired the piſtol at Mr. Sandon, it will be for you to enquire; there is little doubt, I ſhould apprehend, that it will be proved to be him; if you find that he fired the piſtol, you will have no difficulty in pronouncing him guilty of ſhooting, maliciouſly and felonioufly, againſt Mr. Sandon: Gentlemen, we ſhall call our witneſſes and prove the facts; and if you believe he was the perſon that fired the piſtol at the proſecutor, you will find him guilty.

MARY JONES ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Chetwood. Where do you live?——At the Royal Hotel, in Long Acre.

Did you live there in October laſt?——Yes?

Did you ever ſee the priſoner at the bar?——Yes.

Did you ever ſee him at that houſe?—Yes.

Do you remember him there on the 24th of October, and do you remember Mr. Sandon, the proſecutor, coming to that houſe?——Yes.

Was the priſoner in the houſe at that time?——No Sir, not when they came in firſt, he was out.

Did he come in during the time Mr. Sandon was there?——Yes, and he went up ſtairs into the room.

Who was with him?——A lady.

Did you ſee Mr. Sandon go up ſtairs afterwards?—No, I was in the room with the Count, at the time they came up ſtairs.

Did you come out of the room and ſee Mr. Sandon?——I came out of the room, but I do not recollect ſeeing Mr. Sandon; I was in the room, and the Lady ſaid ſhe would would fire at the firſt perſon that came into the room, the bell rang in the room where the Count and the lady were, and I anſwered the bell.

Were they armed?——The lady was, but I do not recollect ſeeing piſtols in the Count's hands, I ſaw piſtols in the lady's hands, the lady ſaid ſhe would fire at the firſt that came in, for ſhe would ſooner die than go with them.

Did the lady mention any names, or had any been mentioned to her?—No Sir, ſhe ſaid ſhe would kill the firſt that came in, ſhe would fire at the firſt that came in, for ſhe would ſooner die, than go with them.

(The Count deſired a chair that he might ſit down to take notes. A chair ordered.)

When you came out of the room, did you leave any candle in the room?——I brought out the candle, and ſomebody took the candle, but who it was I cannot ſay, I did not ſtop a moment, I was frightened and came down ſtairs.

Mr. Erſkine, and Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council.

Mr. Erſkine. Pray my girl, had Mrs. Sandon any more piſtols than one?——She had two, I do not recollect the count had any, ſhe was dreſſed in mens cloaths, and had a piſtol in each hand.

You are ſure it was her, that ſaid ſhe would fire at the firſt man that came in?—Yes,

What houſe is this?—The Royal Hotel, in Long Acre, I live there as a ſervant.

Who is this houſe kept by?——By Mr. James Soundy, and John Brewer, they are partners.

You are the ſervant?—Yes.

What is Mr. Brewer's Chriſtian Name?—John.

What is Mr. Sandy's Name?—James Soundy.

Mr. Erſkine. Then there is an end of it; my Lord, I ſubmit here is a fatal variance on the indictment.

Court to Mr. Chetwood. What do you ſay to this?—Mr. Chetwood, I ſubmit it may be conſidered as ſurpluſage.

Mr. Erſkine. It is too plain, it is A. B. C.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, there can be no doubt at all in this caſe, they have taken upon themſelves to ſtate in the indictment, whoſe houſe it is; I do not know that it was neceſſary for them to have ſo done, but having done it, they are bound in point of law to prove it, and the evidence turns out that it is not the dwelling houſe of James Brewer and John Sandy, but of James Soundy and John Brewer, that is a fatal variance in the indictment, and where a man is charged on a capital offence, ſtrict law is adhered to, ſo that you cannot do any thing but acquit him.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

MISDEMEANOR.

204. MARGARET SMALL was indicted for feloniouſly receiving, on the 15th day of October, one feather bed, value 5l. three blankets, value 20s. and a counterpane, value 20s. the property of Rice Jones, ſtolen by a certain ill diſpoſed perſon, well knowing the ſame to have been feloniouſly ſtolen.

GUILTY.

To be fined 1s. and impriſoned two years in Newgate.
Tried by the third London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

ERRATA.

In the firſt Trial of Richard Smith, for Guilty, read, Not Guilty.
In the ſecond Trial of ditto, for Guilty, read, Guilty, Death.
In the Trial of Edward Garth, for Guilty, read, Guilty, Death.
In the Trial of Richard Hobſon, for Guilty, read, Guilty, Death.

The Seſſions being ended, the Court proceeded to give Judgment as follows:

Received ſentence of death, 31.

James Dunn, John Evans, George Robinſon, James Hamilton, William Stewart, William Aſtell, William Giles, Philip Patch, Henry Rutter, Allen Williams, Thomas Tabbs, George Harris, John Shaw, Thomas Buttledoze, John Moody, Richard Smith, Thomas Cale, George Goldſmith, Laurence Hall, John Jones, Richard Hobſon, William Finder, William Abbott, John Kelſey, William Benton, Melvin Simmons, Edward Garth, James Smith, Ferdinand Dowland, Samuel Warner, and Edward Johnſon.

To be tranſported for fourteen years, 1.

Elizabeth Colley.

To be tranſported for ſeven years, 39.

Charles Stone, Andrew Simms, John Jeff, William Smart, Joſeph Davis, John M'Gowan, William Cox, Alexander M'Donald, Thomas Watſon, James Davis, James Thomas, Iſaac Warren, John Caſhon, William Hall, Benjamin Ingram, Thomas Wale, Luke Rogers, William Gilbert, Edward Humphreys, Michael Sullivan, George Franciſco, Edward Brett, Iſrael Silcock, Mary Bramham, Robert Jones, Benjamin Weſt, James Hobbs, Charles Medley, Catherine Hart, Nicholas Greenwell, Robert Freeman, Dennis Hayes, Jonathan Payne, William Bacot, Iſaac Dukes, George Newton, William Thomas, Thomas Clarke, and Nicholas Engliſh.

To be impriſoned in Newgate two years, 1.

Margaret Small.

To be confined to hard labour twelve months in the Houſe of Correction, 3.

William Nobes, Mary Horton, and Margaret Murphy.

To be confined to hard labour ſix months in the Houſe of Correction, 8.

Thomas Bolton, Richard Brady, William Wills, William Smith, Lara Iſrael, Elizabeth Burley, Mary Birch, and Elizabeth Pritchard.

To be impriſoned three months in Newgate, 1.

Hannah Trotter.

To be publickly whipped, 25.

Abraham Slater, William Jackſon, John Bryant, Edward Craker, William Wills, James Lee, John Fullman, John Birne, George Varlow, Charles Howard, William Cooper, John Morgan, John Lipper, Thomas M'Cann, Iſaac Dupree, James Coxes, Coates, John How, James Cook, William Wild, William How, Edward Wright, John Halway, John Evans, James Matthews, and John Taylor.

To be fined one ſhilling, 6.

John Grattan, Ann Petrie, Samuel Lane, Elizabeth Brown, James Brotherton, and Joel Abrahams.

To be fined ſixpence, 1.

Robert Jones.

Richard Marſh was called to the bar, and informed by the Court, that his caſe was reſerved till the opinion of the twelve Judges on the caſe of Humphry Moore was declared, as it was governed by that, being exactly ſimilar, and there was no ground, either in fact or law, for drawing any diſtinction between them; and the Judges having declared their opinion, that the caſe of Moore amounted to a felonious ſtealing, the ſentence of the Court upon him the ſaid Richard Marſh was, to be tranſported for ſeven years.

John Weſtwood was ordered to remain till next Seſſions.

Hickman and Dias to remain on their former order.

Robert Abel, capitally convicted at a former Seſſions, received his Majeſty's pardon, upon condition of being tranſported for ſeven years.

John Ruglaſs, a tranſport to the coaſt of Africa, who had been found at large, was ſet to the bar, and confeſſed he was the man that had received his Majeſty's pardon, on condition of being ſo tranſported; but alledged, that Governor Lacey, the Governor of the iſland, ſent them off, and would not give them any victuals: he was ordered to remain under under his former ſentence, and told he muſt repreſent his caſe to the King, and apply to him for mercy.

 The next Seſſions will begin on Wedneſday the 12th of January, 1785, at the Old Bailey.

HODGSON,

PROFESSOR of SHORT-HAND, and
SHORT-HAND WRITER to the OLD-BAILEY,
At No. 35, CHANCERY-LANE,

Reſpectfully thanks the Gentlemen of the learned Profeſſions, and others, for their flattering Partiality to his Compendious SYSTEM of SHORT-HAND, which is Taught, as uſual, in FOUR LESSONS ONLY, at 10s. 6d. each.

Trials, Arguments, &c. taken with Preciſion and Care, and expeditiouſly tranſcribed, on reaſonable Terms.

A new Impreſſion of his Second Edition of Short-hand, Price 2s. 6d. to be had as above; alſo of BLADON, Paternoſter-row, and CLARKE, Portugal-ſtreet.

In the Preſs, and ſpeedily will be publiſhed, Price only 2s. 6d. A Collection of CHARACTERS, Arbitrary and Symbolical, for the Benefit of SHORT-HAND WRITERS, and adapted to every Syſtem; with a comparative Table of Short-hand Alphabets, by E. HODGSON.

N. B. The Table may then be had ſeparate, Price 6d.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 12th of JANUARY 1785, and the following Days;

Being the SECOND SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER II. PART I.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

BEFORE the Right Honourable RICHARD CLARK, LORD MAYOR of the City of London; the Right Honourable SIR JOHN SKYNNER, Lord Chief Baron of his Majeſty's Court of Exchequer the Honourable SIR WILLIAM HENRY ASHURST, Knt. one of the Juſtices of his Majeſty's Court of King's Bench; the Honourable JOHN HEATH, Eſq. one of the Juſtices of his Majeſty's Court of Common Pleas; the Honourable JAMES ADAIR, Serjeant at Law, Recorder of the ſaid City; JOHN WILLIAM ROSE, Eſq; and others his Majeſty's Juſtices of Oyer and Terminer of the City of London, and Juſtices of Gaol Delivery of Newgate, holden for the ſaid City and County of Middleſex.

London Jury.	Firſt Middleſex Jury.	Second Middleſex Jury.
John Paley	Richard Mountain	John Page
James Boulton	James Hopkins	John Fell
Robert Tunno	John Paſs	James Smart
Joſeph Pugh	John Young	John Merrell
Thomas Rogers	Richard Hett	Charles Newton
Joſeph Hand	Peter Weſtcott	William Holbrook
Gilbert Hallard	Richard Parkes	John Arthur
William Schooley	Thomas Blencow	Philip Rawlins
George Reeve	Thomas Kendall	Samuel Acton
Samuel Laurence	George Sage	William Prieſt
Benjamin Wriggleſworth	William Puddiford	George Roberts
William Jacobſon.	John Flaxman.	John Parry.

205. THOMAS FORD was indicted for burglariouſly and felonioufly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Patrick Concoran, about the hour of one in the night, on the 5th of November laſt, and burglariouſly and felonioufly ſtealing therein, two linen ſhirts, value 12s. one linen ſhift, value 12d. two linen ſheets, value 5s. two linen handkerchiefs, value 3s. two caps, value 2s. two pair of muſlin ruffles, value 12d. one pair of cotton ſtockings, value 2s. three copper pottage pots, value 12s. four ſaucepans, value 5s. the property of the ſaid Patrick.

PATRICK CONCORAN ſworn.

I am a victualler, I went to bed at ten o'clock, my wife ſet up after me, I came down about five in the morning, on the 5th of November, I lighted the fire, and there is a bit of a yard belonging to the houſe, fenced in, and a door to it, I went out to open that door, and I found it was open, there is a communication between the waſh-houſe and the kitchen, and a door between them, there was the mark of iron, and there are three bolts to the door, I ſaw the priſoner and two more young fellows were at our houſe about two hours, the night previous to the robbery, they went away about eight; I knew the priſoner a boy, he lived in the neighbourhood where I came from, and his father and mother; we went to ſearch the priſoner's lodgings, and found nothing, and I ſaw the priſoner at the door of a neighbouring private houſe, then I called the officer out, and we went and took him, I charged him with ſuſpicion of the robbery, and he ſaid.

Did you tell him it would be better for him to confeſs?—I did.

Then you muſt not ſay what he ſaid.

CATHERINE TAFF ſworn.

I am a waſherwoman, I left the things in the waſh-houſe of the proſecutor, the night the houſe was broke open, about ſeven at night, and I bolted the door with three bolts.

ELEANOR ANDERSON ſworn.

I ſaw the door faſtened when I went to bed about eleven; my miſtreſs was up and other people.

WINEFRED CONCORAN ſworn.

I was the laſt that went to bed, the waſh-houſe door was ſhut, but I did not go to ſee whether it was faſt or not, it wanted a quarter to twelve.

GEORGE FORRESTER ſworn.

We took the priſoner in New Gravel-lane, at a public houſe, and at the back part of his coat, taking him up to the juſtice, I found this pair of cotton ſtockings wringing wet.

Priſoner. No it was not the back part of my coat, it was in my pocket.

Forreſter. We found alſo a flint and ſteel upon him.

Court to Proſecutor. When did you apprehend the priſoner?——The ſame morning.

Mrs. Concoran. I believe them to be mine, I will not ſay poſitively, I had two pair in the waſh, that were darned, they may be mine, they are like mine, there are no marks but the manufacturers, and being darned, but other people may darn the ſame.

JOHN ORANGE ſworn.

On ſearching the priſoner, in his jacket pocket I found a maſk, and a flint and ſteel, and tinder box, with tinder in it; I found no clothes.

Court to Mrs. Concoran. Do you believe that darn to be your own, can you diſtinguiſh it from any others?—No I cannot.

Was any thing elſe found upon him?—Nothing elſe.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, here is no evidence to affect this man.

NOT GUILTY.

Court to Priſoner. There is too great reaſon to think you have been guilty; I hope it will be a warning to you in future.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

---

206. WILLIAM MOORE, otherwiſe RANSMORE was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of John Long, about the hour of ſeven in the night, on the 27th of December, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, one cotton gown, value 4s. one linen gown, value 4s. one cloth coat, value 15s. one waiſtcoat, value 2s. two black ſilk mode cloaks, value 10s. two coverlids, value 2s. two blankets, value 5s. three ſheets, value 5s. one linen apron, value 2s. and two frocks, value 5s. his property.

JOHN

JOHN LONG ſworn.

I live in White-croſs-ſtreet, my houſe was broke open on Monday the 27th of December, I was out, I went out at half after four, I locked the door and left nobody at home, I am quite clear it was locked; I came home about half after eight, when I went in, I found the door open, and the drawers and the bed ſtripped, and ſome things out of a box that was up ſtairs; I ſaw the priſoner on the Wedneſday following, before Juſtice Blackborough.

ALEXANDER MARTIN ſworn.

I was at my maſter's a merry making, on the 27th of December, and the thieves came running through Play-houſe-yard, we met three men, one of which was the priſoner, with a great bag on his ſhoulders, to the beſt of my knowledge, I think it was him, I ſaw my ſhopmate lay hold of him, he was never loſt, I picked up a a bundle cloſe to the heels of the man, that had it before, and that was the ſame man to the beſt of my knowledge, I ſaw the priſoner come along Play-houſe-yard, with the bundle on his ſhoulder.

Did Robinſon lay hold of the ſame man that had the bundle?——Yes, I took the bundle, and put it into a chandler's ſhop, then it was taken to the Juſtices, and Mr. Wyer had it.

JAMES ROBINSON ſworn.

Going through Playhouſe-yard, we met the priſoner and two more, each of them had a bundle, and I catched the priſoner by the collar, he immediately dropped the bag, and my ſhopmate picked it up, it was the ſame bundle, he was taken before the Magiſtrate.

DOUGLASS WYER ſworn.

I am a conſtable, I took charge of the priſoner from the laſt witneſs.

ANN LOUGH ſworn.

(Depoſed to the things.)

One of the black cloaks I know particularly, by having a little darn of my own darning, I am quite ſure of it; the other is my ſiſter's, ſhe left her black cloak with me on the Sunday night; this frock I know, it is one of my children's; and this white frock I know, and the two gowns, I have the patterns in my pocket of them; I have no doubt of the blankets.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

As I was going down Playhouſe-yard, two men dropped a bundle down, and they came and took me; I did not come home that night at all.

Court to Proſecutor. Was it light or dark?——It was not dark.

What may be the value of theſe things that are found?—I cannot ſay, about fifty ſhillings.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing to the value of 39s. but not of the burglary.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

207. WILLIAM TAYLOR was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 31ſt of December, one plate glaſs for a coach door, value 15s. one hammer cloth, value 2s. the property of John Whitworth.

JOHN ARMSTRONG ſworn.

On the 31ſt of December, between ſeven and eight, I was coming by Biſhopſgate Church, I ſaw the priſoner with this under his arm, wrapped in a hammer cloth, I aſked him what he had there, he ſaid it was no matter to me; I ſaid I ſhould ſtop him, for I ſuppoſed it was a coach glaſs, and I found it was ſo; he ſaid it was, and he was going to Long-acre; I took him up, the next day we advertiſed it, and the coachman came and owned it.

DANIEL HARPER ſworn.

I was with the laſt witneſs when he ſtopped the man, theſe things were found upon him him, they have been at Mr. Wilmot's Office ever ſince, locked up; I did not hear what the priſoner ſaid at firſt.

(The hammer cloth depoſed to by the proſecutor, by the lacing.)

Proſecutor. There never is two hammer cloths alike, the glaſs has a ſtring to match it, that was cut off; I am ſure it is the glaſs almoſt, I will not ſwear to it; I know it alſo by the colour of the cloth, and the make, I have looked at it before; I ſerve a lady with a job, it is her coach and her hammer cloth, it is not my property, nor the coach glaſs neither; the carriage was ſtanding at a coach-houſe, at the Two Swans, which belongs to me, the things were taken from thence, I am anſwerable for every thing that is loſt.

How ſo?——I paid for a carpet that was loſt out of the coach once before; ſhe ſays ſhe has nothing to do with it; I always underſtood it as my property, it is in my care always; I hire the coach-houſe and ſtable.

Court to Jury. This latter explanation of the property being in the poſſeſſion of this witneſs, and his conſidering himſelf anſwerable for it, goes a good way towards the property being his, becauſe, in the caſe of a carrier, it is always ſo held; but I will ſend to aſk three of the Judges, who are up ſtairs, and we will go on in the mean time.

WILLIAM WHEELER ſworn.

I drive this lady's coach, her name is Barrow, in Bury-ſtreet, St. Mary-axe, No. 13, I put in about half after four, or a little before, ſhe is a Jew lady, and they never ride on Friday evening; I went down to Hackney, to carry what they call a calaw, I laid at Hackney all night, and the next morning I came back, and ſaw the door open, and the glaſs ſtring cut off; we have matched it at the Office, it matches exactly, but I cannot ſwear to the glaſs, any further than matching the ſtring with the hammer cloth; I know it more particularly, the hammer cloth is ripped at one corner, and in pulling it on, I tore it at the front.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was coming from Kingſland-road that evening, and a man aſked me to carry it for him, and he would give me a ſhilling, he then gave me a groat, and they took me.

Court to Armſtrong. Did he tell the ſame ſtory?——He did; there was a man at the back of him, but he did not ſay ſo while he was in ſight, the man did not run, but he turned down the church-yard; the man was perfectly out of ſight before he ſaid that to me.

Court. Gentlemen, all the Judges concur in opinion with me, that it is ſufficient in point of property to ſupport the charge of the indictment.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

208. THOMAS HOWARD and WILLIAM MORGAN were indicted for burglariouſly and felonioufly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of John Parker, about the hour of ſeven in the night, on the 31ſt of December laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, one blue ſatin pincuſhion, value 12d. two gold lockets, with hair and glaſs ſet therein, value 4l. 15s. one gold locket, with hair ſet therein, value 25s. and one gold pin, with an enamelled border and hair ſet therein, value 13s. his property.

JOHN PARKER ſworn.

I live in St. Paul's Church-yard, I keep a goldſmith's ſhop; on the 31ſt of December, between ſeven and eight in the evening, I was in the parlour at the back of my ſhop, I could ſee into the ſhop very plain, the ſhop door was open, I looked to the ſhop window, I ſaw the priſoner, Thomas Howard, come up to the ſhop window, and with his double fiſt, he broke the ſhew glaſs, and after that he took the pincuſhion out full of pins and lockets, the pincuſhion is worth one ſhilling, as to the other things, it is impoſſible to aſcertain; one locket I ſwore to was worth three pounds ſeven ſhillings and ſixpence, and another one pound eight ſhillings, and another one pound five ſhillings, and a pin thirteen ſhillings; when he broke the glaſs and took the cuſhion out, he ran through St. Paul's Church-yard, and I after him, crying out, ſtop him! ſtop him! I thought proper to return, and the priſoner was ſoon after brought by the mob; I found nothing upon him, but when he came back, I looked at his hands, and they were bloody with breaking the glaſs; I know his perſon particularly, the globe lamp ſhone in his face, and I was at the back of him directly; I ſaw nobody with him.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoners Council. Deſcribe a little what ſort of a ſhew glaſs this is?—It is what is commonly called a ſtall-board, the ſtall-board is out.

You draw it in to the inſide of the ſhop for cuſtomers?——No, I lift up this ſhew-glaſs, and take it out.

Court. It is moveable?——Yes.

Court. Then there is an end of the burglary.

Mr. Garrow. You have windows to the front of your ſhop; I have not, I have a preſs fixed, a piece of furniture, this ſhew-glaſs projects an inch or two over the ſhop, it projects, in ſhort, beyond the upright of the houſe.

Court. Were theſe things in any part of the ſhew-glaſs that projected beyond the ſhop, or were they in a line drawn from the top?——The extent, I believe, is above the bounds from the line of the foundation.

SAMUEL WOLFE ſworn.

I am a clerk in the India-houſe, accidentally, on the 31ſt of December laſt, between ſeven and eight, I was coming through St. Paul's Church-yard, and heard the cry of ſtop thief; I went into the highway, and ſaw the priſoner before me, he fell down about five yards, and in falling down he threw ſomething from his hand, I could not diſtinguiſh what it was then, but I ſaw ſomebody take it up, and then I ſaw it was a cuſhion; it was taken to Mr. Parker's ſhop: I am ſure it was the priſoner, he had not his hair tied then.

Mr. Garrow. What part of St. Paul's Church-yard is Mr. Parker's ſhop in?——About twenty or thirty yards from the corner next Cheapſide.

The cuſhion that was picked up, was it in the courſe that the perſon muſt have taken in running from that ſhop towards you, or was it beyond where he had run?——He threw it on one ſide, I ſaw him fling it againſt the rails of the church.

Was not it found on the Ludgate-hill ſide of him?—I believe it was found nearer Ludgate-hill.

In the courſe where the priſoner had not run?——He threw it from him.

ROBERT MORRIS ſworn.

I was in St. Paul's Church-yard, accidentally paſſing, and I heard an alarm at ſome diſtance, I could not diſtinguiſh, I ſaw ſeveral people running cloſe under the rails of the Church-yard, preſently I ſaw a perſon fall down, I croſſed over, and laid hold of the priſoner, and another perſon laid hold of him, the perſon that was with me ſaid, he has broke open a ſhop, and ſtole this cuſhion, and he lifted up this cuſhion; that perſon is not here, nor has not been found ſince: when we took him to Mr. Parker's ſhop, I ſaw his right hand a good deal bloody, and upon this we conveyed him to the Compter.

Mr. Garrow. Did you examine his hand very accurately?——I ſaw it was bloody.

Which might have proceeded from the flints?——I cannot tell what it proceeded from.

GEORGE PIENEPONT ſworn.

I am the conſtable, I took the priſoner in cuſtody between ſeven and eight, I was at the Horns, in Gutter-lane, I heard a noiſe, and went out, and the firſt object that was before before me, was Morgan laying in the paſſage of the Half Moon, on his back, and another man ſeemed as if he was getting up from him; Morgan got up and ran after him, and one Mr. Bond, a glazier, adviſed me to take him as a confederate; when I looked in his face, he damned my eyes; I told him he was a very bad man, he drew this knife and cut me acroſs the fingers, and likewiſe bit my thumb.

PRISONER HOWARD'S DEFENCE.

Returning from No. 34, in Whitechapel, to Drury-lane, I heard the cry of ſtop thief, he was down, and I fell down, I fell over him, my hat fell off, and in picking up my hat, a Gentleman charged me with being the thief.

THOMAS HOWARD, GUILTY

Of ſtealing, to the value of 39s. but not of the burglary.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

WILLIAM MORGAN, NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

---

209. JEFFRY ASHMAN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 9th of December, one ſilver tongue ſcraper, value 5s. a pair of iron ſpurs, plated with ſilver, value 2s. a pair of ſilver ſhoe buckles, value 40s. a pair of ſilver knee buckles, value 5s. a woollen cloth coat, value 20s. a waiſtcoat, value 10s. a pair of ſilk breeches, value 10s. eight pair of cotton ſtockings, value 20s. two pair of ſilk ſtockings, value 10s. one wooden trunk, covered with ſkin, value 2s. the property of Charles Hopkins, Eſquire.

CHARLES HOPKINS, Eſq; ſworn.

On the 9th of December, coming from Uxbridge to Berner's-ſtreet, I miſſed my trunk from behind my carriage, between the hours of five and ſix, I firſt miſſed it when I arrived at my own houſe; I adverti ſed it the next day, with a reward of ten guineas, and I received, on the 12th, a meſſage from Bow-ſtreet, I went there to ſwear to the trunk and the property, I found my property there.

WILLIAM TIMBERLEY ſworn.

I am coachman to Mr. Hopkins, I buckled this trunk on at the Crown, at Uxbridge, behind the carriage, I did not miſs it till I came to Berner's-ſtreet, I then told my maſter we had loſt the trunk.

JOHN TUICK ſworn.

I was coming up Oxford-ſtreet, juſt by the Pantheon, on the 9th of December, between five and ſix, I ſaw the priſoner lift a trunk from behind a gentleman's carriage, and come acroſs, and juſt as he came to the flag pavement, he lifted it on his ſhoulders, and Robert Wakelin came from the other ſide of the ſtreet, and aſked me if I ſaw the man with the trunk, and we went after him and took him, and Wakelin attacked him with the trunk, and he juſt turned his head about, and ran, I overtook him in the courſe of ten or twelve yards, I never loſt ſight of him from the time I ſaw him lift the trunk; we took him and the trunk to Bow-ſtreet.

ROBERT WAKELIN ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner buſily employed behind the carriage, going down Oxford-ſtreet, I then ſaw him take the trunk down, and croſs the ſtreet, and I aſked the laſt witneſs if he ſaw him, and we went and overtook him; I aſked him where he was going with the trunk, he, without any reply, dropped it from his ſhoulders; we took him and the trunk to Bow-ſtreet, the trunk was put in Mr. Hopkins's charge at Bow-ſtreet, ſealed with my ſeal, and three cyphers to it, it is the ſame now.

(The trunk opened and the things depoſed to.)

Priſoner.

Priſoner. I have nothing to ſay.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

210. JOHN MASSIAS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 13th of December laſt, one ſilver watch, value 40s. a ſilk ſtring, value 1d. a ſtone ſeal, ſet in ſilver, value 1s. one braſs key, value 1d. the property of Thomas Carr, in his dwelling houſe.

And FRANCES NICHOLLS was indicted for feloniouſly receiving the ſame, knowing them to have been ſtolen.

WILLIAM CARR ſworn.

I live in King-ſtreet, Wapping, the priſoner came to me the 12th of December, and enquired if I could lodge him; I told him I could, and I lodged him, he told me he was Lieutenant Douglas's boy, belonging to the Elizabeth man of war, he wanted a bed for two or three nights; I lodged him that night, and in the morning he came down when I was to get my breakfaſt, he aſked me to let him have a little tea, and he would pay me for it, I did ſo; after breakfaſt, he took my child out of my arms of ſix months old, and he walked about the room with it, my eldeſt child was in the room with him, who was between ſix and ſeven; I left them two in the room, and I went up ſtairs, where the priſoner had ſlept, to lock the room door, I looked at the watch when I went up ſtairs, it hung in the chimney corner, in the lower room, where I left him, it was then twenty minutes paſt nine; when I came down ſtairs again, my eldeſt child was ſitting at the door, with my youngeſt child on his knee, I opened the door, and came in, and the young lad was not there, my child ſaid he was gone into the yard, I looked at my fire-ſide, and immediately miſſed my watch and the priſoner; my door was open, my fore ſtreet door, and my watch and the priſoner was gone; the yard is a thoroughfare, where the people go through, but my door opens into the front ſtreet; I cried out immediately I was robbed, they purſued aft r the priſoner ſome yards, but could not find him, and a man, who heard me ſay I was robbed by the priſoner, and who was with him when he came for the lodging, he took him afterwards.

Court. What connection had he with the priſoner, that he was ſeeking out a lodging for him?——I do not know, he took compaſſion on him, the man is gone to ſea, he took the priſoner in the Minories, and brought him to my houſe; he had not the the watch upon him when he was brought back to my houſe, neither would he confeſs that he took it; I ſaid, my good boy, if you will confeſs what you have done with it, or if you have pawned it or ſold it, I will not hurt you; he would not confeſs at that time: the officer has the watch.

JOHN ORANGE ſworn.

The priſoner was brought to the publick office in Shadwell, and through this woman's promiſes, he told me, if I would go along with him, he would go and ſhew me the perſon that had the watch, which was one Milward, and I aſked him if he had bought a watch of any woman; and he ſaid yes; I aſked him where it was; he ſaid he had it in his fob.

(The watch depoſed to.)

Court. What is the value of it?—Forty Shillings.

Who valued it?——The officer, Mr. Orange, valued it to that.

BENJAMIN MILWARD ſworn.

I am a wine porter, I met the woman priſoner, and ſhe aſked me if I would buy a watch, and ſhe ſhewed me the watch, I told her I was in a hurry, I could not ſtop, and I ſaw her again at the Ship, in Crutched Friars, and ſhe aſked me again; ſhe aſked two guineas for it, I told her I did not know the the value of it, I would not give that for it; ſhe ſaid her huſband was likely to come into trouble, and ſhe wanted to receive a little money, and ſhould be glad to part with it; I told her I would let her have a guinea and a half upon it, if ſhe would bring the man ſhe bought it of; ſhe ſaid ſhe bought it of a young man; but ſhe never came again till ſhe came with the officer, that was on the morrow evening.

PRISONER NICHOLLS's DEFENCE.

This gentleman bought the watch of me.

PRISONER MASSIAS's DEFENCE.

When the proſecutor was taken up before the Juſtice, the Juſtice aſked her if ſhe knew me, ſhe ſaid ſhe did not; I did not take the watch; my witneſſes were here till twelve laſt night.

WILLIAM SHAW ſworn.

I know the priſoner Nicholls; on the 13th of laſt month I came home about half paſt twelve, this woman and the boy had been at my houſe, and I was told by the boy, he had given her a watch to ſell; I immediately turned round to the boy and ſaid, you young rogue, where did you get a watch to ſell; he ſaid he came from America, and was a native of America, and was juſt come from Portſmouth, and had no victuals, nor no friends, and that he gave this watch to this woman to ſell, to get him ſome money to get ſome victuals; I have known this woman twelve months before, ſhe has a family of three ſmall children, which ſhe maintains.

What is ſhe?—She deals in old clothes in Roſemary-lane, her huſband is a very induſtrious man; the woman came afterwards, and left the money at the bar, one guinea and a half for the boy, but he never came for it.

JOHN MASSIAS, GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

FRANCIS NICHOLLS, NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

211. THOMAS WELLS and THOMAS CONNER were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 20th of December, fourteen ſilk mode hats, value 28s. the property of Cornelius Blake.

CORNELIUS BLAKE ſworn.

I live at Brentford, I am a linen-draper, I only prove the property.

THOMAS GOSS ſworn.

I am a watchman, about ten minutes after eleven, on the 20th of December, I ſaw theſe two priſoners with a bonnet open, and ſome things tied up in this apron on a ſtick, I aſked them what they had there, they ſaid if I would go back with them, they would ſhew me where they got them; I told them I would take them to the watch-houſe, then Conner dropped the bundle which he had.

ROBERT BERRY ſworn.

I am one of the patrols of the pariſh, the watchman brought them in to be examined a little after eleven, I ſuſpected they had ſtole the things, they both of them ſaid, that ſome man had given them two-pence to carry them, they could not produce him, I ſaid where are you carrying them to? no, they could not tell that; the things have been in my poſſeſſion ever ſince.

(The things depoſed to, except the bonnet.)

PRISONER WELLS's DEFENCE.

A man aſked this boy to carry this bundle, and he asked me to carry the bonnet, I thought no harm.

PRISONER CONNER's DEFENCE.

I am a drover, I had been to Acton with ſome ſheep, and coming home again at night a man asked me to carry this.

Court. How old are you?——Turned of ſeventeen.

How old are you, Wells?——About fourteen.

Priſoner Conner. About half after ten, a coach ſtopped, and a gentleman got out of the coach with this bundle, and he aid to me, me, my boy, earn three-pence, and carry this bundle juſt by; nobody was in company with me, then I met Wells, getting ſome hay at a coach, and I asked him to carry the bonnet; I had it before he was in company with me.

THOMAS WELLS, NOT GUILTY.

THOMAS CONNER, GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

---

212. WILLIAM TESTER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 29th of December, a quart ſilver tankard, value 5l. the property of John Turnall.

JOHN TURNALL ſworn.

I live at Wellingborough, in Northamptonſhire, I keep a public houſe; the priſoner called for a pot of beer, and paid for it; I went to tap a barrel, and in three minutes time the tankard was miſſing, which ſtood there before, and the priſoner was gone away; he came after that for ſome beer, I ſaid nothing about the tankard, I thought ſomebody had played the rogue with it, and taken it away; I ſuſpected two ſtrangers, I followed them to Kettering, and they ſaid we will go with you and trace it out; I then ſent for the priſoner, when theſe men were preſent, I ſaid to him, William, do you know any thing of my tankard? the priſoner is a nigh neighbour to me, within three hundred yards. I received this letter from one Baſcomb, informing me of the tankard; I found my tankard at Hicks's-hall.

CHARLES BASCOMB ſworn.

I live in Bloſſoms-inn, Lawrence-lane, I am a Coachman, and drive the Manchester coach, I came out of Northampton, about five in the morning, and when I came four miles on this ſide Newport, I picked up the priſoner, and brought him as far as Highgate, when I came there it began to be duſk, and I aſked him to pay me his fare, before he got into London, he ſaid he ſhould not pay me till he came to London, I aſked him the reaſon, and he made many words, he ſaid he ſhould not pay me, for he had no money, I told him he muſt be a bad kind of a man, not to have money, and we had a few words, and I put him withinſide the coach, as it was very cold, to ride a little way, having but few paſſengers, and he had a great bulk in his pocket, and I did not know but he might have ſome of my parcels about him; the only ſatisfaction I could get of him, was that he had friends in London, and he would pay me before he ſlept, I ſaid if he did not I ſhould be ſatisfied, with putting him in the Poultry Compter, as his fare came to ſeven ſhillings, then I inſiſted on ſearching him, to ſee if he had any of my parcels, and in ſearching him, I found this tankard with the lid ſcrewed off in the ſituation it is now, and there being many people in the houſe, (which was the Red Lion at Highgate) they adviſed me to charge him with a conſtable; we have had four ſtolen from Northampton, and it was advertized, I did not know but it was one of them, the next morning at Hickes's Hall, the priſoner ſaid it was his father's, and his grandfather's, and they were both dead, and now it was his.

(The Tankard depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was at work and I found this tankard in an old handkerchief.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice ASHURST.

---

213. JONAS ABRAHAMS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 20th of September, one tallow preſs and iron ſcrew

ſcrew, value 30s. the property of Thomas Barnes.

THOMAS BARNES ſworn.

In the middle of September, near the 20th, to the beſt of my knowledge, I made no minute of the day, I have a ſhop out in the fields at Battle-bridge, and I found it broke open, and from there I miſſed ſeveral articles, as well as this ſcrew, which belongs to a tallow preſs, I heard of it about a month ſince, being at Mr. Pellet's, in St. John Street, I went to Mr. Pellet's and ſaw this ſcrew, I found it to be my property, which I had loſt out of theſe building, I ſaw Mr. Pellet himſelf; his man is is here, Mr. Pellet ſaid he had bought it.

MICHAEL WARD ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Pellet, in St. John Street, he is an Ironmonger, this ſcrew which Mr. Barnes calls his property, I bought of Mr. Abrahams, with a quantity of iron. (The ſcrew produced) it was a fortnight or three weeks before this Gentleman owned it, that I bought it, it lay at our ſhop to ſell, I bought it as old iron in a quantity; Mr. Abrahams deal in old iron, and collects it all over the town, wherever he can, and gets his living that way as I underſtand; the priſoner brought this in a cart, he has dealt with my maſter three or four years, I bought it altogether at twelve pence a hundred, he has always dealt fair with us, there never was any thing claimed at our place before, I bought it of him as old iron, and looked upon it as ſuch, there was no nut to it when I bought it.

(The ſcrew depoſed to.)

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. This ſcrew without a nut is incompleat and ſtrictly old iron?——Yes.

It came in an open way?——Yes.

If any body elſe had brought it, you would have bought it, equally the ſame? I certainly ſhould.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, I ſubmit here is no evidence to put this man on his defence.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before the Lord Chief BARON.

---

214. WILLIAM WILLIAMS and ALEXANDER THOMPSON were indicted for ſtealing on the 27th of December, two hundred pounds weight of lead, value 28l. belonging to Thomas Child, affixed to a certain building of his.

THOMAS BREMEN ſworn.

I am maſter of St. George's Workhouſe, oppoſite the proſecutor's premiſes; which are in Farthing-field, Old Gravel-lane; about eleven at night, on the 27th of December laſt, I ſaw three men ſtanding between Mr. Child's workſhop and our workhouſe, I ſtaid and watched them for ſome minutes, I ſuſpected them, ſeeing ſomething in their poſſeſſion, that was large and cumberſome; I called up three men in the houſe, and went to examine, as ſoon as they ſaw the men appear, they made off, and took the property with them, they were purſued by theſe three men, and the priſoner Williams ſaid he was taking it away from two lads that were there, it did not appear that he was taking it away from them, he was converſing with them ſome minutes.

Court. Did there appear to be any ſtruggle between them?——No Sir, there did not, in half an hour after, I ſaw the priſoner Thompſon in cuſtody, he ſaid he was coming paſt and another boy gave him the lead to carry a little way for him, and they ſtood and converſed together for ten minutes.

THOMAS READER ſworn.

I belong to the workhouſe too, I apprehended the priſoner Williams, he went away from the place where he was, and the other after him, he had a piece of lead upon him, him, he carried it in his arms, and when I came up to him, he put it down on the cauſeway, he ſaid he took it away from ſome lads, he ſaid he was a going to take it to the watch-houſe, I left him with the other two men, and went after the other, he ſaid that another lad that was with him, gave it him to carry, and Thompſon ſaid that Williams ſaid, he would carry it to an old iron ſhop to ſell it.

THOMAS CHILD ſworn.

The lead is here, it has been in my poſſeſſion ever ſince the day it was found, I had ſome part of it from the workhouſe, and ſome part of it found in a field, the part that was taken from the priſoner has been in my poſſeſſion, ever ſince it was taken from the watch-houſe, I ſent one of my men for the piece of lead.

Where is that man?—He is not here.

Did you loſe any lead from your houſe?—About thirty one feet, I cannot ſwear it was this lead, only by having meaſured the lead that was found, and by comparing the pieces together.

WILLIAM POWELL ſworn.

I carried the lead to the watch-houſe, and I can ſwear that this is the ſame lead, by this ſcrag end, I took particular notice of it.

Proſecutor. I can only identify the lead by meaſuring the length and width of the gutter, the pieces all ſeemed to match, except this piece that is ſcragged, that has been loſt; the nail holes exactly fit.

Jury. How high is your houſe?—About ten feet from the ground.

Jury to Reader. Did you ever loſe ſight of Williams, from the time you purſued him, till you took him?—No.

PRISONER WILLIAMS's DEFENCE.

I was at a Publick-houſe, from about ſix till nine, drinking with Robert Humbleton, and one Holliday, and I came home, and aſked my daughter where my wife was, ſhe ſaid ſhe was gone out, I went in next door and had a pot of beer, by and by my wife came in, and ſhe told me ſhe ſaw this lad and another with the lead, and I went and looked at them, and aſked them if they were not aſhamed, they had better go to Sea for ten ſhillings a month, and I ſaid they ſhould go to the watch-houſe, and three men came running after us, but I told the men, and the maſter of the work-houſe, the name of the lad, and where he lived.

PRISONER THOMSON's DEFENCE.

I was down at Greenland-dock in the morning, and coming home I met a boy, and he had a piece of lead on his head, and he aſked me to carry it, and I ſaid yes, I carried it twenty yards, and this man ſtopped me, and the other lad run away.

The priſoner Williams called eight witneſſes, who gave him a very good character.

Court to Bremen. You are ſure you ſaw Williams ſtanding with the other two?—I did, I ſaw them ten minutes in converſation, there was no ſtruggling, they run away upon my calling out.

WILLIAM WILLIAMS, NOT GUILTY.
ALEXANDER THOMPSON, GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

---

215. SARAH ABERDEEN was indicted for ſtealing on the 3d of January, two woollen blankets, value 3s. the property of Stephen Cant.

GUILTY, 10d.

Privately whipped and diſcharged.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice ASHURST.

---

216. EDWARD PAYNE and MAY COOK were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 6th of October laſt, ten thouſand ounces of ſilver, being dollars, and parts arts of dollars, value 2400l. three wooden caſks, value 2s. one wooden box, value 12d. ten linen bags, value 5s. forty watches with two ſilver caſes, and one outſide metal caſe covered with tortoiſeſhell, each of the ſaid watches, value 40s. three other watches, value 3l. fifty-ſeven other watches, with two ſilver caſes each, value 57l. one wooden box, value 12d. and one hundred other bags, value 2s. the property of Joel Goddard; being in a certain ſhip called the Elbe, on the navigable river Thames.

And ARTHUR JAMESON was indicted for feloniouſly and maliciouſly aiding, moving, counſelling, procuring, and commanding the ſaid Edward Payne and May Cooke on the ſaid 6th of October, to do and commit the ſaid robbery.

And ROBERT BROWN was indicted for feloniouſly receiving on the ſaid 6th day of October laſt, fifty ounces of ſilver being dollars, value 12l. part of the ſaid goods, well knowing the ſame to have been ſtolen.

Another Count for that the ſaid Robert Brown well knowing the ſaid Edward Payne and May Cooke, to have done and committed the ſaid felony, afterwards did receive, harbour, comfort, and maintain them, againſt the King's peace.

The indictment opened by Mr. Knowles; and the caſe by Mr. Silveſter.

AUGUSTINE BOWDIKER ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Knowles, Council for the Proſecution.

I was at the Bank the 5th of October, I attended there to receive ten thouſand ounces of ſilver, they were packed up and ſent ſent down to the water ſide, they were in Spaniſh dollars, not all dollars, ſmall pieces likewiſe; I ſaw them packed up, they were packed up in three caſks and one box, I attended them to the water ſide.

What part of the water ſide did you go to?—To Porter's key, I delivered them to one of the waterman's people, whoſe name is Edward Morris, with directions to ſend them on board the Elbe, Captain Goddard.

EDWARD MORRIS ſworn.

I am a lighter-man, I received on the 5th of October three caſks of dollars from the laſt witneſs and one box, I put them on board the Elbe, Captain Goddard; I delivered them to the mate, and Captain Goddard.

(The priſoner Brown being ill deſired a chair.)

DAVID SAMUEL ſworn.

On the 5th of October, I put ſome watches on board the Elbe, Captain Goddard, they were packed in a box, I packed them up myſelf and my ſon, there were a hundred.

Court. Did you ſee the box opened on board the Elbe?—We delivered it to the Captain, and he conveyed it himſelf on board, it being a ſmall package.

On whoſe account did you deliver it?—On my own account.

SAMUEL SAMUEL ſworn.

I am ſon to the laſt witneſs, I aſſiſted my father in packing up a box of watches, I believe it was about the 5th of October, they were delivered to Captain Goddard of the Elbe, who ſaw them on board the Elbe that afternoon, I believe it was.

In what package were they?—We delivered them in a box.

CAPTAIN JOEL GODDARD ſworn.

I am maſter and commander of the ſhip Elbe, bound to Hamburg; on the 5th of October, I received three caſks and two boxes on board the Elbe.

What did the caſks contain?——They were mentioned in the bill of lading ſilver, but unknown to me, I ſigned contents unknown; I received one box of Mr. David Samuel, they mentioned they were watches but I did not know; they were placed in the ſtate room, underneath my cabbin.

When did you ſee them laſt?——I did not ſee them from the time they were ſtole away, never after that; I was aſſiſted by Arthur Jameſon, and one other of my people in ſtowing them, I was obliged to put off next morning, and the ſhip went down to New Crane; I returned next morning at day light, and found the quarter deck laying about with ropes, nobody was upon deck, and the firſt man I ſaw was one of the Cuſtom-houſe officers, he ſaid, Lord have mercy upon me! I ſaid, what has any body fallen over, he ſaid no, the ſhip is robbed; then I immediately went into my ſtate room where theſe things were laid, and I opened my cheſt, and found all theſe things taken away, the caſks and the two boxes.

Was any thing elſe taken out of the ſhip?——Nothing to the beſt of my knowledge.

Mr. Morgan, the Priſoner Payne's Council.

If I underſtand you right, from the time theſe articles were ſtolen you never ſaw them?——Only when they were put in the ſtate room.

The witneſſes examined apart by deſire of Mr. Morgan.

PETER COLLINS ſworn.

I was on board the Elbe in October laſt, the Captain's name was Joel Goddard; I remember particularly on the 6th of October the ſhip was robbed, I was on the watch, I ſaw three men come down into the cabbin.

Were they diſguiſed?——Yes.

What did they do?——They went into the ſtate room and opened the Captain's cheſt, they looked as if their faces were blacked, or with black ribbands; I did not ſee them take out any thing, this was between twelve and one, they ſtaid there about half an hour; I was in the ſtate room, one of them ſaw me, but I could not ſee what they took.

Where were you?——There are two bed places in the ſtate room, I was in the large one.

Where were theſe things concealed?—Under the Captain's bed, I could not ſee them take any thing; after they were gone I came out of the ſtate room, and went on deck, I did not examine to ſee if any thing was gone, I did not particularly find that any thing was gone; we all found that the things were gone.

JOHN EVANS ſworn.

I am a Cuſtom-houſe officer, on the night of the 6th of October, I was in the cabin of the Elbe, two men came down into the cabin with their faces blacked, it was about half paſt twelve when they came down; they ſtruck at me and I fell down, and they ordered me to turn my head to the coffee hogſheads, they held a piſtol to my ear, then they went over into the ſtate room, I did not ſee what they did there, I was in the cabin which joins to the ſtate room; they continued in the ſtate room about ten minutes or a quarter of an hour, I did not ſee them bring any thing out of the ſtate room; I heard them ſay very little, the cry was not a word, blow your brains out; they clapped me on the ſhoulders, and one of them ſaid, he knew I did not belong to the ſhip, and they had got all they wanted, and all they came for, and wiſhed us a good morning; and ordered me not to come upon deck, if I did he would come and blow my brains out.

Had they any light with them?——I do not know, I had a candle and fire when they came down, when they were gone we miſſed three caſks and two boxes, they were under the Captain's bed in the ſtate room; we immediately examined and found theſe things were taken away.

Do you know what was in thoſe caſks and boxes?——No, Sir, I was ſtationed on board the ſhip, I had ſeen them in the ſtate room before.

THOMAS WEEKS ſworn.

I am a Cuſtom-houſe officer, I was ſtationed on board the Elbe on the night of the 6th of October in the morning, there was a boy on deck, whoſe name is Peter Collins, he came running down to the cabin, ſays he, thieves! thieves! here are thieves thieves on board; I was laying down on the ſtorage in bed with my cabin door open, and in a moment after two men came running down to the cabin, the firſt man made a blow at Evans with a bludgeon, they were diſguiſed, their faces very much blacked, the other came down with a cutlaſs, and he turned againſt a caſk that was there, and he ſaid not one word, Sir, not one word, I only ſaw two; ſays he, if you ſpeak a word we will cut you to pieces, no, ſays the other man, if they be only quiet and eaſy and do not ſpeak a word, we will not hurt a man of them; I ſaw no more of them, but after they were gone I went and looked, and ſaw that they had taken the caſks and boxes away that were in the Captain's ſtate room; I had ſeen theſe things there before.

ISABELLA CHAMBERS ſworn.

I keep the Crown ale-houſe, in Maudlin's-rents, in the neighbourhood of Nightingale-lane; in the beginning of October, I ſaw the priſoner Jameſon, Cook and Jack Miles, who is now in priſon; there was one young man more with them, but who he was I cannot ſay, it was in the evening.

Court. What time in October was it?—I cannot ſay.

Was it in the beginning or middle or what?——I cannot ſay, they might ſtay an hour or better, the ſecond time they came about a night or two after, it was then about duſk: they were in company together twice, and the ſecond time they were in my houſe, I heard Jack Miles ſay to Jameſon one of the priſoners, that if he wanted two or three guineas he would let him have it now; and Mr. Jameſon anſwered preſently; he did not accept it in my ſight, but what the money was for I do not know; Cook was preſent at this converſation the third night, the next night Miles and Cook came and ſtayed a little bit, and then Cook went to Jameſon's lodgings, and he came and told Miles he was not at home, and they went away, they were in the houſe about a quarter of an hour; then after Jameſon came and enquired for Cook and Miles, and I told him they were gone.

Mr. Scott, Priſoner Jameſon's Council. What time in October was it?——It was before the ſhip was robbed, all the three times.

PETER MAY ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Silveſter, another Council for the Proſecution.

I am a linguiſt, I know the priſoner Payne, I lived along with his mother, in Brook-ſtreet, Ratcliff, No. 114; and being informed that one Payne a waterman had been upon the river, and concerned in the robbery of theſe dollars; about the 16th or 17th of October, I ſaw the priſoner, I went with his mother to him at ſome houſe in Goſwell-ſtreet, and he ſaid he would be glad to go with me to Lynn, in Norfolk.

Court. For what purpoſe did you and his mother go to him in Goſwell-ſtreet?—Only to ſee him, he then aſked me if he could go to Lynn.

For what purpoſe did you and the mother go to him?——As I was going down to Lynn, ſhe thought I might be a means of keeping him out of the way.

Mr. Silveſter. What paſſed at Goſwell-ſtreet?——On the Tueſday or Wedneſday evening, we ſet off in a poſt-chaiſe for Lynn, in Norfolk.

What did you go to Lynn for?——I went about my buſineſs, and he went with a thought, as far as I underſtood, to go into ſome foreign country or another, becauſe he aſked me if there were any Norway ſhips, or ſhips for Norway, I told him I believed there were; when we came to Lynn we went to the Roſe, we continued there about five or ſix days, nothing paſſed during this time than this; I was willing to know whether he had been concerned in this robbery or no; upon this he did tell me that he had, but I could not get any thing further out of him.

Did you aſk him, if he was concerned in the robbery?——Yes, I aſked him how they could preſume to do things of this kind, kind, being a heavy matter; oh! ſays he, when we get it into the boat we do not fear, we have always aſſiſtance to get it out again; or words to that purport.

Court. Before you ſet out from London, how came you to know any thing about the priſoner being to go down to Lynn, or any other place?——Upon the anxiety of the mother I had a ſuſpicion.

Was you yourſelf intending to go to Lynn before?—I was.

Did the mother know that you ſo intended?——Yes, four or five days before, the mother ſeemed very anxious for her ſon to go with me, and that gave me a ſuſpicion.

Had you no other converſation with him?——I aſked him ſeveral times what he had done with the property, he told me he would give me no particular anſwer; he ſaid, that he wanted to go over to Norway; I queſtioned him ſeveral times, what uſe he had made of the property, but no reply was given, only that he was concerned in it, and that he had ſeventeen watches left in the hands of one Woolfe, or ſomething to that purpoſe, for which he had not paid him, and he damned him for that; and that he had eighty pounds in ſome man's hands ſomewhere near Moorfields, and that man had not paid him; I do not know what that eighty pounds was for.

You do not know whether it was for the watches or the dollars?—No, he aſked me what he ſhould pay me, ſays I, I came down here to ſerve your mother, I did not come here for the lucre of gain, and he flung down ten guineas, which I took as a preſent from him, as the money was offered to me, I, like a great many more folks, did take it.

Mr. Morgan. So this man told you the only thing in the world that could hurt himſelf and take away his life, and nothing elſe but that one fact?——No.

Why, it is ſomething very aſtoniſhing that he ſhould not tell you what became of the property?——He did not, I asked him ſeveral times.

You did?——Yes.

Have you ever read the New Teſtament?——I have.

You remember the character of Judas?——I do.

MOSES LEWIS ſworn.

I deal in old clothes.

What relation is Benjamin Wolfe to you?—My ſon-in-law.

Have you ever ſeen any of the priſoners before?—I have ſeen that good man, Mr. Payne, I was in my ſon-in-law's houſe, and he asked me to go with him to Mr. Payne's houſe, and I went, it was in Old Gravel-lane, it was on the 7th of October; I carried a bundle, a ſtocking, for my ſon-in-law, from Payne's houſe to my ſon-in-law's houſe.

What was in the ſtocking?—They were dollars, I have ſeen them, I ſaw Payne deliver them to my ſon-in-law, at his houſe in Old Gravel-lane; I do not know how many there were, it was a little ſtocking, a child's ſtocking.

Court. How many do you ſuppoſe there were?——I cannot tell.

Cannot you gueſs?——No, I cannot gueſs.

Was there ten or a dozen?——There were more.

Were there fifty?—I cannot tell, I did not count them.

BENJAMIN WOLFE ſworn.

I am ſon-in-law to Moſes Lewis, I know the priſoner Payne, I ſaw him on the 7th of October laſt, about a quarter paſt four in the morning, I was aſleep in the two pair of ſtairs, my wife was brought to bed the day before, he knocked at the door, the nurſe let him in, he came to my bedſide, and waked me out of my ſleep, he ſaid, I have a hundred and thirty-ſeven dollars, and fourteen watches, and he asked me to take them if I would be ſo good, he brought them with him, and ſaid he had ſome more at home; he went away, and came about nine at night, and ſent for me out of the ſynagogue, and asked me if I would give him him the money for them; I told him I had not looked at them; accordingly, in the afternoon, I ſaw them, and I paid him for the hundred and thirty-ſeven dollars, but not for the watches: he never told me where he got them, he ſaid he had them, and had ſome more dollars left behind him as his ſhare.

Court. How much did you pay for the dollars?—Three ſhillings and nine-pence a piece; he told me to call at his houſe about ſeven in the evening, I went to my own houſe, and my father-in-law was there to ſee his daughter, I asked him to go with me to Mr. Payne's houſe, and he gave me two hundred and forty dollars in two ſtockings, I gave them to my father-in-law, and told him to take them to his own houſe till I came for them and fetched them away, then he asked me if his wife ſhould carry them up in the city, accordingly he took two hundred more of his wife.

Mr. Silveſter. Do you mean the woman he lives with?

Mr. Morgan. His wife you mean?——Yes, ſhe goes for his wife; accordingly I paid him ſeven pounds in part, and the next day he brought me ſome more dollars, and I paid him the whole, the ſecond day after, it came to eighty-four pounds, eighty pounds in notes, and the reſt in caſh; the firſt day I paid him ſeventy-ſeven pounds, and twenty pounds; I never ſaw him ſince till I was ſent for to Sir Sampſon's.

When he told you it was his ſhare, did he tell you what was the other perſons ſhares?—Never, I did not enquire where he got them from; I know nothing of either of the other priſoners, only I know them by ſight, I had no application from any other perſon.

Mr. Morgan. A pretty account you have given of yourſelf, what buſineſs are you?—A tobacconiſt.

You gave three ſhillings and nine-pence apiece for the dollars?—Yes.

You never asked him where he got them?—No.

What are they worth?——The full market price is four ſhillings and two-pence halfpenny.

Did you know what buſineſs Payne was?——He was a waterman, that I knew.

ELIZABETH THOMPSON ſworn.

Mr. Morgan. You will not call the man's wife?

Mr. Garrow, another Council for the Proſecution. I will call Elizabeth Thompſon.

How long have you lived with the priſoner Payne?

Mr. Morgan. You need not anſwer that queſtion.

Mr. Garrow. Did you live with him on the 6th of October laſt?——Yes.

Did Payne lodge in the ſame room with you?——Yes.

Was he at home on the 6th of October?—Sir, it was a Wedneſday morning in October when he was out, he came home on the Thurſday morning, between five and ſix, I was in bed when he came home, he deſired me to get up, and put my clothes on, and go with him as far as Limehouſe.

Mr. Morgan. I am very unwilling to take exceptions, but, upon my word, this is ſuch betraying; ſhe ſays they are his children: are you married to this man?—No, Sir, I am not.

Mr. Garrow. What did you do together at Limehouſe?——He went into a houſe in Narrow-ſtreet, Limehouſe, they ſay it is a brewhouſe, and ſtayed, I believe, a quarter of an hour; he came back, and brought with him a little ſmall bag, and deſired me to carry it in my apron.

Is that the ſame houſe you have ſhewn to Mr. Vyſon ſince?——Yes.

What did the bag contain that he put into your apron?——I ſaw it when I was at home, it contained dollars, I cannot tell how many; he went home juſt before me; it was a very ſmall bag, there might be a hundred or more.

What became of thoſe dollars afterwards?——I deſired they might not remain in my place, and he told me Wolfe was to come for them in the evening, but he did not;

he then desired me to carry them to Goodman's-fields, to one Mary Ann, a woman he kept company with, Payne came after me in a short time, Mr. Wolfe came, and an old Jew man, and a Jew boy.

Is that Moses?——I cannot say.

What passed between Wolfe and the prisoner?——I cannot say, I saw the Jew man and Jew boy put something in their pockets, I do not know what it was, I do not know who gave it them, whether it was Payne or not; afterwards Mr. Wolfe gave me his pocket handkerchief, tied up with something, and desired me to take it to Petticoat-lane, he went with me and Payne, I carried it into a court in Petticoat-lane, and they took it from me, and went into a house and shut the door; I went the next morning between five and six, and carried the remainder of the dollars to Mary Ann.

How long did Payne continue in London after?——I cannot say, I never saw him but twice after.

WILLIAM VYSON sworn.

I am a waterman, I went with the officer to Lynn to apprehend Payne, I was not present when he was apprehended, I went with Elizabeth Thompson to a house in Narrow-street, she pointed it out to me as the house where she had the dollars from; I was informed that house belonged to one Mr. Brown, it was in Narrow-street, Limehouse, I made enquiry of the next door neighbour but one, and he informed me that was Mr. Brown's house.

Was there any property delivered to you at Lynn?—Yes, forty guineas by Macmanus.

PATRICK MACMANUS sworn.

I went to Lynn to apprehend Payne, I brought him to Bow-street, I found him in custody; at the house where Payne put up, forty guineas were delivered by Payne to the landlord, and Payne claimed it as his money, and the Mayor said, no, you shall not have it, it shall be delivered to the officer that came from Sir Sampson Wright's; the landlord delivered it, and he snatched it up, and I took it out of his pocket; I counted it by the Mayor's desire, and says I, I shall deliver it to Mr. Taylor's man, who is come down with me, he said, do so; there were forty guineas: then Payne snatched hold of it, and got it into his pockets, and I took it away from him, and gave it to Taylor's man.

(David Samuel produced some of the watches.)

David Samuel. They are my property, I received the watches from Mr. Clarke at Bow-street.

Court to Wolfe. Are these the same watches you received?——These watches the prisoner Payne delivered to me.

Mr. Samuel. These are my property, they are a peculiar sort for abroad.

ROBERT TAYLOR sworn.

I was present when the prisoner Brown made some declarations.

Mr. Chetwood, Council for Prisoner Brown. What Brown?——Robert Brown; upon his examination at Mr. Green's and Sir Sampson Wright's, he said———

Court. Was his examination taken down in writing?——Yes.

Than read it.——It was only minutes.

Mr. Garrow. What I am enquiring about was a regular examination of the prisoner Brown, or something he said while under examination.——It was something he said, I made some minutes.

Mr. Chetwood. Were they not taken down in writing by some clerk?——I did not attend, I am sure there was no information, only taken down in the way that the others were, that I am positive of, it was to questions put by me? he said in the night some body that laid with him, who I believe was his son, got up and let in Thomas Brown, I believe he is the son in law; I think he said, that it was some considerable time before he came down, and that upon his coming down stairs, John Dolfin Dolfin put into his hands ſomething which he did not know.

Did he mention the names of any other perſon being let in?——I think he ſaid, Dolfin put into his hands a watch, and that upon coming into the kitchen where a candle was lighted, he diſcovered the parcel that had been put into his hand, to contain dollars, but apprehending they were ſtolen, he gave them to his ſon Thomas Brown; he ſaid, he ſaw two bags lay on the kitchen floor, and that Thomas Brown had lighted a fire in the kitchen; I aſked him if he recollected who were the parties that were preſent, he ſaid, his ſight was bad, he did not know them all, Dolfin he was ſure he knew, and a lame man he deſcribed, but I am not ſure that he named his name; he was aſked whether he was ſure it was not Payne, becauſe there was no other perſon in the robbery that was lame, Payne is a lame man; I aſked him at Sir Sampſon's, whether he knew any thing more, and he ſaid that the night following the robbery ſeveral perſons diſguiſed broke into the houſe, that they confined him in a blanket, and then he begged for his life, for there were no dollars left; he ſaid, they made ſo much blaze at that time, with the caſks and the boxes with burning them in the kitchen, that he was obliged to throw water on the fire once, to prevent the chimney catching fire, I aſked him how he could ſuffer it; he ſaid he was afraid of his life, and he dare not oppoſe it.

Mr. Chetwood. Do you remember how he came not to be admitted as an evidence?—I believe he knew nothing.

Did not it appear that Thomas Brown lived in the houſe with him?——No, Sir, by no means, he lives in London-ſtreet, I have been at his houſe two or three times, he ſaid, what could he do with ſuch a ſet of villains; I thought it might be a reaſonable anſwer.

It appeared he never was poſſeſſed of theſe dollars?——He ſaid they were put into his hand by Dolfin, but when the candle was brought him, and he ſaw what they were, he returned them immediately.

Court to Proſecutor. What is the value of the dollars?——Two thouſand four hundred and fifty pounds, and ſome fraction of ſilver; the value of the watches about two hundred pounds.

JOHN DOLFIN ſworn.

I follow the water.

Do you know any of theſe priſoners?

Mr. Morgan. There is nothing to affect the priſoner Cook.

Court. It is very weak, but I think there is ſuch evidence given in regard to him, as has been held ſufficient to put him on his defence, for it has been proved, I think, by the woman, that he was in company with the priſoners three different times before the robbery, that is a circumſtance to be ſure.

Mr. Silveſter to Dolfin. Which of the priſoners do you know?——I know all the priſoners.

What happened on the 6th of October?

Mr. Scott. I hope your Lordſhip will be of opinion, this man is not intitled to give evidence againſt Jameſon, becauſe there is not a tittle of evidence againſt him.

Mr. Silveſter. There cannot be any objection to this witneſs's competency; the queſtion is, how far the Jury will believe him.

Court. It is not abſolutely a rule of law, that accomplices cannot be examined, it is rather a rule of prudence and humanity; but wherever there is any kind of circumſtance that gives an air of probability to a ſtory, there it is for the Jury to judge of the credit; now, where the priſoners have been proved to be together in company, previous to the robbery, that is a circumſtance which has been left to the Jury, and I think it ſufficient in point of law.

Mr. Morgan. I beg leave to remind your Lordſhip, that ſhe has only ſpoken to Jameſon, Cook, and to one Miles; Miles is not here, and with reſpect to Jameſon and Cook, I beg leave to refer to my Lord's notes, there is no evidence againſt either of them; Miles is not here; if they had proved proved Payne to have been in the houſe there might have been ſomething in it.

Mr. Garrow. There are ſome of your Lordſhips would call him firſt.

Mr. Scott. This witneſs cannot confirm any thing, or corroborate any thing againſt Jameſon, becauſe nothing has been proved againſt him.

Mr. Garrow. Take it ſo, Mr. Scott, but he may be confirmed by and by.

Mr. Juſtice Aſhurſt. What you ſay is true, that ſome of the Judges do take an accomplice firſt, but unleſs he is confirmed, it all goes for nothing; the only queſtion I think will be, whether there has been any evidence that applies to any of the priſoners, becauſe the woman's evidence goes to this, that ſhe ſaw Miles and Jameſon at the houſe; now, wherever you bring home clear evidence to one perſon of a fact, and you give evidence by witneſſes, that that perſon was in company with another or two, that will be ſufficient to let in the evidence of the accomplice, that the other two were preſent at the time of committing of the robbery, but you muſt have ſome fact that applies to this robbery, now there has been no evidence proved againſt Cook and Jameſon, as applying to the robbery; the only evidence that has been is againſt Payne.

Mr. Silveſter. We muſt firſt hear this man's ſtory, we are giving evidence againſt Payne, and your Lordſhip will take care to diſtinguiſh it in your directions to the Jury.

Court. Now tell us all you know about this robbery.

Dolfin. I think it was on the 7th of October, about ſeven in the evening, we went on board the brig Elbe, Edward Payne, May Cook, myſelf, Thomas Brown, John Miles, Joſeph Church, and James Gray; before we went on board of her, we took a boat at King Edward's ſtairs, then we rowed over the water to Church Hole, there we changed the boat; we went on board, we faſtened the fore-caſtle down, and went down to the cabin, Joſeph Church and myſelf went down; Church upſet the Captain's cheſt, and we looked under the Captain's cabin, and there Joſeph Church hauled out three casks and two boxes, and after that we got them upon deck, and into the boat, when we got them into the boat we rowed down to Limehouſe.

Mr. Silveſter. How came you to look at this place?—Arthur Jameſon gave us the information of that.

Court. Jameſon was not with you?——

Mr. Morgan. I take the liberty of ſubmitting, there is no evidence againſt Jameſon.

Court. Let him go on?——We then rowed to Robert Brown's back door, and Thomas Brown jumped out of the boat, and went round to Robert Brown's fore door, and he was let in, and he came backwards and got a tackle fall out, then they hoiſted three caſks and two boxes into Robert Brown's back door, and then we ſtood all round, and broke in the head of the caſk; there was myſelf, Miles, Church, Gray and Brown, and we found they contained bags of dollars; then we opened the bags, and we began ſharing them out, five and five; then we thought that too tedious, and we took a two quart pan to meaſure them out, after we ſhared the dollars, we began ſharing the watches, we ſhared thirteen watches a piece, after we ſhared the watches and dollars equally alike, we carried them all into Robert Brown's fore parlour, then Thomas Brown called his father down to make a fire, and Robert Brown came down into the fore parlour, and we collected round eight and fifty dollars to give him; Robert Brown ſaid after he ſaw what they were, he would have nothing at all to do with them.

The remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 12th of JANUARY 1785, and the following Days;

Being the SECOND SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER II. PART II.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

MDCCLXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of Edward Payne, &c.

Court. Jameſon was the only man that belonged to the ſhip, amongſt thoſe people you have mentioned?—Yes.

Was Jameſon with you at Brown's?—No.

Then Brown's ſon aſked him if he would make a fire, and he ſaid he would, and he helped to make it with one of the two boxes.

Court. Did he put them on?—Yes, and then afterwards he took his adze and cut the hoops off the caſks.

Jury. Was that old Brown or his Son?——That was Robert Brown; afterwards James Gray, and Edward Payne carried their ſhares to Mr. Wolfe's; Joſeph Church and May Cook, carried their money to Kuſhmore and Farmers, in Petticoat-lane, it fetched them ſeventy-five guineas, I did not go with them; John Miles went home with Thomas Brown, and Thomas Brown took a part of my ſhare home to his houſe, I ſold three hundred and ſeventeen to Kuſhmore and Farmer that ſame evening, Kuſhmore came to me and gave me a ten pound note, and Miles another, that was in part of payment, the ten pound note he gave to John Miles was for the watches; on Friday evening I came down for my ſhare, and Brown ſaid I had them, but not to make any diſcovery; he gave me a ten pound note, becauſe he had my dollars to his houſe, he told me ſomebody had taken them from him: I buried my own watches in my mother's garden, and when I was ſworn in as an evidence, I gave them to Mr. Elby.

Mr. Chetwood. You went to the back door of old Brown's houſe?—Yes, he was in bed.

How long was it before he was called down to make a fire?——After every thing had been ſhared.

You had brought them all forward into the fore room?—Yes.

Were the boxes broke?—No.

His ſon-in-law, you ſay, called him up?——Yes:

When the fifty-eight dollars were offered to him, he ſaid he would have nothing to do with them?——Yes.

You ſay he cut the hoops to pieces for the purpoſe of making a fire?——Yes, Sir, for deſtroying them.

Mr. Silveſter. What became of the fifty-eight dollars that were collected?—He gave them to his ſon.

Court. No part of the property was left in in the houſe?——Yes, there was Joſeph Church's, May Cook's, and Arthur Thompſon's ſhare, when he gave the information.

Was any part of Payne's left there that night?——No.

What time did you leave Brown?——Between four and five in the morning.

When did Payne go away?——He went away firſt, and took part of his ſhare.

Did he return again?——Yes, in about half an hour, then he came down and took ſome of them away, and I could not tell afterwards what became of them, he brought no money away.

When did he take the reſt of his ſhare away?—I cannot anſwer for that.

You did not ſee any body come with him when he came back again?—No.

Was you preſent when Jameſon gave the information to Cook or to Miles?—No, I only heard that from Church.

Priſoner Payne. I leave it all to my Council.

Priſoner Cook. I leave it to my Council.

Mr. Chetwood. My Lord, as to Robert Brown, I have fourteen houſekeepers that came here to his character.

Court. The circumſtance of Brown's having burnt the caſks, is but a ſlight circumſtance.

Priſoner Payne. My witneſſes are not here.

EDWARD PAYNE, GUILTY, Death.
MAY COOK,
ARTHUR JAMESON,
ROBERT BROWN, } NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice ASHURST.

---

217. JOSEPH FITZPATRICK was indicted for burglariouſly and felonioufly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of David Richardſon, on the 17th of December laſt, about the hour of ſeven in the night, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, ſeven cotton handkerchiefs, value 14s. his property.

DAVID RICHARDSON ſworn.

I live at No. 72, Wapping, I keep a ſlop-ſhop; on the 17th of December, between ſix and ſeven, the window of my ſhop were broken, I was ſtanding in my ſhop, I heard the glaſs break, I ran out into the ſtreet, they told me the thief was run down the alley, and called out ſtop thief, and run through a rope-walk, and a perſon called out, we have got him; I did not ſee him before, I went up immediately.

ROBERT WAGGENOT ſworn.

On the 17th of December laſt, I was going down to Wapping, and heard the cry of ſtop thief; then I met the priſoner running, and ſaw him drop ſomething from his hand, and I ſtopped him; I then went and picked up the handkerchiefs, and I gave them to Mr. Richardſon.

(The handkerchiefs depoſed to by the Proſecutor's hand writing upon them.

Proſecutor. I ſaw them in the morning.

Where did you ſee them?——They lay in the window among other things.

Priſoner. I picked up the property on the outſide the door.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

---

218. JOHN BRUCE was indicted for burglariouſly and felonioufly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of John Scott Whiting, about the hour of five in the night on the 19th of December laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, thirteen ſilver table ſpoons, value 7l. two ſilver gravy ſpoons, value 30s. two ſilver ladles, value 30s. one ſilver ſoup ladle, value 30s. four ſilver deſert ſpoons, value 30s. a ſilver ſtand for caſters, value 42s. five ſilver tops for caſters, value 15s. and one ſilver waiter, value 5l. his property.

JOHN SCOTT WHITING ſworn.

I live in Broad-ſtreet, Ratcliff-croſs; on Monday morning, the 20th day of December, ber, about five, my ſervant rapped at the door, and told me there were thieves or rogues, I drew my bolt of my chamber door, and told him to reach my blunderbuſs, I called to the watchman, who happened accidentally to be at the front of the houſe, and ſaid, do you go to the back of the houſe and do not make any noiſe, and I will go down; after having loaded my blunderbuſs, I took my piſtols, and told my ſervant to follow me; I went without ſhoes, not to make a noiſe, and when I got within five ſteps to the bottom, I hallooed to them, but not hearing any of them move, I went down the remainder of the ſtairs, and went into the parlour, which door I found open that had been locked, on coming to the parlour, I found a cloſet door open which had been locked, and the plate, which was for the uſe of the family, gone, I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment.

What is the value of the whole?—The value of the whole to replace would coſt me thirty pounds, it might be of half the value. I then went in purſuit of them, which took me ſome little time, when I opened the door of the houſe that leads into the yard, I found a door at the extremity of that forced open likewiſe; I traced them, through the ſnow, to a garden that divides my ground, through ſome ground occupied by Mr. Harriett; Mr. Hicks's pales divides Mr. Hicks's garden from mine, they are nine feet high, and they pulled ſome of them down, ſo that they could get over; they got in at the parlour window, the bar of which had been broke open.

THOMAS SUMMER ſworn.

I am ſervant to the proſecutor, on Sunday the 16th of December, I remember this window that was found broke open, on the Monday it was very ſecure, I had faſtened it; it was broke open the next morning, the bar was twiſted ſeveral ways; I went to bed a little after twelve, and was alarmed about five.

CLEMENT HARRIS ſworn.

I am a watchman, on Monday the 20th of December, I was crying five, in Broad-ſtreet, and the proſecutor called from a two pair of ſtairs, do not make any alarm, but go round, there are ſome thieves in my back yard; I called for Hall to go with me, and went to the back door, and placed him at one of the garden gates, ſo I went round to the other back gate of Mr. Hicks's, and there I met two of them coming out: the back gate I went to is in a court or alley, I do not know the name of it, and when I came round, the priſoner at the bar and another man ruſhed out of the gate, I cannot ſay who the other man was; the gate leads from Mr. Whiting's premiſes, and I cried out to Hall, here are the thieves, with that the tall one made a ſhove, and I had liked to have knocked him down, he was in the corner, and I knocked the priſoner down, and as he was laying upon his back, thought I, I will have one of you, I was lifting my ſtick at the other man, and he fired a piſtol at me, I heard the ball whiſtle paſt my ear, then they both run away to the top of Butcher-row, I cried ſtop thief, and fell down, and the other man that was along with the priſoner, turned and ran back, he ran by me when I tumbled down, and ran up Brook-ſtreet.

Court. Not towards the proſecutor's houſe?—No; they then ſaid they had got the priſoner, then I came up to him, and the man ſaid he had got a piſtol, I ſearched him, and took this piſtol primed and loaded out of his pocket.

Are you ſure that is the man that you firſt knocked down?——Yes, I can ſwear to him.

When he was taken, was his dreſs the ſame?——Yes; I knew him before, I have ſeen him come home all hours in the night, and come cloſe by my box: I found this piſtol upon the priſoner, and Hall took up a crow that he threw out of his pocket.

Court. There is no thorough-fare there but that leading to Harriett's garden and the proſecutor's?——No other. This is the loading of the piſtol.

Mr. Chetwood, Priſoner's Council. Where did you ſee the man that you ſuſpected came from from the profecutor's firſt?——This man ruſhed out of Mr. Hicks's garden, the gardens join, it was not upon Mr. Whiting's premiſes.

Were not other people looking about beſides you?——Yes.

You knew the priſoner before?——Yes, very well.

Did you know him at firſt?——I knew him as ſoon as I had him down, I had my lanthorn in my hand.

After he got up, did he tell you who he was?—I knew him very well.

Did you call him by his name?——No.

Was he ſearched?—I only took the piſtol out of his pocket.

Had he any thing elſe in his pocket?—I did not look for any thing more after I took the piſtol out.

Do you know or not know, that none of the property was found upon him?——Nothing but the piſtol.

Was this the ſame man that you knocked down firſt?——Yes.

Was there any mark upon him?——I knocked him down once, and he did not get up, then I made another blow to keep him down.

Yet you ſay there was no mark upon him when he was taken?——How could there be?

There was not, was there? anſwer the queſtion.——Not that I know of, for he warded off the blow with his crow.

Did he offer to ſtop and be ſearched?—He offered it at the Juſtices.

He had been in your cuſtody from the time he was taken to the watchouſe?——Yes.

WILLIAM HALL ſworn.

I am a private watchman; about five in the morning Mr. Whiting looked out of his window, and ſaid there were thieves, he bid us go to the back of his houſe, and ſee that all was faſt; I went to the garden gate, and bid Hall go to Brookwall in the other alley, and then I heard him run through Mr. Whiting's garden; I ran to meet him, and before I got there he hallooed out Hall! Hall! here are the thieves! before I got to the corner I heard one piſtol go off, I run by the alley, and by the garden gate I picked up this crow, as they run I ſuppoſe it dropped from out of their hands; I met the other watchman, and we went towards the ſtreet, and in the ſtreet we met another watchman, who called ſtop thief! his name was Hamwood, and he ſaid, I have ſhied my ſtick at him, and he is gone on; and in about a minute they came up with the priſoner Bruce, and the man had him faſt in his arms, Harris put his hand into his pocket, and pulled out a piſtol that was loaded and primed.

(A crow produced.)

Mr. Garrow, another of the Priſoner's Council. You never ſaw any thing of the priſoner till after he was in cuſtody?—No, I was not near enough.

Neither of the piſtols that you found had been diſcharged?——No.

Court. Was there a track of feet both to and from Mr. Whiting's houſe?—Yes, we could ſee the track of a good many feet through ſnow, the ſnow lay very thick upon the ground.

JOHN HAMWOOD ſworn.

I am the other watchman, I was going from my duty, I heard my fellow watchman cry ſtop thief!—A man ran by me and called ſtop thief!——There was no man paſſed by me but Mr. Bruce, the name of the man that ſtopped him is William Raymond.

Mr. Garrow. What time do you go upon duty at this time of the year?—At ten.

And ſtay till day-light?—Stay till five.

Was there day-light enough to ſee whether that was Bruce as he paſſed you?——There was no other paſſed, I could not ſee whether that was the man that paſſed me, I ſaw the ſame man paſs by me that was taken.

Was there day-light enough to ſee the man's face?——No, there was not.

WILLIAM RAYMOND ſworn.

On this day about twenty minutes after five I ſtopped the priſoner, he was running as faſt as he could run; I croſſed upon him and he fell down, Hamwood was at that time about twenty rood off, there was no body elſe between me and Hamwood; we took him to the watch-houſe.

Mr. Chetwood. Was he ſearched at the watch-houſe?—I found a piſtol in his pocket, there was no property, no plate that I ſaw.

JOHN TRAPPETT ſworn.

I am watch-houſe keeper, I remember the priſoner being brought to the watch-houſe; I locked him up and another man, I found nothing upon him.

JOSEPH GARDNER ſworn.

I had the priſoner in the watch-houſe, and after he was locked up, I ſaw him throw two keys out of the bars into the ſtreet, I went and picked them up directly.

WILLIAM BRAINE ſworn.

I live at the orchard, Ratcliff-croſs, I know the proſecutor, and I know the priſoner vaſtly well too; on the Sunday before the robbery I ſaw him at the proſecutor's ſhutters, he had his hand at them, as a perſon might do to ſee whether they might do or not, after I had gone down to the croſs, and gone down the Butcher-row, he was ſtanding there then, but he had not his hand on the ſhutters then.

Priſoner. This alley which the watchman ſwears to near my houſe, is a very dark bye alley, but it occaſioned me to go through very often on my buſineſs, the walls are very high on each ſide, and very narrow; there is one Mr. Brodie I believe was in company with this laſt witneſs coming from meeting, and he knows me very well, and he was coming by.

Priſoner to the laſt witneſs. Was Brodie with you?——He was, I ſaw the priſoner, but he did not ſee me, I mentioned it immediately to Mr. Hyde where I lodged, Brodie has ſaid nothing to me reſpecting him, I am quite poſitive that I ſaw him.

What are you pray?——I am a baker, I had been at meeting with Brodie.

ADAM MILLS ſworn.

I live in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet, I have known the priſoner about five or ſix months; I keep a public houſe, I never knew any thing of him but as a cuſtomer; I gave him an order to make me a wig, he brought it home; as my wife was taken in labour, I deſired him to ſtay an hour, I paid him for the wig about three, I believe it might be about four when he went from our houſe.

—— CLARIDGE ſworn.

I never ſaw him twice in my life, I ſaw him at Mr. Mills's, that was on the 19th on Monday morning between two and three; Mr. Mills ſaid, now Mr. Bruce I will pay you for the wig, they ſtaid till paſt three o'clock, and Mills aſked him to ſtay with him all night and not go home; the priſoner put his hand into his pocket, and ſaid, I have what will protect me through the fields, and he took out a piſtol and put it in his pocket again, and ſtaid about a quarter of an hour, and went home.

JOHN NIGHTINGALE ſworn.

I have known the priſoner at the bar ever ſince he has taken a ſhop at Ratcliffe croſs, I have ſerved him, he was always in his buſineſs, I thought he was doing well, he kept the beſt of company in the neighbourhood, I do not know where he came from.

The Priſoner called five more witneſſes who all gave him a good character.

GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice ASHURST.

---

219. THOMAS BROWN was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting James Cook on the King's highway, on the 7th of January, and putting him in corporal fear fear and danger of his life, and feloniously taking from his perſon, and againſt his will, one baſe metal watch, value 20s. one cornelian ſeal ſet in gold, value 10s. and ſix guineas, value 6l. 6s. his property.

JAMES COOK ſworn.

On Friday night laſt about ten minutes after four in the afternoon, I was robbed at a place called Crouch-end, between Highgate and Hornſey; I was in a poſt-chaiſe with my wife, the priſoner came after the chaiſe on the off ſide, and ordered the boy to ſtop twice, he ſtopped, he then preſented a piſtol to the chaiſe door, and ſaid, deliver your money immediately, no heſitation, I will blow your brains out by God; I immediately handed him over ſix or ſeven guineas, he then ſaid your watch, Sir, no parleying, I will blow your brains out by God, I gave him my watch immediately, he then ordered the boy to go on; when the boy had got about a hundred yards diſtance, there were two ſmall houſes, and I told the boy to get on, which he did in the ſpace of a minute, I then got out, and I told the boy, I thought it was extremely hard to be robbed in open day light; a perſon came out of one of the ſmall houſes, and ſaid, have you been robbed, Sir, I ſaid yes, I have within a minute at the top of the hill, ſays he, my horſe is bridled and ſaddled, and we ſhall certainly take him; I then told the boy to take one of the horſes out of the chaiſe, and they both ſet off together; I then ordered the chaiſe to a little public houſe on the right hand, to wait the event; and they came back and informed me, they had the man and left him at Iſlington, they came back in about an hour and quarter; the priſoner was alone, you muſt remember, my Lord, he had a large white handkerchief on when he robbed me, that came over the lower part of his face, but I am ſure he is the man; the upper part of his face, his hair, his hat, and his voice, I well knew the ſecond time when I ſaw him; I know his coat which at that time was very cloſe buttoned; upon the whole I have no doubt in the world of his perſon, I know him to be the man; inſtead of going to Edmonton where I have a houſe, I ordered the chaiſe back to Iſlington, he was then gone to Clerkenwell priſon; both Mrs. Cook and myſelf went there and had a ſight of him.

Did you know him immediately?——I did, my watch was never found again, there was a watch found at Iſlington the next day, but it did not prove to be mine.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. Mr. Cook, you did not know this young man before the time you was ſtopped, I take it for granted?—No.

Did I underſtand you right, that he followed the chaiſe?—Yes.

Did he come up the near ſide?——No, the off ſide, Mrs. Cook's ſide.

He was not a minute?—No.

He uſed expreſſions that very much alarmed you, for Mrs. Cook if not for yourſelf?——I was not alarmed, it is not the firſt time I have been robbed in this manner.

Deſcribe how the handkerchief was put on his face?——In this manner under the noſe.

You ſpoke as differently before you put on the handkerchief, as you do from me, ſo that it would ſeem, having heard a man's voice once through the handkerchief, you would not venture to ſwear to it?—I heard him ſpeak the ſecond time, without the handkerchief.

Did you know him when you ſaw him in Clerkenwell?——I was ſenſible he was the perſon, but when he robbed me his coat was buttoned up to the top, I aſked for a Mr. Brown, he very politely got up, and ſaid his name was Brown; he ſaid, he had no other handkerchief but this, but he had another on when he robbed me, which was afterwards ſmothered, and was not to be found.

Was you ſure of him the firſt time, when you ſaw him at Clerkenwell?——I was more ſure of him the ſecond time, when I ſaw him as he robbed me.

What

When you ſaw him the ſecond time, had you any doubt about him?——I might have ſome little doubt.

Had you, Sir?——I had.

Was that doubt removed when you came before the Magiſtrate?——It was.

Am I to underſtand you that when you was firſt before the Magiſtrate, you was as poſitive that Brown was the perſon that robbed you, as you are now?——I was, but Mrs. Cook, after this, ſaid to me, my dear Jem, I ſhall never be happy if you ſwear to the man.

My queſtion to you is, whether before the Magiſtrate you ſwore with poſitiveneſs and certainty, that he was the man the firſt time?——I did not ſwear at all concerning it, I was affraid to ſwear at that time, I ſaid he was the man.

How do you mean you did not ſwear, you was ſworn to your examination?——Then I ſwore he was the man.

Did you before the Magiſtrate, immediately ſay he was the man that robbed you?—I did, I knew him to be the man then.

Did you ſay it then?——I did ſay then, that he was the man, I knew he was the man all the way through.

I muſt be very particular, and you will excuſe me if I am ſo, I wiſh to treat you as I would every other gentleman in the ſituation of a witneſs, did you before the Magiſtrate, when you firſt ſaw this man, poſitively ſwear he was the man that robbed you?——I acquainted the Juſtice that I verily believed he was the man, I was ſure when I ſaw the handkerchief, and ſaw him buttoned up, I ſaid, I had every reaſon to believe he was the man.

Was not he dreſſed on purpoſe that you might believe he was the man?——I know his dreſs well.

I aſk you a plain queſtion, and I ſhall begin to alter my opinion of you, if you anſwer me in this manner; was not this man dreſſed for the purpoſe of your being able to identify him?——He was.

Was not that in conſequence of your doubts about him?——He appeared very differently, I had a deſire to ſee him as he robbed me.

Then before you ſaw him in that dreſs, you had not poſitively ſworn to him?——I ſaid before the Juſtice, that I verily believed he was the man.

Upon your oath, before he was dreſſed with his great coat buttoned up, and his handkerchief before his face, did you poſitively ſwear he was the man?—I ſtill ſay, that I acquainted the Juſtice that I verily believed he was the man.

Court. But before he was dreſſed, did you tell the Juſtice whether he was the man or not?—I did.

What did you ſay?—I told him he was the man that robbed me, and afterwards I knew him well, exceedingly well; I am ſorry to ſay it, he is the man that robbed me.

Mr. Garrow. You ſay, "and afterwards you was ſure of it," was not he dreſſed becauſe you had ſome doubt about ſwearing to him?—I begged it as a favour that his coat might be buttoned.

Did you beg that on account of ſome heſitation?——No.

For what reaſon then?——I had no doubt about it, I only wanted to ſee him in the ſituation he was in when he robbed me, that was my whole reaſon.

I aſk you, Sir, whether previous to your having deſired that he might be ſo clothed, you had poſitively charged him to the Magiſtrate to be the man?——I had in my own mind.

Had you to the Magiſtrate?——No, I had not.

How long had the man been out of ſight who had robbed you?——There was not four minutes between the robbery and their ſetting off, it was an hour and a quarter before I heard any thing more, I am not poſitive as to the time.

What ſort of an evening was it?——A very fine one.

Court. If you had met the priſoner in a different dreſs in any part of the town, and in different coloured clothes, ſhould

you

you have known him?—Upon my word, I do not think I ſhould.

JAMES SKIVINGTON ſworn.

I am the poſt-boy that drove Mr. Cook; I purſued after the perſon that committed the robbery, about three or four minutes I drove down the hill, and a man came out of one of the houſes and joined me, I took one of the chaiſe horſes.

How ſoon did you get ſight of the man you was in purſuit of?——I cannot ſay, I did not get ſight of him till I came near Holloway turnpike, that is between three and four miles from the place where the robbery was committed, after we got ſight of the perſon, the gentleman that was with me rode up cloſe to him at Holloway turnpike.

How long was it after you firſt got ſight of him, that you came up with him?——Four or five minutes.

I ſuppoſe you rode pretty hard from Crouch-end?——Yes, we galloped all the way.

Was the man on a gallop?—Yes, I did not ſpeak to him till he was taken, I ſaw the gentleman ride up cloſe to him, but I did not hear what paſſed.

How far might you be behind?—Two hundred yards, when I came up he was diſmounted, and in the ſign of the Fox through Holloway, at Iſlington, then the gentleman aſked me if that was the man, I ſaid yes, I knew him immediately when I went into the houſe.

How long did he ſtay with your chaiſe?——No longer than he had the money and the watch, he followed the chaiſe, he was dreſſed in a Bath great-coat buttoned, and a white handkerchief over his face, as high as his noſe.

You ſitting on your horſe, and he at the chaiſe with his face half covered, could you know him again?—Yes.

By what did you know him?—I knew him by his coat, and hat, and horſe, it was a brown bay horſe, with a ſwiſh tail.

Had you ſeen him in a different dreſs and without his horſe, ſhould you have known him?—Yes, I ſhould have known him by his voice.

When a man's mouth is covered, is his voice the ſame as if it is not?—Yes, it appeared ſo to me.

Upon the whole are you quite ſure he is the man?—Yes.

Were you ſure of him when you firſt ſaw him at the Fox?—Yes.

Have you always ſaid ſo?—Yes.

Mr. Garrow. The perſon that robbed your maſter came up ſuddenly?—Yes, on the off ſide.

There was a part of the carriage between you?—Yes.

Did he turn his horſe round, or come up?—He came up, his horſe's head was the ſame way as mine, as ſoon as he robbed my maſter, I ſtood up in my ſtirrups and looked over, and he was off his horſe.

Court. What was he doing?—I cannot ſay.

Mr. Garrow. You did not take much notice, you purſued him in leſs than three minutes, when did you ſee the ſwiſh tail?—Whilſt he was robbing the chaiſe.

That is pretty well ſworn I think, how many turnings are there between Crouch-end and Holloway-turnpike?——I cannot tell you.

There are a great many, I think I can enumerate ſeven or eight, was there any watch found upon him, when he was taken?——No.

No property of Mr. Cook's or Mrs. Cook's?——None that I know of.

Was his hat a round hat?——It was flapped before.

Put on that handkerchief before your mouth, now do not you find your voice a little altered Mr. Poſt-boy?——No not much.

Can you ſpeak as clear and as ſhrill?—Yes.

WILLIAM HURGOOD ſworn.

I went in purſuit of of this man between two and three miles, I was twenty yards from Holloway-turnpike.

When you got ſight of that man how came came you to take particular notice of him?——I was at Crouch-end, at one Mr. Wright's, Mr. Cook and his Lady came down there in a poſt-chaiſe, and he ſtopped the chaiſe and ſaid, he was robbed of his watch and ſeven guineas; he ſaid, he might be eaſily taken, I ſaid, I had my horſe in the ſtable.

Court. But how came you to take notice of that man when you had never ſeen him before?—Mr. Cook ſaid he had a light coloured great coat on, and a ſwiſhed tailed horſes.

What pace was he riding when you firſt ſaw him?—He was a gentle pace juſt going through the turnpike, I came on ſmart, and came up to him about twenty yards this ſide the turnpike.

Did he quicken his pace at all?—No.

Had you rode pretty hard from Crouch-end?—Yes, as hard as I could.

Was you pretty well mounted?—Yes; when I came up to him, I ſaid it is very cold Sir, yes ſays he it is, he then mended his pace, and rode on a very gentle canter, I then aſked him why he rode ſo hard, and he made anſwer and ſaid, it was very cold, he then mended his pace faſter and faſter, till he rode as faſt as he could, I wiſhed for that Poſt-boy to come on, and the priſoner mended his pace as faſt as he could and I as faſt as I could, going up the riſe of the hill, I cried out this is a highwayman, ſtop him, he went on, and I cried out ſtop him as loud as I could, he rode over a man and knocked him down on the long ſide of a waggon, he then came a little on this ſide of Iſlington Church, and then whether his horſe ſlipt, or whether he fell, I cannot tell which, I was about nine or ten yards from him, I deſired the people to hold him a minute while I fetched the poſt-boy, that he might be right in the perſon, the poſt-boy came up directly, and ſaid that is the man; the priſoner was then on foot, the horſe run away a little way, the horſe was ſtopped, and put up at the Pyed Bull in Iſlington, it is now in the yard.

What time in the evening was this when you came up with him at Holloway turnpike?——I take it, when Mr. Cook came to Mr. Wright's, it was twenty minutes paſt four, it was not five; when I came up to him it could not be above forty minutes after four, nor that; it was beginning to grow duſk, but it was lightiſh.

Did you obſerve any thing particular when you came up along ſide of him?——I ſaid to myſelf as I went along, how am I to know this man, and I recollected Mr. Cook ſaid what was the colour of his coat, and about his horſe's tail.

Did you obſerve any thing particular about him or his horſe?——He had a great coat, and a horſe with a ſwiſh tail, it appeared to me to be a ſlender horſe, a kind of blood horſe in poorish condition.

Did you obſerve whether he was or was not dirty?——I cannot ſay that I took notice of it.

Did the horſe appear very hot?—No, he did not appear to be very hot, he did not ſeem to ſweat when I firſt came up to him; he was hot when he was ſtopped.

What condition was your horſe in?—In good riding order.

Was your horſe hot?——Yes.

Mr. Garrow. The poſt-horſe was blown ſo he could not keep up with you?——He was pretty hot.

EDWARD LAVENDER ſworn.

Laſt Friday evening, between five and ſix, the priſoner Brown was brought to Mr. Blackborough's, by one Mr. Bonnick, and another, I ſearched him, and in his left-hand pocket I took out this piſtol, loaded; in his right-hand pocket was this, with ſome powder, and a kind of ſlugs, and I took nine guineas and ſome other monies, and a large white handkerchief from him, the handkerchief I returned, and two guineas of the money.

What account did he give of himſelf?—Mr. Blackborough aſked him how he came on that road at that time; he ſaid he had been out as he uſually did, for his own diverſion and pleaſure, and that he took the piſtol piſtol with him as a defence, having ſeveral times been attacked by footpads; when I took the piſtol out of the priſoner's pocket, I aſked him if it was loaded, and he ſaid it was, but I found it was not.

Court to Hurgood. After the converſation about the weather being cold, and his quickening his pace, did any thing more paſs between you?—No.

Did you deſire him to ſtop at all?—No, Sir, I did not.

In what manner did you call out?——I called, ſtop him, ſtop him, he is a highwayman.

What account did he give of himſelf?—That he was a tradeſman in Little Norton-ſtreet, Marybone, No. 8, a tobacconiſt.

Mr. Garrow. Do you know whether that is truth?—I do not know.

PETER HYDE ſworn.

I was coming from labour on the Iſlington road, on Friday night, between the Pyed Bull and the Fox, hearing a cry of ſtop him, ſtop him, I turned round and looked behind me, and ſaw the priſoner ride by, he fell from his horſe, I helped him up, and the gentleman came up and ſaid, ſtop him, he is a highwayman.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I have no further than this to ſay, that I took my horſe out for an afternoon's ride, I rode that way; I have many people to call to my character, if you pleaſe to hear them.

ROBERT WARNER ſworn.

I live at No. 2, in May's Pond, I knew him from a child, I knew him at Portſmouth, I know no other than he bore a univerſal good character; he is a grocer and tobacconiſt, in buſineſs for himſelf.

Court. Where did he live before he was taken?—At No. 8, Norton-ſtreet, I cannot ſay how long.

Have you known him lately?——He has not been in town a great while, I do not know where he lived before, I have been in town for theſe five years.

How long has he been a grocer and tobacconiſt in Norton-ſtreet?——About five weeks, he keeps a houſe and ſhop there.

JAMES BLYTH ſworn.

I live in Crown-court, Soho; I knew him when he was a child; I have known him lately, he keeps a houſe in Norton-ſtreet, and is a tobacconiſt, he carried on buſineſs there on his own account, for every thing I ever heard of him. I always knew him to be of a good character, and he came of a good family.

Court. How long has he taken up the trade of a tobacconiſt?—I believe a month or two.

Is he married or ſingle?—Married, I underſtand, my Lord, he married a widow with one child.

MARGARET WATSON ſworn.

I live at No. 5, in Riding-houſe-lane, near Portland Chapel, the priſoner lodged at my houſe near three months, always kept good hours, never out after eight at night, and his wife alſo; they took a houſe, No. 8, in Norton-ſtreet, they went from my houſe there, and kept a grocer's and tobacconiſt's ſhop; he went away laſt month; he has a good character.

GEORGE BAYLEY ſworn.

I live with Mr. Clark, a hackney coachman, I look after this young man's horſe, he ſtands at Mr. Clark's, I am hoſtler, and the priſoner's horſe ſtood there a month, and he lives in Norton-ſtreet.

Court. What ſort of a horſe was it?—A brown horſe, with a ſwiſh tail.

Is the horſe in or out of condition?——Mr. Brown took him out, juſt to exerciſe him, he had been in five or ſix days, his legs were ſwelled, he went out that day between two and three.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

220. STANS STROUD and GEORGE CLAYTON were indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 26th of December, two iron drag chains, value 20s. the property of Thomas Scott, Eſquire.

JAMES UPSDALE ſworn.

I am clerk to the proſecutor: on the 26th of December, between ſeven and eight, I was informed two men were ſtopped with two chains, I came and ſaw they were my maſter's property, and ſent for an officer to take them into cuſtody, there were two chains miſſing of thoſe he had got, we had them at work on the 24th.

JOSEPH GRANT ſworn.

On the 26th of December, I had been down the alley with a gentlewoman, and coming up again, I obſerved the iron upon each of them, it was the day after Chriſtmas day; I walked before them, and went and told my maſter, two men were gone by with ſome chains, and I believed they belonged to Mr. Scott, at the mill, I had ſeen them at work with ſuch ſort of things; my maſter came out, and the men were taken in my preſence; I ſaw the chains drop out of Stroud's hands.

(The chains produced.)

JAMES WESTBROOKE ſworn.

I am maſter to the laſt witneſs; on the 26th of December, between ſeven and eight in the evening, my ſervant, Joſeph Grant, came in and informed me, there were two men going by, loaded with iron, but he believed them to be the property of Mr. Scott; I had nobody in the houſe but cuſtomers, beſide two brothers and their wives; I went to the door, and took them with me, it was moon-light, and I ſaw two men at the diſtance of thirty yards, which were the two priſoners, who were juſt together; as ſoon as I came up, the priſoner Clayton turned himſelf round, and ſtood as if he was making water, the other man had the iron between his legs; ſays I, friend, you are loaded hard, a little, Maſter, ſays he, and flung them over his ſhoulder, he ſaid he was going to the wheeler's; I turned myſelf round, miſſing the priſoner Clayton, I ſaw he was walking off, I ſays to my brothers at a diſtance behind me, mind what you are at, there is one of them off; while I was endeavouring to ſpeak to them, the priſoner Stroud flung this chain off his left ſhoulder, and he ran away, I purſued them and came up with Clayton firſt, and threw my right arm out, and catched him by the collar and brought him to the ground, and left a brother of mine in the care of him, attempting to take the other, but finding my elder brother and the lad was in purſuit of him, I thought it unneceſſary, I immediately turned back, thinking he might get from my brother, therefore I laid hold of Clayton, and made him riſe up, and go into my houſe, then they brought Stroud back; I ſent for Mr. Upſdale, and he owned the chains for Mr. Scott's property: I have had the chains ever ſince.

PRISONER CLAYTON'S DEFENCE.

He ſaid at the Juſtice's I was forty-eight yards diſtance.

(The chains produced and depoſed to.)

PRISONER STROUD'S DEFENCE.

I found them in the road, I thought they were Mr. Scott's property, and I was going to carry them to him.

What made you run away then?—I was frightened a little.

Each of the Priſoners called one witneſs, who gave them a good character.

BOTH GUILTY.

Publickly whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice ASHURST.

---

221. JOHN WATSON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 30th of December laſt, one ſilver table ſpoon, value 10s.

10s. the property of Charles Logie, Eſquire; and one ſhirt, value 4s. and one cotton handkerchief, value 1s. the property of William Skelton.

MARY SKELTON ſworn.

I have not ſeen the priſoner a great many years, and he came to ſee me on the Thurſday before New Year's Day; I live at No. 14, Fludyer-ſtreet, with Mr. Charles Logie, it was about one, or a little after, I aſked him into the kitchen, he was a little while in the kitchen, and when he went away, I miſſed the ſpoon, it was a table ſpoon, with my maſter's creſt.

Do you know what the creſt is?—I believe it is a hand and a branch in it; I miſſed alſo a ſhirt and a handkerchief, the property of my huſband; I knew the priſoner, he did live with Sir Charles Gray; I had all the things in the kitchen that day.

THOMAS HYNES ſworn.

I am a pawn-broker, I live in the Broad Sanctuary, Weſtminſter; between two and three, on the 30th of December, the priſoner firſt offered me a table ſpoon, and aſked me ſeven ſhillings for it; I aſked him whoſe it was; he ſaid it was his own; I aſked him if it was his creſt, and he ſaid, no, but it was his own ſpoon, and the ſhirt and handkerchief, which he wanted ten ſhillings upon, I lent him half a guinea, having no ſilver.

(The things produced and depoſed to.

Priſoner. I never took any of them there.

The priſoner called one witneſs who gave him a very good character.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before the Lord Chief Baron.

---

222. JOHN GOODEN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 25th of December laſt, three ſhillings and two ſixpences, the monies of William Ford.

SARAH FORD ſworn.

I am wife of William Ford, my huſband is a mathematical inſtrument maker, No. 42, New Compton-ſtreet; the priſoner came into my houſe on Chriſtmas Day-night, I know nothing of him, he took this money out of my till, I was coming into the ſhop, I ſaw the priſoner with his hand in the till, I did not ſee the money in his hand, but part of the money I knew afterwards, it was marked money, there were three ſhillings and two ſixpences which were miſſing, and found upon him: here is a gentleman here that ſaw him, and purſued him and took him; he run out of the door, and cried, ſtop thief! he was purſued and was brought back by the ſame perſon; three ſhillings and two ſixpences were found upon him.

THOMAS PATTERSON ſworn.

I only know I was ſent for, and found this money upon him, three ſhillings and two ſixpences; I produce the money.

JOHN BRATHWAITE ſworn.

I was in a little room adjoining to the ſhop, I ſaw a man go behind the compter, who I ſuſpected to be a thief, I purſued him and brought him back.

Mrs. Ford. I ſwear poſitively to that.

When did you count your money before?——About half an hour before; I had loſt ſome butter, that cauſed me to count my money.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was coming down Compton-ſtreet, and they took me to a chandler's ſhop, and ſaid I had robbed the ſhop, my mother goes out to chair work.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

223. JOHN WILLIAMS was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 24th of December laſt, one hundred and twenty-five pounds of ſapphora, value 6l. one wooden caſk, value 6d. the property of Samuel Righton, John Newcombe, and William Johnſon, being upon a certain key, called Galley Key, adjacent to the River Thames.

SAMUEL RIGHTON ſworn.

I am one of the maſters of the goldſmiths tackle porters, we muſt pay for the things; I only ſpeak to the property.

HENRY BARRETT ſworn.

I landed this caſk on the 24th of December, out of Mr. Mackenzie's lighter, upon Galley Key, there were ſeveral caſks more, this contains ſapphora; I ſaw it upon the key about twelve, a man came to me about one, and aſked me if I had loſt a caſk of blue, I told him no, I was ſure I had not, becauſe it was too heavy for a man to carry. Afterwards I looked and miſſed a caſk; it is a ſort of a mineral, they cannot blue china without it; I was informed that ſome people had ſtopped a man with a caſk of blue; my maſter went to look after it.

Jury. What weight was that caſk?——One hundred and twenty-five pounds.

DAVID LEVY ſworn.

On Friday the 24th, the priſoner came down Shoemaker-row, with this caſk on his ſhoulders, and I ſtopped him on ſuſpicion of its being ſtolen; there were four more ſailors like himſelf with him. I took the barrel off his ſhoulders, then they began to fight, and four of them got away; the priſoner run, and I run after him.

Who was with you?—The patrol, about three in the afternoon.

How came the patrol to be with you at that time?——The day before Chriſtmas Day they came down to receive their money at that time; he had the caſk on his ſhoulders, I took it in my arms, and put it down on the ground.

Did he ever get out of your ſight?——Never, I ran after him all the way to Gravel-lane; he ſaid the other ſailors gave it him to carry, and they paid him for his trouble; when I firſt ſtopped him, I aſked him how he came by it, and he told me theſe men employed him to carry it.

When you firſt ſtopped him, before they ran away, what did he ſay?——I aſked him what he had, and he ſaid he did not know.

Did not he tell you, when you firſt ſtopped him, that theſe men had given it him to carry?—He never ſpoke a word when I firſt took him, but, what is that to you? and they began to fight; I am ſure he never was out of my ſight, I ſtopped him juſt before my door, the caſk was carried to my houſe, and kept there ever ſince; this is the caſk, with ſome marks burnt in.

Court to Righton. Look at the caſk?—My Lord, I do not know it, if I ſaw it.

You had landed this caſk?—Yes.

How long is it in your charge?——Till it is ſent to the merchants houſes, and put into the cart.

Pray is not it in the charge of the wharfinger on the keys?——No, Sir.

Barrett. I will ſwear that was the caſk I landed, there was marked upon it, S. M. and there was only that caſk on the key with that mark upon it, and that one caſk with that ſort of goods on the key.

TEUSHEN HAKER ſworn.

I think I know this caſk, I cannot be quite poſitive, becauſe it is a ſort of goods which is always marked with the ſame mark, if there were fifty caſks; it came from Hamborough, we had imported two or three caſks, this was the laſt barrel of that mark which was in the ſhip, till it came up that morning, and as much as I can recollect, it is the ſame, there were three of that mark imported by me at that time, the other two had been delivered the day before.

Court to Barrett. Did you land any caſks the day before?—Two.

With this mark?——I cannot be ſure of the mark, but I took particular notice of this, becauſe there was only this one left.

Were

Were thoſe two other caſks ſafe delivered?—They were delivered the day before.

Are not there other importers as well as yourſelf?—There are three or four, and all uſe the ſame article; but I do not know there was any on board this ſhip.

What is the ſituation of Galley Key?—It adjoins the river.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was coming over Tower-hill, about half paſt two, I ſaw two men with this caſk, they called to me, and aſked me to carry it about a mile, they ſaid they were going with it to a gentleman's houſe; I had not carried it long before I was ſtopped, the others run off, and I thought it was ſmuggled goods; I am a ſailor, I was coming over the hill by myſelf.

Court. What is the value of this?—Six pounds, ſuppoſe we ſay five pounds.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, this indictment is framed within the words of the Act of Parliament, which makes it death to ſteal goods to the value of 40s. or upwards, upon any key adjoining to a navigable river.

Jury to Barrett. Do you recollect ſeeing the priſoner upon the key on that day?—I ſaw him two or three times that day, I know him well.

How near the time of miſſing the caſk did you ſee him?——About an hour before the caſk was gone I ſaw him upon the keys.

Jury. Was the priſoner ever employed to work on the keys?—Never, that I ſaw.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing to the value of 39s.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

224. GEORGE NORRIS, THOMAS FREEMAN, and WILLIAM JOHNSON, were indicted for feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Robert Hennick, about the hour of eight in the forenoon, on the 21ſt of December laſt, no perſon being in the ſame dwelling houſe, and feloniouſly ſtealing therein, one cotton counterpane, value 20s. one other counterpane, value 30s. one printed cotton gown, value 15s. one callico gown and petticoat, value 30s. one callico petticoat, value 20s. one linen petticoat, value 20s. one cloth coat, value 40s. one ſhag waiſtcoat, value 10s. one velvet waiſtcoat, value 10s. one cloth great coat, value 10s. one pair of worſted breeches, value 20s. one ſilk cloak, value 20s. one linen table cloth, value 7s. one pair of ſheets, value 10s. two ſhirts, value 5s. three ſhifts, value 3s. one garnet ring, value 8s. three tea ſpoons, value 5s. one tea caddy, value 10s. two muſlin aprons, value 5s. one apron, value 1s. four aprons, value 15s. ſix muſlin handkerchiefs, value 12s. two ſilk handkerchiefs, value 4s. one lace cap, value 10s. one pair of pillow caſes, value 2s. and eighteen yards of ſilk lace, value 30s. the property of the ſaid Robert Hennick.

And WILLIAM TERRY FENLEY was indicted, for that he, on the 21ſt of December laſt, the ſaid cloth coat, one ſhag waiſtcoat, and one cloth great coat, feloniouſly did receive and have, knowing them to be ſtolen.

MARY HENNICK, ſworn.

I am wife of the proſecutor, I remember our houſe being broke open, I left it between the hours of ſeven and eight in the morning the 21ſt of December, we live in Spring Gardens, Mile-end, New-town; it was broad day-light, I locked my door and ſecured the windows, I left nobody in the houſe, my houſe is a lone houſe forty yards from any other, I returned in about half an hour; about ſeven o'clock as near as I can gueſs, a man came and knocked at my door, and aſked if my name was not Hennick, I anſwered him yes, my door was locked then, I aſked him what he wanted, he told me I muſt go immediately to

to the Ship, in Little-ſtreet, my huſband had met with a misfortune and broke his thigh; I dreſſed myſelf and went as faſt as I could in the trouble I was in; I went for no other errand, and when I returned I found my fore door broke open, my cheſts broke open, and all my wearing apparel and my huſband's gone; my cheſts were in the inner room.

Mention what was loſt?——The things mentioned in the indictment.

What was the value of all this together?——I cannot pretend to value them, they were worth a great deal more than twenty pounds, the things were none of them ever found.

Did you ever ſee the man that came and told you that idle tale about your huſband's breaking his thigh?——No, I went and took a warrant, and I ſearched Norris's houſe, and there was no property there: I folded all the things in the cheſt on the Sunday night, and they were all there as far as I can recollect.

THOMAS ALLEN ſworn.

I keep a cart and horſe, I live in the gardens where this affair was done, about eight o'clock on the 21ſt of December in the morning, I ſaw the priſoner William Johnſon come along with a bundle under his arm, I knew him before by ſight, I do not know his trade, I live about twenty yards from the proſecutor, there is only one way to Spring Gardens, Johnſon appeared to have been coming from Mr. Hennick's premiſes.

Was there any other houſe that he could be coming from beſides Hennick's?——There is no thoroughfare, he muſt come from Hennick's houſe.

What ſort of bundle was it?——A very large one under his left arm, and two hats on, one hat over the other.

What pace was he going?——As faſt as he could walk.

Was any perſon in company with him?—Not that I ſaw.

Did you hear afterwards that Hennick's houſe was broke open?—Yes.

How ſoon afterwards?——It might be two hours after.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. Mr. Allen, theſe Spring Gardens that you are talking about, in which you ſay the priſoner was coming, do you mean to ſwear that there are no more houſes in it but Hennick's?——Not one on that ſide of the way.

Are there any more houſes in Spring Gardens from which a perſon could come in the direction you ſaw Johnſon?—There are other houſes, there might be ſuch a thing.

Then that which you ſwore juſt now, was not quite right, that there was no other houſes from which he might be coming?——There were houſes on that ſide of the way.

Now a little about the cart and horſe, you keep a jocky cart?——I ſell greens, and do neceſſary jobs.

That is juſt the thing I was enquiring after; you are what they call a running duſtman?——No.

What is the number of this ſame cart, Mr. Allen?——I have no number.

ELIZABETH ALLEN ſworn.

I am the wife of Thomas Allen; on the 21ſt of December laſt, I was ſitting at work at my window, a little after eight in the morning, I ſaw George Norris and Thomas Freeman come down paſt my window, towards Mr. Hennick's houſe, it is a lone houſe on the left-hand ſide; Norris had an empty bag in his hand, he might be gone about ten minutes the outſide, and returned from Mr. Hennick's houſe, and paſſed my gate; I ſaw them have ſomething in the bag, but what I could not tell, it appeared like foul linen, or ſheeting; they walked ſwiftly by, I ſent my little boy to ſee which way they went, and I told Mrs. Hennick when ſhe came home: I was at Juſtice Staples's when George Norris owned to the robbery; they owned that Freeman and Johnſon would have murdered Mrs. Hennick if ſhe had come then; it was not taken down in writing: he ſaid he would take his

his oath to it, but the Juſtice did not give him his oath; and he ſaid they would have tied a handkerchief over her eyes, and thrown her upon the bed, and murdered her; he confeſſed every thing.

What did he confeſs?—He confeſſed that he did do the fact.

What fact?—Why robbing Mrs. Hennick.

What did Norris ſay of himſelf?——He charged the other two, he ſaid he was there, he ſaid he would not conſent to do it, for they could do it without.

Was Johnſon preſent?—No, Sir, I never ſaw him in my life.

Was Freeman preſent?—Yes.

Did Norris ſay this in Freeman's preſence?—Yes.

What did Freeman ſay?—Freeman ſaid nothing before the Juſtice, George Norris ſaid Freeman and Johnſon were the firſt that broke the houſe open.

Did he ſay who went in?——Johnſon broke the cheſt open, they did not charge any body with going in.

ANN THOMPSON ſworn.

I am a widow, I live in Spring-gardens; on the 21ſt of December laſt, I went into my own yard, I live but a very little way from the proſecutor's, they are private gardens, about two or three rood diſtance, there is no thoroughfare, Mr. Norris's vault and our's join together, that is the father of the priſoner; when I came to our vault, I heard ſomebody in their vault, and I heard ſomebody come out of their vault, and at the ſide of the vault I ſaw the ſaid Thomas Freeman, I did not know his name then, I know it now; I ſaw him go towards Norris's houſe, it was about eight, I cannot pretend to ſay to a few minutes, and immediately the priſoner Norris came out, and they kept whiſpering together, but what they ſaid I could not tell exactly, but as far as I could apprehend——

Mr. Garrow. If you did not hear, do not tell us what you apprehended?—As far as I could underſtand I will tell you.

Court. Tell your ſtory your own way.—He ſaid, are you going with us, or is ſomebody going with us, that is what Norris ſaid to Freeman, and the other ſaid, yes; I looked through the ſide of the road, the vault is next the road, I ſaw Norris peeping, as if he was looking after ſomebody, and I went away into my own place again, and juſt gave my maſter a baſon of tea on the ſhop-board as he was at work, and I ſaw Norris go by with a bag upon his back, full of ſomething, but what it was I cannot pretend to ſay; I immediately went into the ſtreet to a chandler's ſhop, and heard the houſe was robbed; I told Mrs. Hennick what I ſaw, I was at the Juſtice's, and was ſworn there.

Did you hear young Norris ſay any thing?——Yes, I did: when I came there he was in cuſtody, and he owned to the robbery.

What did he ſay?—He owned that this Freeman and Johnſon broke the houſe open.

Court. That is nothing at all.—Norris ſaid they broke this houſe open with a chiſſel, that they took the property of Mr. and Mrs. Hennick's, and ſold it to a perſon, ſomewhere by the Black Horſe, one door goes in by Saltpetre-bank, for two guineas and ſome ſilver; he ſaid ſo far as this, that they would give him ſome money to carry the things for them.

JOSEPH LEVY ſworn.

I am a barber, I live in Whitechapel, on Tueſday morning, three days before Chriſtmas, Mrs. Hennick came into the Angel and Crown tavern, and I went and took Freeman and Norris into cuſtody at the Riſing Sun, in Faſhion-ſtreet.

Did you tell them it would be better to confeſs?——I told them for what I apprehended them for; when I brought them to the Angel and Crown tavern, Norris ſaid he would tell the whole directly.

Mr. Garrow. You are the man they call the Barber?—Yes.

Your other name is Cockey Barber, is not it?—Yes.

I want to know your flash name in short?——Joe Barber.

You are one of the traps belonging to Mr. Staples's office?—No.

Oh, what you are discharged?——I discharged myself.

I ask you, whether Norris, when he entered into this converſation, was not drunk?—As drunk as I am now.

Was he drunk or ſober?——He was not drunk.

How much do you mean to ſwear he had drank?—I mean to ſwear he had not drank above a pint of beer.

No other liquors?—No.

What converſation had you had about his weight before you entered into this converſation?—What weight?

Had not you ſaid, that if he would not tell the whole ſtory, he and Freeman would weigh their weight, they would weigh eighty pounds?——No.

Had you intimated to him, that unleſs he told the whole ſtory, you would hang him?—No.

Court. What did he confeſs?—Coming up Brick-lane, he ſaid he wanted to ſpeak to me, I ſaid it was time enough at the Office, Norris then began to damn, and ſwear, and ſing: I had one on one ſide, and one on the other, by the collar, I brought them to the Angel and Crown and ſearched them, I found nothing on them, not a penny in money, that was about eleven; ſays Norris, I will tell you, ſays he, I am ſorry I did it, it was I, Freeman, and Johnſon, that committed the robbery, and he ſaid, I wiſh you would take Johnſon, I went ſeveral times after him, but did not take him; afterwards I asked Johnſon what he had done with the things, Norris called me aſide, and ſaid, why do not you ſearch him again, he has ſold the things for two guineas and ſome ſilver.

Mr. Garrow. Now, Maſter Levy, otherwiſe Joe the Barber, how long have you been engaged in this honourable buſineſs of thief-taking?—I cannot rightly tell.

Now gueſs a little, ever ſince you was convicted and pardoned, ha! Speak man; how long have you been a thief-taker?——Longer than you have been a Counſellor.

I know that, becauſe during the eight years I attended as ſtudent, I remember you?——Very likely; I do not attend any office now.

How long have you been out of place?—I do not chooſe to anſwer that.

How many trials did you appear upon laſt Seſſions?—Never a one, only one.

What, there was no blood money laſt Seſſions?——If there were no thieves, how would you get a brief?

Did not Norris come to that houſe you have ſpoken of in Faſhion-ſtreet, for the purpoſe of ſurrendering upon any charge that had been made againſt him, with reſpect to this place?—No, Sir.

Do you ſwear that?—I do.

What did he ſay going along?—He deſired to ſpeak to me and go to the Juſtice's.

Upon your oath, (God knows that is no great ſanction) was you ſworn with your hat on?—I was.

Now, Maſter Levy.——Well, Maſter Garrow.

Are you a Jew?——Yes.

How long is it ſince you ſaid at the Seſſions-houſe at Clerkenwell, that you was a Chriſtian?——Never.

Did you never affert at the Seſſions at Clerkenwell, that you was a Chriſtian, and not a Jew?——No, never, Sir, becauſe I never was chriſtened.

Will you ſwear that this man was not extremely drunk at the time he entered into this converſation?—I will ſwear he had not drank any liquor, I would not let him have any thing.

Had you ſaid any thing to him about his weight?—Nothing at all.

Perhaps you do not know that there is a reward for theſe men if they are convicted?—How ſhould I know.

What is the price of the blood of theſe men, if they are convicted?——I ſhall not tell you.

THOMAS FORRAST ſworn.

What are you?—I am a weaver by trade, on the 21ſt of laſt month, Mrs. Hennick came me into the Rotation Office, and ſaid ſhe as robbed, I was preſent when Norris and reeman were apprehended; Levy took em both, they were kept ſeparate, one as kept in a box along ſide me; Norris d directly the robbery he was guilty of, ys he, I do want to be an evidence, I ſaid you want to be an evidence, you muſt go e Juſtice's.

Mr. Garrow. Your Lordſhip ſees this as extorted from him.

Court. It was not held out to him.

Mr. Garrow. This man ſays to the priner, if you want to be an evidence, you uſt ſwear before the Juſtice.

Court. Did you uſe any perſuaſions to inuce him?—No, none at all, they wanted oth to be evidence before the Juſtice; Norris made anſwer immediately———

Mr. Garrow. I beg pardon, when I conder this man knows as well the tendency every queſtion your Lordſhip puts, alſoſt as well as your Lordſhip: I remember ne caſe, in which the evidence was this, hat a perſon having been appriſed that ſuch one, Thomſon by name, had been guilty f a felony, accoſted him in the ſtreet, you uſt go along with me, and he added, it ill be better for you to tell the whole ſtory; his was a perſon not authoriſed to make ny promiſe, this man having no pretence o hold out mercy to him, ſays in the ſtreet, advise you to make a diſcovery, and the Court ſaid, that that ſhould not be received n evidence; now, here, ſee if this is not inſinitely ſtronger, the man in cuſtody of the officers of Juſtice, is told, if you wiſh to have any benefit by your declaration, make it before the Magiſtrate.

Court. No, no. You ſay Norris and Freeman both wanted to be admitted as evidence?—Yes; then Norris ſaid he had a prior right, becauſe he had ſaved Mrs. Hennick's life, becauſe he ſaid Johnſon and Freeman intended to put a handkerchief over Mrs. Hennick's face, and cut her throat, and he would not give his conſent to it.

Mr. Garrow. Was Joe the Barber preſent at this converſation?——Yes, he was. Was he drunk or ſober?——He had nothing at all to make him drunk, he had only a pint of beer, I would not let them drink together.

Did the barber take a drop of drink with him?——No, Sir, the barber, nor any body but themſelves.

What trade are you?—A weaver.

How long have you attended the Juſtice's Office?——Six or ſeven weeks.

Are you a conſtable?——I attend as I do, for a livelyhood, to get a ſhilling when a job comes in.

Oh, as a job of blood work comes in?—No, Sir.

Then you are in hopes of being the ſucceſſor of the barber?——No, Sir.

Have you done a ſtroke of weaver's work ſince you have attended that Office?—No, Sir, I have none to do, if I had any thing to do in an honeſt way, I would do it.

Court. When Norris ſaid he had a prior right, he did not mention for what?—They began to ſpeak ſo faſt, one againſt the other; they were committed for further examination.

JOSEPH COOLEY ſworn.

I belong to the Rotation Office in Whitechapel, I know nothing particular, I heard Norris ſay he had ſold the things to one Biddy Farren, there was a ſearch warrant, and Norris's houſe was ſearched, and no property found.

BENJAMIN NASH ſworn.

I am a headborough, Levy brought Norris and Freeman to the Rotation Office, I ſearched them both, I found nothing; about two hours after, he came and ſaid, ſtop Freeman, and in his pockets he found two guineas, it might be there when I ſearched.

Mr. Garrow. You had ſearched him; and had not found he had two guineas in his pocket?——No, Sir, it might be there.

When Levy put his hand in his pocket, he could produce two guineas?—Yes.

Out of a pocket in which the Juſtice and you could find nothing?—Yes, Levy took the money, but the Juſtice ordered it to be delivered into my hands.

How

How long has he been turned off?——About eighteen months, he muſt never come there no more.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, this conſtruction has been made on this Act of Parliament, which is to prevent houſes being broken in the day time, that if two or more perſons go on this buſineſs, and one ſtands without, though he takes a part in it, if he himſelf does not go into the houſe, he is not within the capital part of the charge, though he may be guilty of the felony; therefore, this differs from burglary: and another rule you muſt obſerve, that the confeſſion of one party does not affect another, unleſs he be preſent, and by his ſilence acquieſces in that confeſſion.

ALL FOUR NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

---

225. WILLIAM TEBAY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 28th of December laſt, three live pigs, price 10s. the property of James Lawrence.

JAMES LAWRENCE ſworn.

I live at Chelſea; I loſt three pigs on the 28th of December, I was at the ſtye between one and two, which was about a quarter of an hour before they were taken out of it; a neighbour's child came and told me, and I came out, and the woman ſaid, there goes the man, and I purſued after him, and getting pretty near him, I cried ſtop thief; I ſaw him brought back by one of the other witneſſes, the pigs were with the man when he was brought back, that was the priſoner.

Did you know the pigs?——No further than that they were all of one breed; I miſſed them out of my ſtye.

RICHARD DENBIGH ſworn.

I was going along Sloan's-ſquare, and Mr. Lawrence's man cried ſtop thief; I ran after him, and caught him; when I firſt ſaw him, he was about a quarter of a mile from the proſecutor's houſe, he was running away; when I came up to him in the field, I ſaw one pig laying by the ſide of him, it was not quite dead, and he had another in his pocket that was quite dead; he ſaid, damn your eyes, what do you want? and I ſaid, what do you think I want, I want you, and I told the boy to go and call his father, then we took the priſoner to the Coach and Horſes at Chelſea, there he pulled a pig out of his pocket, and laid it on a table.

WILLIAM RUMMING ſworn.

I was at work in the ſhop with my maſter, Mr. Newſon of Chelſea, I heard the cry of ſtop thief, and I looked out of the window, and ſaw the priſoner with a pig in his hand, and I run out as faſt as I could, and ſaw him taken, I firſt ſaw him by Mr. Lawrence's ſtye; one pig was alive; he was never out of my ſight, I ſaw him drop one pig.

EDWARD PRITCHARD ſworn.

I am the conſtable, I took charge of him.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I went down the yard, and a man called to me, and ſaid he would give me a ſhilling to carry theſe pigs to ſuch a place.

Court. Have you any body to your character?——Not that I know of.

GUILTY.

Publickly whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

The next Part will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 12th of JANUARY 1785, and the following Days;
Being the SECOND SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,
PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER II. PART III.

LONDON:
Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)
And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and
S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.
M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

226. ELIZABETH MORRIS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 16th of December, one cloth great coat, value 7s. two coats, value 10s. two pair of velveret breeches, value 10s. two velveret waiſtcoats, value 10s. the property of Samuel Glover.

SAMUEL GLOVER ſworn.

On the 16th of December, about twelve o'clock, my wife and my two ſiſters were waſhing in the firſt floor, and my daughter was going into the cellar for a pail of water, and met this woman, and called me out of the ſhop, I went and found the priſoner, and in her apron were two ſuits of clothes, one mine, and one the boy's, I ſaw them taken from the priſoner, out of her apron, ſhe ſaid ſhe bought them of two travelling Jews.

HANNAH GLOVER ſworn.

I was getting a pail of water, and I met the priſoner coming down ſtairs, I aſked her who ſhe wanted, ſhe ſaid ſhe had been to one Mrs. Robinſon, a mantua-maker, and there was no ſuch perſon in the houſe; I ſaw a great coat lay atop of the things in her apron, I told her it was my father's great coat, and I inſiſted upon looking into her apron, and I found two ſuits of clothes, one was my father's, and the other the apprentice's.

JANE GLOVER ſworn.

I ſaw the woman directly at the bottom of the ſtairs, I ſaw the great coat firſt, and I ſaw the other things found afterwards.

(The things depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

My Lord, I deal in buying and ſelling clothes, and I was going to call on a perſon, I happened to miſtake in the number, and went into the wrong houſe, and this woman came and inſiſted to know what I had in my apron, I ſaid they were clothes which I had bought; I never had been up the ſtairs; I bought the clothes in Monmouth-ſtreet. Her father ſaid he would hang me, if there was no more women in the world; my witneſſes, Mr. and Mrs. M'Carty, that ſaw me buy them, were here at three o'clock.

GUILTY.

Privately whipped and confined twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

227. JOHN

227. JOHN JOHNSON was indicted for ſtealing, on the 7th of December laſt, nine ſilk handkerchiefs, value 32s. the property of Iſaac Trivoquet.

WILLIAM ARNOTT ſworn.

I was in the parlour behind the proſecutor's ſhop, I heard the cry of ſtop thief, I ran out, and about twenty yards from the ſhop door, there were ſeveral people round the priſoner, and I picked up three handkerchiefs at his feet; he was taken into cuſtody directly.

WILLIAM WATKINS ſworn.

I was in the ſhop at the time, the priſoner and another came in to aſk for ſome handkerchiefs, we had not the handkerchiefs he wanted; he then opened the door, and called a perſon; I ſaid I would call any body; the priſoner got between me and the door, and he ſnatched off the handkerchiefs, and took them away, I ſaw him do it, and we picked up the handkerchiefs, and took the priſoner before a Juſtice of Peace.

Another WITNESS ſworn.

I was in the ſhop, the priſoner aſked for ſome handkerchiefs, we had none he wanted, he opened the door and came in again, and ſnatched the handkerchiefs and carried them off; this young man followed him, and I followed him and caught hold of his coat; I picked up ſix of the handkerchiefs at his feet.

(The handkerchiefs produced and depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was ſtanding at the door, and this gentleman came and hauled me into the ſhop; I know nothing of them.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

228. JACOB BELLETT was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 25th of December laſt fifty one ells of half-ell manufactured lining, value 3l. 8s. two pounds of unwound black ſilk, value 20s. thirty-two ounces of double black ſilk wound, value 3l. 12s. the property of John Gearing, John Vaux, and Thomas John Taylor.

JOHN VAUX ſworn.

I only prove the property, my partners names are John Gearing, and Thomas John Taylor.

WILLIAM COLE ſworn.

On the 25th of December, which was Chriſtmas-day, between three and four in the afternoon, we had fifty-one ells of work cut out of the loom, two pounds of unwound ſilk, and thirty two ounces of double ſilk, it was ſilk lining, I worked for Meſſrs. Gearing, Vaux, and Taylor; about four I was informed my ſhop window was open, I went up to ſee and took the key of the ſtair foot door, that goes up to my work ſhop, and found all my work was taken away, the ſtair foot door was locked as I left it; I ſaid, the priſoner was the perſon that robbed me, I went to the priſoner's houſe and aſked for him, nobody was at home but the ſiſter and a girl; I found the priſoner in Balls-alley, with a girl that he kept company with, I heard a ſcuffle withinſide the houſe, I heard them ſhove up the window, and they kept me at the door for a minute or a minute and half, then the door was opened; he threatened to puniſh me, he followed me home, but upon my mentioning to ſearch the loft the priſoner ran away directly; in ſearching the lofts we run over four houſes, I found no property there, but I found one trap door open that went into the priſoner's houſe, and I dropped down upon the priſoner's bed, which was under that trap door; I there made a ſtrict ſearch, and his brother in law came down, and I looked behind an old pair of drawers, there was a net and this bag, and a ſhoot, and the unwrought ſilk, I pulls up the end a little more, ſays I, thank God here is my piece; the Juſtice ordered me to ſubpœnea this brother-in-law, but he is got out of the way, I carried the the ſubpœnea, I went to ſearch for the priſoner and found him at one Helder's, which was about two hours after he run away, I found him concealed in a cloſet, I aſked him how he came to do ſuch a wicked thing; he ſaid, for God's ſake have mercy upon me, you have your property let me go; ſays I, I cannot, it is my maſter's property, I brought him to the Crown ale-houſe, and ſent for an officer and gave charge of him, and in my hearing he confeſſed he did it himſelf and nobody elſe; I made him no promiſe, he was going to tell us of one Jones, the father and ſon who were waiting for him, at the corner of Cox's-ſquare, in Petticoat-lane, a man that buys ſtolen ſilk, little or much; I have never enquired after him, Mr. Wilmot ſaid we could do nothing to him, without he had bought any thing, he uſes a publick houſe the corner of that ſquare.

JOHN GRAY ſworn.

On the 25th of December, I was ſent for by this young man and the priſoner, I ſaid to the priſoner, was there any body along with you?——And he ſaid, no, there was not, he was ſadly diſtreſſed, and did it through neceſſity.

Where does Jones live?——I cannot tell, only he ſaid he uſed a public houſe, the corner of Cox's-ſquare.

Do not you know where that Jones lives?——No, upon my oath I do not, I never heard of any ſuch name before.

Where do you live?——In Shoreditch.

(The wound ſilk depoſed to.)

Cole. I can ſwear they are them that were taken out of my looms, I can ſhew you, I have in my pocket a pattern of the quill that we head them with.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

The man came and charged me, and ſwore he would hang me, I told him I would puniſh him, I went to ſee his work, and his wife collared me? ſays I, what do you collar me for, I have money of my own; I went to Mr. Helder's and this man came up, there was no ſtring to latch the door, and the woman bid me get a plank out of the cloſet, and he came and ſwore I was ſhut up there; I am innocent.

The Priſoner called five more witneſſes who all gave him a good character.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

229. JOHN EVANS was indicted for ſtealing on the 5th of January, two woollen blankets, value 22d. ſeven yards of linen cloth, value 8s. one pair of child's ſtays, value 12d. one child's ſhift, value 1d. one cloth great coat, value 12d. and one linen coverlid, value 2d. the property of William Selby.

ANN SELBY ſworn.

On the 5th of this month, I went out and locked my door, and faſtened my window; I left the key where my child was three doors off, I left nobody at home, I returned in half an hour, and my place was ſtripped of the things mentioned in the indictment, the priſoner was taken up before I returned.

WILLIAM MEAD ſworn.

About five minutes before ſix in the evening, me and my fellow ſervant went by, as I came back one of the ſhutters was open, and I looked in, and this man was hiding under the window, and the blankets and things by him, I ſaw him when he was ſtooped down, I went and ſecured him, and another man came to aſſiſt me; he had two blankets, a coverlid, and an old great coat under his noſe, I found nothing about him.

Priſoner. I had nothing about me.

JOHN WILKINSON ſworn.

I was ſent for to take the man in cuſtody, I can tell you no more, he was inſide the houſe when I came, ſtanding by the things; there was an old coverlid, a pair of blankets, and and one old great coat; nothing else was found at all.

(The things depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going along, and I thought one Mrs. Clark lived there, ſhe did live there about a twelvemonth ago, and ſhe uſed to leave the window for me to go in, if ſhe was not at home, ſo I went in, and I was coming out again and the man ſtopped me.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

230. GEORGE RAYMOND, was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 9th of October laſt, ſeventy-two yards of bed ticking, value 6l. the property of Thomas Ayres, in his dwelling houſe.

THOMAS AYRES ſworn.

I only prove the property.

BETTY HALFPENNY ſworn.

I live with the proſecutor, I was coming down ſtairs, and I ſaw a man ſtand on the right hand window on the outſide of the houſe, on the 9th of October, about two in the afternoon; I ſaw he was a ſtrange man, and I ſaw him cut the cord, and put the piece of ticking on his ſhoulder; it is an open ſhop window, he took the tick on his ſhoulder, and I run after him, and cried ſtop thief! and he run into Winſley-ſtreet, and there he dropped it, I ſaw him drop it, and he was ſtopped by Mr. Blackſtock who is here; he was never out of my ſight from the time he put the tick on his ſhoulders till he was taken, I am ſure of that; the tick was taken to the Juſtices and marked.

WILLIAM BLACKSTOCK ſworn.

I firſt ſaw the priſoner in Winſley-ſtreet, I heard the cry of ſtop thief! and ſeveral people running after him, he was coming up towards me, and I was going to ſecure him, and he doubled his fiſt at me, and ſaid, damn you, ſtop me if you dare; I immediately knocked him down, and kept him till the people came up; he had nothing in his poſſeſſion when I ſtopped him.

Proſecutor. The tick has been in my poſſeſſion, it was given to me at the office, I am ſure it is the ſame piece, it is marked.

Court. Where was it?——It was ſtanding in the window, on the outſide upon a bench, the glaſs is out of the window, and we cord them together carpets and tick.

How far does the board of the window project from the houſe?——About fifteen inches beyond the upright of the window.

Whereabout did this tick ſtand?——It ſtands upon the bench, and would be inſide if the glaſs was in, but the glaſs is out.

What is the value of the piece of tick?——Six pounds.

Is that the felling price?——The ſelling price is more than that.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going up Oxford-road that morning with oyſters, and coming back again, I ſtopped at the public houſe next to the proſecutor's ſhop, and there was a well dreſſed young man ſtood there, and aſked me if I was buſy, and he aſked me to carry a parcel for him, and I told him I would, he went out and came back again, and called for a quartern of gin; ſays he, you may come now with me, and you may carry it, and he made believe as if he was going into the ſhop; ſays he, ſtop there, I can give it you on the outſide, my maſter is not at home, and I am only foreman; I ſhall have a noiſe from my maſter, for I ſhould have carried it before; at that time there came in two ladies, one in a riding habit, at the outſide there ſtood a large chair, and he moved that, and whether he cut it or whether he untied it, I do not know, but he gave it me; now ſays he, you take this, and go and ſtop at the corner of Caſtle-ſtreet, and I will take it from you; I have been very bad ſince I came to priſon, and my mother came to ſee me, and ſhe caught the diſtemper and died; my wife is bad at home now, I have nobody to ſend for any perſon.

GUILTY.

Of ſtealing to the value of 39s.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

231. ANN READ was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Sarah wife of William Giles, on the King's highway, on the 22d of December laſt, and putting her in corporal fear and danger of her life, and feloniouſly taking from her perſon, and againſt her will, one red cloth cloak, value 10s. the property of the ſaid William.

SARAH GILES ſworn.

I am a married woman.

What is your huſband's name?——William Giles.

What is he?——A gardner, I never ſaw the priſoner before to the beſt of my knowledge; I met her and another woman going into Short's-gardens, I was going to my ſiſter's, who lives at the top of Short's-gardens, near Drury-lane; it was on Thurſday evening, three weeks laſt night, it was rather better than half after nine; and I was going through the gateway, and this woman and another overtook me, and they aſked me where I was going; I thought it was no buſineſs to them, as I was a country woman, I came from Wiltſhire, we have been in London three quarters of a year, and lived ſince at Bow; I ſaid it was no difference to they where I was going, they ſaid it was; I ſaid if they muſt know, I was going to my family; they ſaid I ſhould go with them, I ſaid I would not, they ſaid damn your eyes you bitch you ſhall, or elſe I will kill you; I ſaid I would not, ſo they turned me to come back again, I wreſtled with them, and one of them knocked me down, I cannot tell which it was, but the priſoner took the cloak off my back, whilſt I lay on the ground, and I cried murder; I had two gold rings on my fingers, and they tried to take off them, but they could not; this gentleman Joſeph Simpſon, he run to my aſſiſtance, and he run to take the priſoner, and he took her within ten yards with my cloak upon her arm; ſhe ſaid, Mr. Joſeph, I beg you will not hurt me, he ſaid he would not hurt her, but he would have her to the round houſe; and he and I had her to the round houſe, and I ſlept there all night.

JOSEPH SIMPSON ſworn.

I am a watchman in the pariſh of St. Giles's in the fields, on the 22d of December, between nine and ten, I went to the watch-houſe to get my lanthorn, coming back I ſaw Mrs. Giles and the priſoner and another woman coming through Short's-gardens, they had hold of each other; I did not know the priſoner before, but ſhe ſeemed to know me, they ſeemed to be forcing the woman along, but they made uſe of ſoft words as I paſſed them, perſuading her to go home to her family; I paſſed them about twenty yards, and I turned round to look back, and I heard the woman call murder! I ran directly, and I ſaw the woman lay on the ground, and the priſoner running away; I run after the priſoner and the other woman, and the priſoner in turning the corner of Short's-gardens fell down, and I laid hold of her directly, and I told her ſhe ſhould go to the round houſe, I found this cloak upon her, ſhe reſiſted at firſt, and would not get up off the ground, afterwards ſhe ſaid ſhe would ſee the woman home, ſhe ſaid ſhe was going to ſee the woman home to Newtoner's-lane; I aſked Mrs. Giles if ſhe lived in Newtoner's-lane, ſhe ſaid no, I then ſaid, you ſhall go to the round houſe, and ſhe ſaid, Mr. Joſeph do not hurt me, and I ſwore ſhe ſhould go to the round houſe.

(The cloak produced and depoſed to.)

Priſoner. Are you ſure I am the girl that was along with the other?——I am ſure ſhe is the perſon I took the cloak from.

JOHN

JOHN YOUNG ſworn.

I am round houſe keeper of St. Giles's, I only know the people brought this charge to me, and told me the ſame ſtory.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I follow the market, I had been out with ſome fiſh, and ſaw a mob under the gateway, and two women were running along and they ſhoved me down, and the watchman came and took hold of me, I ſaid to the watchman, I know this woman and her brother.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

232. WILLIAM SUGNALL, otherwiſe STRUGNELL, was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 1ſt day of January, fifty pounds weight of pewter, value 30s. the property of Joſeph Spackman and James Spackman.

Richard Shakeſhaft and James Armſtrong took the priſoner in Arrow-alley, near Petticoat-lane, with two pieces of metal under his coat, which were his maſter's property.

(The pewter depoſed to.)

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

233. GEORGE SUFFERING was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 5th of January laſt, one tan crop leather hide, value 20s. the property of Edward Beale.

The parties not appearing, the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

234. EDWARD BUNDY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 7th of January, fifty-ſix pounds weight of molaſſes, value 10s. and one flint glaſs bottle, covered with wicker, value 5s. the property of John Pullett, James Silverſide, and William Metcalf.

It appearing that Mr. Metcalf's name was Charles, and not William, the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

235. SARAH GRIFFITHS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 12th of December laſt, one ſilver watch, value 30s. the property of Henry Pond.

And BENJAMIN PALMER was indicted for feloniouſly receiving the ſame, knowing it to have been ſtolen.

The parties not appearing, their recognizances were eſtreated, and the priſoners were

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before the Lord Chief Baron.

---

236. NESBY WALKER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 29th of December laſt, two oxen, price 20l. the property of Edward Adams.

There being no evidence to affect the priſoner, he was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice ASHURST.

---

267. JOHN WATKINS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 27th of December cember last, forty pounds weight of Cheshire cheese, value 20s. the property of Charles Carr.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before the Lord Chief Baron.

---

238. JANE THACKER, otherwise SCHOOLEY, was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 24th of December last, ten yards of black thread lace, value 25s. the property of Elizabeth Dennis and Dorothy Hurrell.

This was a child of nine years old, against whom there was no evidence.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

239. GEORGE THORPE was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 24th of December last, one side of bacon, value 10s. the property of Stephen Hibberd.

The witnesses examined apart at the request of the prisoner.

STEPHEN HIBBERD sworn.

I am a cheesemonger in the Fleet-market; I met the prisoner coming out of my warehouse, when I went to see whether it was fast, with a side of bacon, which he threw at me; it was mine: and from his pocket he threw a lanthorn. I left my warehouse safe and locked an hour before; the lock appeared to be picked.

GEORGE CARR sworn.

Confirmed the above, and said, he took the prisoner.

Prisoner. I know nothing of it.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

240. JOHN THOMPSON was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 14th of December last, two bars of iron, called rush iron, weight one hundred and seven pounds, value 14s. the property of Richard Crawsley, Richard Davenport, William Crawsley, and William Thompson.

The prisoner was taken with the iron upon him, which was deposed to.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

251 WILLIAM WILD was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 8th of January, one bar of iron, weight fifty-eight pounds, value 8s. the property of Richard Crawsley, Richard Davenport, William Crawsley, and William Thompson.

The prisoner was taken as the last.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

242. RICHARD SUTTON was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 24th of December last, ten printed cotton shawls, value 1l. the property of Thomas Leach.

THOMAS

THOMAS LEACH sworn.

I am a haberdasher and hoser, No. 87, Tower-hill; on Friday the 24th of December, about a quarter past eight in the evening, I was in a little back room close to my shop, the candles were all lighted, and hearing a pane of glass break, I ran out, and heard the cry of stop thief; I saw a person running, and I saw him run into Rosemary-lane, and he was knocked down.

WILLIAM STEELE sworn.

On Christmas eve at night, about a quarter past eight, I was coming over big Tower Hill, and I saw the prisoner standing on the pavement, almost facing the prosecutor's door, and hearing a pane of glass break, I saw the prisoner with something in his hand, which came from out of the window which he had broken; I cried out stop thief, and he bove them down and ran away; I picked them up, and ran after him; he was never out of my sight, I am sure he is the man.

(The shawls produced and deposed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I know nothing of it.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

243. JOHN KITE was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 14th of December last, one linen handkerchief, value 1s. the property of John Rutherford.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

244. JAMES SMITH was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 7th of January, nine yards of hempen rope, value 8s. one boat hook, value 12d. the property of Felix Calvert, Robert Ladbrooke, and William Whitmore.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

245. EDWARD WELLS was indicted feloniously stealing, on the 17th of December last, four wooden wheels, called phaeton wheels, value 20s. the property of Joseph Crook.

There being no evidence against the prisoner, he was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

246. RICHARD ISLEY was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 12th of November last, in the parish of West Drayton, five hundred pounds weight of lead, value 3l. belonging to Robert Burt, clerk, then being fixed to a certain building, called a church, belonging to the said parish of West Drayton.

A Second Count, laying it to be the property of Matthew Batt and William Aldwin, the church-wardens of the said parish.

MATTHEW BATT sworn.

I know nothing of the matter, only I am church-warden, I was bound over to prosecute.

Who is the parson of your parish?—The Rev. Mr. Robert Burt.

What is he curate, or vicar, or rector?—He keeps a curate, it is a vicarage.

Who repairs the church?—The church-wardens.

RICHARD DIKE sworn.

I am clerk of the parish, on Sunday the 14th of November, I perceived part of the porch was stripped of two sheets of lead; I came down and acquainted the church-warden, and about the Wednesday or Thursday afterwards, we heard a man was taken with lead, I went and saw the lead that was taken, it was cut to pieces, it was at the sign of the Squirrel, in Wingfield Plain, eleven miles from our place.

How did you know it was the lead belonging to the church?——It was the same I have seen I suppose hundreds of times, and I have a piece which I found under the porch, and another piece where it was fastened to, that fits; I have swore to it.

Yes, but we must know why?—Because from the nature of the lead, and it fits so exactly the fastenings, these are what I found in Wingfield Plain; these two ends, one I picked up under the porch, and the other I took from the top of the porch, and they fit the nail holes of the lead which I found on Wingfield Plain.

(The lead handed to the Court.)

Court. It appears to me not to fit.

JOHN CHAPMAN sworn.

One Sunday, I got up on the church porch, waiting till the clerk came, and I made this mark, here is my name and the date of the year upon it, "I. C. 1778," this piece was on the church porch when I marked it.

Court. When was the church repaired last?——Not many years.

Dike. There are marks on this lead above a hundred years ago, it is repaired at the expence of the parish.

Court. You found this at a public house?—Yes, it was in sacks; we took them out of the sacks, and I fitted a great many, and them two ends fitted; and I remembered some young fellow had made a mark on the lead some time before, and I came home on the Friday night, and the next day I took John Chapman to the place.

WILLIAM STRIKE sworn.

On Sunday morning the 13th of November, to the best of my knowledge, I was told by a neighbour that there was two men going down a lane, called North-street, I pursued for near two miles, I stopped the prisoner, but the other made his escape; I stopped the horse and cart.

What was in the cart?——I did not examine, I pursued the other man, and left the prisoner with the horse and cart in charge of the people that came to me, and they brought him with the horse and cart, and I went to the Squirrel afterwards, and I saw the man with the horse and cart; I did not see the contents taken out of the cart.

HENRY COCK sworn.

On Saturday morning, the 13th of November, I went with this cart with three sacks, I felt the outside, and it felt like lead, a hatchet, a great coat, and a cloth, which was used for a tilt to the cart.

JOHN MILTON sworn.

I saw this cart and the sacks, I saw them opened, and took an inventory of them, there was lead about six hundred pounds weight; it was put into a constable's care, and locked in a room; he is obliged to be an evidence at Reading, and is not here; I had always the care of it, and the key of it, jointly with the constable, it was kept locked up till the parish officers saw it; it is the lead that was in the cart; it was the same that was taken out of the sacks.

Court to Strike. What time of the day did you stop the prisoner with this lead?——About eight o'clock.

Prisoner. When Mr. Chapman came to swear to his name, he denied it, and said he would not swear to it at first.

Chapman. I said they were such marks as I remembered making.

Did you remember these marks when you first saw the lead?——I supposed them to be the marks at the time, I do not swear to them now, I speak the truth to the best of my knowledge; I have no doubt about it; I said ſaid I did not know, but it might be poſſible for any other mark to be made, I remember perfectly making the marks.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

That man, when he was firſt examined, denied the thing, only being perſuaded he ſwore to it; I live at Uxbridge, I keep a horſe and cart, and let it out at different times; two men came and aſked me for a horſe and cart, my horſe was out at work, and I borrowed a horſe; I was to meet the man at Oakingham, going along I was detained by a gentleman that is here in Court, on ſome ſuſpicion; the other made his eſcape.

When was it loaded in your cart?—I do not know; I met a couple of men, who ſtopped the horſe and cart, they ſaid they ſhould not go after the gentleman, they had got me and that was ſufficient; I told them where I lived.

Court to Strike. When you firſt ſtopped this man, what did he ſay?——He ſaid his name was upon the cart, and pointed to it; it was wrote in the form of a heart, all ſingle letters; indeed the Magiſtrate when he ſaw it ſaid the devil could not read it; he pointed to it, ſays he, there is Richard Ilſley, when I was ſhewed how to read it, I could read it; he told me his name was Richard Ilſley, he ſaid there it is, it is eaſy enough to read.

Did he tell you what was in the cart?—No, nor I did not aſk him; I perceived the other man going on, and I left him in care of the people, and purſued the other.

Did this man attempt to eſcape at all?—No, I left him with this Cock that has been examined.

Court to Cock. When this man was left with you, what did he ſay?——I aſked him what trade he was and what he followed, he told me that he went about the country, and bought and ſold lead, and got his living by that; I ſaid to him, where did you buy this lead, or where are you going to ſell it; and he ſaid he was going to ſell it at Oakingham; I aſked him who the other man was; he ſaid the other man was nothing to him, then ſoon after he ſaid, the man was to him, and he was not to him.

Priſoner. How can you have the face to ſay that? I ſaid I was going to ſell the lead; you never aſked me; Mr. Strike and Mr. Milton behaved like gentlemen, I reſolved them every queſtion.

Court to Milton. What did he ſay to you?——I was not much in his company.

Priſoner. I am a countryman, I have nobody here but a wife and two poor children, that came to me in the priſon.

Court to Strike. Did you ever go after any of the others?——He was admitted by the Magiſtrate as evidence, and he told us of ſix or ſeven, the two men that cut the lead off the church, he told their names.

GUILTY.

Sentence reſpited till next Seſſions.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

247. PETER HOSIER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 5th day of January, twenty pounds weight of iron nails, value 2s. the property of Thomas Jackſon, Eſquire, and others.

And EDMUND HINDE was indicted for feloniouſly receiving the ſame, knowing them to be ſtolen.

WILLIAM DICKENSON ſworn.

I am one of the partners of the ſhip Hope, from Greenland.

ROBERT BATSON ſworn.

I perceived the priſoner, Hoſier, frequently went out of my premiſes loaded with iron, I am a ſhip-builder, ſhe is repairing upon my premiſes, and I ſaw the priſoner, Hoſier, coming out of the ſhip Hope, on the 5th of January, loaded; I called one of my foremen to take notice of it; we found a conſiderable quantity of nails, packed up in a compact manner for ſtowage, I immediately ſent ſent for the officers, I asked the priſoner where he generally ſold theſe nails, and he told me———

Mr. Silveſter, Council for Priſoner Hinde. Do not mention any perſon's name?——I came here to do my country juſtice, not out of rancour; our neighbourhood abounds with theſe people, and I know, that from four yards, we loſe at leaſt five thouſand a year, from Blackwall yard and three more in our neighbourhood; I recommended the boy all I could to let me know who it was that bought the things of them, and when the officers came, I told them to be aware that I did not give them charge of the priſoner, for the boy before they came had confeſſed where he ſold the goods from time to time; when the officers came, I thought it was better to put a private mark on the property, and permit him to purſue the ſame channel to ſell them as before; they were not my property; he was followed by two people to the ſhop, that is all I can ſwear to, to my own knowledge; I attended at the Magiſtrate's, and we had a ſearch-warrant in conſequence of my oath, I preſume I may ſay, and they brought ſome of the property back to me that was marked, and a conſiderable quantity of nails. I do not mean to ſay a ſingle word to aggravate, but we really are ſo over-run. I one night could have taken two thieves, but I could not get a man to help me. I took the property.

Court. I am ſorry for it, but I am afraid it will not do. You certainly acted very commendably in what you did: it is certainly a very bad thing there ſhould be ſo many people guilty of this practice of receiving ſtolen goods, but it can only be put a ſtop to by legal means; and I am afraid, in point of law, the receiver, who is the only perſon that is principally wanted to be come at in this caſe, cannot be come at. As to the boy, there is evidence enough, but I only mean to diſpoſe of the receiver: now this man muſt have been a receiver of ſtolen goods, knowing them to have been ſtolen, and I am afraid, in point of law, the theft in this caſe is purged, by the goods once coming into the hands of the right owner; the gentleman receives the goods, and he gives them to him back again; by that act of the owner he purged the felony, and the boy was ſent for the purpoſe of ſelling them to this man; therefore, I am afraid in point of law it will not be ſufficient with reſpect to the receiver: and I think, after what has happened, that they made uſe of the boy as an implement to bring the other man to juſtice, and he having acted faithfully, it would be too much to convict him.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice ASHURST.

---

248. JOHN HART was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 8th day of January, one linen cloth, value 1d. one rush baſket, value 2d. ſixteen pounds weight of mutton, value 6s. three pounds weight of cheeſe, value 15d. and four pounds weight of butter, value 2s. four ounces of tea, value 15d. two pounds of moiſt ſugar, value 10d. and one pound of loaf ſugar, value 8d. the property of John Collinſon.

ELIZABETH COLLINSON ſworn.

On Saturday night laſt, I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment, altogether to the value of twelve ſhillings; I live at Stratford, I delivered my parcel to the coachman in Whitechapel to take to Stratford, about three in the afternoon, and in about five minutes after, I was informed my baſket was taken out of the boot of the coach; I purſued after the perſon, and the coachman brought back the priſoner and the parcel, and he was committed; it was my parcel which the coachman took from the priſoner, the Juſtice gave me leave to make uſe of the goods, but bid me keep the baſket and the apron.

THOMAS MELLER ſworn.

I am the coachman, the priſoner took the the baſket out of the boot of my coach; I ſtood on the other ſide, I never took my eyes off him, till I took him with the baſket in his right hand, he dropped the baſket when I took hold of him, it was full then and very heavy.

(The baſket and cloth depoſed to.)

Priſoner. I had the baſket in my hand, but I did not take it out of the coach; I was coming along, I am a diſcharged ſerjeant, I follow porterage: and I ſtopped juſt by Gulſton-ſquare, and a man came up to me, and ſays he, will you carry a load for me; I ſtopped for a moment, and he came running with a baſket, and ſaid, walk along with me ſmartly; and they came and took me, ſays I, there is the man that gave it to me, and I pointed to the man.

Coachman. I ſaw him take it out of the boot.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice ASHURST.

---

249. JOSEPH JEFFS was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Peter Bond and Stephen Smith, about the hour of ſix in the night, on the 1ſt day of January, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein ſix yards of flowered cotton velveret, value 18s. their property.

PETER BOND ſworn.

I live in St. Martin's-le-grand, I am partner with Stephen Smith, my houſe was broke open on Saturday evening the 1ſt of January, between five and ſix, it was dark, I was ſitting in the back parlour adjoining to the ſhop; I heard the window break, and run immediately out of the parlour into the ſhop, and ſaw the goods going out of the window, I run from thence to the door.

Was that pane whole before?——Yes.

Was the ſhop door faſt?——No, it was on the latch, when I run to the door, I found it tied with a ſtring or cord, I gave a ſharp twitch and broke it, and run out and down the corner, I did not perceive any body there directly; I returned immediately to take the goods out of the window, and in a very ſhort time, the perſon that ſtands at the bar was brought in with the goods.

THOMAS DOWLEY ſworn.

I was in St. Martin's-le-grand, exactly oppoſite this gentleman's ſhop, and I heard a window break, and I run directly acroſs the way, and the priſoner had got a piece of velveret out of the window, he went up a narrow lane that is juſt by, called New-rents, I run after him, and finding me purſuing him, he threw the piece down, I immediately picked up a piece of ſtuff, and he turned ſhort again, and I caught him with the other hand, and took him into Mr. Bond's ſhop, with the velveret.

(The velveret produced and depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was coming by, and this gentleman laid hold of me, I knew no more of the affair than the child unborn.

Court to Proſecutor. What is the value of the velveret?——Eighteen ſhillings.

Jury to Dowley. Was he ever out of your ſight?——No.

The priſoner called one witneſs who gave him a very good character.

GUILTY. Death.

He was humbly recommended to mercy by the proſecutor.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice ASHURST.

---

250. SAMUEL DAVIS was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Robert Lowth,

Eſquire, on the King's highway, on the 14th day of December laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will, one watch with a gold enamelled caſe, and the outſide caſe made of baſe metal, value 10l. two cornelian ſeals ſet in gold, value 40s. one key value 1d. and one gold hook, value 4s. his property.

ROBERT LOWTH, Eſq; ſworn.

On the 14th of December, I was coming out of the play-houſe, going into the coach, I was ſurrounded by ſeveral men, and one of them took my watch, they joſtled me, they applied their elbows to my ribs; I purſued the priſoner to Covent Garden, and there I caught hold of him by the collar, and endeavouring to ſtrike him, I was kicked up by one of his comrades, who followed me out; at the theatre door I met Thomas Chiſwick, the centinel of the guard; I felt the watch go from me very forcibly, I never ſaw the priſoner's face.

Mr. James, Priſoner's Council. This was juſt when the play was over, Sir?—About half an hour after the play.

There were ſeveral perſons run?—Yes.

Could you obſerve whether there were not ſeveral perſons there before you came to the ſpot?——I was intercepted by thoſe men, there was no mob at all.

Were there not ſeveral perſons on that ſpot before that time?——There was no croud I am poſitive.

But there were ſeveral perſons?——Not ſo much as to hinder my going along.

But there were ſeveral people?—There might, but I did not obſerve.

Did you obſerve at what place the centinal was poſted?——I did not.

Did you obſerve there was a centinel?—I did, I went cloſe by him when I came out, but at the time I loſt my watch, I do not know where he was.

Did you ſee the watch go when it went from you?——No.

You ſaid juſt now, you was kicked by ſomebody who was his comrade?——They were the ſame people that ſurrounded me, they followed me out.

Court. Was the perſon that kicked you in company with the priſoner?—The men that came round me at the time, were the ſame men that followed me out, they were behind me all the way to Covent Garden; I ſuppoſe them to be the ſame from hearing them behind me, for no other reaſon.

THOMAS CHISWICK ſworn.

I was a centinel at the theatre on this night, I obſerved the priſoner and three more men, ſtanding on the outſide of the play-houſe door as the proſecutor came out, and two of the men got before the gentleman, and the priſoner and another man behind, and I ſaw the priſoner Davis puſh in upon the gentleman; I immediately after heard the gentleman hallo ſtop thief! I ſaw no more of the priſoner afterwards, I know no more than that.

Mr. James. I believe this is not the firſt time of your appearance in this Court?—I never appeared in this Court, or in any other Court in my life.

Why, was you never tried in this Court?——I never was tried in any Court for felony, nor never indicted in any Court in London, England, or abroad.

Sarah Crump called, and not appearing, her recognizance was ordered to be eſtreated.

JOHN SHERRAD ſworn.

Upon the 14th of December, the proſecutor gave information of his being robbed, I apprehended the priſoner along with Macmanus, and Morant, we went to his lodgings, and upon him we found ſome duplicates of a coat and hat.

Mr. James. I ſubmit to your Lordſhip there is no evidence againſt the priſoner.

Court. Why ſo.

Mr. James. Then I ſubmit there is no evidence to ſupport this indictment, this is an indictment for a highway robbery, and it is of the eſſence of that crime, that it muſt be done forcibly and violently, either an actual violent aſſault and taking of the property roperty, or else an open plain direct taking of the property; had this been an indictment for ſtealing privately from the perſon, it might have been relevant, but here is no proof of force, nor of open direct taking the property; but that there was an accident in a croud, where it was natural there ſhould be a paſſing.

Court. The queſtion is for the Jury to conſider, with what view he made that puſh at him, which Chiſwick ſwears to.

Priſoner. I am quite innocent.

The Jury retired for ſometime and returned with a verdict.

GUILTY Death.

He was humbly recommended to mercy by the Jury.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

---

251. SIMON SLOPER and MARGARET SLOPER were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 14th day of December laſt, one pair of leather boots, value 20s. the property of Robert Mairis and Nathaniel Phillips.

EDWARD WEBB ſworn.

I live in Hewit's-court, near St. Martin's-court, I keep a public houſe; the priſoners came in on Wedneſday, and called for ſome purl, and they had a pair of ſhoes and boots which they wiſhed to ſell, he called me by my name, knowing I was a ſhoemaker; the priſoner was offering them for ſale, and he deſired I ſhould be a judge of the value of them, and accordingly I looked in them, and ſaw M. and P. and being ſo many years a clicker, and maſter ſhoemaker, I was ſure they were a pair of ſale boots; he ſaid they coſt him eighteen ſhillings and ſixpence, and he would not ſell them under twenty-five ſhillings; ſeeing this mark, I ſaid, I could get him members enough to raffle for them, in order to detain him; and I went to Mr. Muggridge and Pitman, thinking it was their mark, I aſked them how their boots were marked, and I found they were Mr. Mairis and Philips's, in Lombard-ſtreet; I went from there and called in Great Turn-ſtile, on Mr. Mairis, and I went to Lombard-ſtreet, and we came back in a coach to my houſe; by this time the priſoners were gone, Mr. Phillips declared they were his cutting out, and his boots, and his writing, but they were not his ſtraps that were to them; they had left the boots in my bar, the priſoner ſaid he was acquainted with Mr. Strahan, No. 3, Charles-court, I went to Mr. Strahan, and aſked him if he had ſeen Mr. Sloper, when I found he had been there, but I could not find him; the next morning the man priſoner came to my houſe for a penny-worth of purl, I gave him in charge, but not without going out, under pretence to get change, in order to get ſome aſſiſtance; I ſent for Mr. Phillips and we went to Mr. Hyde; I have had the boots ever ſince, theſe are the very ſame boots that he left with me, to be raffled for.

Who is the woman priſoner?——I do not know.

NATHANIEL PHILLIPS ſworn.

I am partner with Robert Mairis, I know theſe boots perfectly well, they are my own cutting out and writing in them; the boots were not finiſhed when they were taken away, and theſe ſtraps are not our's; I miſſed them on Wedneſday the 15th of December laſt, all day, I made many enquiries; I do not know either of the priſoners; theſe are the boots that were miſſing, and that were not finiſhed.

SAMUEL WOOD ſworn.

The two priſoners came into Mr. Mairis and Phillips's ſhop to buy ſome ſhoes, on Tueſday the 14th of December, I ſerved them with a pair of ſhoes, which they paid for; I am perfectly ſure they are both the ſame people, I obſerved they had a particular look, which made me curious in looking at them, they ſtayed ten minutes in the ſhop, I did not miſs any thing then; I know nothing of either of the priſoners.

Court

Court to Phillips. Do you know either of the prisoners?—The man says his name is Sloper, and he is a relation to General Sloper.

Is the woman his wife?—I do not know.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I bought the boots of a man on Saturday night, the shoes that this gentleman speaks of, I bought on Monday following.

Who is the woman prisoner?—My wife.

The prisoner called three witnesses, who all gave him a good character.

SIMON SLOPER, GUILTY.

To be whipped, and confined six months in the House of Correction.

MARGARET SLOPER, NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

252. JAMES, otherwise WILLIAM BALDING, and THOMAS TILL, were indicted for feloniously breaking and entering the dwelling house of Elizabeth Marshall about the hour of one in the day, on the 1st day of January last, no person being therein, and feloniously stealing therein, one coat, value 4s. one waistcoat, value 2s. two shirts, value 2s. the property of Robert Graves; and one cotton gown, value 5s. the property of the said Elizabeth.

The witnesses examined apart at the request of the prisoners.

ELIZABETH MARSHALL sworn.

I live at Mile-end; my house was broke open the 1st of January, I went out between twelve and one in the day time, there was nobody at home, the windows and doors were all fast, the street door was upon the latch; I returned about one, and found the street door open; I met two chimney sweepers coming down the stairs, the inner door had been open, and the lock of the upstairs door broken; I asked them what business they had there; they were the prisoners; I am sure the street door was shut when I went out; I missed my gown the first thing, the next was the coat, and waistcoat, and two shirts; I then found I was robbed; I called out, stop thief, and I run after the prisoners as far as the Globe, and then I lost them.

ROBERT GRAVES sworn.

I lost a coat, and waistcoat, and two shirts: I left my things at this house.

WILLIAM BURRELL sworn.

I was walking in Stepney fields, and I heard the woman call stop thief; I saw the prisoner Balding drop these goods from off his shoulder, I pursued and took him, and as I brought him back, he took up the bag, and said the goods were his; I carried them from the place where he dropped them, to the Globe, at Mile-end, and there he heaved them out himself: I took the prisoner Balding, and he was committed.

HENRY HOMMESTON sworn.

I was at work at Stepney gravel-pits on the 1st of January, and I heard the cry of stop thief; I saw the two prisoners coming along, I ran after them, and caught one of them, which is Thomas Till; I took him back to the Globe, he came back, and the shortest took up the bundle with these things in it, which he had thrown away, and said that was his property, and then he went, and we told him to shoot the things out of the bag, and he did, and the prosecutrix owned the things.

JOHN MACQUIRE sworn.

I was coming from the Plough, at Mile-end, I saw the prisoner Balding coming out of the prosecutor's house, with a bag upon his shoulder; the other prisoner was with him, and they ran across the road to Bow-common-lane, this woman came out, and cried out stop thief, and I ran and several others others into the field; the priſoner Balding dropped the bag from his ſhoulder, and they both ran on further; the two young men came from the gravel-pits, and ſtopped them; and when Balding came back where the bag lay, he took it up and ſaid it was his property; we brought him to the Globe, and he ſhot out the things that are here.

(The gown depoſed to by Marſhall.)

What is the value of it?—Five ſhillings.

(The coat, waiſtcoat, and ſhirts depoſed to by Graves, and valued at eighteen ſhillings.)

MARY WOOLLETT ſworn.

I come to ſpeak for Till, I have known him from a child, he worked for my huſband, I am a ſoot dealer; he has been at ſeveral gentlemen's houſes, I never heard a bad character of him.

JAMES, otherwiſe WILLIAM BALDING, THOMAS TILL, } GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice ASHURST.

---

253. JOHN MILLS was indicted, for that he, on the 11th of March laſt, feloniouſly did ſteal and take from out of the General Poſt-office, one letter, directed to Meſſrs. Holmer and Co. at their ſteel-yard, Thames-ſtreet, London, the ſaid letter being in the ſaid Poſt-office then lately before; and ſent by John Child, from Neath, in the county of Glamorgan, by the poſt to the ſaid Poſt-office, to William Holmer, of Alhallows-lane, London, ironmonger, and there to wait to be delivered to the ſaid William Holmer, againſt the form of the ſtatute.

A Second Count, charging the offence in the ſame manner, only calling it a pacquet inſtead of a letter.

A Third Count, for that he feloniouſly did ſteal and take, from and out of a certain Poſt-office, one certain other letter, directed to William Holmer, in St. Thomas's ſtreet, London, ironmonger, againſt the ſtatute.

A Fourth Count the ſame as the third, only calling it a pacquet inſtead of a letter.

A Fifth and Seventh Counts, only varying the direction.

And a Sixth and Eighth Counts, calling it a pacquet inſtead of a letter.

Council for the Proſecution.

Mr. Attorney-General, Mr. Wilſon,
Mr. Solicitor-General, Mr. Silveſter.
Mr. Serjeant Walker, Mr. Fielding.

Council for the Priſoner.

Mr. Garrow and Mr. Parke.

The Indictment was opened by Mr. Fielding: and the Caſe by Mr. Solicitor-General, as follows.

Gentlemen of the Jury, you will be pleaſed to attend for a very few minutes, while I ſtate to you the nature of this offence which is imputed to the priſoner at the bar, and which it is now your duty to try: you muſt be well ſatisfied, from the indictment, that this is a caſe well worthy of your ſerious attention; becauſe, on the one hand, the intereſts of a commercial country are at ſtake, and on the other, the life of the priſoner. Gentlemen, it was ſome years ago found neceſſary, in order to protect the mercantile part of the country, to make it a capital offence to ſteal from the Poſt-office any letter or pacquet which came there by the poſt; the offence with which the priſoner ſtands charged, is that of having ſtolen a letter, and which letter happened to contain in it a ſhare of a lottery ticket, which was the principal medium whereby this letter was traced. It will be proved to you, that on the 8th of March laſt, a Mr. John Child, of Neath, in Glamorganſhire, wrote to his correſpondents Holmer and Co. and incloſed a half and a quarter of a lottery ticket; the half of the lottery ticket is not in queſtion at preſent, but the quarter is that by which this theft has been traced, which is ſuppoſed to have been committed by the priſoner at the bar: whether that ſuppoſition is juſt or not, is for you to determine. Gentlemen, the number of the ticket was 28152, of the lottery for the year 1783, ſubſcribed by Hazard, Burne and Co. of the Royal Exchange, importing that the bearer ſhould be intitled to ſuch a ſhare of that ticket, as ſhould belong thereto. Mr. Child having occaſion, as I have mentioned, to tranſmit thoſe parts of the ticket to Mr. Holmer, in London, he wrote a letter, and gave it to Martha Gibbon, his ſervant, and directed her to put it into the Poſt-office at Neath, where it will alſo be proved to you it was put in, and entered in the book of that day; the next ſtep is, to ſhew that this letter arrived in the uſual courſe, in a bag ſealed up, at the Poſt-office in London, on the 11th of March, accompanied, as uſual, with a bill, importing the amount of all the charged letters in that bag; and it will be a little material for you to advert to this circumſtance, that the whole of the letters for that day were four ſhillings, and that this being a triple letter made one ſhilling, and ſo it was found when it came to London, and this proves the bag came to London in the ſame condition it went from Neath. Mr. Child not having received any anſwer from his correſpondents, and conceiving this to be a matter of ſome conſequence, furniſhed them with a deſcription of what was contained in the letter; the conſequence was, they went to the lottery-office of Meſſrs. Hazard and Co. apprehending that perhaps this lottery ticket might be the means of tracing this matter, and they there found, that the half ticket had been paid, but the quarter had not. Gentlemen, on the 29th of November laſt, this quarter of a ticket was preſented to Hazard and Co. and a claim made for it, it having been drawn a prize of twenty pounds; Hazard and Co. having before been cautioned, demurred againſt the payment, and deſired the perſon who brought it, who will turn out afterwards, if my inſtructions are right, to be the priſoner at the bar, to come the next day: he went away complaining, as is uſual, that they did not pay him his money, but on the next day he did not come back. In the courſe of their converſation with him, they aſked him his name; his anſwer was, that his name was Clark, and he ſaid he had received it of a perſon of the name of Thomas Mills, of Southwold, in Cornwall. This information was not communicated to the Poſt-office as it ſhould have been, but Mr. Hazard's people mentioning it to Wroughton, who is the letter carrier of that diſtrict, on deſcribing the perſon, it occurred to Wroughton that it muſt be the priſoner who preſented this quarter of a ticket: and upon its being mentioned to the priſoner himſelf on Friday the 3d of December, the priſoner ſaid it could not poſſibly be him, for he had not been at Hazard's office for two years preceding; it was then recommended to him to go and ſtate that circumſtance to them; and it ought to be ſtated to you, for I am Council neither for one ſide or the other, but Council for the truth of the fact, it ought to be ſtated, I ſay, that the man did go, and Mr. Burne inſtantly recognized the priſoner's perſon, and inſiſted on it, that was the perſon that ſtiled himſelf Clark, and ſaid he had the quarter from a perſon of the name of Thomas Mills of Southwold in Cornwall: this matter then came to the ears of the Secretary and the Comptroller of the Poſt-office, and they ſent for the priſoner, the younger Mr. Burne, and Mr. Brooks, another partner; and they continuing in their aſſurances that the priſoner was the man, their attention became more attracted, and comparing every thing together, they had the priſoner at the bar apprehended, and it has been thought neceſſary to proſecute him. The manner in which this ſort of fraud is uſually committed is this; at the Poſt-office there are fourteen or fifteen departments, ſubordinate to which there are fifteen different letter-carriers; miſtakes being often made made in ſorting the letters, the letter-carriers go again to the reſorting, and that makes them ſo accurate as they are, you will eaſily ſuppoſe that a man very ſeldom or never ſecrets a letter within his own walk, becauſe the ſuſpicion would fall on himſelf, but letters paſs through his hands which are not in his department, and which he ought to lay aſide: in this ſituation the letters are, and you will ſee how eaſy it is for a man to get poſſeſſion of a triple letter, which catches the eye, and particularly the eye of a man accuſtomed to thoſe ſort of letters: Gentlemen, you will ſee how theſe circumſtances occur, you will underſtand that this letter was not in the priſoner's walk. Theſe are the outlines of the proof that we have to lay before you, if they are ſatisfactory, and prove to your minds, that the priſoner is the perſon that took this letter, you will do the public juſtice on the one hand, and find him guilty of this offence: but moſt certainly, on the other hand, it is infinitely better that the public ſhould ſuffer in ten thouſand inſtances, rather than any individual ſhould ſuffer in one inſtance, which is not fairly and juſtly proved upon him.

JOHN CHILD ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Wilſon.

I know Mr. Holmer, I correſponded with him; I ſent him a letter on the 8th of March laſt, and directed it to Mr. Holmer and Co. at their Steel-yard, Thames-ſtreet, London, to the beſt of my knowledge, for I have directed letters ſo to Mr. Holmer, and never found any of them miſcarry; Mr. Holmer and Co. at the Steel-yard in St. Thomas's-ſtreet, London, and at the Steel-yard, without St. Thomas's-ſtreet, then to the Borough, then my letters paſſed very well, then to St. Thomas's-ſtreet, and my letters paſſed very well; then Mr. Holmer adviſed me that he did not live in St. Thomas's-ſtreet, but in Thames-ſtreet: this letter contained half and a quarter of a lottery ticket, the quarter was No. 28152, the ticket was drawn a prize of twenty pounds, I ſent this incloſed in a letter directed to Mr. Holmer, it was of the lottery, 1783, it was a ſhare of Hazard and Co's. it was ſubſcribed Hazard and Co. to the beſt of my knowledge, I know it was.

Did you ſeal your letter?——I did.

What did you do with it then?—I delivered it to my ſervant girl, her name is Martha Gibbon, at my own houſe at Neath in Glamorganſhire, about eleven o'clock, to take to the Poſt-office, the poſt goes out ſometimes between twelve and one, and ſometimes later; I did not pay the poſtage of it, it was not franked, I never received any advice from Holmer and Co. that he had received it, and I wrote to him again; this is the number I ſent up, I cannot ſay whether this is the identical piece of paper.

Mr. Garrow, one of the Priſoner's Council. I take it for granted, you keep only the numbers of your tickets?—Nothing elſe.—

That was the only memorandum you made of it?—Yes.

Of courſe there were more than this one?——No doubt.

You have no other way of knowing, or of ſtating, that that is your's but this?——No, it is 28,152, a quarter ſhare of a twenty pound prize.

Was there any entry in the name of Hazard?——I have a book in the firſt place, in which when I bought them was entered, "Shares bought of Hazard." I know it was a quarter of a ſhare of twenty pounds.

Have you any memorandum made by yourſelf, and taken from the ſhare itſelf?—I know it from recollection only.

Your memorandum only goes to the number?—No more than the number, and that it was purchaſed of Hazard.

Now you ſpeak from recollection, your memorandum furniſhes you with the number and Hazard's name from recollection?——Yes.

You have no reaſon to believe that you directed it to the Steel-yard that day at this diſtance of time, inſtead of any other of the various ways in which you directed to Holmer and Co.?—No, really, Sir, I have not, it was either St. Thomas's-ſtreet, or Thames-ſtreet, I cannot ſay which it was.

Mr.

Mr. Wilſon. Did you make more than one memorandum, or only one?—Only one.

That is what you have ſtated, containing the number of a quarter ſhare?——Yes.

MARTHA GIBBON ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Serjeant Walker.

I live in Neath, I am ſervant to one Mr. Thompſon, but laſt June I lived with Mr. Child; I received a letter from him, and carried it to the Poſt-office; I cannot tell the time of the day I received it, but I think it was ten o'clock, I am ſure I carried it to the Poſt-office, I delivered it to the hands of Miſs Sterry, now Mrs. Thomas.

What is her buſineſs there?—She is under the poſt-maſter there, I believe.

Mr. Parke. What day in March was this?—The 8th day of March.

How do you know?——Becauſe I was brought to account ſoon after, as my maſter did not receive an anſwer.

Have not you been accuſtomed to receive letters frequently from your maſter?——I have.

Can you read Engliſh?—Yes, Sir, I can, but I did not read the directions.

Then how do you know they were directed to thoſe people?—Becauſe I heard my maſter ſay ſo.

That is no evidence at all.

ELIZABETH THOMAS ſworn.

My maiden name was Sterry, I am aſſiſtant to the poſt-maſter of Neath, I perfectly well remember receiving a letter from that young woman on the 8th of March, I put it into the box at the hour of one, and ſent it off, there is a letter bill, and the letter was charged, but I cannot recollect what it was charged; this is my writing, that letter bill accompanies all the letters in the London bag.

Mr. Garrow. What is the poſtage of a ſingle letter from Neath to London?——It was then four pence.

It does not appear from your letter bill, how many double, how many treble, and how many ſingle?—No.

It cannot be traced?—No.

Have you been long in the department of the aſſiſtant of the poſt-maſter?——Some years; we frequently make miſtakes, we put ſome double that ought to be treble, and ſome treble that ought to be double.

Do you mean to ſtate that as a matter clearly within your recollection, that on the 8th of March you received a letter from this young woman?—Yes, I received two, one for London, and the other for Cornwall.

How many letters do you think you might have received in the courſe of that week from different perſons?—I cannot recollect.

In the courſe of a month?—A great many; that was on a Monday the 8th of March.

Did you receive a letter from her on the Wedneſday?——Not that I recollect.

Did you or not?——I do not recollect that.

Did you receive a letter from her on the Friday preceding it?—I do not know.

Any other day in the courſe of that week?——I do not know.

But theſe two letters you recollect; do you recollect no other letters on other days?—Yes.

What is there ſo ſingular in this, Mrs. Gibbon, that ſhould induce you to remember her?——I very ſeldom take the letters at the door, becauſe I very ſeldom go to the door, I happened that day to take the letters from this girl, and Mr. Child came ſoon after, and aſked me if I remembered it.

The remainder of this Trial in the next Part which will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 12th of JANUARY 1785, and the following Days;

Being the SECOND SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER II. PART IV.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

MDCCLXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of John Mills.

THOMAS HEARD ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Fielding.

I am in the inland office, I was there when the bag from Neath arrived after the 8th of March; on the 11th, I cannot tell the exact time I opened the Neath bag, it came ſealed and tied, according to the common courſe of buſineſs; the letters it contained were anſwerable to the bill, this bill was in the bag, which is called the letter bill.

Did the letters correſpond with that bill?——They did, the number of letters correſponded, and the charge was proper, to the beſt of my judgment, or I ſhould have made a memorandum on the bill; theſe letters are put down by the ſide of me, and a meſſenger takes them to the ſtamper, and they are taken and ſorted.

Mr. Garrow. I dare ſay you, like others, ſometimes make a miſtake?——I may, probably, ſometimes.

Does not it happen to you ſometimes to miſcharge letters?——If I make a miſtake it is probably in over-charging.

But we who receive letters can tell you it happens the other way, they are not always over-charged; is not it a practice in the office to have ſomething like a rivalſhip in charging letters?—There are ſuch things done.

That proves to a demonſtration, that now and then there are miſtakes made?—No doubt of it.

After you have looked over the letters, they are taken away by ſome other perſon?——Yes, by the meſſengers or ſtampers.

How many perſons have acceſs to them, and may, if they chooſe it, look at them?——We are all publickly at the table.

So that ſeveral perſons, if they chooſe it, may reſort to the letters as they lay on the table?——It is very uncommon.

Then they may ſecret a letter?——I do not think they could.

You mean not unobſerved?——I think it is impoſſible.

How many perſons are there who might, without ſuſpicion, come and ſtand there?—It is very uncuſtomary for people to ſtand together at the Poſt-office, they are never ſuffered to do that, the Comptroller never ſuffers three or four to ſtand together.

No, but he ſuffers any number to come by turns to the place where you ſit?—

They

They may come and ſpeak to me no doubt.

How long have you known the priſoner?—Ever ſince I have been in the Poſt-office.

Was he on the 11th of March employed in the Poſt-office?—I do not know.

What has been his general character?—I always heard he bore a good character.

WILLIAM HOLMER ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Wilſon.

Where do you live?——In Alhallows-lane, Thames-ſtreet.

How long have you lived there?—About five years.

Where did you live in the Borough?—High-ſtreet.

Did you receive from Mr. Child any letter in March laſt, containing two ſhares of lottery tickets?——No, Sir, I did not.

Did you afterwards receive an account of ſuch a letter having been ſent?——Yes.

Did you do any thing in conſequence of that?——I went directly to Mr. Hazard's, and told them the number, and ſtopped payment; I am not ſure whether I went myſelf or ſent my clerk, but one of them was not paid, one was; I went to Mr. Hazard's about the firſt of April.

Mr. Parke. Mr. Child is a correſpondent of your's, I think?——Yes.

You have frequently received letters from him?——Yes.

Were they always directed to your houſe in Thames-ſtreet?—No.

They have been directed in various ways?—Yes.

Do you know your letter-carrier that brings letters to your houſe?—I believe he is in court; there have been ſeveral in that diſtance of time.

Did you ever ſee the priſoner?—Never but once, that was at the publick office.

Who takes in letters for you at your houſe?—They are brought into the compting-houſe, my clerk takes them in, but never opens them without my order; I have a partner now, I had not then.

Your houſe was a firm?—It was Holmer and Co. I had a partner in the Borough.

They did not direct to your houſe in Thames-ſtreet, to Holmer and Co.?——Many people did; I had no partner at that time.

CHARLES POINTER ſworn.

Examined by Serjeant Walker.

I belong to the Poſt-office, I know the priſoner, I am one of the letter-carriers, the priſoner was a letter-carrier on the 11th of March laſt, I am ſure of that, I have been in the office near fourteen years, I have known him all the time he has been in the office.

What walk had he?—Holborn-hill and Hatton-ſtreet.

Not Thames-ſtreet nor the Borough?—No.

Mr. Garrow. But you are ſure he was employed in the Poſt-office on the 11th of March?—Yes.

What has been his general character during that time?—Always a very good character, I have known him almoſt fourteen years, an extraordinary character. I was in the country at the time that he left the office.

SAMUEL POTTS, Eſq; ſworn.

I am Comptroller of the inland department in the Poſt-office.

Have the different letter-carriers acceſs to the rooms?—They are conſtantly coming in to the inland office to receive ſuch letters as are ſorted to the different ſeats.

Deſcribe the proceſs that is uſed in ſorting the letters?—The letters for this town are divided into fifteen diviſions, the gentlemen who are appointed ſorters, ſort the letters to each of theſe diviſions, and to the beſt of their judgment they ſort the letters to the particular walks that appertain to thoſe ſeats, but it frequently happens, either through through want of knowledge of the ſtreet, or knowledge of the buſineſs, that they ſort a letter that ſhould be for one ſtreet into the other, and when that is done, it of courſe goes in common with other letters to the letter-carrier's office, there they find the miſtake, and they are ſubdivided again to their different quarters, and if there are any miſ-ſorted letters, they rectify the miſtake among themſelves, and deliver it over to the letter-carrier who ſhould have care of that letter; the priſoner was in the Poſt-office, he was one of the letter-carriers at what we call Murrell's ſeat, and had the charge of courſe to ſort the letters, when they get into the letter-carriers office, for the different diviſions of letters in that ſeat.

Mr. Parke. I think you ſay, Sir, ſometimes the letters are ſorted wrong?—Very frequently.

You cannot ſay that it would have fallen to this man's lot to ſort this letter and ſend it to Thames-ſtreet?——It is impoſſible for me to ſay that it fell into this man's hands, in the nature of things it may have come into this man's hands.

How many letter-carriers are there?—I cannot tell.

You have known this man ſome time?——Ever ſince he has been in the office, thirteen or fourteen years, and till this unhappy affair happened, he had an exceeding good character, and I had always eſteemed him as a very honeſt, upright man.

Do you know any thing that happened after this tranſaction, that the priſoner was ſuperanuated?—He was, he received eleven ſhillings a week in conſequence of an affair that happened prior to this.

Mr. Silveſter. At this time he had acceſs to the office?—Yes.

And it might come into this man's hands?—Yes.

Mr. Garrow. In common with how many more?——Sixty or ſeventy.

To all of whom this letter might as well have come as to him?—Yes.

THOMAS HANCOCK ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Fielding.

I am a letter-carrier in Thames-ſtreet, I received the letters from the Poſt-office on that day, as I believe.

Can you ſay that all the letters you received from the Poſt-office on that day were delivered according to their directions?——Myſelf I was on duty they were, but I cannot be ſure that I was upon duty; it does not happen once in ſeveral months that I am not on duty, but I cannot particularly ſay I was on my duty on that day, but I think I was: there is a book in which there are ſome figures of my making that day.

What do they import?——They were charges from Murrell's ſeat to us, they import, that I was preſent at the office that day, and if ſo, I can ſay all the letters were delivered according to their directions on that day, to the beſt of my judgment.

Mr. Garrow. Then it appears from your entry, that on that day there were letters to the poſtage of eight-pence handed over from Murrell's ſeat to your's?—Yes.——

There are five perſons, theſe charges might have fell into the hands of theſe five?—They muſt by the regular courſe of buſineſs come into my hands.

You ſay, to the beſt of your judgment, you delivered all the letters that were delivered to you?—Yes.

How long have you known the priſoner?——I have known the priſoner about five years; his general character has been exceeding good.

THOMAS BURNE ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Solicitor-General.

I am clerk to Meſſrs. Hazard and Co. at the Royal Exchange.

When did you firſt ſee the priſoner?—On Monday the 29th of November, 1784, between five and ſix in the evening, I ſaw him in the office, he brought the quarter of a lottery ticket, No. 28,152, for payment.

Did

Did you pay it?——No.

What was your reaſon?——There was a mark put againſt it in the book which I examined it in, the mark was, "Stolen, apply to Meſſrs. Holmer and Co. Steel-yard, Thames-ſtreet." I refuſed to pay it on account of that mark; I aſked the priſoner how he came by that quarter, he ſaid he received it of Thomas Mills, of Southwold, in the county of Cornwall, and that his name was Clark.

Did any thing paſs between you?—I told him I could not poſſibly pay it then; he ſaid it was very hard and very cruel that we would not pay it when it was preſented; I deſired him to call the next day, I kept the ſhare in the office, I ſhould know it again; this is it, here is written, Thomas Mills, Southwold, Cornwall, at the time he was in the office, in my own writing; I ſaw the priſoner on the Friday following, he came into our office with one Mr. Wroughton, one of the letter-carriers, to clear himſelf, and ſaid he had not been in our office for two years; I went over to the Poſt-office, and told the gentlemen of the Poſt-office that was the perſon.

Court. Was you poſitive then, or did you ſay you believed ſo?——Yes, I ſaid poſitively that is the man.

Take great care to the anſwer you make to this queſtion; are you poſitively ſure the priſoner was the man that came to you and offered that ſhare of a ticket to you for payment?—I am poſitive of it.

How many ſhares was this particular ticket divided into?——One half and two quarters.

Mr. Garrow. How long have you been in the office?—Upwards of ſix years.

How many perſons were in the office at this time?—Upon my word I cannot tell, the office was pretty full, ten or a dozen people.

All of them tranſacting buſineſs relative to the lottery, and moſt, if not all, ſtrangers: now do you recollect the tranſactions about which all of them, or any of them came?——No, Sir, I cannot.

Who is the perſon you have ſince adverti ſed for?——I do not know.

Have you been able to find him?——I have not, he has been adverti ſed a very many days without ſucceſs.

Did you tell the perſon who brought the ſhare the reaſon why you could not pay it?——I told him there was a ſtop. He might be in the office about ten minutes.

Did you know him before?——No.

You ſaw no more of him from the Monday to the Friday, and then he came voluntarily to you?——He did, he told us that Mr. Wroughton knew his place of abode, and that he might be found when he was wanted; there were four or five perſons belonging to the office at the time, two of them are here.

I believe the priſoner was not apprehended till the 6th?——I cannot ſay.

Do not you know for three days after that Friday, he was ſtill at large?——I do not recollect.

Will you fix, as preciſely as you can, the time of the evening when the perſon you ſuppoſe to be the priſoner, came in?——It was half paſt five, as near as I can recollect.

Have you always ſaid ſo?—I have always ſaid, between five and ſix.

The payment of this note has been ſtopped upwards of eight months?—From the 1ſt of April, when Mr. Holmer firſt gave information.

How many hands it might have paſſed through, you can as little judge as the Jury?——It is impoſſible.

SAMUEL BROOKE ſworn.

I am a clerk in Mr. Hazard's office, and was at that time; I recollect the priſoner perfectly, I firſt ſaw him on the 29th of November, between five and ſix in the evening, when he preſented a quarter of a ticket for payment; there was wrote againſt it, "Stolen, apply to Meſſrs. Holmer and Co. Steel-yard, Thames-ſtreet." He preſented this ſhare for payment, and it was ſtopped; he was desired to call again on the morrow; he did not call.

Did you ask him how he came by it?——No, I did not attend to that part of it, I was busy elsewhere.

You know the life of the prisoner is at stake, be very certain to what you say.——I am perfectly clear with respect to his person, I saw him on the Friday, he came with Mr. Wroughton to Mr. Hazard's office, to clear himself; he said he not been in the office for two years.

At that time when he came and said that, did you entertain any doubt whether he was the person that had been there on the Monday before?——Not the least, I told him at that time I was sure he was the person.

Mr. Parke. How long have you been a clerk in this office?—During the drawing of the lottery.

You see a great many faces then?——A great number, there were a great many in then.

What time was it?—Between five and six, as near as I can recollect, it was about half an hour past five, I have always said the same.

You say in your book there was a mark, stolen?—Yes.

When this man came in and claimed the prize this ticket was intitled to, you did not stop him nor apprehend him, although the word stolen was written opposite to that number?—No.

Did you give any information?—No.

Nor send for a constable?—No, he went away, we did nothing further in it till the prisoner voluntarily applied to the office, and said he was not the man; we told the man that brings our letters about it, and from our description he judged it was the prisoner.

You had no doubt when this man came to the office on Friday?—None at all with regard to his person.

You had heard from Mr. Wroughton that he believed it to be Mr. Mills?——There was something said, from the description he believed he knew him.

When the prisoner came to the office, what passed?—I left him in the office, I did not see him after.

Was it candle-light on the Monday?—Yes, it is candle-light all day with us.

JOSEPH CALDER sworn.

I know the prisoner perfectly well by sight, seeing him there, no otherwise, I first saw him there the 29th of November, at Mr. Hazard's office; I am sure he is the same man, perfectly so; he presented a quarter of a share of a twenty pound prize for payment.

Did he receive the money?——No; I know he is the man, I am sure he is the man; I took particular notice of him from a circumstance, from his having a blemish on his right eye; I described him so to Mr. Wroughton, I am sure he is the same man, perfectly so.

Mr. Garrow. Did it not occur to some of you, that it was your duty to stop this man?—I do not know, it is very difficult to stop a man we have no reason to suspect; we knew it had been stolen, I did not then suppose we had a right to stop the person; we stopped the thing; I did not see him on the Friday, nor ever since till now in Court: I will shew you the entry, it is simply, stolen; I wrote a note the next morning to Mr. Holmer, which note I have in my pocket.

WILLIAM COOPER sworn.

Did you purchase a quarter of a ticket at Hazard's?——I did, it was 28,152, sometime in September, it was in my possession till I received the money of Mr. Hazard.

Mr. Burne. Here is the half and quarter of that ticket, and the half of another ticket; this half and the two quarters make up the whole ticket.

Prisoner. I leave my case to my Council.

Court. You must be apprised, that your Council cannot make any speech for you, therefore, if you wish to speak, now is your time.

Prisoner.

Prisoner. I can only say that I know nothing at all of the transaction.

JOHN LISSIN sworn.

I was present at the time when it was intimated to the prisoner, that there was a suspicion that he had been at Hazard's, I informed him of the report I had heard, I recommended him to go to Mr. Bourne and clear his character, he said he would, very readily; he went directly, and desired me to go Mr. Wroughton, and beg Mr. Wroughton to go with him; Mr. Wroughton is a letter-carrier in the district of Mr. Hazard's office, he was at large afterwards and not apprehended, he was at his own house; he persisted in denying the charge.

—— WROUGHTON sworn.

I went with the prisoner to Mr. Hazard's, he was very desirous to go, and assured me he was innocent before he went, and upon the way, and there; he went there for the purpose of shewing himself, and that he was not the person they had said he was, and I left him there; I saw him at large afterwards, he came to the office on the Saturday, on Monday he was sent for to the office.

He was not then under the custody of any constable?——No.

Mr. Attorney General. Inform the Court how you came not to give information immediately when the people at Hazard's first informed you of the kind of person that brought this lottery ticket, and you suspected it to be the prisoner?—I did not suspect the man, I only said that the account they gave was something like the prisoner.

Why did not you give information to the Post-office of what had happened?—That same day I told several persons belonging to to the Office, that such a report had been made; the prisoner was not an officer at the Post-office at that time; I communicated it to several of the letter-carriers.

Not to Mr. Todd, or any of the principal officers?——No.

ISAAC BEARD sworn.

On Monday after this story, the Comptroller and Secretary sent for me, the prisoner was in the room, I heard no conversation there at all; I took charge of the prisoner, he went quietly with me, I had no warrant, nor any other order, but only the order of the Comptroller; he staid very quietly all night, he went to bed between ten and eleven; the next day we went up to Sir Sampson Wright's, he walked along with me; I asked him if he would have a coach, he said no, he was clear of any thing.

The prisoner called eight witnesses, who gave him an exceeding good character, one of whom was a West India merchant, and another gentleman to whom the prisoner had brought letters, inclosing bills of exchange and bank notes, all of which came very safe.

Court to Child. Do you know such a place as Southwold in Cornwall?—No, I do not know any place in Cornwall.

You sent another letter at the same time into Cornwall?—Yes.

Did that letter go safe?——Yes, I had an answer to it.

GUILTY, Death.

He was humbly recommended to mercy by the Jury.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Justice HEATH.

---

254. ANN JONES was indicted, for that she, on the 22d of November last, feloniously did utter and expose to sale, to one Richard Glover, one hundred and fifty pieces of paper, with a counterfeit impression thereon, in the similitude of a two-penny stamp, well knowing them to be counterfeited, with an intent to defraud the King.

A Second Count, for feloniously uttering, vending, and selling the same, with the like intention.

A Third

A Third Count, for uttering and expoſing to ſale to the ſaid Richard Glover, one hundred and fifty other pieces of paper, with a counterfeit impreſſion of a certain other ſtamp, which had been duly provided in purſuance of the Act of Parliament, knowing them to be counterfeited, with intent to defraud the King.

A Fourth Count, with the ſame difference between the firſt and ſecond.

The indictment was opened by Mr. Silveſter; and the caſe by Mr. Wilſon.

——— BRETTLE ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Silveſter.

I am Secretary to the Stamp-office, here are the names of the Commiſſioners, James Bradſhaw, William Bailey, William Waller, Richard Tickell, and John Bindley.

Was there any order made for providing a ſtamp?——I believe there was, this is an order to Mr. Major the engraver, dated the 21ſt of June, 1783, ſigned J. Bindley, R. Tickell, W. Bailey.

(Read.)

——— MAJOR ſworn.

I received this order from the Stamp-office, in purſuance of that order I provided a ſtamp, letter G, with the other letters that follow; G is the ſtamp now in queſtion.

GEORGE HARRIS ſworn.

I am Superviſor of the ſtamps, this is the ſtamp that has been uſed by the Commiſſioners, from the time that this impreſſion was made it has been in uſe, which was the 8th of July, 1783.

RICHARD GLOVER ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Wilſon.

Do you know the priſoner?——Yes.

How long have you known her?——She has been at our houſe backwards and forwards this three or four months.

What are you?—I am a cheeſemonger.

Where do you live?——In Red-lion-ſtreet, Clerkenwell.

Have you ever had any dealings with her?—No otherwiſe than ſhe often bought from me ſome butter and cheeſe, and about the 22d of November laſt, as near as I can gueſs, I bought ſome ſtamps of her, ſhe brought them to my houſe, I never had any converſation about them before.

Tell us as particularly as you can remember, what paſſed?—She brought them, and ſaid ſhe found them on Tower-hill.

Do you know what number of them there were?——There were about two hundred.

What did you do?——She aſked me to buy them, I told her they were of no uſe to me, ſhe pleaded poverty very much, and ſaid ſhe was in great diſtreſs, and aſked me to give her ſomething for them; I aſked her what ſhe aſked for them, ſhe told me ſixteen ſhillings or half a guinea, or any thing that I would give her, as ſhe was in great diſtreſs; I did not give her any thing for them then, they were left at my houſe for a day or two, and I called on Mr. Thompſon on the Wedneſday following, and aſked him if he did not ſell ſtamps, he told me yes; I told him that a poor woman had found ſome on Tower-hill, and had left them with me, and I had them to diſpoſe of, he ſaid he would buy them, if they were not forged and were good; I told him I knew nothing to the contrary, but the woman brought them to me, and I took them to him, and he examined them, and thought them to be good, and he ſaid he would give me one pound ten ſhillings for them; I left them with him, and he told me to call again in half an hour, as he was buſy then, and he would pay me; I called again in about three hours, and he was not at home, I called the next day and he paid me one pound nine ſhillings for them; he ſaid after examining them one pound nine ſhillings was as much as he could give for them; I took the money, the woman called and I gave her ſixteen ſhillings for them, I never ſaw her after till I was taken.

Was you ever queſtioned about this afterwards?——No.

Was

Was you never taken up about it?—— Yes, I was taken up, and taken to Wood-ſtreet Compter.

Who came to you and took you up?—— Mr. Parrott was the officer, my wife went to this woman to her lodgings, I told the officers who took me in cuſtody, from whom I had them.

JAMES THOMPSON ſworn.

Where do you live?——At Smithfield-bars, I received ſome ſtamps from the laſt witneſs Richard Glover, about two hundred, I paid him twenty-nine ſhillings, ſome of them are ſold, the others were taken by a warrant from my houſe.

THOMAS PARROTT ſworn.

I am one of the marſhal-men of the city of London, I had a warrant granted by the Lord Mayor; Seabrook and I went to the houſe of Mr. Thompſon, we ſearched the houſe, and finding theſe ſtamps which are ſealed up in this paper, I took Mr. Thompſon into cuſtody, and carried him to Wood-ſtreet Compter, theſe are the ſtamps, one hundred and fifty-three, they have been ſealed up ever ſince; upon the information of Mr. Thompſon's wife, we went to Clerkenwell, and took up Mr. Glover, and brought him to Mr. Thompſon's houſe.

Did Thompſon, when he was taken up, charge Glover with any thing?—He did, he ſaid he had them of Mr. Glover, while they went to find the priſoner, then we took Glover and the woman at the bar to the Compter together; then we went away, and about half after ſeven in the evening, Mr. Seabrook and me went to Wood-ſtreet Compter, and aſked the priſoner for the key of her room, we ſearched her and could not find no key; we went afterwards and broke the door open, Seabrook with a ſtick puſhed the ſtraw on which the woman lay about, and found three or four parcels of theſe ſtamps amongſt the ſtraw; and Mr. Seabrook found this engine, and cloſe by it a fly; and out of that ſame room, there was a door that went into the cellar, which was concealed by a grate, and there we found this preſs, with this ſcrew, and a fly; this was found in the cellar, which was dug out of the ſolid ground. Here is a model of the preſs. Looking about we found more ſtamps where the ſtraw was.

THOMAS SEABROOK ſworn.

I am a meſſenger to the Stamp-office; on the 2d of December, the Commiſſioners of the Stamp-office received information that Thompſon ſold counterfeit ſtamps, and they ſent me to buy ſome, with Mr. Major the engraver, and Mr. Robinſon; I aſked for three two-penny, and two four-penny ſtamps, he had only one four-penny, I took that and the three two-penny, theſe are the ſtamps; the engraver inſpected them and found the two-penny ſtamps to be counterfeited, I and the officer went to Thompſon's, we found him at home, Parrott immediately took him priſoner; afterwards we ſearched the book which his ſervant gave me thoſe ſtamps out of, we found two in the book, we begged if he had any more he would deliver them up to us, and ſave us the trouble of ſearching the houſe; he ſerched out of the bureau in a little room adjoining the ſhop, about a hundred and fifty two-penny ſtamps, which were found to be counterfeits; afterwards the conſtable took him to Wood-ſtreet Compter; I told him if he could tell who he had them from, it would free him from any harm; he ſaid his apprentice ſhould go and ſhew us where Glover lived, who was the perſon he bought them of; we ſearched and could find nothing more, when Parrott the conſtable returned from Wood-ſtreet Compter, we went immediately after Glover, with his apprentice, we found him at home in Red-lion-ſtreet, Clerkenwell; we took him to Mr. Thompſon's, and after he came there, he ſaid, he thought he could inform us where the perſon lived, that he bought them of; I aſked him if he knew her name, and he ſaid he did not, ſhe told him at the time of buying them, that ſhe lived in White-horſe-alley, Clerkenwell; at the ſame time Mr. Glover's wife came in, and ſhe ſaid ſhe would go with me all night, but ſhe would find the perſon that her huſband bought them of; we went to this White-horſe-alley, and enquired for a perſon that ſcoured ſauce-pans, that was the way Mrs. Glover ſaid, ſhe thought ſhe might find her, and a woman ſaid, ſhe thought ſhe had been gone from there ſome days, but a little girl came and ſaid, I will go and ſhew you where the perſon lives, it is the perſon that ſells ſtamps; we went with the child to the place where ſhe lodged, and going up ſtairs the people informed us, ſhe was gone away from there, I told Mrs. Glover to go into the ground-floor, and enquire of the landlord, whether the perſon was gone from there, and where ſhe was gone to, and if ſhe ſaw the priſoner, to ſay that was the perſon, and I would take her; On opening the door, the priſoner ſet facing the door ſuckling a child, and making ſome ſilk laces; I told her ſhe muſt go with me, Mrs. Glover told me ſhe was the perſon, the priſoner aſked me for what, I told her for ſelling the ſtamps that were counterfeits; ſhe ſaid ſhe knew nothing of it, when I brought her out I made her lock the door, and put the key in her pocket; and we brought her to Mr. Thompſon's ſhop, in St. John's-ſtreet, to Mr. Glover, and they were both taken to Wood-ſtreet Compter; then I went to the Temple to Mr. Robinſon's chambers, and told him the whole affair, and that I had reaſon to ſuſpect by what I ſaw in the room, there was ſomething in the room that ſhould not be there; I went back with the conſtable, we went firſt to the priſoner for the key, but ſhe denied having it; we then went back to the room, and found the door locked, but the key was not in the place where the priſoner ſaid ſhe had put it; we broke the door open and ſearched about, there was a great cheſt of tools, but no ſtamps, but among ſome ſtraw which was the priſoner's bed, I found ſeveral parcels in brown paper, which are what I gave to Parrott; after that I looked under the foot of the bed, and there I found the iron engine; in ſearching under the dreſſer and in the cloſets, I found a number of ſtamps wrapped up in a petticoat, I gave the whole to the conſtable; afterwards we moved a grate from a trap door, that was in the room where there was a cellar, a coal hole kind of a place, and on moving ſome hampers, under thoſe hampers I found that model of the engine; we brought the things to the Manſion-houſe the next day; I went with Mr. Clarke one of Sir Sampſon Wright's men, for him to inſpect the tools, and we found ſeveral engraving inſtruments in the cheſt; and in ſearching that ſcrew tumbled down the chimney, and had like to have tumbled on my head, the other we found in one corner of the room; the ſcrews are made for a larger engine, after the pattern of the model, it had nothing to do with the buſineſs of ſtamping only with the model; the priſoner was committed to Newgate.

Court to Parrott. Which were the ſtamps found in Mr. Thompſon's houſe?—There are one hundred and fifty-three, I told them myſelf.

Court to Major. Look at theſe ſtamps?—They are all counterfeit ſtamps, I have examined them before.

Court to Parrott. Are theſe what you found in the priſoner's room?——Yes.

Mr. Major. The others are all from the ſame die.

(Shewn to the Jury.)

(The real ſtamp ſhewn to the Jury.

Priſoner. I have nothing to ſay any more than that I found them.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice ASHURST.

---

255. WILLIAM HURT was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting John Walker on the King's highway, on the 7th of January, in the pariſh of Edmonton, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and and againſt his will, one watch in a metal caſe, value 20s. and one guinea, value 1l. 1s. and two ſhillings in monies numbered, his property.

And WILLIAM KENTON was indicted, for that he, on the 7th of January feloniouſly and malicioufly did incite, move, procure, aid, aber, council, hire, and command the ſaid William Hurt, to do and commit the ſaid felony.

JOHN ACKSIN ſworn.

I am coachman to Mr. Walker, that is the man that robbed Mr. Walker's coach, I know the man, I ſaw him, I drove the coach, I am coachman to Mr. Walker; I was juſt going into Southgate laſt Friday, about half after three; and in the road to Southgate leading into Edmonton, between Southgate and Edmonton, he preſented a piſtol to me, and bid me ſtop.

Who did?—The priſoner Hurt, there was another man with him on horſe-back, they met me, I did not ſtop the firſt time, the ſecond time he came to my horſes heads again, and ſaid if I did not ſtop he would blow my brains out; he met me coming down, and he turned about and threatened me again, and then I ſtopped; he preſented a piſtol into the coach on the left hand ſide, and ſaid he would blow the lady's brains out, if ſhe did not give the watch and the purſe.

Who were in the coach?——Mrs. Walker, and Mr. Walker, young Mr. Walker, and Mr. Colliſon, I ſaw two watches taken out, and two purſes, I ſaw my miſtreſs give him her watch and purſe, I was upon the ſaddle riding poſtillion; next my young maſter gave a purſe and a watch out, he put the watches and purſes in his pocket, he went down the hill, and I went up the hill; the other man was down with my fellow ſervant the footman, he ordered him to get down or he would blow his brains out, and he ſtood by my fellow ſervant all the time, I ſaw them both go from the coach together; the priſoner Hurt was one of the men, I ſaw him at the Bull at Tottenham, about an hour and half after.

How were they dreſſed when they robbed you?—He had a lightiſh brown great coat.

What ſort of a hat?——A round hat.

Over his face?——Not much over his face, he had a handkerchief over the lower part of his face up to his noſe.

Did you take notice of him, to know him with certainty again?——Yes.

Are you ſure this is the man?——I am ſure he is the man.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. Coachman, be ſo good as to take this along with you, that in all that I am aſking you, you muſt ſtate what you know of your own knowledge and obſervation, and not what other people have told you; how long were the people that you ſuppoſe robbed your maſter and miſtreſs, with the carriage?—Not three minutes.

Were there three perſons or two?——Two only.

Were they both diſguiſed?—Yes.

What ſort of handkerchiefs, and what colour?——One was a ſpeckled handkerchief, and the other a black one.

Have you always ſaid it was a black one?—Yes.

You never ſaid it was brown?—No.

Have you ever ſaid you did not know whether it was either black or brown?—No.

Did you ever ſay that to Stubbs?—No.

I will repeat that queſtion once more, have you ever ſaid, you did not know whether it was black or brown?—No.

Which ſide did your maſter ſit on?——The left hand ſide, the near ſide on the back ſeat of the coach.

Which ſide was the highwayman on?—On the near ſide, my maſter fell out of the coach, and hallooed out for a gun, he went to ſtep upon a rail, and he tumbled down, I kept looking round all the time.

Do you mean to ſwear that you ſaw any living creature give a purſe to this man?—Yes, I will take my oath of it.

Have you always been in that ſtory?—Yes.

How many converſations have you had with your maſter and miſtreſs about this robbery?—None at all, only ſpeaking to them, not to aſk my maſter or miſtreſs, or their ſaying any thing to me about it.

But you have talked to them about the robbery?—Yes, Sir.

I believe they are of the deſcription of people called quakers?—Yes.

They do not chooſe to ſwear about it, but they told you what they knew about it?—Yes.

Now is not your memory very much aſſiſted by the ſtory they have told you?—No.

Do you believe what they told you?—Yes.

I thought you did; I ſuppoſe your miſtreſs told you ſhe gave her purſe, did not ſhe?—I ſaw her.

Has not your miſtreſs told you ſo?—No.

Do you mean to ſwear that ſhe never told you ſo?—She never told me ſhe had a purſe.

Upon your oath, did ſhe never tell you ſhe gave her purſe?—I never ſpoke to my miſtreſs that night.

That will not do coachee, I am not quite ſo young as that neither, has ſhe told you ſhe loſt a purſe that night?—Yes.

I thought ſo; when did you firſt ſay you ſaw your miſtreſs give the man her purſe?—I ſaid, I ſaw her give him a purſe.

Did you ſay it till you heard your miſtreſs would not ſwear it?—Yes.

Have you ſaid it before?—Yes.

Had you ever mentioned it to any human being that you ever ſaw the purſe delivered till you knew ſhe would not ſwear it?—To my maſter.

Deſcribe a little with your own handkerchief, how much of the man's face was covered?—So much.

Do not you know him by his voice?—Yes.

I thought you did, that is right, you have heard him ſpeak when he had not his mouth covered?—Yes.

Do you mean to ſwear that the voice was the ſame?—I ſwear that was the man.

I aſk you, Sir, this, do you mean to ſwear that the voice of the man that was covered with the handkerchief, was the ſame voice you afterwards heard?—He could not ſpeak ſo plain then.

Then you cannot ſwear to his voice?—I can ſwear to his face.

Now having ſworn to his voice, you abandon that; he had a round hat and a great coat muffled up?—No, the coat was not buttoned.

But he had a round hat?—Yes, a very little flapped, turned up on the ſides.

It was a round hat, and his face covered ſo high with a handkerchief?—I never ſaw him before.

I wiſh you would follow the example of your maſter and miſtreſs, and not ſwear upon ſuch ſubjects; do you mean to ſwear to the identity of ſuch a perſon, whom you never ſaw before, whom you did not know; was you always as ſure of him?—Yes, ſince I ſaw this man.

Did you ſwear poſitively to him the firſt time?—Yes.

Then he had not a handkerchief put on at firſt, he had not a handkerchief put on in Covent Garden?—No, Sir.

Where then?—Why never, at no place.

Did you never ſee this man in cuſtody with a handkerchief on his face, any part of his face?—No, the handkerchief was not put on.

Do you ſwear that?—I never ſaw his face with a handkerchief on, before any Magiſtrate.

Where did your maſter ſit?—My maſter ſat on the near ſide, with his back to the horſes.

How was it that you know who gave the purſes?—I ſaw my young maſter's hand give him the watch and purſe too.

You ſaw his coat?—I ſaw his coat, and ſome part of his hand, and likewiſe I ſaw my miſtreſs's ring on her finger.

Was you never at the public office in Bow-ſtreet, when this man refuſed to have the handkerchief put about him?—I was not there then.

Whoſe purſe was it that was given out?—I ſaw my miſtreſs's purſe given out.

What

What colour was it?—A blue, a kind of sky blue.

Did you know that purse before?—Yes, there were some trinkets of gold about it, or it was gilded a little.

Will you swear to the gilding of the said quaker purse?——It looked like gold.

What coloured purse was young master's?——Green.

Have you the confidence to state that you should know either of those purses again?——I have seen it upon the table, and I have carried it to him into the other room.

It was a common green purse?——Yes.

Was you present when Hurt was taken?——No.

Was you present when Hurt was searched?——No.

Court. What sort of watch was it you saw given?——It seemed to be a worked watch.

What sort of case had it?——I do not know, I have heard say it was metal, I never had it in my hand, I knew it was my mistress's watch by the case, it is a worked watch.

Mr. Garrow. Did you see that as you set on your horse?—Yes.

You do not know what money was in the purse?—No.

WILLIAM RAND sworn.

I am servant to Mr. Walker, I was very near the carriage with a dung cart and two horses, I was about thirty yards off, and I saw Mr. Walker's coach stopped, and that man at the coach window, put his hand into the coach window, and then into the Lady's left hand pocket twice; and understanding they were robbing the carriage, I unharnessed a horse and rode after them, they were about two minutes with the carriage, there was another man with the prisoner, but he was at a little distance with the footman, he made him dismount his horse; I do not know what he took from the coach, I rode after him as fast as I could, I did not get sight of him till rather better than a mile, or thereabouts; I kept in sight for forty or fifty yards together, and then by the turn of the hedges I was out of sight again; I got sight of both the men, they kept the road to Tottenham High-cross, and kept up a lane that goes to Mount-pleasant; they came back again the same lane into the road, I cannot tell why, but I imagine they could not get through; they went full speed as fast as they could into Tottenham town; when they came to some trees called the seven sisters, they turned to the left hand, and a gentleman desired me to go back, and up the next lane, accordingly I did and gave them the meeting in the road to the mill; the one went over the bridge and through a toll gate, this man could not get through, and he turned upon me again, and said, if I offered to stop him, or molest him, he would shoot me dead in a minute; I told him I did not want to stop or molest him, for I expected my death; and he said damn you, for what did you cry stop thief! because I alarmed the town, and cried stop thief all the way I rode; my horse at that time making a blunder in the water, and pitching his nose to the water, and I having no saddle was almost off, and at that time he rode by me into some closes, where he was apprehended and taken by some men that were out after him.

Who was the man that was taken?——That is the man in the red waistcoat that was taken; they tell us his name was Hurt, I am sure it is the man, his face was only covered up to his mouth.

Can you, at the distance of thirty yards, take upon yourself to swear to the face of a man that was partly covered?—I am sure it is the man, I was not quite thirty yards off, I speak at the farthest.

Mr. Garrow. What sort of hat had he? I cannot tell that upon my word, if I die for it, I do not know.

But you know very well what sort of face he had?—Yes, his face was covered with a black handkerchief, either crape or black.

How far was your cart?—My cart was about thirty yards off in a lane, it was just directly anent the carriage, the man put his hand to the carriage window, how far it went went I do not know; I did not see what he took away, I saw him take his hand away; I was on the near side the carriage, the same side he was.

Then his back was towards you?——yes.

The persons whom you supposed stopped the carriage, went above a mile before you got sight of them?——Yes.

How many more turnings are there in the course of the road before you overtook this man?——I cannot tell that.

A good many lanes and bye-ways I believe?——Not that I saw.

Was you present when this young man was taken?—No.

Was you present when he was searched?——I was, I saw nothing found upon him.

Were there any watches found upon him?——I saw none.

Did you hear of any?—I did not.

What is your belief about it?——I saw none.

Were there any purses found upon him?——I did not accuse him of any, I do not know that there were any.

JAMES SMITH sworn.

I live at Tottenham High-cross, I heard the cry of stop thief, I went in pursuit, and I saw two men coming down the lane on horseback, and a man riding after them; the prisoner at the bar was one, the other person I do not know; they rode down the lane called the Broad-lane, Tottenham High-cross, I rode after them as fast as I could; one of them got through the toll-gate, and the other was stopped, he could not get through, and he turned back and rode into a little field just by the mill, and when he got into the field, he attempted to jump over three times, and he could not get his horse over, he had a pistol in his hand in the field, and he rode round the field to the little gate, and tried to pull it open as he sat on his horse, and he could not get it open, and he dismounted and went into the fields, and soon after he came and resigned himself up; he said he would resign himself up, if we would use him civilly; we took him to a publick house just by, and sent for a constable, and he took charge of him.

Mr. Garrow. Was you present when he was searched?—Yes: nothing was found upon him, only a handkerchief and a pair of gloves.

What sort of handkerchief?——A blue and white one.

FRANCIS WILLIAMS sworn.

I was at a little house on Tottenham-hill, and this gentleman and his partner came by, there were ever so many gentlemen after them, and we went after them, the prisoner went to the gates at the mill, and turned back, and could not get through, and jumped into a little field, and rode backwards and forwards there, and could not get over the hedge, then he dismounted, and run into a little lane, and I run after him and caught him.

Did you see him throw any thing away?——No, Sir.

Mr. Garrow. What was found in his pocket?——A pair of gloves and a blue and white handkerchief.

WILLIAM KNOWLES sworn.

All that I know, I picked up a pistol just by where he was taken.

THOMAS WHITE sworn.

I was at the White Hart, in Tottenham-lane, an alarm came of stop thief and highwayman; there was a gun in the house, and I took the gun and ran after him; I saw him at the top of the hill, where he staid a little while, and then he clapped spurs to his horse and came back, the gates were shut upon him, he could not get through, he saw me in the road with a gun, and he turned back over into some little fields, and his horse refused going over the hedge, and he turned round and came to me with a pistol and said, stand off; he turned his mare round again, and went to the same place as hard as ever he could drive, and his mare refused refuſed again; he turned round and preſented his piſtol again, and ſaid, ſtand off; he then rode up the field again a little way, then he turned round, and went to the place again as hard as he could drive her, and ſhe refuſed again; then he took a circle round, and rode up in a little lane, and there he was taken; theſe are his two great coats he had on when he was taken. (One great coat had a piſtol pocket.) This coat was uppermoſt; he had a ſtick and a piſtol.

JOHN SMITH ſworn.

The priſoner came to Tottenham, I was at my father's yard, I only know about the taking him.

THOMAS DALE ſworn.

I live in Chiſwell-ſtreet, I keep a livery-ſtable, my horſe was let out laſt Tueſday week by my hoſtler, the priſoner Kenton, to Mr. Stubbs, as he informed me, I was not preſent, I enquired of him where the mare was, and he told me Mr. Stubbs, the breeches-maker had the mare, that was on the Wedneſday; I then made further enquiry, and aſked him where the mare was; and he ſaid, that upon account of the weather, he ſuppoſed Mr. Stubbs was not come home: I afterwards met Stubbs, and aſked him where the mare was; he ſaid he had it not. After the priſoner Hurt was taken, I went down and ſaw the mare at the Bull at Tottenham, the hoſtler ſhewed her to me.

Is any body here that was preſent at that time?—I believe Williams was.

Was that your mare?——Yes, it was.

Williams. The mare that the laſt witneſs looked at, at the Bull, was the mare that the highwayman had, I was at the taking of it, and I am ſure.

Court to Acſin. What horſe did this man ride?——The horſe that this man rode was a bright bay, with a ſtar in his forehead, I ſaw him again at Tottenham; it was a mare, it was the ſame mare, I am clear in that.

Mr. Garrow. Was you always clear that that was the mare?——Yes.

Did you always ſay ſo?——Yes.

Do you remember any converſation with Stubbs on Tueſday or Wedneſday laſt at Clerkenwell?——No.

Had you any converſation about the mare?—No.

Had you any about the man?——No.

Did not you tell Stubbs that you could not ſwear to the mare or the man either?—No, I did not.

Nor any thing like it?——No.

Dale. I have heard the coachman ſay that he could not ſwear to the mare.

Acſin. I can ſwear to the mare.

Court. Did you ever ſay you could not?——I did, Sir, once, I thought I could not, but I think I can now.

JOHN STUBBS ſworn.

I was in company along with the coachman when the bill was found, and the coachman was pleaſed to ſignify to me, that he ſaid that William Hurt when he ſtopped the carriage, had his handkerchief about his face, but whether it was black, or brown, or what it was he could not ſay.

Court. What do you know about this fact?—I know nothing concerning the fact any more than you do.

Did you hire a mare of the priſoner Kenton?——No, Sir, I never did in my life.

Were you bound over as a witneſs for the proſecution?—I told the Juſtice that I could ſay nothing about it, I was a meer ſtranger to any thing of the kind; Mr. Dale came to me and aſked me if I hired a horſe, I told him I did not.

Do you know the priſoner Hurt?—I know the priſoner Hurt, becauſe he was brought up in our neighbourhood, but I know nothing of this fact.

When was you firſt queſtioned about this?—I think it was the Wedneſday morning laſt, I met Mr. Dale cloſe by my own door, I live in Finſbury, Moorfields.

Was you ever taken up on this account yourſelf?——No, Sir, one of Sir Sampſon Wright's men came down to me, and acquainted me of it, and deſired I would go to the office with him, which I did; I never hired a horſe of Mr. Dale but once, and that was to go in a cart to fetch ſome wood from Deptford.

to

Mr. Garrow. What was it that Ackſin ſaid about ſwearing to Hurt?—I was at the Crown, at Clerkenwell-green, we went to drink, and the coachman was in company, he was talking in what manner he was robbed, he ſaid the highwayman had a handkerchief upon his face, as high as this, (up to the noſe) I had at that time a handkerchief round my own neck, and he ſaid it was the colour of your's, but whether black, or brown, or not, he was not poſitive; he ſaid he had ſwore to the man, but as to the handkerchief, he could not ſay.

Mr. Garrow to Ackſin. What is your young maſter's name?—John Walker; I ſaw him give out a watch and purſe.

A metal watch?—I cannot ſay what ſort; I never had in my hand.

What did you ſee?—I ſaw it was not gold, I ſaw it was a metal watch.

Could you diſtern it was a metal watch?—It ſeemed to me to be a metal watch.

Court. What colour was it?——Almoſt the colour of gold.

It had the appearance of a metal watch?—Yes.

Mr. Garrow. You have ſaid, you ſaw a watch come out of your young maſter's pocket?—I ſaw it given out of his hand, not out of his pocket; I ſaw my young maſter put his left-hand out of the coach door, I ſaw ſome little more, ſome little part of his coat.

Will you ſwear it was his hand, and not Mr. Colliſon's?——Mr. Colliſon was not in the coach, Mr. Colliſon fell out of the coach.

Will you ſwear it was your young maſter's watch?——I am clear it was.

How are you clear?—I will ſwear it.

By what token?——My young maſter's watch was gone.

How do you know that, except by the information of your young maſter?—I cannot tell otherwiſe.

Was you nearer to the man's hand than you are to me?—Thereabouts.

Is this a gold watch or a metal one? (Shewing him his watch.)——I do not know.

Had you ever ſeen your young maſter's watch nearer than you have ſeen this?——Yes.

As near as that table?——I cannot ſay.

Court to Ackſin. Deſcribe a little more particularly about your maſter and Mr. Colliſon's getting out of the coach?—They got out of the coach at Mr. Colliſon's door; I was bid to ſtop, the firſt time I did not, I drove up to the gentleman's door.

You did not ſay a word about driving up to the door?—I drove up to Mr. Colliſon's door, who was in the coach, I drove to his door before I was ſtopped; he bid me ſtop before I came up to the gentleman's door, and I drove up to the door, thinking it would ſave us; I was twenty yards off.

Did he come up and rob the coach when it ſtood at the door?—Yes.

Why did you omit ſo very extraordinary a circumſtance as that?—I cannot tell.

Relate again now how the robbery happened?—I was coming along the road going into Southgate, the young man ſtopped me, and ſaid he would blow my brains out; I went up to Mr. Colliſon's door, and he followed me up and ſaid, I will blow your brains out; my maſter opened the coach door with his right-hand and ſlipped down, likewiſe Mr. Colliſon got out; the man then ſaid he would blow the lady's brains out, if ſhe did not give her watch and money, he had a piſtol in his hand and a ſtick.

Then your maſter and Mr. Colliſon were both got out of the coach?——Yes; my maſter hallooed out for a gun, but we had none; the other highwayman was down with the footman.

What at Mr. Colliſon's door?——Yes.

Whereabouts is the houſe ſituated?—Going up Southgate-hill: then after they had robbed the coach, I drove up the hill

to

to go home, and left my maſter and Mr. Colliſon behind.

What after they had been juſt robbed?—My maſter came acroſs the road, the two houſes are not two hundred yards apart: Mr. Colliſon and my maſter were both out of the coach before the young gentleman and my miſtreſs were robbed; I am quite ſure of that.

Court to Rand. Whereabouts was this coach robbed?——Juſt by Mr. Colliſon's door.

Why did not you ſay ſo?——That is the very place.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, I take it that the Jury are at preſent to enquire into the fact of this indictment, which charges the defendant with having aſſaulted John Walker, &c. Taking it that the evidence in this caſe was free from all exception, it ſeems to me, with great ſubmiſſion, that they have not proved the facts neceſſary to ſupport this indictment: ſuppoſe they had laid it to have been a robbery on the perſon of Mr. Walker, and taking from him a watch, the property of a perſon unknown, and it had been proved to be his watch, or any other perſon's it would not have ſuſtained the indictment. According to the evidence, it proves no one fact which calls upon the priſoner to anſwer to the charge, and to fix the having made an aſſault: it depends in the abſence of Mr. and Mrs. Walker, and their ſon, and Mr. Colliſon, who are Quakers, and the footman, who it ſeems will not ſwear to the priſoner, though he is not a Quaker, it depends on the evidence of this Ackſin; firſt, as to the aſſault, ſays he, he came to the coach in which Mr. John Walker, and his father and mother, and Mr. Colliſon were; now what is the language of this threat? ſays he, he threatened my lady, that unleſs ſhe would deliver up her money, he would blow her brains out. My Lord, Is that a threat to Mr. John Walker? Take it that a perſon came to the coach, with the felonious intent of taking the goods of John Walker, and that he did not intend to take the goods of Mrs. Walker, or putting the caſe the other way, but on his applying the threat to Mrs. Walker, the ſon gives his goods; would your Lordſhip hold that was a threat to him? Now, my Lord, here is no property found on this man, here is none produced, not a ſingle article; then it reſts on the evidence of a man, on which it does not become me to make any obſervations. Says he, I ſaw the watch given out; ſays he, it was a watch with a worked caſe, by the which I ſuppoſe he meant a chaſed caſe; it is clear he did not mean to deſcribe the watch which is the ſubject of the indictment, for if there was a threat, the Jury muſt be convinced there was a taking by this threat of a metal watch from the perſon of Mr. John Walker: ſays the man, I do not know it was a metal caſe, otherwiſe than I was told; and in order to try it and to ſee whether the Jury can by poſſibility depend on the evidence of that man, I gave him my watch; why he cannot tell whether it is gold or metal, nor can the Gentlemen of the Jury: then, my Lord, is there evidence to go to the Jury on the indictment which charges this man with this ſpecific offence? I ſubmit there is not; and I ſubmit, that metal to this purpoſe is contra diſtinguiſhed from gold.

Court. You are aware of the general form of diſtinguiſhing it in the indictment, when contra diſtinguiſhed from gold, it is univerſally ſtated of baſe metal, then conſider whether the word metal is not a general word, compriſing all metals.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, I take it to be a leading rule of all criminal law, that there muſt be certainty; if a man is charged with ſtealing a gold watch, he knows what he has to anſwer; but a man is charged by an indictment, that he had ſtole a metal watch, ſays he, I can prove gold or ſilver, but if they ſtate it generally metal, why I am to take in all the metals that ever were in the bowels of the earth. If it had been clearly upon evidence to be a gold watch, it would not have been a proper deſcription of it; and I contend, that the Jury cannot upon this indictment have any evidence that can ſatisfy their conſciences, either that the watch was the watch of Mr. Walker, or that it was a a metal watch as deſcribed in the indictment.

Court. You have had ground enough in this caſe, Mr. Garrow, to intitle you, in point of law, to obſerve upon the evidence by a ſide wind, which you have done very ſufficiently. It is not in practice for the priſoner to know the preciſe charge againſt him; if it was, your objection would be deciſive, and it would be an unanſwerable reaſon why it ſhould be deſcribed, in which caſe it might be doubtful: but in this caſe, there is certainly evidence enough to go to the Jury, and it will be for them to decide, whether they are ſufficiently ſatisfied from the evidence of Ackſin, that this was Mr. Walker's ſon's watch, and that it was a metal watch; and he ſwears to his belief, founded on what he ſaw at the time, and theſe will be circumſtances for the conſideration of the Jury. But with reſpect to your firſt objection, I am moſt clearly and decidedly of opinion againſt you in point of law, becauſe I do not hold it neceſſary that there ſhould be a diſtinct and perſonal threat upon every one, but the ſtopping a coach with ſeveral perſons in it, is putting every perſon therein in fear. I ſhall leave it to the Jury.

PRISONER HURT's DEFENCE.

I was coming along, and I ſaw two young men coming along in full gallop, they rode by me, and one young fellow ſaid, come along; I heard the cry of ſomebody calling out, ſays one, the bailiffs are juſt going to arreſt me, one turned to the right-hand and one to the left-hand, and I turned down with them, and I went down the field.

Court. There is no evidence to put Kenton on his defence.

Mr. Garrow. I ſhall not call any witneſſes.

WILLIAM HURT, GUILTY, Death.
WILLIAM KENTON, NOT GUTILY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

256. The ſaid WILLIAM HURT was again indicted for aſſaulting Elizabeth Walker, wife of Iſaac Walker, on the 7th of January, and putting her in fear, and taking from her a gold watch, value 10l. a ſtone ſeal ſet in gold, value 20s. a ſilk purſe, value 1s. and 15s. in monies numbered, the property of the ſaid Iſaac.

And the ſaid WILLIAM KENTON was again indicted for aſſiſting, &c. &c.

There being no evidence they were

BOTH ACQUITTED.

---

256. HENRY NASH was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 9th of January, two linen ſhirts, value 2s. two caps, value 2d. two pair of cotton ſtockings, value 1s. one pair of thread ſtockings, value 6d. one table cloth, value 2d. one apron, value 6d. one pocket-book, value 2d. and one ſilk purſe, value 3d. the property of Jonathan Bradley.

JONATHAN BRADLEY ſworn.

On Sunday laſt, the 9th of January, between ſeven and eight, I was robbed of the things mentioned in the indictment, I live at No. 7, Broad-ſtreet, a young woman came to ſee me, and I went to light her down ſtairs, we were in the dining room, and as I came back I went into the back parlour, and found the things in the chair, and the priſoner in the room, I was going to put the key into the door, and he ruſhed out immediately upon me, I took him by the collar; when I put in the key the door gave way; the things were in the drawers before; the poker was very much bent, and the bureau at the top of it was broke, and two locks open; I took him to the watch-houſe myſelf, I was beadle of the night; I ſearched him, and found a knife upon him.

MARY BRADLEY ſworn.

I locked the door and the drawers, and had the key in my pocket, I came down juſt as my huſband cried thieves, I found the the things in the chair, I left them locked up.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

My wife goes out a waſhing, and ſhe had ſent me of an errand to ſeek for the woman, and I aſked a man to tell me of ſuch a perſon, and he ſent me to that houſe, and juſt as I got into the paſſage, a man ruſhed out againſt me, and ſaid I was a thief.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice ASHURST.

---

257. JAMES GERROLD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 6th day of January, one man's hat, value 5s. the property of Richard Banks.

WILLIAM WOOD ſworn.

I am a cordwainer, I went into the proſecutor's houſe in the little Minories on the 6th inſtant about five, for a pint of beer; about ten minutes after, the priſoner at the bar came in for a pennyworth of beer, and in about ten minutes after the people were all out of the tap-room but us, and I was ſtanding by the fire, and by the ſtaircaſe door was a hat, and the priſoner took the hat and put it under his left arm, he had an old canvas bag under his left arm, and he walked back again to the fire, and ſtaid half a minute, and went out of the back yard with it under his arm; I did not ſuſpect him juſt the moment he went out, but ſeeing Mr. Banks's coat hang, I ſuppoſed it might be his hat; I called the ſervant and aſked her, and told her the old clothes-man had taken it, I ſaw the priſoner taken with the hat under his left arm.

(The hat depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

My Lord, I never touched the hat, I was about my own buſineſs, I always got my livelyhood by working hard; I have people to my character who know me.

The Priſoner called four witneſſes to his character.

GUILTY,

Whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

---

258. JAMES ELLIS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 12th of January, two keys, value 2d. and 2s. 6d. in monies numbered; the property of John Mead.

JOHN MEAD ſworn.

I am butler to Mr. Graham, in Lower Groſvenor ſtreet, I was in the pit paſſage going to Drury-lane, and the priſoner ſtood on the right-hand of me, he puſhed up againſt me, and catched his hand in my right-hand pocket, he took two ſhillings and one ſixpence; I caught him immediately, he ſaid he had not got it, but I could feel him take it, and he made away with it; the crow was very great, but there was no ſoul at my right-hand but him; a perſon along with me had hold of my left-arm; I am ſure it was the priſoner that joſtled me.

Priſoner's Council. Who are you?—I am butler to Mr. Graham.

If I underſtand you right, there was a very great crowd in the paſſage, and yet no man to the right but him?—No, there was a great crowd to the left.

Was the crowd all on one ſide of the paſſage?——I got to the right, having a perſon to my left.

Do you mean to ſay in ſuch a crowd as this, there was no man but this man?——I caught the priſoner's hand in my pocket.

Was there any crowd at all?——There was a great crowd.

Have you always ſaid that you caught this man's hand in your pocket?—Yes.

Did

Did you ſay ſo there?—I did, I am ſure I ſaid ſo there.

Did you let him go?—The conſtable ſecured him.

Did you not let the man go?—I let him go ſo far as the crowd puſhed him away.

Did you ever ſeize hold of him when he was near you?—I did.

Did you loſe the keys at the time?——I did.

You caught his hand in your pocket, but you did not catch the keys in his hand?—I did not, I could not get hold of his hand then.

Did not you repeatedly promiſe the man, if he would give you the keys you would let him go?——Yes, he ſaid he had not got them.

You let him go immediately?——I did not let him go immediately, I had hold of him a good while, I let him go to feel in my pocket, and it was turned inſide out; I felt to ſee whether I had the key left, as to the money, it was no object; I put eight ſhillings and ſix-pence in my pocket. The man never uſed any foul language.

Priſoner. I wiſh to know of this gentleman where the keys was found?——They were brought to me by the conſtable.

Priſoner. Were they found near the place where I was challenged?—I was not preſent.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

The keys were found two hundred yards from me, I have ſubpœned the man who picked the keys up, and he will not come; this gentleman challenged me, he was going down with a lady, I happened to be of one ſide of him, he laid hold of my arm, halloo, ſays he, I thought he thought I was getting before, ſays I, what are you about, Sir, he immediately let me go to get a good place; he came after me again, and laid hold of me; ſays he, I have been robbed, and you muſt be the man, you was next me; ſays I, for God's ſake do not mention it; ſays he, give me the keys, ſays he, I will ſwear that you are the man, right or wrong; I aſked him what alarmed him, he ſaid my being next him: I was taken and ſearched, I had half a guinea, and two ſhillings and ſixpence, he ſaid he thought one of the ſixpences found in my poſſeſſion was his, and he could almoſt venture to ſwear to it; the Juſtice adviſed him not. When the man brought the keys up to the office, they were found at about two hundred yards from me; he ſaid, there is no occaſion to bind this man over. I have ſent for this man that found the keys, and have not been able to get him; it was above two hundred yards from where I was taken.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

The next Part will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 12th of JANUARY 1785, and the following Days;

Being the SECOND SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER II. PART V.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE NINE-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

259. THOMAS SCOTT was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 15th of December laſt, one head of a chaiſe, value 5s. and one cuſhion, value 3s. the property of Iſaac Francis.

GEORGE ATKINS ſworn.

I was going along Samſon's-garden, Wapping, and as I turned up, the priſoner had the head of the chaiſe on his ſhoulders, and another man with him; he was about two hundred yards from the proſecutor's ſtables, I aſked him where he was going with that, he made no anſwer; the other man run away from him: he ſaid he was going to carry it to Whitechapel; I told him he ſhould ſtop with me, and he threw it off his ſhoulders, I made him take it up, and he carried it into the field in Samſon's-gardens, where Mr. Francis's ſtables were, and opened the houſe door, and threw it down, I collared him and took him to Mr. Francis, he ſaid he picked it up in the field.

——— FRANCIS ſworn.

I am a butcher, this is my chaiſe head, and the cuſhion was in the ſeat of the chaiſe, I had not been home with the chaiſe above a quarter of an hour or twenty minutes, I had left it at my own door, and the man had taken it away.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was at a public houſe, and a man hired me to carry it, he took me down there and gave me this head of a chaiſe to carry to Whitechapel; and when I was ſtopped, the man ran away, and Mr. Francis took up a piece of rope, and was going to hang me in the ſtables.

Court to Atkins. Is that true?——Mr. Francis was very angry, and he took up a bit of harneſs, and ſaid now I will take the law in my own hands, I will hang you, but I do not think he hurt the priſoner. The priſoner never ſaid that he had the things from any body.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

260. ALEXANDER FISHER was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Benjamin Ward, about the hour of three in in the night, on the 24th of December laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, one watch with a caſe made of baſe metal, and ſet round with paſte ſtones, value 11l. one other watch, value 11l. one other watch, with a caſe made of baſe metal, and ſet round with paſte ſtones, value 11l. one other watch made of baſe metal, and ſet round with paſte ſtones, value 11l. and two ſhagreen packing caſes, value 7s. his property.

A Second Count for that he about the hour of three in the night of the ſame day, being in the ſaid dwelling houſe, feloniouſly ſtole the ſaid goods and chattles, and broke the ſaid dwelling to get out of the ſame.

GEORGE ADDENBROOKE ſworn.

I know the proſecutor, I had a watch from my brother, which is the proſecutor's.

BENJAMIN WARD ſworn.

I am a watchmaker, No. 2, Norton Falgate; my houſe was broke open about three on Chriſtmas-day in the morning, my wife and daughter went laſt to bed, and faſtened the door, the keys were taken up ſtairs, that I am ſure of; at three I was alarmed by the patrol, I found my ſhop doors all faſt, I told the patrol I hoped nothing was loſt, and I faſtened the doors and thanked the patrol for calling me; I went up ſtairs again, and went down about eight in the morning, my apprentice went down firſt, he is not here; at breakfaſt time I miſſed the watches that lay on the mantle-piece in the little parlour, which I ſaw the night before; I ſaw four of them, I have one of them here, it is a double paſte watch.

WILLIAM BECKWITH ſworn.

I have a watch here which I had from the witneſs Addenbrook, on Wedneſday evening between five and ſix, it has not been in my poſſeſſion, my maſter has had it.

Proſecutor. It has not been out of my poſſeſſion, I received it from Beckwith, and I kept it till yeſterday, and then I gave it him again.

Addenbrooke. On the 27th of December about half after ſeven, my brother Thomas Addenbrooke came to me in the morning, and he ſaid George, I have found a watch, he gave it me, he is not here.

Where is he?——He was a priſoner till he was releaſed.

Beckwith. Between five and ſix on Wedneſday evening, the 29th of December, the priſoner came to our houſe, that was after the houſe was broke open, he ſaid he could inform us of the perſon that could give a diſcovery of the robbery, I went with him to the public houſe, there was his brother, we took him before Juſtice Wilmot, the priſoner declared in my preſence, that he gave the watch to his brother.

Court. But that brother is not here, to ſhew that was the watch he gave to him.

Proſecutor. I had another man taken up, that was releaſed by the priſoner's confeſſion; it was not ſigned, there was no pen, ink nor paper.

What did he ſay before Juſtice Wilmot?——He ſaid he concealed himſelf in the houſe.

Did any body tell him it would be the better for him to confeſs?——Not to my knowledge.

What was his inducement to confeſs?——It was open free confeſſion, he ſaid he concealed himſelf about ſix in the evening, in the cellar, and after the man was gone to bed, he went into the parlour, he heard ſome watches going, which lay on the mantle-piece, and that induced him to take them; he did not go into the ſhop, but wanted to go out, he then went out, and left the door open after him.

Was he threatened if he did not confeſs?——No.

Priſoner. I have to ſay as far as this, I was in bed and aſleep at my father's houſe, at half after eight that night, and did not get up till eight in the morning.

Court. I take it to be an eſtabliſhed rule, that confeſſion without ſome circumſtances is not ſufficient, unleſs he ſhould confeſs it again at the bar; if any of the property had been found about him, or he had been about the place of the houſe at the time, or had had any knowledge of the place; but the mere confeſſion of a crime without any one ſingle circumſtance to corroborate it, is not ſufficient.

Proſecutor. He was a ſervant to me, and knew the way of the houſe, and knew the dog.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

---

261. JOHN MASON and JOSEPH REMNANT were indicted for burglariouſly and felonioufly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Luke Naylor, Gentleman, about the hour of eight in the night, on the 4th of October laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, one pink corded ſilk waiſtcoat laced with ſilver, value 11s. one pair of breeches, value 10s. one green and white ſilk waiſtcoat, value 20s. one ſcarlet cloth coat lined with ſilk, value 2l. 2s. one waiſtcoat, value 10s. one other waiſtcoat, value 10s. and one pair of black ſilk breeches, value 10s. his property.

LUKE NAYLOR ſworn.

My chambers were broke open on the 4th day of October, it is my dwelling place, I have other chambers at No. 6, I have no other dwelling houſe in town; I left them about ſeven in the evening, they are up two pair of ſtairs, the windows were down and the ſhutters ſhut, and the doors ſhut on a ſpring lock, not double locked.

How many rooms have you there?——Four.

Before you went out, did you ſee the windows all of them were down?——I was not in all the rooms, I went away about ten, and returned the next morning about ten; I found the door open, and when I came there, I found the hair dreſſer was waiting there, ſome clothes were about the floor, they appeared to me to have been dropped, there was a preſs that had been ſtripped of clothes, the key was in it, I will not be poſitive whether part of it was not open, I went immediately to Sir Sampſon Wright's and had it advertiſed, I could not immediately recollect half the things I had loſt, they were put in the hue and cry, I was juſt come from abroad, and my trunk of clothes was not come; in conſequence of the hand-bill a Mr. Brown, a pawn-broker in the Strand, came to me, I went to his houſe, and there I found a ſcarlet coat, it was pledged in the name of Ayrton of Beaufort-buildings; I deſired it might remain there till the perſon who brought it came for it, I made ſeveral other enquiries at another ſhop, but was not able to trace any thing further about the coat, till that day two months, I was ſent for by Mr. Brown to come to Bow-ſtreet, and there was the priſoner Maſon.

SAMUEL RENSHAW ſworn.

I live oppoſite Somerſet-houſe, Strand; I had two waiſtcoats pledged by the priſoner Remnant, the 25th of October, I know him by ſight, I do not know what he is, he pledged them in the name of John Lee, I am quite clear he is the man that pledged them, (The waiſtcoats produced and depoſed to,) there is no mark but their general appearance.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council. You ſaid juſt now, and I believe with great propriety, that you only know them by their general appearance, you know there are millions of yards of ſtuff the ſame that waiſtcoat is made of, and millions of waiſtcoats made in that manner?——Certainly, this ſcarlet waiſtcoat is worn much about as mine was, there is a ſpot of ink which mine had upon it.

ROBERT PAYNE ſworn.

One morning the 25th of October laſt, the priſoner Maſon pledged this coat at Mr. Brown's, to the beſt of my remembrance, that was between eight and nine; I am perfectly convinced it was him, I did not know him before, he told me his name was was John Ayrton, and that he lived in Beaufort-buildings; on the Monday following which was the 1ſt of November, there came from Bow-ſtreet a liſt of the particulars that had been taken by theft; I ſaw this coat deſcribed, and I informed my maſter; after this my maſter went to Bow-ſtreet, where he had Mr. Naylor's addreſs; Mr. Naylor came and ſaid it was his, and tried it on, and it was agreed to be left at our houſe; and on the 23d of December laſt, John Maſon came to redeem the coat, I acquainted my maſter with it.

Was it the ſame perſon that pledged it?—It was, then he was ſtopped and taken.

Mr. Naylor. There was ſome paper round the buttons, with ſome of my writing on it, I am quite poſitive it is my coat.

Mr. Peatt. What writing was it, figures or words?——Writing at length.

How long before that did you ſee the coat?——The coat I had not wore for ſome time, I loſt ſeveral coats which I did not wear in common, but I believe this was there two or three days before.

WILLIAM BROWN ſworn.

I ſaw the man that came to redeem this coat, I ſtopped him and ſent for a conſtable to Bow-ſtreet.

PATRICK MACMANUS ſworn.

I took the two priſoners into cuſtody, and there were duplicates found on each of them, one of Mr. Price's duplicates, and one of Mr. Millar's, I found Price's duplicate in the pocket of Remnant.

Court to Payne. Does that relate to the two waiſtcoats you have produced?—Yes.

Millar. This is my duplicate.

Macmanus. I believe that other might not be out of Maſon's pocket, but the other I am ſure I took out of Remnant's pocket, but I might be miſtaken in the other.

Priſoner Maſon. You took but one duplicate from me?——Yes, I took three.

THOMAS BRUIN ſworn.

One pair of breeches I took from the priſoner Maſon, on the firſt of November; here is a coat pledged by Maſon, I knew him before by the name of Maſon, he pledged theſe in his own name; here is a waiſtcoat that was pledged on the 30th of October, I am ſure the coat was the 25th of October, and pledged by Maſon.

Mr. Naylor. I know the waiſtcoat and breeches, I had the lace made on purpoſe, and the buttons and the coat I am pretty ſure of, I cannot ſwear to the black breeches; theſe things were in the out room on the night I went out,

Where is the hair dreſſer that you found?——He is gone away, I had no ſuſpicion of the hair dreſſer at all; Remnant was clerk to Mr. Cracraft, the attorney.

What is Maſon?——He did live with Mr. Cracraft, I believe he is the ſon of an attorney, and clerk to an attorney; Remnant opened the door, ſays I, your name is Remnant, and there was a woman there, and I ſaid you are his mother, he ſaid no, upon the duplicates being found upon him, he knew where the ſhop was, the people at the ſhop ſaid, they knew him very well, and ſhould have taken a gold watch from him.

Mr. Peatt. The writing was upon thin paper?——Yes.

The ink ſpread a good deal?——Yes, but I know it was mine.

Mr. Peatt to Mr. Millar. Where have theſe waiſtcoats been ſince the time that you took them in?—In the warehouſe.

How do you know that?——They have not been brought down ſince the 25th of October laſt; I know they are the ſame waiſtcoats I took in of Mr. Lee, I have no other waiſtcoats of the ſame kind that I know of.

Were they the ſame tickets?——The duplicate that is pledged in the name of Maſon was found upon Remnant.

Maſon. There has been ſeveral arts and menaces made uſe of by Macmanus to get confeſſions from Remnant.

Court. They have not been made uſe of.

SAMUEL LEE ſworn.

I am an attorney, I took the priſoner Remnant laſt Eaſter was a twelvemonth, he behaved very well, he has been with me ſince that, till the taller priſoner came after him very much, and I was not pleased; I know nothing of him but perfectly honest, he has received money for me at various times.

The prisoner Remnant called six other witnesses who all gave him a very good character.

The prisoner Mason called two witnesses, who gave him a very good character.

BOTH GUILTY

Of stealing to the value of 39s.

Each to be transported for seven years.

Tried by the second London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

262. JAMES FLINDER was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 6th of January, one silver shoe buckle, value 2s. 6d. the property of William Cordy.

——— BAXTER sworn.

I am servant to the prosecutor, I saw the prisoner come into my master's shop, it is a pawn-broker's, No. 79, Snow-hill, I was standing at the window on the 6th of January, a little after three, and saw the prisoner put his hand into the show glass, and take a buckle; I directly run after him, and brought him back, and he put it on the counter.

Prisoner. A boy came by and dropped it.

The Prisoner called three witnesses, who gave him a good character.

GUILTY, 10d.

Privately whipped.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Justice HEATH.

---

263. ANN RAWSTON was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 15th of November, one silver tankard, value 5l. one silver waiter, value 3l. one silver milk pot, value 10s. one silver gravy spoon, value 10s. five silver spoons, value 20s. one shirt, value 5s. two pair of sheets, value 20s. one table cloth, value 20s. the property of Richard Walford.

RICHARD WALFORD sworn.

I am a brewer, the prisoner at the bar lived with me about three years; on Monday morning the 15th of November, I first missed the things mentioned in the indictment, they were articles of plate used in my family; I saw two table spoons wrapped up in one of my handkerchiefs on the table in the parlour, I had some conversation with the prisoner.

Mr. Garrow, Council for the Prosecution. Had you previous to that conversation made any promises to her?——I did with a view she should discover her accomplices.

Then did you do any thing in consequence of her information?——I made a discovery of some linen from that information, I found a sheet and a table cloth at a public house in the neighbourhood, the sign of the Pitt's head, the corner of Old-street-road; in consequence of her examination, I examined the box and I found a duplicate, I did not know what it was, she said, it was what the pawnbrokers used; I applied to a pawnbroker's in Fan's-alley, and found nothing.

Have you at any time since found any of your property in any body's hands?—Yes, two spoons in the custody of a pawn-broker in Old-street, his name is Hoskins.

Mr. Silvester, Prisoner's Council. These two spoons, found at Hoskins's in Old-street-street road, was in consequence of the confession of the prisoner?—One of of them was, I should not have found out where it was without the duplicate which I found in her pocket.

The woman told you that one of the spoons was pawned at the pawn-brokers?——I went to search for a tea-spoon, and found a table-spoon.

The confession was obtained under promises that you would excuse her?—No.

Whether there had not been something from you to induce the woman to confess this?

this?——I took a great deal of pains with her, I had a great reſpect for her, ſhe did not tell me till after two ſpoons were taken from her by force.

In conſequence of your good opinion of her, did not ſhe remain at large, and might have abſconded for two or three days?—I had an exceeding good opinion of her.

JAMES HOSKINS ſworn.

I am a pawn-broker, I live in Old-ſtreet, I have a table ſpoon, I received it I believe from the priſoner, I lent her ſix ſhillings on it, and gave her the duplicate, which was afterwards produced to me by M. Walford, I am ſure it was the priſoner, I lent her ſix ſhillings.

Mr. Silvefter. That is more than the value?——No.

Did you make an entry in your book?——I did.

Then you ſpeak from your book?——I ſpeak from what I know.

Then you ſpeak without book, you never ſaw the woman before?—Yes, many times, I recollect all theſe circumſtances very well.

You have very little buſineſs?——I have a great deal of buſineſs, I recollect this perfectly well, becauſe the duplicate is in my hand now, I am poſitive that the woman pawned this ſpoon; I do not ſuppoſe any body was in the ſhop that ſerved her but myſelf.

(The ſpoon depoſed to, marked R. W.)

BENJAMIN BOTTOMLEY ſworn.

I am a pawn-broker, I have two ſhirts, I received them I believe from the priſoner; I ſee by my writing I took in one, but it is above a year ago, it was the 5th of December, 1783, in the name of Ann Ryſon, I took her to be an ale-houſe keeper's wife, in Old-ſtreet; I believe it is the priſoner at the bar, I really believe ſo, I have no doubt.

When was the laſt taken in?—The 15th of December, 1783.

Proſecutor. This is a ſhirt of my brother's, and this is mine.

Priſoner. I know no more of the robbery than you do.

The priſoner called three witneſſes to her character.

GUILTY.

To be impriſoned twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

---

264. ELIZABETH WELLS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 15th of December laſt, one braſs fender, value 5s. the property of Richard Gwillin.

RICHARD GWILLIN ſworn.

A fire happened behind my houſe on the 15th of December laſt, and burnt down my premiſes; I loſt a vaſt number of things that were ſaved from the fire, and not come to hand; I loſt a braſs fender.

JONATHAN REDGRAVE ſworn.

The proſecutor, and I, and another, went with a ſearch warrant, and found the fender at the priſoner's apartment.

Court. Is ſhe not a married woman?—I always underſtood her to be ſo.

Does not her huſband live with her?—He does in general, but at that time he was out of the way.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

---

265. TIMOTHY SULLIVAN and JOHN BUTTLER were indicted for ſtealing one iron bar, value 6d. belonging to James Jones, affixed to a certain building belonging to the ſaid James.

JACOB

JACOB ARCHER ſworn.

I am an iron founder, on the 3d of January, my Maſter, James Jones, who lives in the Minories, was informed his ſhop in Wapping was tearing to pieces by a parcel of people, about fourteen in number; he deſired me to get a peace officer, and go and take them; I went with one Daniel Wingate, and I went into the ſhop, and caught the two priſoners in the fact of pulling the buildings down, and the reſt run away; they were all pulling down the building for fire-wood, and pulling the iron work out, I caught the young one Butler, with a piece under his arm, there were a dozen or fourteen of them, they all run away but theſe two; Butler dropped the bar and run away, he ſaid after, that he knew the bar, and had it from one of thoſe that were with him, I did not ſee Sullivan do any thing only looking about.

DANIEL WINGATE ſworn.

I went with the laſt witneſs, I ſaw Butler doing nothing, I caught him but he had nothing with him as I know of, I did not ſee him till after he was apprehended.

PRISONER BUTLER'S DEFENCE.

I was going to the office to get a place, I live at a public houſe, and the woman at the office has got money of mine, I was going through that place, I knew Sullivan by ſight, I did not know his name, I aſked him to come along with me, he bid me ſtop, I ſtopped for him and theſe gentlemen preſently came in, they chucked down a piece of iron cloſe by where I ſtood, and they took me.

Court to Archer. Do you know the iron? ——I know the iron, I tried it to the place in the hole where it was pulled out.

JOHN BUTLER, GUILTY.

To be confined to hard labour twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

TIMOTHY SULLIVAN NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

266. RICHARD PAYNE was indicted for ſtealing on the 24th of December laſt, one tin kettle, value 2s. four gallons of lamp oil, value 8s. the property of George Cornute and William Forge.

ISSAC COMBE ſworn.

I am ſervant to the proſecutors, they are lamp-lighters, they contract for the parish of St. Clement Danes, on Chriſtmas-day me and one Bowers who is not here, took two kettles of lamp oil out of my maſter's ſhop, and carried them to the Spotted-dog, in Clements-lane, and ſet them down at the door, they had not been at the door ten minutes when I went to fetch them in, and they were both taken away; the kettle that is here, I found on the priſoner's head in Croſs-lane, St. Giles's, I held him and aſked him what he was going to do with it, it belonged to me, and I aſked him where the other kettle was, and he ſaid if I would let him go he would tell me; I told him he muſt go with me to my maſter, then five or ſix men came out and knocked me down, and reſcued him; on Chriſtmas-night I met him again at the bottom of the Fleet-market, I brought him with me to the Spotted-dog, and charged him with a conſtable, and he was committed; I took away the kettle when they knocked me down; here is my maſter's name on the kettle.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I ſaw the kettle ſtand and nobody by it, I took it up, this man ſays it was his, ſays I, how came it to be your's, I took it off my head and he collared me, ſays I, if you have it you may as well let me go.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

267. JOHN MARRIOTT was indicted for ſtealing, on the 15th of December laſt, one carcaſe of mutton, value 20s. the property of James Harwood.

JAME

JAMES HARWOOD ſworn.

I prove the property.

RICHARD MATTHEW ſworn.

I am ſervant to the proſecutor, I ſaw the priſoner come out of my maſter's cart in Milk-ſtreet, and he went towards the market, inſtead of going into the market he turned to the left, and went into Milk-ſtreet, and then turned up Robinhood-court, and I came back to Milk-ſtreet, and there I found him, he had a carcaſs of mutton on his ſhoulders, between five and ſix in the evening, I ſuſpected him, and aſked him where he was going with it, he ſaid it was his maſter's, I aſked him where his maſter lived, he ſaid, it was no buſineſs of mine, I took the mutton off his ſhoulders, and gave it to an acquaintance of mine, and we brought it into the market, that is all the account I can give of it.

Proſecutor. Every man has his own mark, this is my mutton.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

When Mr. Harwood was before the Alderman, he ſaid he ſaw the ſheep before five, and miſſed it a little after five, I was hired to carry it.

The priſoner called one witneſs to his character.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

---

268. WILLIAM MASON was indicted for ſtealing, on the 12th of January, one marble mortar, value 5s. the property of Thomas Piper.

The priſoner was ſeen taking the mortar under his arm.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

269. DAVID BRATHWAITE was indicted for ſtealing, on the 27th of December laſt, ſeventeen ſhillings, and eightpence half-penny, in monies numbered, the monies of Thomas Norton.

THOMAS NORTON ſworn.

I am a carman; I went into a public houſe, the priſoner was there, the 27th of December, I went after my Chriſtmas-boxes, about eleven or twelve I ſet down and was rather ſick and comical, rather in liquor; and I found my bag go out of my pocket, I cannot ſay but I had been drinking a good deal that day; I do not know juſtly what was in the bag, I can ſwear to more than five ſhillings, and I can ſwear to the bag; I found it go out of my left hand pocket.

The PUBLICAN ſworn.

I keep a public houſe in St. Catherine's; on the 27th of laſt month, the proſecutor came into my houſe about a quarter before eleven, I imagine led in by one of his companions, very much in liquor, ſo that he could ſcarce ſpeak; he ſat down in a box and one of the women that is about, ſaid there is a man with a bag of money in his hand, I fancy he will loſe it, it is untied; I was buſy, but I told him to put his money in his pocket, he put it into his pocket, but which pocket I cannot ſay on my oath; I went into my bar, and in the ſpace of three or four minutes I heard the money fall about the tap-room, I went out and deſired him to pick up the money, and the ſailor who ſtood by as I knew to be a very honeſt man, picked it up and put it into the bag; after which he inſiſted on having it again, he took the bag and held it in his left hand, I perſuaded him to let me have it till he was ſober; I ſaw the priſoner eye the man very much, I kept my eye on him, the proſecutor had his money in his left hand behind him in my opinion, I do not think he put it in his pocket; then the proſecutor began to caſt and heave in a violent manner, then I believe he fell aſleep; in about five or ſix minutes after I went into the tap-room, and I saw the prisoner crawling from underneath the table, I immediately asked him what he had got in his hand behind him, he set on the seat, and said what is that to me, or something to that purpose; I told him he had got the man's money, he said he would not give it me; I said, then soldier fetch an officer, I sent for an officer, and in the mean time the soldier was gone for the officer, he gave me the money, and said he picked it up.

Court. He might pick it up might not he?——Indeed to tell the truth, I believe he might, for the man was so much in liquor I do not believe he was capable.

Court to Jury. There is no pretence to charge the man with this, the prosecutor was so drunk.

Court to Prisoner. Be more careful for the future, let this be a caution to you.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice HEATH.

---

270. THOMAS WILLIAMS was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 4th of January, one watch with a metal case, value 20s. the property of Joseph Sommerville.

JOSEPH SOMMERVILLE sworn.

On the 4th of this month, in the morning, I lost a metal watch; I was at a house I was acquainted with in Piccadilly, I take it to be a house where the waggons put up; the prisoner followed me out of the house, and told me he would see me home, this was about a quarter before seven; I seemed to turn to leave him, I had not gone above two yards before he was along side of me, and told me he would see me home, he said I appeared like a gentleman, he would go home with me, and he was a gentleman's son, I told him by no means, I had but a very few yards to the house where I had been three years; there was a little court near Shug-lane, Piccadilly, there are two steps at the bottom of this court, and he came and took my watch from me openly, and attempted to run off with it, I stopped him immediately, he threw the watch behind him a matter of three yards, and the watch is all broke to pieces, I value the watch at twenty shillings.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was drinking with this gentleman, in that house, we had two or three pots of beer together, and talked about coming home, this gentleman said it was almost time for him to go home.

Prosecutor. He was quite in a different company.

Prisoner. We came out of the house together, and we came about a hundred yards together, and he accused me of taking his watch.

Court to Prosecutor. What are you?—I am a gentleman's servant.

DAVID OWEN sworn.

I am a taylor, I have known the prisoner from a child, his father was a journeyman taylor and worked for me; the prisoner has worked for me these two last years, he always behaved as a faithful, honest, sober servant; he worked all the holidays, his only fault is getting in liquor; I will take him again this afternoon, I have the highest opinion of his integrity, I have trusted him repeatedly, and always found him honest.

WILLIAM VAUGHAN sworn.

I am a dealer in coals, I have known the prisoner between twelve and thirteen years; his father and mother lodged in my house, and he at the same time for six years; I look on the prisoner at the bar, at the time he lodged with me, to be one of the most dutiful, honest young fellows I ever saw.

WILLIAM DAWES sworn.

I am a coal-dealer, I have known him about about a year and half, his mother and he lodged in my houſe; he is a very honeſt young fellow, but now and then he would get a little in liquor, but not often; a man called the day before his trial came on at the Old Bailey, and left word no money would do: I afterwards found out they had offered to make it up for money, the perſon that called at my houſe, ſaid, tell Mrs. Williams no money will be of any ſervice with regard to her ſon.

Court to Proſecutor. Did he ſeem in liquor at that time?——I cannot ſay.

Jury to Proſecutor. Was you in liquor? ——I had been drinking.

NOT GUILTY.

Court to Owen. I deſire you will take him with you?——I will, my Lord.

Court to Priſoner. I hope this will be a warning to you, never to get drunk again.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice ASHURST.

---

271. MATTHEW HAWKINS alias CORNWALL was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 2d of January, thirty-two pounds weight of lead, value 2s. belonging to one John Tutt, then and there fixed to an empty houſe of the ſaid John Tutt, againſt the form of the ſtatute.

A Second Count for ſtealing on the ſame day, two iron grate-cheeks, value 8s. a bar value 10d. a rule, value 6d. twenty yards of garden line, value 4d. a bill with a wooden handle, value 6d. a piſtol value 6d. one ſmall bill, value 2d. his property.

WILLIAM FUBBS ſworn.

I am a gardener; I was at my own door on the 2d of this month, and I heard a noiſe at the houſe which is oppoſite to an empty houſe, which belongs to John Tutt, and I ſtood at a conſiderable diſtance, and I ſuſpected there were thieves; I got a man from the George to come over to this houſe, and we waited about ten minutes, I ſaw the priſoner come from the back door, he had nothing upon him but two ſmall keys, and a knife; we apprehended him, we went in after with Mr. Tutt, and found a quantity of lead laying within the door, and an iron grate and two cheeks, and a horſe-piſtol, and a bill-hook, and a garden line and rule; there was a bag that part of the property was in, and ſome part would not go in, we found theſe things within the door; he ſaid, he was a very poor man and in diſtreſs, and came into this houſe to lay down and refreſh himſelf; and there is a ſhed behind the houſe belonging to it, with pea-ſtraw in it; he ſaid he laid there two or three hours before, and finding himſelf very cold, and ſeeing the houſe open came in there.

How came he to go out?—I cannot ſay.

Did you make a noiſe in going there, I ſuppoſe you went as ſilent as you could? ——Yes.

Was there pea-ſtraw under the ſhed? ——Yes.

What ſort of a noiſe was it you heard? ——I heard a noiſe at the top of the houſe, as if they were ripping off the lead.

What at the top of the very roof?——It appeared to me to come from the top, but I cannot ſay whether it was withinſide or withoutſide.

JOHN TUTT ſworn.

I am owner of this houſe, I went with the laſt witneſs and ſaw all theſe things there, the lead apparently came from under the ſill of the garret window; it correſponded with the other, there is a bill and a piſtol, I can ſwear to the piſtol, it was in the bag, I left it in the parlour window; there is the cheeks of the grate, and the garden line, they have been at my houſe.

Priſoner. Did not you ſay your houſe and premiſes were very much deſtroyed by the mob that went to ſee the Balloon at Chelſea?——The garden was.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I am a labouring man, I have been out of work in the froſt, I heard of a garden at Fulham that wanted work, I went paſt this houſe, houſe, it ſeemed to be a ruinous place; I was much fatigued, it looked more like a hovel, I went and laid down for two hours and waked, whether by the cold or I laid too long; my friends chiefly lay in the country, I have reſpectable people, and I truſt to your mercy, if I have done wrong in laying down in that place.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

---

272. SARAH THACKER otherwiſe COOLEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 24th day of December, one copper crewet ſtand plated with ſilver, value 20s. three copper crewets plated with ſilver, value 18s. and two glaſs crewets, value 4s. the property of Thomas Aſhlin, privately in his ſhop.

THOMAS ASHLIN ſworn.

I am a broker, I loſt the caſters, I ſaw them five minutes before.

WILLIAM SEASONS ſworn.

I am conſtable of the pariſh of Clerkenwell, I keep a public houſe oppoſite the new Seſſions-houſe; on December the 24th, the priſoner came into my houſe for a pint of beer, with a little girl that was tried yeſterday for ſome lace; ſhe had a pint of beer, and in going out ſhe had a ſort of a ragged apron on, and I ſaw one of the feet of theſe caſtors hang out of her apron; I aſked her what ſhe had there, ſhe ſaid it did not concern me, I ſaid, I inſiſted on looking at it, ſhe refuſed, I put my hand in and the cruets were all looſe, and this handle out; ſhe ſaid ſhe was going to Cowcroſs to have the rims altered, or ſomething thing of that kind, and ſhe ſaid ſhe bought it of a woman coming along, who offered it her for two ſhillings; going to the Rotation-office I walked about a yard before her, and ſhe attempted twice to make her eſcape from me.

(The caſtors depoſed to.)

Priſoner. This I ſay, and it is God Almighty's truth, here I am before you all, there are two or three gentlemen that live in St. James's that have known me twenty years.

(Nobody appeared to her character.)

GUILTY

Of ſtealing, but not privately.

To be privately whipped, and confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

---

273. JOHN BUTLER and JOHN TIMMINS were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 19th day of December laſt, ſeventy pounds weight of old iron, value 5s. the property of Benjamin Campion, Simon Golding, and Thomas Bolton.

The priſoner Butler was taken with the property upon him, and when he was taken he confeſſed the theft.

JOHN BUTLER, GUILTY.

Whipped.

JOHN TIMMINS, NOT GUILTY,

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice ASHURST.

---

274. DENNIS SULLIVAN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 3d of January, one copper tea-kettle, value 8s. and one hat, value 1s. the property of Lazarus Meyor.

THOMAS LEE ſworn.

On the 3d of this month a fire broke out in Eaſt Smithfield, and the proſecutor's houſe I believe was ſome part on fire; I was going juſt within a yard of his houſe in company with the headborough, and the high-conſtable came and deſired him to give a good look out, and in a few minutes the priſoner priſoner come out with a tea kettle full of hot water, and two hats on his head; the headborough and me followed this fellow for better than half a quarter of a mile, we thought he was going to leave the tea-kettle ſomewhere, at laſt he turned up Saltpetre-bank; he there turned about and ſaw us following him, and we ſtopped him and took the tea-kettle from out of his right hand, and the hat from his head, and he was committed; he ſaid he found the tea-kettle, the hat he ſaid was his own.

Priſoner. There is no bigger thief in the world than the witneſs, he has been tried for felony ſeveral times.

(The kettle and hat depoſed to.)

Priſoner. I am a ſtranger in London, I have been a ſeaman ſeven years on board the Bedford.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice ASHURST.

---

275. WILLIAM ELLIOTT alias ELLARD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 4th of January, one baſket, value 4d. and five pounds weight of butter, value 5s. the property of Joſeph Wilkins.

JOSEPH WILKINS ſworn.

I carry cheeſe and butter from Newgate-market to Iſlington, I live at Iſlington; on the 3d of January I loſt a baſket out of my cart, I ſaw the priſoner take it, it was about twenty yards from Roſe-ſtreet, in Newgate-ſtreet; it was laſt Monday was ſe'nnight, about twenty minutes before eight in the morning, he put it on his ſhoulders, I was ſtanding juſt by, he came behind and took it; I followed him about twenty or thirty yards to ſee what he would do with it, then I ſtopped him, and aſked him what he was going to do with it, he ſaid, he was going to carry it to a houſe in Newgate-market; I ſaid it was mine, and he dropped it, and he was ſecured, he never run away from me.

RICHARD CHILD ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner carrying a flat of butter along the ſtreet, and I ſaw the laſt witneſs ſtop him, and aſk him where he was going with it.

RICHARD TILCOCK ſworn.

I am a conſtable, I apprehended the priſoner, here is the flat that was delivered to me at Guildhall by order of the Magiſtrate.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I came by and ſeveral people ſtood by the carts, and a man ſaid to me, having a little pain on my ſhoulders, ſays he, will you carry this for me, I ſaid yes, he ſaid take it up and I will give you two-pence; ſo I took it, and I had not got twenty yards before this man ſtopped me.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

276. MARGARET FINNEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 7th day of January a quart pewter pot, value 18d. the property of Thomas Barnett.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

277. The ſaid MARGARET FINNEY was again indicted for ſtealing on the 7th day of January, one pint pewter pot, value 4d. the property of John Cox.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

278. SUSANNAH GODDARD and ELIZABETH PALMER were indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and and entering the dwelling houſe of Francis Kain, about the hour of eight in the night, on the 9th day of December laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein one linen ſhirt, value 5s. and one plain white muſlin ſhawl, trimmed with fringe, value 4s. his property.

FRANCIS KAIN ſworn.

I live in Angel Court, Biſhopſgate-ſtreet, on Thurſday the 9th of December laſt, after eight, my houſe was broke open, I was from home at the Waterſide about my buſineſs, I came home in the evening, I have a wife and ſervants and children, they were at my warehouſe, which is a little diſtance from my dwelling-houſe, my wife's aunt locked up the houſe, ſhe is not here, when I came home I found the door open, my wife was at home when I came home, but my drawers were moved, and all my wearing apparel, caſh, plate, and white bed quilt of the bed and dreſſing glaſs off the table, to a great amount were gone, we had nothing left but what we ſtood upright in; on the day following I made application to the officers, and they told me there was a ſuſpicious place near where I lived, I went there and there was a ſhirt of mine, and a ſhawl of my wife's there, and I found the priſoner there; the ſhirt was marked F. K. and the priſoner Goddard ſaid ſhe rented the room, when I was there ſhe was there, the other priſoner was not there at that time, ſhe ſaid Elizabeth Palmer brought it there.

Mr. Peat, Priſoner's Council. You found your wife in the houſe when you came home?——Yes.

And the doors were open?—Yes.

You knew the ſhirt when you ſaw it?—Yes.

JOHN WILKINSON ſworn.

I was informed that Mr. Kain's houſe was broke open, and ſome of the property was in the priſoner Goddard's poſſeſſion, in ſearching the houſe we found a ſhirt and a ſhawl, which the proſecutor ſwore to; I produced them, the other priſoner was taken by Juſtice Wilmot's people afterwards on the information of Goddard. (The ſhirt depoſed to.)

It had an F. upon it I ſaw, but the K. is cut out.

M. Peat. What is done with your old ſhirts?——I know it by the frill, it is a paticular ſtriped muſlin.

PRISONER GODDARD'S DEFENCE.

This young woman lodges with me, ſhe goes out to work, ſhe came home about half paſt eight, ſhe went to fetch me half a peck of coals, ſhe returned and ſaid look Sukey what I have found, I picked up an old ſhirt; ſays I ſure! the next day the gentleman came and took me.

The priſoner Goddard called three witneſſes, who gave her a good character.

SUSANNAH GODDARD, GUILTY

Of ſtealing the goods, but not in the dwelling houſe.

To be confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction,

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

279. MARY SMITH was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 7th day of December laſt, one ſmall hair trunk, value 5s. the property of James Seaſons.

Robert Maltwood ſaw the priſoner take the trunk, and purſued her and took her.

GUILTY.

Privately whipped and confined twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

280. LAWRENCE MULLEN was indicted for ſtealing on the 11th day of January, one carcaſe of mutton, value 2l. the property of Richard Chambers.

JOHN IDIS ſworn.

I am ſervant to the proſecutor, he is a Butcher, I loſt a carcaſe of mutton laſt Tueſday evening, I only ſpeak to the property.

MARY GREEN ſworn.

I watch the market in Whitechapel, the houſe was ſhut up about eleven, the conſtable came to me, and aſked me if I loſt a ſheep, I ſaid no, for I had forty-ſeven counted over to me, and I have forty-ſeven now, ſo that is right; in the morning I aſked my maſter the proſecutor, if he had loſt any, and when he had looked he found he had loſt it, before the goods were counted over to me at ten o'clock; I had often ſeen the priſoner loitering about the ſtreets and in the dead of the night he would come.

JAMES WILSON ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner laſt Tueſday night, after ten; he paſſed by me with a whole carcaſe of a ſheep; I ſtopped him, and aſked him where he was going, he ſaid to the Black Horſe in Roſemary-lane, I took him to the Watch-houſe, and delivered him up to the officer of the night.

—— SHEPHERD ſworn.

I was the officer of the night, between ten and eleven, the watchman brought the priſoner and the carcaſe to the watch-houſe, he ſaid the man gave him ſix-pence to take it into Roſemary-lane, at the ſign of the Black Horſe, from Whitechapel.

(A ſhoulder of the carcaſe depoſed to.)

Idis. I am ſure there was one miſſing upon the whole, I ſaw a vacant hook when I gave the woman charge; it is called Norfolk mutton.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

A man employed me to carry it.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Juſtice ASHURST.

281. SAMUEL BETHELL was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 6th of December laſt, two pair of mens leather ſhoes, value 2s. two linen ſhirts, value 7s. three muſlin neckcloths, value 2s. one pair of thread ſtockings, value 6d. one pair of worſted ſtockings, value 6d. two pair of cotton ſtockings, value 12d. one cloth coat, value 6s. one cloth waiſtcoat, value 2s. a gold and cotton waiſtcoat, value 10s. a horn ſnuff-box mounted with gold, value 20s. one volume of the Spectator, value 3d. one common prayer book, value 6d. one other common prayer book, value 3d. and ſeven guineas, value 7l. 7s. and nineteen ſhillings in monies numbered, the property of Thomas Buſh.

THOMAS BUSH ſworn.

I am coachman to Mr. Holland, in Harper ſtreet, I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment, I ſaw the money and ſome of the things about an hour before the priſoner helped in Lord Rodney's ſtables, the things were in my room over the ſtables, my money was in a little box, and a little canvas bag; the three books, and a pair of ſtockings were in the priſoner's pocket, when he was apprehended; I miſtruſted him, becauſe he abſented himſelf.

WILLIAM MEALAND ſworn.

I apprehended the priſoner, and took the three books and the ſtockings out of his pocket.

(The things depoſed to.)

Priſoner. I never ſaw any of the money.

GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

---

282. JOHN HORNE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 29th day of December laſt, twenty nine pounds-weight of ſoap, value 10s. the property of John White.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

283, ED-

283. EDWARD BUNDY was indicted for feloniously ſtealing on the 7th day of January, fifty-ſix pound weight of molaſſes, value 10s. and one flint glaſs bottle, covered with wicker, value 5s. the property of John Pallatt, Robert Silverſide and Charles Midford.

The priſoner was taken with the property upon him. (Vide 234.)

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

284. WILLIAM CHILD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 28th of December laſt, one coat, value 5s. the property of Thomas Hayden.

The priſoner was ſeen by Mr. Kayt, taking the coat out of the proſecutor's houſe, and apprehended immediately by the proſecutor, with the property.

Priſoner. A man dropped it, and I picked it up.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

MISDEMEANORS.

285. MARY DAVIS was indicted, for that ſhe, on the 4th of December laſt, one piece of falſe and counterfeit money and coin, made and counterfeited to the likeneſs and ſimilitude of a ſhilling, unlawfully, unjuſtly, and deceitfully did utter to one Joſeph Pincham, knowing the ſame to be falſe and counterfeited.

Another Count, for that ſhe had about her another piece of falſe and counterfeit coin, to the likeneſs and ſimilitude of a ſhilling, knowing it to be falſe and counterfeited, againſt the ſtatute.

The indictment was opened by Mr. James; and the caſe by Mr. Silveſter.

JOSEPH PINCHAM ſworn.

I live ſhopman with Mr. Flint, the corner of Eaſtcheap, I never ſaw the priſoner but once, that was on the 4th of December, about two in the afternoon, ſhe came in and aſked for three thouſand pins, about nine-pence a thouſand, they came to two ſhillings and three-pence, and ſhe gave me three ſhillings to change, I gave her nine-pence out of the three ſhillings; I put the three ſhillings in the drawer, and then ſhe aſked me to let her have three thouſand more of the ſame kind of pins, and a pound of thread, which ſhe had; the thread came to three ſhillings and eight-pence, and they both amounting to five ſhillings and eleven pence, ſhe gave me ſix ſhillings to pay for them, beſides the firſt three; when ſhe gave me theſe ſix ſhillings, I turned them, and perceived they were all of one head, and the faces of them all the ſame way, and all of one date as I thought. I ſhewed them to Mr. Allen, and he ſaid he thought they were counterfeits, and I ſtopped her; Mr. Flint deſired the woman to be detained.

What made you think them counterfeits? —I knew them to be counterfeits by ſcraping the edges of one of them, and they were all of the ſame coin.

What became of the woman afterwards? —The woman remained in the ſhop while Mrs. Flint ſent for a conſtable; the conſtable did not take charge of the woman, I cannot ſay why.

D

Did he refuſe to take charge?——The woman was ſearched in my preſence, I went with her and the conſtable up ſtairs, and when ſhe was ſearched in the counting houſe, they found no bad money upon her.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. You take a great deal of ſilver, I have no doubt, Sir?—Yes.

You ſuſpected this to be bad, becauſe, as you tell us, the heads were all the ſame way?——Yes.

In the courſe of a day you take a deal of bad money?——We do. (The money produced.) It has been in my poſſeſſion ever ſince.

Mr. Garrow. Do you mean to ſwear that was the ſame money the woman gave to you?——So far as this, I am confident ſhe paid me three ſhillings the firſt payment, our family were at dinner, and Mrs. Flint always takes the money out of the till when ſhe goes to dinner, there was only one ſhilling in the till, and I put that three ſhillings to it, and I went to the other ſide to ſerve her with the other things, and when I took the other ſix ſhillings, one being in the drawer before, I would not be poſitive which of thoſe three it was that was good; but ſhe might give me one good one among the firſt three; the other ſix were never mixed with any other money.

Mr. Garrow. You ſay you take a great deal of money in the courſe of a day?—Yes.

Are you ſure they are the ſame?—I am able to ſay they were not changed.

ROBERT ALLEN ſworn.

I am ſhopman in this ſhop, I have known the priſoner Mary Davis ſome time before I ſaw this money; Mr. Pincham ſhewed it me, it was what I ſuppoſed to be bad; a ſilverſmith was ſent for, that examined the money in the preſence of the priſoner, that was after ſhe came to the ſhop, and bought theſe articles which Mr. Pincham has mentioned, and the money he ſhewed to me, ſaid I thought it was bad; it being ſo very well managed in the finiſhing part to appear as a good ſhilling, that Mrs. Flint thought it proper to ſend for a ſilverſmith.

Court. I ſhall not permit you to tell the opinion of that ſilverſmith.

Allen. The priſoner was detained in the ſhop till the conſtable came, I did not ſee her examined, I know of nothing paſſing up ſtairs.

Mr. Garrow. I will not aſk that laſt gentleman a ſingle queſtion; I ſhould never reconcile myſelf to trouble you, Sir, with giving an anſwer, it would fatigue you ſo exceedingly: good night to you, Sir.

SAMUEL VINES ſworn.

I am clerk to Mr. Vernon, I have ſeen all theſe ſhillings before, and I decided by day-light that they were bad, I can ſwear to them now.

You are ſufficiently acquainted with money?——I am perfectly clear that they are counterfeit money.

Mr. Garrow. You ſaid you had ſeen them by day-light, and you then decided they were all counterfeit?—Yes.

Now, Sir, if theſe had been given to you as change for money at the play-houſe, would you have taken them?—Certainly, I have taken much worſe.

And you are very converſant on the ſubject?——Yes.

However you have taken much worſe?—Certainly I have.

Court to Mr. Silveſter. From what circumſtance are we to infer that this woman knew theſe to be counterfeits?

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, I will ſave Mr. Silveſter the trouble by ſaying a word or two in a caſe that certainly does not require a word; for in order to convict the priſoner you muſt be ſatisfied of this, that ſhe, perfectly well knowing that theſe ſhillings were bad coin, and with a view to impoſe that ſhilling to the witneſs as a good one, ſhe did offer it to him in payment: Gentlemen, you have heard from every body, and even from that young gentleman, whoſe judgment I did not think fit to truſt to, and whom I did not chuſe to trouble with an anſwer; and I am ſure that before the next Seſſions, if this woman is convicted on ſuch evidence, I ſhall not have the honour of attending this Court, for I am very free to acknowledge that this very morning to a hackney-coachman who brought me hither, I tendered ſome ſhillings in payment much worſe than theſe, and I truſt the Court will believe me, when I ſay I ſo tendered them without knowing they were bad: Gentlemen, I need not inform you, for his Lordſhip will do it much better, that it is not from the accidental circumſtance of a man's uttering two or three bad ſhillings in payment, or even from his having two or three more about him, that you are to infer he is an utterer of bad money, knowing it to be bad: Gentlemen, the puniſhment in this caſe if the priſoner is convicted, is, that ſhe ſhall lay in gaol for a year, and I am confident that there are none of us who have attended here, and who know the ſituation of that gaol of Newgate, who know the miſerable ſituation of the wretches that are confined there, that will feel any ſentiment but compaſſion, for anybody who has lain in a gaol only one night; and I am perfectly ſatisfied that you will not, you cannot, I am perfectly ſatisfied, that you dare not commit that poor woman, and that unfortunate infant, to have its education in the gaol of Newgate, on evidence on which every one of you, every man who now hears me, might long ſince have been committed to Newgate: Gentlemens in your hand, I leave the poor priſoner, perfectly well ſatisfied that your verdict will be an inſtant acquittal; I will not inſult you in calling any evidence, I will leave her in perfect ſecurity in your hands, and not ſay one word more to procure the acquital of a perſon, who certainly ought not upon ſuch evidence to have been brought here at all.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

286. JOHN PRING the younger was indicted for obtaining by falſe pretences on the 13th of December laſt, from one John Cookers, tallow chandler, three dozen of eights, three dozen of tens, and three dozen of twelves, for Mr. Pring of Kenſington, meaning for his father; and pretending that he was in the Exciſe, and ſurveyed Mr. Barclay in the Hay-market, meaning Alexander Barclay, and that he had recommended him to the ſaid John Cooker's, and that he ſhould ſend them to the Swan and Two-necks, to go by Mr. Barclay's cart; whereby he obtained nine dozen pounds weight of candles, value 3l. 15s. the property of the ſaid John Cookers.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

287. JOHN LANGRISH was indicted for wilful and corrupt perjury.

Thomas Pritchett was called on his recognizance, and did not appear.

Mr. Fielding of Council for the proſecution, thus opened the caſe.

Gentlemen of the Jury, you have juſt heard a perſon of the name of Thomas Pritchett called on his recognizance, he has not appeared; he was the perſon we wiſhed to get at; and I am afraid that the circumſtances of this caſe are ſo particular that it will be impoſſible to affect either the man at the bar, or ultimately to get at the great offender; the perſon at the bar has been abandoned by the man that has now abſconded himſelf; and I confeſs I am ſomewhat at a loſs, whether to look at the priſoner with indignation or approbation; with indignation for having committed this crime, by the inſtigation of the wickeder party, or with approbation for his open confeſſion of it: but however, I can only give evidence of his own aſſertion; I ſhall therefore be in the correction of the Recorder, whether that be or be not evidence ſufficient to meet that charge; if it be, then I ſhall proceed to ſtate to you the nature of this crime, and the manner of its being committed, to the prejudice of the proſecutrix.

Court. You open this with great fairneſs Mr. Fielding, and you apply to me; is not the proſecutrix herſelf a witneſs in the cauſe?

Mr. Fielding. My Lord, ſhe is an intereſted witneſs, inaſmuch as there will e a motion for a new trial.

Court. This proſecution is conducted with great fairneſs and propriety, and it is my duty to ſtate my opinion in the preſent ſtage of the buſineſs: therefore, if you have no evidence to diſprove what the defendant ſwore on the trial, except his own declaration that it was falſe; I am clearly of opinion that the Jury cannot in point of law find him guilty.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

288. JOHN STAFFORD ENGLISH was indicted for that he, on the 24th of October laſt, falſly did pretend to one James Roe, of London, cooper, that he was then engaged with Captain Rogers, to go on a voyage in the Auſtrian, Eaſt Indiaman, as the Captain's ſteward; and did then and there, falſly and deſignedly, aſk him to lend him his watch, that he might appear like a gentleman as he uſed to do, and would afterwards return the ſaid watch, to the ſaid James Roe; by which he did obtain of and from the ſaid James Roe, one ſilver watch, value 3l. one chain, value 1s. two keys, value 2d. and two ſeals, value 2s. his property, with intent to cheat and defraud him of the ſame, and that he afterwards pledged the ſaid watch for twenty-ſix ſhillings with one James Machin.

Court. This indictment ſeems to me, to contain no charge under the act of Parliament; it is not every idle tale, by which a man can prevail upon good nature, either to give or lend him money or goods, but it muſt be a pretence, which if true, ought to gain him credit; as if a beggar comes and tells me a falſe ſtory, if he ſays, he has a wife and ten children that are ſtarving; whereas in truth he never was married in his life: this proſecutor has nothing to do but to bring an action for the watch.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

289. THOMAS RAWBONE was indicted for wilful and corrupt perjury.

Priſoner. Before Mr. Silveſter opens the caſe, I deſire all the witneſſes may go out of Court.

Mr. Silveſter, of Council for the proſecution, thus opened the caſe.

Gentlemen of the Jury, this indictment ſtates that one William Anderſon, a creditor of James Tatler in the ſum of one hundred pounds, took out a Commiſſion of Bankruptcy againſt him, by the name and deſcription of James Tatler; and there was a meeting under that commiſſion, and this Thomas Rawbone then appeared as a creditor; and it became then a material queſtion, whether a bill of ſale had been executed by the bankrupt, and what was the conſideration of that bill of ſale; and Mr. Rawbone ſwore that he prepared the ſaid bill of ſale, on or about the 10th day of November, and that the conſideration money was paid by notes; and that the ſaid bill of ſale was executed by the ſaid James Tatlock at his houſe, either in November or December, then laſt paſt; meaning November or December, 1783; this fact is denied: the aſſignment of perjury is, that Mr. Rawbone did not prepare the bill of ſale; that the money was not paid by notes; nor nor any conſideration paid for the ſame, nor was it executed at his houſe in November or December, 1783: this fact being ſworn by Mr. Rawbone, when the bankrupt came to his laſt examination, the whole truth came out; it then appeared that Mr. Rawbone firſt of all applied to the bankrupt, and endeavoured to ſerve him as an attorney and broker, and had ſold his effects, and Tatler on that acknowledged that ſo far from any bill of ſale having been given, in the manner or at the time he had ſworn; that this man came and over perſuaded him in the King's-bench, to ſign this bill of ſale, but that no conſideration was given for it: You ſee the perjury is very ſhort. the queſtion is whether the bill of ſale ſo produced by this man, was true or not: the commiſſion was iſſued the 9th of January, 1784; Tatler was declared a bankrupt the 21ſt of January, 1784, and afterwards Rawbone came to be admitted a creditor: This proſecution is carried on very properly by the aſſignees of that bankrupt; you are witneſſes to the groſs frauds that are frequently committed under commiſſions of bankruptcy, and it is high time that ſhould be done, and that men who are daring enough to come and prove that which never exiſted, ſhould be brought before a Court of Juſtice; and if this caſe is proved as I have ſtated it, I am ſure you will think it your duty to find the defendant guilty by your verdict.

THOMAS HODGSON ſworn.

I am an attorney, I am clerk under a commiſſion iſſued againſt James Tatler; the Commiſſioners declared Tatler a bankrupt; theſe are the proceedings.

Court. You have proved that the Commiſſioners declared him a bankrupt, you will now prove that he was ſo.

Mr. Garrow, Defendant's Council. My Lord, they muſt prove every ſtep that they have averred.

WILLIAM ANDERSON ſworn.

Mr. Garrow. Let him ſtand up before he is ſworn.

Are you at this time a creditor under this commiſſion, againſt James Tatler?—I am.

And you are not ſatisfied with your debt?—I am not.

Is there not at preſent an action brought for the value of the goods which were the ſubject matter of this bill of ſale, by the aſſignees, againſt the perſon who purchaſed under that bill of ſale? Is there at this time an action depending between the aſſignees of Tatler's eſtate and Mr. Freeman?—There is Mr. Freeman claims to recover the value of the goods that were conveyed away by that bill of ſale?—Yes.

Mr Garrow. Then your Lordſhip ſees, that whether that bill of ſale was a true one or not, is to be tried in that action, this gentleman is intereſted with others.

Mr. Silveſter. It does not alter it.

Court. It effects this man, ſuppoſing, as we are to ſuppoſe, we pay at leaſt that credit to a declaration of a commiſſioner to ſuppoſe, that this is not a ſolvent eſtate; the queſtion whether Mr. Anderſon ſhould or ſhould not get any part of his debt, muſt depend upon the iſſue of this trial; and a perſon cannot be an evidence to prove a fact in the eſtabliſhment of which they are intereſted.

JAMES TATLER, the Elder.

Mr. Garrow. Do not ſwear any of the witneſſes till I have examined them.

You have the misfortune to be a bankrupt Sir?——Yes.

Have you obtained your certificate?—No.

Mr. Garrow. Then there is an end of that; this man is intereſted; he is intereſted to ſwear for his creditors, in order to procure his certificate at their hands; he could not be called upon an iſſue at law to prove his own bankruptcy; he cannot be examined to any ſtep that will eſtabliſh his bankruptcy, or increaſe his intereſt.

JAMES TATLER, jun. ſworn.

Mr. Garrow. How old are you?——Fourteen.

I am afraid you are not a creditor of your father's?——No.

Do

Do you know the nature of an oath?—Yes, to ſpeak the truth, and nothing but the truth.

Mr. Silveſter. What was your father, my boy?——A coach-maſter.

Did you know a Mr. Anderſon?—Yes, one of our creditors.

How much did your father owe him?—I believe it was a hundred pounds.

You uſed to take him ſome money ſometimes, did not you?—Yes.

Was your father at home before he was made a bankrupt?—At the King's Bench, I believe he was there a fortnight before he was made a bankrupt, it is ſuch a long while ago I cannot juſtly ſay.

Mr. Garrow. Now my little lad, do you know how much Mr. Anderſon owed your father?——I do not know that he owed him any thing.

But you do not know he did not?—No.

How often did they ſettle accounts?—I do not know.

Did they ever make any balance of their accounts?——Not that I know.

You only know I ſuppoſe what your father has told you?——No.

Mr. Silveſter. Did you carry him money backwards and forwards?——Yes, I heard my father ſay he was indebted to him above one hundred pounds.

Mr. Garrow. What was your father, my boy?—A coach maſter.

How many coaches did he keep?—He had two figures and three coaches.

Court. Did your father follow any buſineſs before the keeping his coaches and horſes?——No.

SAMUEL SATCHER ſworn.

Mr. Garrow. Are you a creditor of Tatler's?—Yes.

Does he owe you any thing?—He did owe me ſome wages.

How much is it?—I cannot ſay, I have had a trifle, it may be about three pounds.

Mr. Garrow. You may go home.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

NUMB. II. PART V.

200. RICHARD CARROLL (a blind boy) was indicted for that he, on the 7th of September laſt, in the gaol of Newgate, did make an aſſault on one John Stockton, and with a certain knife, which he in his right hand had and held, unlawfully, wickedly, wilfully and maliciouſly did ſtrike and cut him on the left ſide of his belly, and thereby gave him a wound of the length of ſix inches, and of the depth of half an inch; whereof he continually labours under great pain and anguiſh.

A ſecond count, charging him as a common aſſault only.

JOHN ROBINSON ſworn.

I am here for piracy, I have not been tried; the 7th of September at night, one of Mr. Akerman's ſervants came to lock us up, and this blind Dick was making a noiſe, I told him, ſays I, Dick you are always making a diſturbance in the ſick ward; I am in the ſick ward; with that he ſays to me, what buſineſs have you with it; and he ſhoved me on a bench, Stockton ſat by me, and Dick pulled Stockton from me, and when I turned round, I heard that Stockton was cut, I did not ſee him do it; I heard the people that were in the ward ſay he was cut, and I went up and ſaw he was cut.

Did you ſee any body have a knife in their hands?—I did not ſee the knife in his hand, nor the perſon that cut him.

Do you know, of your own knowledge, who cut him?—I cannot ſay that it was the priſoner that cut him, I ſaw no knife in his hand afterwards.

Did you hear him ſay any thing?——I did not hear him ſay that he had a hand in it; he ſaid that he was ſorry for what he had done; the knife was found under the bed; when I knocked him down, I did not ſee him throw it away.

Was he told what he had done, did any body tell him?——Yes, they told him he had cut Stockton, and he ſaid he was very ſorry that he had cut him.

——— PITT ſworn.

When I went up into the ward after looking about I ſaw blind Dick ſtanding up, and the man ſitting down, and I thought he would have died every minute, I ſaid, villain, what have you done! do you know you have murdered a man? ſays he, I am very ſorry I have cut him, he was the beſt friend I ever had in my life, he owned the knife afterwards, he owned he had cut him.

Priſoner. I am almoſt ſtarved, and whatever puniſhment you pleaſe to inflict upon me, let it be in a place where there is better living.

GUILTY.

Court to Priſoner. You have been twice capitally convicted: let him be fined one ſhilling and impriſoned two years in Newgate.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

291. THOMAS, otherwiſe THEOPHILUS BELLIS was indicted for that he, contriving and intending to procure the eſcape of one John Daly, in priſon for debt in Wood-ſtreet Compter, did bring and deliver, and cauſe to be delivered to the ſaid John Daly, twenty pieces of twiſted and knotted cord, and one iron crow, to the intent and purpoſe that he the ſaid John might be able to make his eſcape from and out of the ſaid priſon, and that in purſuance of the ſaid contrivance and intention, and by means of the ſaid cord and crow, the ſaid John Daly, on the 17th of July, did eſcape out of the ſaid gaol, and that he did aid, abet, comfort, and aſſiſt him to make his eſcape out of the ſaid priſon.

THOMAS HILL ſworn.

I am clerk in the Sheriff's office, I act for the ſecondaries, I have a capias.

Court. What is the date?——The 7th of June, 1782.

Produce the Sheriff's court paper?——It iſſued on Saturday the 8th of June.

Do you know Daly?——I have ſeen him.

Who was the Sheriff for Wood-ſtreet Compter?—Mr. Nicholſon; I charged him with an eſcape warrant.

When was he taken?—I am not ſure.

——— KIRBY called.

Priſoner. I beg to object to Mr. Kirby's being examined, I wiſh to aſk him a queſtion firſt: is not this proſecution carried on at the expence of the city?—No, at my own expence.

Have you any intereſt in the event of the proſecution?——None in the world.

Is the effect of it to diſcharge you from any ſuit on account of this eſcape?—There is no ſuit depending.

Court. Then Mr. Kirby has no intereſt in this proſecution.

——— KIRBY ſworn.

I am keeper of Wood ſtreet Compter, I remember Daly being in my cuſtody under the Sheriff's warrant and many more plaints; he was firſt brought to my cuſtody on the 10th of June, 1782, as appears from an entry in my book, I have an extract of it; I remember the priſoner, he was in my cuſtody at the ſame time Daly was; I think he was brought in on the 2d of July, I think the priſoner was in about four days, till the matter he was charged with was ſettled; the priſoner frequently viſited Daly after his diſcharge, I gave ſtrict charge that Daly ſhould be taken great care of, I was ſuſpicious of him, and the night before his eſcape, which I think was the 16th of July, one of my men locked him ſecurely in his room, which was pretty nearly over where I lay up two pair of ſtairs, looking into Wood-ſtreet; the next morning he was gone. My man Butt can tell you that I had two more witneſſes, King and Tanney, one was the turnkey, and the other a watchman, and they are both dead; I have the ſmith here, I thought that room the ſecureſt in the houſe: the priſoner went to Oſtend.

Priſoner.

Priſoner. Whether Mr. Daly was taken on an eſcape warrant at Liverpool?——He was retaken in May following.

Did none of your priſoners eſcape out of this room before?—Yes, and it was afterwards made ſecure, I thought it the moſt ſecure room I had in the priſon.

SAMUEL LILLIE ſworn.

I am ſmith to the city of London, I know this room in Wood-ſtreet Compter very well, it was ſecured on the 16th of July, 1782, or a day or two before, which was the day he got out, with ſtrong dog nails three inches long, up and down, and bars to the windows.

Jury. Was the wood found that the nails were driven into?—I cannot ſay that it was altogether ſo ſound as I have ſeen ſome wood.

Did you at that time think it was ſecure?——I did.

WILLIAM BUTT ſworn.

I am one of the turnkeys to Mr. Kirby, I know this room, the priſoner took out the middle bar that Mr. Lillie had put there the day before.

Court. The middle bar was taken out?—It appeared to be drawn out by a chiſſel or ſmall crow, and laying in the room when I went into the room.

Jury. Then it was very inſecure, what length was it?——The nails were between three and four inches, and the crow eighteen inches; the wood was very ſtrong; it was a crow with a flat top. I was at Mr. Daly's room at eleven, he anſwered me, and about a quarter before one I was in the lodge, and I was alarmed by a watchman, that a cord was hanging down in the ſtreet; it was a cord tied by many knots, I thought it was not a cord ſtrong enough to let ſuch a man down, it was ſome cord tied together; we went and broke open the door, the cord was faſtened to one of the under bars, I found Mr. Daly was gone, and this bar laying on the floor; it was clear the man got out of the window by moving the bar.

Priſoner. Was it poſſible to extract the nails with a crow, becauſe it is charged in the indictment as a crow?—The edge of it was ſharp like a knife; Mr. Bellis was in the room twenty times before the bar was put up, he uſed to come every day.

JOHN DALY ſworn.

I was in Wood-ſtreet Compter.

Do you remember that young man coming to ſee you there?—Yes, different times, he was there a priſoner at the time I was there, he came to ſee me, but as for bringing me cord or a crow, he never did in his life; the cord was brought me by a man in St. Giles's, and the crow by a man that was there, that is gone to America, and he took the crow with him.

Mr. Silveſter. I thought you was a ſcoundrel before I called you, now you have convinced us of it.

Priſoner. I meant by my croſs-examination, to have brought out the ſame anſwer that he has given in Court.

Court. He would not have appeared in a very favourable light in coming againſt this priſoner.

Mr. Silveſter. To be ſure, as his friend ſerved him, he has ſerved his friend.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

The

The Seſſions being ended, the Court proceeded to give Judgment as follows:

Received ſentence of death, 11.

John Mills, Edward Payne, Joſeph Fitzpatrick, John Bruce, Thomas Brown, Ann Read, Joſeph Jeffs, Samuel Davis, James, otherwiſe William Walden, Thomas Till, and William Hurt.

To be tranſported for ſeven years, 27.

William Stugnell, otherwiſe Strugler, William Moor, otherwiſe Ranſmoor, Thomas Howard, Jeffery Aſhman, John Maſſias, Thomas Connor, William Teſtor, John Watſon, John Gooden, George Thorpe, John Thompſon, William Wild, Richard Sutton, John Williams, John Johnſon, Jacob Bellatt, John Evans, George Raymond, John Hart, William Elliott, otherwiſe Ellard, Lawrence Mullen, Henry Naſh, James Ellis, Edward Bundy, John Maſon, Joſeph Remnant, and John Marriott.

To be impriſoned twelve months in the Houſe of Correction, 4.

Elizabeth Morris, Mary Smith, Ann Roſton, and John Butler.

To be confined to hard labour ſix months in the Houſe of Correction, 4.

Sarah Thacker, Simon Sloper, Suſannah Goddard, and Elizabeth Palmer.

To be publickly whipped, 13.

William Taylor, Stans Stroud, George Clayton, James Smith, William Teaby, John Butler, Dennis Sullivan, Simon Sloper, William Child, James Gerrott, Thomas Scott, Richard Payne, and William Maſon.

The following perſons were called to the bar on the firſt day of the Seſſions, and received his Majeſty's pardon, on the following conditions:

Nathaniel Collier, to be tranſported to Africa for fourteen years.

Thomas Turner, John Barker, Ephraim Ephraims, William Brooks, and Richard Court, to be tranſported to Africa for ſeven years.

Richard Weſtwood, convicted at a former Seſſions, ordered to be tranſported for ſeven years, to be computed from the time of his conviction.

Sentence was reſpited on Richard Ilcq and Ann Jones.

 The next Seſſions will begin on Wedneſday the 23d day of February, 1785, at the Old Bailey.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 23d of FEBRUARY 1785, and the following Days;

Being the THIRD SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER III. PART I.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLEY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

BEFORE the Right Honourable RICHARD CLARK, LORD MAYOR of the City of London; the Honourable SIR HENRY GOULD Knt. one of the Juſtices of his Majeſty's Court of Common Pleas; the Honourable Sir RICHARD PERRYN, Knt. one of the Barons of his Majeſty's Court of Exchequer; the Honourable FRANCIS BULLER, one of the Juſtices of his Majeſty's Court of King's Bench; the Honourable JAMES ADAIR, Serjeant at Law, Recorder of the ſaid City; JOHN WILLIAM ROSE, Eſq; and others his Majeſty's Juſtices of Oyer and Terminer of the City of London, and Juſtices of Gaol Delivery of Newgate, holden for the ſaid City and County of Middleſex.

London Jury.	Firſt Middleſex Jury.	Second Middleſex Jury.
Thomas Allen	Richard Lawrence	James Manley
Thomas Williams	John Brewer	John Roper
Philip Vivian	John Pittaway	John Remple
Richard Moſs	Thomas Woollerton	William Ricketts
William Martin	Edward Hope	Richard Parry
Joſeph Monk	William Moſs	Thomas Ward
Thomas Oldfield	Richard Perrot	Edward Cunningham
Richard Hollier	Robert Bennet	Anthony Artois
Henry Duffield	Joſeph Roſe	John Williams
John Arnold	* Edward Oxley	Thomas Dawſon
Thomas Meek	Peter Browne	John Powell
Charles Dallard Jervis.	Thomas Young.	Henry Benſon.

* Joſeph Claridge ſerved ſome time in the room of Edward Oxley.

---

292. PETER NEWBERY and WILLIAM IVERSON were indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting John Lockell, on the King's highway, on the 26th day of January laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will, one tin box, value 2d. and two pieces of gold coin of this realm called guineas, value 2l. 2s. his property.

JOHN LOCKELL ſworn.

This Proſecutor being ſo ill as not to be able to ſtand up,

THOMAS SHELTON, Eſq; Clerk of the Arraigns was ſworn to relate his evidence truly.

He ſays, he had been at Chelſea to receive his penſion, he was an out-penſioner, he does not recollect the day he was robbed.

Court. What month was it, does he recollect that?——It was about three weeks ago, but he does not anſwer to the month, I have aſked him ſeveral times; he ſays, he lodges at the Blue-laſt, at Limehouſe, and on his return from Chelſea, after having received his penſion, he was attacked by the two priſoners.

Is he certain of the perſons of the priſoners?—He ſays, he knew them before.

What time of the day was it?——It was in the night, between ſix and ſeven.

Was it dark?—Yes.

How could he know the perſons of the priſoners if it was dark?——They were his bed-fellows at Limehouſe, he ſays, they attacked him in Ropemakers-field.

Did theſe men go with him to Chelſea?——No, they burſt out upon him at once.

From whence?——They were by the houſes, and the tall one Peter ſeized him by the throat, and ſtruck him with his elbow on his breaſt; and the other priſoner cut his trowſers pocket with a knife, and took away two guineas and a tin box.

Was there any thing in the tin box?—Two guineas, and a receipt where he fetched his penſion money from.

Did the priſoners or either of them know of his going to Chelſea?—Yes.

Had he any talk with them about it?—No.

How does he know then that they knew it?——He ſays, as they lodged with him, they knew very well that he was going to Chelſea.

How did they treat him after they had taken away his money and tin box?—He ſays, the tall one caught hold of his throat, and beat him very violently upon his breaſt with his elbow, and then the other cut his pocket and took his money; and then they both beat him againſt the wall and ran away.

Did they beat him with their fiſts or with a weapon?—With their fiſts.

What became of the man afterwards?—He ſays, he leaned againſt the wall, the blood guſhed a good deal out of his mouth, but he made a noiſe and called for aſſiſtance, and the neighbours came.

When were the priſoners taken?—The ſame night.

Did he ſee them the ſame night?—Yes.

How long after the robbery?——About half an hour.

How did he know that it was theſe two men as it was dark?—He ſays, when they came alongſide of him, he ſaw them as plain as he ſees me now.

Then it was not ſo dark, but he could tell who they were?——He ſays it was dark, but not ſo dark but he ſaw their faces, and ſaw them very plain.

Court. Had they any diſguiſe on their faces?—No.

Did they ſay any thing to him?—Not a word.

Has the tin box been found?—No.

When they were taken up about half an hour after, and he ſaw them, did he charge them at that time?——He ſays, he helped to take the firſt, and that he charged them both when they were taken, with having robbed him.

What did they ſay at that time?——He deſires to have a little time; he ſays now, that one of them ſaid, he had not got it.

Court. Let him be turned round in the chair, and ſee whether theſe are the two men?——He ſays, they are the two men.

HENRY HARVEY ſworn.

I am headborough of St. Ann's, Limehouſe, there was an hue and cry on the 26th of January, about ſeven at night, that there was a man robbed in the ſtreet, I went directly out of my houſe into Three Colt-ſtreet, Limehouſe.

How far is that from Ropemaker's-field?——It comes into it; and I ſaw the poor man man, the profecutor, ſtanding up againſt the wall; I aiked him what was the matter, he ſaid, he had been robbed by two men, of a tin box and two guineas, and his penſion ticket, I then went away directly with a man to the priſoners lodgings; the profecutor ſaid, he knew both the priſoners very well, and called them both by their names.

Do you recollect what names he mentioned?——He ſaid, Peter was one, and Will was another; I went to the priſoners lodging directly, with a man that called me, to a place called Vine-ſtreet, at the bottom of Ropemaker's-field, and when I came to their lodgings there was no admittance, I underſtood the profecutor had lodged there, but did not at that time, but the priſoners lodged there then; I knocked at the door, but the miſtreſs of the houſe was a foreigner, ſhe anſwered me out of the window, and ſaid I ſhould not come in; then I went away and came back, and ſhe was coming down ſtairs to the door, and ſhe had opened the ſtreet door and I ruſhed in, and I ſearched the houſe and found a man and woman in the houſe.

Did you find either of the priſoners there?—No, I went back again to Limehouſe corner, between fifty and ſixty yards where the affair happened, and went into a public houſe, and I looked round the tap-room and there was the priſoner Peter, but I not knowing him, he paſſed me as I was drinking a glaſs at the bar, and he went into the ſtreet, and the profecutor was leaning over the poſt at the corner of the ſtreet, facing the public houſe, and he called out conſtable! conſtable! there is Peter, there he runs; I run after him directly, and he run through a narrow paſſage out of Fore-ſtreet, into Ropemaker's-field; he kept running on, but I loſt ſight of him, then he went into a little alley, but I took him about ten yards from his lodgings, where I had been to ſearch for him; the profecutor, and the man who called me to his aſſiſtance were leaning on the noſſil of a pump, the profecutor was bleeding: I brought the priſoner Peter to him, and ſaid is this the man you want? he ſaid this is Peter, and that is the man that took me by the throat; and I took him away immediately and put him in the cage, and then ordered the man to make a fire, and let the profecutor ſit by the fire, and the other man that came to my aſſiſtance told me where to find this man, the priſoner Will: I ſent to the conſtable of the pariſh for two more men, and went away directly to the lodgings of this Will, and they would not give us admittance for a great while, till at laſt I ſaid I would break the door open, after ſometime we got admittance, and the priſoner Will that ſtands here, was in bed, and another man with a woman in the middle of them; and we took him and put him in Shadwell watch-houſe, I took the priſoner that I had at Limehouſe up to Shadwell and they were all three put into the room, and the other little man that was in bed with him; and the profecutor the next day at the Juſtices pointed out theſe two men, he ſaid, he knew the other man, but he was not with them.

JOHN ORANGE ſworn.

I went with the laſt witneſs to the priſoner Iverſon's lodgings, and took him there, he was in bed; I believe it was about half an hour before we got in, I could hear them run up and down ſtairs, he was in bed with another man, and a woman between them; and I took and handcuffed them both together, and took them to the watch-houſe; I was the next day before the Juſtice, and ſaw the profecutor there, the two priſoners and the man that was in bed, the profecutor fixed on the two priſoners at the bar, the other he ſaid was not guilty; he ſaid he knew him, but he was not with them at that time.

THOMAS COLE ſworn.

I was with the two laſt witneſſes, I have no more to ſay than what I have ſaid, which is true; I was with them all the time.

Priſoner Newbery. I have nothing to ſay, here is a witneſs here, that can ſhew I am quite innocent, that I was at home at the ſame time.

ANN

ANN BACCHURST ſworn.

What I have to ſay, is, that I ſent a child for the priſoner Newbery at his lodgings, between ſix and ſeven on the Wedneſday evening, and he was at his lodgings; the child is here, the child came home directly, and the priſoner came home with the child to my houſe; he drove a horſe and cart for my huſband for ſome months, and we always found him a very honeſt man.

What did you want him for?—He ſent me word at one o'clock that ſame afternoon, that he could help me to a houſe in Ratcliff-highway, and I wanted to ſpeak to him about it.

What houſe?—A houſe in New-Gravel-lane, which I wanted to rent.

What Wedneſday evening was this?—This night this robbery was done, and he came with the child and ſtaid at my houſe till eight.

How come you to be ſo very exact about this hour?——I am ſure the clock ſtruck eight when he went away from our houſe, Limehouſe Church clock ſtruck eight.

Where do you live?—At Church-lane, Limehouſe.

How far is that from Ropemakers field?—Not half a dozen yards I ſuppoſe, down the lane where I live.

What is your buſineſs?——My huſband is a ſawyer, and keeps a horſe and cart, and he employed this poor man to drive it, and we never found any thing diſhoneſt in him.

What was the uſe of the horſe and cart?——To carry the ſaw-duſt about London, to bakers.

I think you ſay Newbery had worked for your huſband for ſeveral months?—Yes.

Was it a conſtant employ?——Three or four days in a week generally.

PETER GOODMAN ſworn.

I come for Newbery, he had been the whole day in the houſe, and never was out of it, till this woman ſent for him.

Was you there all day?——Yes.

How did you employ your time?—I deal in fire wood, he was ſawing all day for me, he ſawed and I chopped, I ſtood by him the whole day, I have followed that buſineſs ſince the laſt war.

What day of the month was it?——I cannot ſay the day of the month, it was on the Wedneſday, I never heard of the robbery before this gentleman came to my houſe.

How did this man and you employ yourſelves the day before?——We were in the houſe all day, we began from Sunday, and worked Monday, Tueſday, and Wedneſday, cutting fire-wood for the chandlers ſhops.

Did you and the priſoner dine together?——Yes, he dined with me, he had the ſame as I had.

ANN PARTIS ſworn.

The priſoner Iverſon is a lodger of mine, he has lodged in our houſe for three quarters of a year and better; I never knew any think at all amiſs of him of any kind, he has been a very good man ſo long as I have known him, he goes to ſea in general, but he is at home at preſent, and he was cutting up wood to ſend to the chandlers ſhop; we never heard any thing of the robbery, till they came to take him out of his bed, at half paſt eleven at night; they took another man along with him on ſuſpicion.

Did they lay together?—I do not know for that, I believe ſo.

Do you know any thing of a woman that was along with them?—Yes, there was a woman along with him, the priſoner's wife.

Do you know any thing whether they were all three in bed together?—I do not know, I believe ſo.

Do you know where the priſoner Iverſon had been?—He was at home all the afternoon, he was at home from ſix in the evening till eight.

Mind what you ſay, you ſay that he was at home at your houſe from ſix to eight that evening?—Yes, Sir, he was not out from ſix to eight.

How do you know that?—I am pretty ſure of that.

CATHERINE BERRY sworn.

The prisoner Iverson was in the house from six till nine, till the watchman went past nine, he lodged in the house nine months, and behaved very honest and just, and went to Greenland in the time.

Was you in the house when he was taken?—Yes, we were all in bed, I was in my own apartment, it was about half after eleven when they knocked at the door, and I believe he was out of the house by twelve, because they disputed some time.

ELIZABETH SMITH sworn.

I have lodged in this house almost sixteen months, I was in his company at half after six or rather better, and I went to bed and never saw him after; he was chopping up penny bundles of wood when I saw him.

Is the prisoner Iverson a married man?——I cannot tell, he lived in the back parlour.

Harvey. This man that came up just now, was the man that went to shew me where Iverson was.

Jury to Harvey. When you searched them, was any money found upon them?——I searched the first man, and found a large knife and four-pence halfpenny; in the waistcoat pocket of the other man we found a knife, and, I believe, three-pence.

BOTH GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice GOULD.

---

293. JOSEPH HITCHCOCK otherwise CHURCH, JOHN MILES, and JAMES GRAY were indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 6th of October last, ten thousand ounces of silver, being dollars, and parts of dollars, value 2400l. three wooden casks, value 2s. one wooden box, value 12d. ten linen bags, value 5s. forty watches with two silver cases, and one out-side metal case covered with tortoise-shell, each of the said watches, value 40s. three other watches, value 3l. fifty-seven other watches, with two silver cases each, value 57l. one wooden box, value 12d. and one hundred other bags, value 2s. the property of Joel Goddard; being in a certain ship called the Elbe, on the navigable river of Thames.

The Indictment was opened by Mr. Garrow, and the Case by Mr. Silvester:

The witnesses examined separate at the request of Mr. Morgan, except the Captain and the Gentlemen of the Bank.

AUGUST BODDIKER sworn.

Examined by Mr. Garrow.

On the 5th of October, I remember 10,000 oz. of dollars, weighed out and packed up for the ship Elbe, they were in three casks and one box, they were packed up at the Bank, I attended them to the wharf, and delivered them to one Morris a lighterman at Porters-key, there were three casks and one box.

DAVID SAMUEL sworn.

I am a Jew merchant, I sent one box of watches on board the Elbe, it contained one hundred watches, and nothing else; I delivered them to Captain Goddard on Tuesday the 5th of October; they were different watches, some three cases, some two cases, some with enamelled landscapes, they were watches made for foreign markets.

EDWARD MORRIS sworn.

I am a lighterman, on the 5th of October, I received from Mr. Boddiker, three casks and one box, I delivered them on board the Elbe, to the mate and Captain Goddard; Mr. Goddard was there, I have the mate's receipt.

Mr. Morgan, Prisoner's Council. Did you know Mr. Boddiker?—Yes.

Had you ever seen him before?—Yes.

CAPTAIN JOEL GODDARD sworn.

I am Captain and commander of the ship Elbe, on the 5th and 6th of October, she lay off the Tower, on the 5th I received three casks and two boxes from Mr. Samuel and Edward Morris, and stowed them underneath erneath my cabin in the ſtate room, I ought them to be as ſafe as the other part f my cargo; I left the ſhip on the 6th in e afternoon, ſhe was laying at her moorgs, we fell down to New Crane, we uld not get any further with the ſhip, d we moored her off the New Crane; I turned between ſix and ſeven, when I rerned, I miſſed the three caſks and two oxes.

PETER COLLINS ſworn.

I was on board the Elbe on the night of he 6th of October, between twelve and ne, three men came on board and came own to my cabin, their faces were blackd, I went and told the pilot and two offiers, I went into the ſtate room with the ilot, and I ſet down in the ſtate room and concealed myſelf, I could not ſee the men n the cabin, they ſtaid about ten minutes nd went away.

Court. Had you ever ſeen any of the priſoners before?—No.

JOHN EVANS ſworn.

I was an officer belonging to the Cuſtoms on board the Elbe, on the night of the 6th of October, between ſix and ſeven; I was upon my watch, and two men came into the cabin, and made a blow at me with the end of a boat hook about a foot long, they ſtruck at me twice; the other came down with a cutlaſs in his hand, and he came behind the other, and he ſaid cut him down, murder him, then I dropped; with that the man that had the cutlaſs, ordered me to turn my head between two coffee hogſheads, and put a piſtol to my head, and ſaid, if I turned my head he would blow my brains out, I was a dead man; with that the other came down, but I could not ſee as I was confined; the men went immediately into the ſtate room, and lifted out the barrels of ſilver, and hoiſted them from one to the other.

Did you obſerve the perſons of the two men?—I obſerved them as well as I could, but they came on a ſudden upon me; the firſt of them was a tall one, the other was a ſhort one, I do not know the men, their faces were blacked, they might be in the whole in the ſtate room about twenty minutes, or ſomething better; after they were gone, I went upon deck, and found my companion done up with a handſpike and a rope to faſten him down; and the ſailors were faſtened down with a handſpike corded down over the hatchway.

BENJAMIN WOLFE ſworn.

I know the priſoner Gray, on the 7th of October laſt, about nine in the morning; I ſaw Edward Payne who was convicted here laſt ſeſſions, and the priſoner Gray came to me in the city, to the ſynagogue, they called me out; Mr. Gray applied to me, and ſaid, if you will give me the ſame price that you agreed to give Payne for the dollars, you ſhall have them, I agreed for three ſhillings and eight pence apiece, the ſame I gave to Payne; in the evening I ſaw Gray at Mr. Brown's, in London-ſtreet, and he told me if I would call at his houſe I ſhould have them; accordingly I went by his appointment to his houſe, in Denmark-ſtreet, Ratcliff-highway, and received from him four hundred and ſeventy dollars; and I returned back a little time after, and went to Brown's in London-ſtreet, and paid Brown ſeventy-five pounds for Mr. Gray.

Did you ſee Gray afterwards?——I ſaw him a little while after, and I aſked him if he had received his money of Brown, and he told me yes; and then a little while after, he ſaid, if I would call for the remainder of his ſhare of the dollars at Brown's on Saturday night, I ſhould have the remainder; on the ſame evening I received twelve ſilver watches of Mrs. Gray, at Gray's houſe, and I gave him ten guineas for the twelve watches; on the Saturday night I went to Brown's, and received the remainder of Brown, being ſix-hundred and ninety dollars; a little while after I ſaw Gray at Brown's houſe, and I paid Gray ſixty pounds in payment for the ſix-hundred and ninety dollars, and the next morning I paid the remainder to Thomas Brown for Gray; when I received the watches of Gray's wife he was not preſent.

Court. Had you any converſation with Gray about the watches?—No.

Mr. Shepherd, Priſoner's Council. You was examined here laſt ſeſſions?—Yes.

You ſaid nothing about Gray being with Payne?—No, becauſe he was not in cuſtody.

Do not you recollect ſwearing that Payne came to you alone that morning?——Yes, he came alone at four in the morning.

But juſt now you ſaid that Payne and Gray came to you together, did not you ſay that Gray came a ſecond time alone?—No.

Did you give the ſame account before the Magiſtrate you have done here?—I ſaid, I had paid ſixty pounds.

Did you ſwear there that Gray came with Payne?—I made a miſtake and told Sir Sampſon I ſhould rectify it.

What did you ſwear the other day?—I ſwore before Sir Sampſon, that Gray came along with Payne.

What are you?—A tobacconiſt.

What ſort of a tobacconiſt are you to deal in dollars?——If a perſon can get a penny in an honeſt way.

What is the value of a dollar, Mr. Wolfe?—When I bought them they were worth four ſhillings and two pence half-penny, I was obliged to get a partner to do it, I could not find the money myſelf.

MOSES JOSEPH ſworn.

I know Miles and Church, I ſaw them in October laſt, on the 7th about eight.

Where did you ſee them?——At a public houſe in Jewry-ſtreet, one May Cook was with them; he told me there was a ſhip done with dollars, but they would not ſtir in it till the noiſe was over.

What does done ſignify?—I underſtood it was a ſhip that was robbed of dollars, they aſked what we would give apiece; my brother Solomons ſaid, he would give three ſhillings apiece, and they ſaid they could make three ſhillings and nine pence of one Wolfe.

Who did you pay the money to?——To Miles, a ten pound Bank-note; the next day, I told Miles my brother had ſent that ten pounds to him, concerning the watches my brother had of him.

Mr. Chetwood. You had no dealings or tranſactions with either of them yourſelf?——None at all.

BENJAMIN SOLOMONS ſworn.

I know the priſoners Miles and Church, I ſaw them on the 7th of October laſt, at the Cheſhire-cheeſe in Jewry-ſtreet; there were Joſeph Church and one May Cook, they ſaid, they did a ſhip of ſome dollars, and they would ſtir none till all was quiet, and then they would work them up; he aſked me and Joſeph, what we would give apiece, I told them three ſhillings, they ſaid, Wolfe gives three ſhillings and nine pence; we parted and ſaw them no more, but in the evening between four and five, I was ſent for by Dolfin and Miles to the Anchor and Crown, in Swan-ſtreet, in the Minories; and Dolfin ſaid, in the preſence of Miles, if I came down to the Old White Lion, in Gravel-lane, ſays Miles, I have a ſhare of dollars and watches, but I ſhall ſtir none of my dollars as yet; accordingly we went to the Old White Lion, and Dolfin gave Joſeph a handkerchief, containing three hundred and ſeventeen dollars; ſome watches were brought to my houſe when I was not at home, and I told Joſeph to pay Miles ten pounds, I believe it was a note for thoſe watches that had been left at my houſe.

Mr. Chetwood. You ſay May Cook and Church came to you at a houſe in Jewry-ſtreet?—Yes, at the Cheſhire-cheeſe.

Was this converſation in the tap-room?——Yes.

There he told you he had committed a capital felony?——Yes.

They muſt have a good opinion of you?——They told me ſo in the tap-room.

How many people might be by at the time?——I cannot juſtly ſay, we were in a box together.

But there were ſeveral people in the room?—There might, I was not a ſtranger to them.

Mr.

Mr. Morgan. Pray what are you?—I am a Jew.

There is very little doubt of that; what is your buſineſs?——I travel the country, and ſerve watchmakers with all manner of materials.

Do you deal in watches?——If I can buy them worth my money.

Where do you live?——In Woolpack-ally, Houndſditch.

Have you been long acquainted with the priſoners?—Not to exceed a twelvemonth.

I ſuppoſe that was ſome of your firſt dealings?——No, Sir, it was not.

Did you buy any of the dollars?——I bought ſome of Dolfin.

How much might you give him?——I bought them at the rate of three ſhillings apiece.

HANNAH DOLFIN ſworn.

I live in Old Gravel-lane, I keep a chandler's ſhop, and ſell fruit.

Look at the priſoners, do you know them?—Yes, I ſaw them in October laſt, I cannot recollect the day; but the laſt time I ſaw them, was the Sabbath day at night.

What o'clock did they come to your houſe?—They did not come to my houſe.

Where did you ſee them?——Joſeph Church and May Cook came to my door on the Thurſday in the afternoon, that was the Thurſday before the Sabbath day, they came and aſked me if John was within.

What next did you ſee?—I ſaw nobody after, nobody came to my houſe that day, nor never have been nigh my houſe ſince, to my knowledge; Jack Miles came there, juſt came in to ſee my ſon and went out again.

Did you meet any of them after that?—Yes, on the Sunday night after that, I met Joſeph Hitchcock and Jack Miles, at the foot of London Bridge, I cannot ſay the houſe; Hitchcock's mother came to my houſe, and aſked me to go a little way to ſee her ſon Joe, he had ſomething to ſay to me; and when I ſaw him, he aſked me how my ſon did, and they wanted me to go and tell him his property was found, and he ſhould have it.

What property?——That I cannot ſay, I did not aſk them; they ſaid, he ſhould have his property, and they would pay part of his expences, if he would not turn evidence againſt them.

What was he to turn evidence againſt them for, did they tell you that?——No, Sir, they ſaid, they were not affraid of any body but him.

Why were they affraid of him?——Becauſe he would turn evidence againſt them.

Mr. Chetwood. Do not gueſs, tell what they ſaid?——Joe Church ſaid, May Cook was a good little fellow, and that he truſted his life in his hands; that was all that paſſed that I can remember.

Did they ſay what property was ſafe, or where it came from?——No, Sir, not one word of that kind.

Mention the names of the perſons you ſaw on Thurſday morning?——The two firſt perſons I ſaw on Thurſday morning, were Ned Payne and James Gray, they came in the morning, and my ſon got up from breakfaſt, and went out and met them at the door.

Was any thing found in your garden afterwards?—One of Mr. Green's men came in in the morning, and found ſomething, but I cannot ſay what it was, I did not ſee it.

JOHN JOHNSON ſworn.

I know all the three priſoners, by working upon the river; the firſt time I ſaw them before this was at Dunkirk, about three or four months ago, it was in the winter, we dined together and ſpent the evening together afterwards.

What did they ſay?—I do not recollect any thing particular that they ſaid, they talked about dollars, and aſked us about one Payne, they heard he was in Newgate; I do not recollect what they did ſay about them rightly.

Why Mr. Johnſon, what did they aſk about Payne?—They aſked whether Payne was taken up and put in Newgate for dollars, and we told them yes.

What did they ſay then?——I do not know, I did not charge my memory with it.

Did you know that Payne was acquainted with them?——No further than their aſking after him, I never ſaw him with them in my life, I knew Payne worked on the river.

Do you mean to ſay now, that upon your telling them that Payne was in Newgate, that there the converſation was at an end?—I do not recollect.

Did they ſay what they were doing at Dunkirk?—Not that I recollect.

How happened you to be at Dunkirk?—I carried over ſome gentlemen as paſſengers, I was two days in company with theſe people; I do not recollect they aſked me any queſtions about the dollars, I do not recollect what they did ſay they came there about.

Had you any converſation about ſhips or the river Thames?——I cannot ſay we had, they were no acquaintances of mine, we had no converſation about the ſhip Elbe, or the ſhip that had been robbed; I do not recollect any particular circumſtance that paſſed; upon my oath, I do not recollect any thing more than I told you.

And you never ſtated that you recollected any thing elſe?——No, Sir.

Mr. Shepherd. This was a ſubject of univerſal converſation upon the river?—Yes.

It was very well known that a man of the name of Payne was taken up, was not it?——Yes.

THOMAS JACKSON ſworn.

I am a waterſman at Graveſend, I never was at Dunkirk but once; about three or four months ago, I was in company with theſe three young men, and John Jackſon was in company and another man who is not here.

What paſſed?——I do not recollect.

Tell us what you can recollect?—I did not take particular notice, I was not quite ſo ſober then as I am now.

Did you aſk them what they did there?——No, Sir, there were ſeveral words paſſed, ſeveral of them were talking about dollars, that they took them down the river and where they ſhared them.

Who were talking about that?——The three people I ſaw at Dunkirk.

What did they ſay about them?—I did not hear them ſay what houſe they took them to; I heard them ſay they ſhared them.

How many ſhared them?——I did not aſk them, I do not remember they told the number.

Did they tell you any thing particular how they were dreſſed?—No, I was ſaying to them, that I heard their faces were blacked when they entered the Brig; and they ſaid, they were ſo diſguiſed, that they did not know each other.

How many did they ſay were on board the brig?—They ſaid ſeven, I told them that I heard that there were twenty one; they ſaid, no, only ſeven, they ſaid their faces were ſo black, they did not know one another at the time, I did not aſk him any particulars, nor how they divided them; one of them ſaid, as I underſtood them, that they ſhared them in a piſs-pot; I did not think of ever being called in queſtion, therefore I did not keep it in my mind.

Mr. Chetwood. You ſay you was in liquor at the time?——I was not ſober, not yet very much in liquor; I was not rightly ſober.

What dollars they were talking off, you did not know, nor the ſhip?——I certainly knew the ſhip, becauſe I was on board of her, when ſhe ſailed out of the port of London.

ELIZABETH CASTLE ſworn.

I have ſeen all the three priſoners, but Church and Miles I know better than the other, I never ſaw them but once, I was in company with them, they came to our houſe together in September.

How long is that ago?—I do not know rightly, nor what time in September it was, I ſuppoſe it is near five months ago.

Are you ſure as to the month?—It was in September.

What

What did they do in your houſe?—— Church and Cook came there with a couple of bags, I aſked them what they had there, they told me copper; I afterwards ſaw them, they moved them out of the bags and they contained dollars, there were a good many I cannot tell how many, there were ſome hundreds I dare ſay; I ſaw all the three priſoners the week following, they came to our houſe and ſtopped a while and went away again.

What did they come for at that ſecond time?—I do not know, not for any thing particular.

What became of the dollars?—Church and Mills came afterwards and took them away again all of them.

At the time they came firſt to your houſe had you heard of the ſhip being robbed?—No Sir, I did not hear it for a great while afterwards.

THOMAS CASTLE ſworn.

I am huſband to the laſt witneſs, I remember Church and May Cook coming to our houſe, it was on a Thurſday to the beſt of my knowledge, I believe it was in September; they came there with two bags and left them, and came in preſently after and put them backwards, and left them there for a day or two, then Miles and Church came and took them out; I think they ſaid they were dollars, there ſeemed to me to be two thouſand or upwards, they put them backwards at my houſe, I believe they put them in my garden, I do not know whether they put them under ground or above ground; Church and Miles came back for them the next night, and went backwards into my garden for them, they brought two bags with them and took them on their ſhoulders and went out of doors.

Had you any converſation with Church and Miles about them ſince?—No never from that time to this, but about a fortnight ago I ſaw Church at Tothil-fields, and he told me he put them in a field behind the inn-yard where I uſed to work, I think the field belongs to Mr. Hudſon.

Mr. Morgan. How long were they in your houſe?—Not a great while.

Mr. Cherwood. This converſation was in September you think?—Yes to the beſt of my knowledge.

JOHN DOLFIN ſworn.

Do you know the priſoners?—Yes.

State in your own way whether any thing paſſed in company with them on the 6th of October?——On the 6th of October laſt, Joſeph Hitchcock came to me and gave me information of ſome dollars and ſome money being on board a brig, he ſaid that Cook gave him the information; we agreed on the Wedneſday evening to meet at the Red Cow in Old Gravel Lane, at eleven o'clock; there were Joſeph Hitchcock, John Miles, James Grey, Thomas Brown, Edward Payne and myſelf, and May Cook was in the boat; we went down to King Edward Stairs, and we went on the other ſide of the water, and there we took another boat; we rowed on board a brig laying off New Crane, we had our faces blacked with ſoot, the brig was laying ſwinging by herſelf at anchor, there were ſeven of us went on board, we faſtened the forecaſtle down, and Hitchcock, and myſelf, and May Cook went down into the cabin; Hitchcock went into the ſtate room and took the captain's cheſt and upſet it: we unbuttoned a little bit of a door under the captain's cabin, and rolled out three caſks and two boxes; Hitchcock and myſelf lifted them up upon the deck, and put them in the boat, and we rowed down to Limehouſe, down to Robert Brown's back door; Thomas Brown went round and knocked Robert Brown up and was let in, then we hoiſted in the caſks and boxes into the back door, and began to open the caſks and boxes, and they contained dollars, and began ſharing them out five at a time, but we found that was too tedious, and we took a two quart pan to meaſure them. Robert Brown burnt the caſks after we divided the dollars and the watches; my ſhare of the watches was thirteen, and we carried them into Robert Brown's parlour.

How

How many dollars came to your ſhare?—I do not know, we went and called Robert Brown down, and gave him fifty-eight dollars for the uſe of his houſe, and Hitchcock and Cook took and carried as many dollars that morning as came to 75l. to one Cuſhman and Farmer, that is Joſeph and Solomon who have been juſt now examined; the ſame morning James Gray and Edward Payne took theirs and ſold them to Benjamin Wolf, and Thomas Brown was going home to his own houſe: Miles took us to Thomas Brown's houſe, I aſked Brown to let me take mine there; on Thurſday evening I went with Miles to Limehouſe, to Thomas Brown's houſe; there Miles and myſelf took his part out, and put them in a coach, and I ſaw them taken to Bunhill Row to his mother's, and there he buried them in the kitchen: on the Friday evening I went to Thomas Brown for my part, and he ſaid they were gone, but I had three hundred and ſeventeen that I ſold to Farmer and Cuſhman; on the ſame evening Cuſhman met me at Crutched Friars and paid me a ten pound note, and likewiſe he gave John Miles a ten pound note for his watches; I ſold three hundred and ſeventeen to Joſeph, who paid me ten pounds for them, Cuſhman is Joſeph, I ſold them to them both, he gave me a ten pound note and ten guineas in caſh.

JOHN CLARKE ſworn.

Mr. Taylor being robbed he applied to Sir Sampſon for aſſiſtance, and the buſineſs was then put into my hands; and on the 19th of October I had received a private information, that there were dollars hid under the ſtones in Mr. Miles's mother's houſe, at a court in Bunhill Row; I went there; after ſearching ſome time I put the end of my ſtick between two ſtones and I felt it go ſoft, and there I found this bag of dollars; I afterwards had twelve watches of one ſort, and fourteen of another ſort given to me by Farmer and Cuſhman and Wolfe, twenty-ſix by Wolfe and thirteen by Farmer; which watches I delivered to Mr. Samuel, he ſwore that they were part of the property taken out of that ſhip before Sir Sampſon Wright.

(Samuel produces ſome of the watches which are the ſame he had from Mr. Clarke.)

Mr. Morgan. Was not the waſh-houſe an open place to which any one might have acceſs?—Yes, I believe it was.

WILLIAM WESTON ſworn.

I know all the priſoners, Hitchcock told me laſt Monday was three weeks, at Tothill-fields, that he and May Cook carried ſome of thoſe dollars to Mr. Caſtle's, that were taken out of the ſhip, I think he ſaid two thouſand five hundred or three thouſand, I will not be clear; he ſaid Mr. Caſtle was a tanner in Long Lane, he ſaid they were buried in his garden, and were removed from there and carried into a field.

Mr. Chetwood. How came you to go to gaol to have this converſation?—I did not go on purpoſe then.

You have not been there before?——I knew Mr. Wright the keeper of the gaol, and I informed the proſecutor.

Did you or did you not go there for the ſake of getting information?——No, not the firſt time, I went afterwards purpoſely.

Court. At the time when you went to him, was he in cuſtody upon this charge?——Yes, I was not employed at all.

Did you do it as a mere act of treachery?——No, I did it for the ſake of Mr. Taylor, that he might get his property again; I know Mr. Taylor, but I had no particular converſation with him.

You knew he was to be tried for his life?——No, I did not.

What induced the converſation?—I told told May Cook, the beſt way he could do, was to give me the beſt information he could, that Mr. Taylor might get his property again.

Was you ever deſired by any body whatſoever to go there?——I was never deſired by any body before; I knew Hitchcock for years, when he was firſt an apprentice.

Did you or di d not you tell Hitchcock would would be better for him?——I did not tell him ſo.

Did you begin the converſation or him?——I began it myſelf.

Was Hitchcock by at the time, when you told May Cook it would be better for him to confeſs?——No.

PATRICK MACMANUS ſworn.

I found twenty-ſix dollars in a hole in a field, in the back of a tan-yard, the other ſide of the water, the place where they deſcribed; it had been opened, and two men were digging in the field, and we called them and they found theſe dollars.

Priſoners. We leave it all to our Council.

Court to Samuel. Do you know that the watches that were delivered to you by Clark, were part of the watches that were on board the ſhip?——Yes, they were.

The priſoner Hitchcock called ſix witneſſes, who all gave him a very good character.

The priſoner Miles called two witneſſes who gave him a very good character.

The priſoner Gray called two witneſſes who gave him a very good character; and his maſter ſaid, he would take him into his ſervice again, if he was acquitted.

ALL THREE GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

294. JAMES WIGGAN, JOSEPH WIGGAN, THOMAS WIGGAN, and JAMES RUSSELL were indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Joſeph Bowden, on the King's highway, on the 24th day of January laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will, one pair of baſe metal ſhoe-buckles, value 2s. one baſe metal knee-buckle, value 2d. one pen-knife, value 6d. two leather gloves, value 6d. one ſtock-buckle, value 6d. one cambrick ſtock, value 2d. and one piece of gold coin of this realm, called a guinea, value 1l. 1s. his property.

JOSEPH BOWDEN ſworn.

On the 24th of January, about a quarter paſt twelve at night, I was robbed near Chelſea, I was returning to Ranelagh where I live; I was going home from town, oppoſite the New Spring-gardens, in Ranelagh road, I was met by five men; they attempted to catch hold of me, but I avoided three of them, and I came to the poſt, they caught at me as I paſt, and the fourth man caught me round the middle, and the fifth man came up; they came and demanded my money, I told them I had no money for them, they then began to riffle me, firſt they began with my ſhoe buckles, they got off my right knee buckle, and they put their hand in my breeches pocket, and took my gloves out of my coat pocket; they took a guinea and a Bank-note out of my coat pocket under my arm, I put the gold in there for ſafety, they returned the bank-note, thinking it was of no conſequence; they cut my ſtock and buckle off my neck with a knife; they threatened repeatedly to throw me into the ditch, till they found the guinea, then they all left me.

How long might they be with you altogether?—About the ſpace of two minutes.

What ſort of a night was it?——It was very light, remarkably light, it was light enough for me to ſee to read my papers.

Was it moon-light?——Yes, bright moon-light.

What day of the month was it?——It was the 24th of January.

Had you an opportunity of obſerving the perſons of theſe men, ſo as to know them again?—Very diſtinctly, my Lord, I took particular notice of them, when they left me I ſaw a watchman at a little diſtance, and I made haſte to call him; and I told him I had been robbed by five foot-pads, and I deſired him to join me in the purſuit of them, and he came, and we went after them directly.

Had they got out of your ſight?—Yes, they were but juſt out of ſight, we made the beſt of our way; we came to the firſt watchman on this ſide the water-works, we called and aſked him, if he had ſeen five men whom I deſcribed, he ſaid, they were juſt gone on before; then we came to Buckingham-gate and aſked the guard, and he ſaid, they had juſt turned up Petty France; we purſued them till they came near the Broadway, there were two or three more watchmen then, and we came in ſight of them in the Broadway; I was apprehenſive if we purſued them they would take up different ſtreets, I deſired the watchman to ſpring his rattle that they might be ſurrounded; when I went cloſe to them I gave the charge, there were other people that were there, and four of them were taken, the other made his eſcape.

Did you ſo obſerve the perſons of any of them, to know them again?——Yes, I knew them then, and pointed them out to the watchmen.

Do you know them now?—Yes, there are three of them ſtands there, and this little man, Ruſſell, is the man that faſtened round me, he is dreſſed different; I know both the others, they all aſſiſted, I am perfectly clear in that man that is ill, his name is Thomas Wiggan; I am quite ſure of the perſon of this man, I am equally clear of all.

Can you in a tranſaction that took up two minutes, and in the hurry and confuſion you was in, undertake to ſwear to the perſons of four men whom you never ſaw before?——I am very clear in it, I have no doubt at all.

Did you obſerve any thing remarkable in the faces of perſons of any of them, that you knew them again?——Yes.

If they had got from you clear that night, had you obſerved them ſo that you could be able to know them afterwards?——Yes.

You think you ſhould have known them anywhere?—Yes.

Were any of them ſearched after they were taken?——They were taken to the watch-houſe, and ſearched in my preſence.

What was found on each of the priſoners?——My two pair of gloves and a guinea, was found on James Wiggan, I cannot ſwear to the guinea.

Was any thing found upon Ruſſel?—The pen-knife and buckle, and part of the ſtock.

Was any thing found upon Thomas?—Nothing.

Any thing on Joſeph?—Nothing.

Did you ever find your ſhoe-buckles or knee-buckle?——No, they were examined before a Magiſtrate the next morning, I ſwore to them poſitively then.

What did they ſay?——They made no ſort of defence.

What Magiſtrate were they carried before?—Juſtice Abbington, in King-ſtreet, Weſtminſter.

When they were taken were they all four together?—Three were together, and one was a little diſtance.

Which of the three were taken together?——James Wiggan was taken by himſelf.

Which was taken firſt, the three or the one?——The three were taken firſt, but they were all partly together.

When you firſt got ſight of them, were they all together?——They were at ſome diſtance, we ſprung the rattle on purpoſe to ſee if it was them, we could not be ſo clear.

How far was you from them when the rattles were ſprung?—Forty or fifty yards, I ſuppoſe.

What did you mean by ſpringing the rattle to try if it was them?——In order to come cloſer to them, as that would prevent them from ſeparating; and when I came to them, I thought I ſhould ſee if it was them.

Were they altogether when you firſt ſprung the rattles?——I am not ſure.

Recollect as well as you can?——They were at ſuch a diſtance I could not perceive whether they were altogether or not.

Were there other people in the ſtreet?—Not juſt at that time, I did not ſee any in the ſtreet at that time.

Did you obſerve and take four men that were together, or take the firſt four men that that you could lay hold of after you had ſprung the rattles?——They were together, I ſaw them four together, I am clear in that; one of them attempted to run away, that was James, the reſt did not.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoners Council. Pray Mr. Bowden, the perſons who robbed you got out of ſight, while you was looking for a watchman?——I was not long looking for a watchman.

I wiſh you would not look ſo much to conſequences, but give direct anſwer?—I ſaw a watchman directly, they were out of ſight before the watchman and I came together.

How long might it be, before the watchman and you ſet out upon your purſuit?—I ſuppoſe about four minutes.

You never got ſight of any four or five perſons till you came to the Broadway, Weſtminſter?——No, we did not, we heard they were juſt before.

At Buckingham-gate you were told, that in ſuch a direction, there were ſuch a number of perſons?——I was.

The moment you got ſight of three, four, or five men, you deſired the watchmen to ſpring their rattles?——Moſt certainly.

You did it in order to try by certain ſymptoms, whether they were the men that robbed you?——No, Sir, no ſymptoms, but that I might diſcover whether they were the men or not.

Did not you ſpring the rattle to try if they were the men?—I was pretty certain.

Then you was not before ſatisfied that they were the men?——No man could tell.

No man could tell! Sir, I will have an anſwer to every queſtion I put to you; you were not ſatisfied before, that they were the men?——I was ſatisfied by appearance but I could not ſee their features; I was better ſatisfied when I ſaw them.

I aſk you before you ſprung the rattle?——I was not ſatisfied then.

What was the fifth man doing at the time the others were robbing you?—There were three of them employed about me, the other two were holding me and ſtanding by.

What were they dreſſed in?——They were dreſſed in browniſh coats, different colours.

Some lightiſh, ſome browniſh, and ſome darkiſh, I ſuppoſe moſt of them had lightiſh colours; had they round hats?——Yes.

Something roundiſh?——Yes.

Did they all ſtand in front of you?——They were all in the front at firſt.

It is a plain queſtion?——They were all in front at times, they did not ſtand ſtill all the time.

Did you know any of them before?——I do not know that I ever ſaw them before.

You are equally poſitive as to them all?—Yes.

This tranſaction took up about two minutes?——A little more.

Do you mean to ſwear, knowing that theſe mens lives are concerned, that in two minutes under the alarm of being robbed by five men, that theſe are the men that robbed you? I took particular notice of them.

Do you mean to ſwear it?——I do.

You do; it is not common for Council to preſs it ſo; was you always of the ſame opinion?——I was always of the ſame opinion, never had any doubt.

They never were committed on ſuſpicion?——They were twice examined.

They never were committed on ſuſpicion, you gave a poſitive charge, and they were poſitively committed?——Yes, they remained for another examination, in expectation of other charges, I gave a poſitive charge.

Did you attend at the ſecond examination?——I did.

If you had given a poſitive charge at the firſt, what was the purpoſe of your attending on the ſecond?—I did not ſee the firſt commitment.

Then I ſee it now, here in the calendar, "detained on ſuſpicion of robbing you"; was there any other charge the ſecond time?—I was examined the ſecond time, then they were fully committed.

I ob-

I observed a singular sort of a smile about you as a prosecutor, when you told us that four were taken, and that you knew nothing about a fifth; now attend a little, have you never said, that you knew who the fifth man was that robbed you?——I never saw him since.

Have you never said you knew him, Sir?——I should know him if I was to see him.

Have you never said, that you have seen him?——No, I never saw him.

Have you ever said you knew him, I will repeat it till midnight, till I get an answer?

Court. The question is this, have you ever said to any body that you knew the fifth man that is not taken?——I do not know where he is.

That is not an answer, have you ever said to any body, that you knew the fifth man?——I believe I have said so.

Who did you say so to?——I do not know particularly.

Have you said so to many people?——It is a subject I have not talked much upon.

Then to whom have you said it?—I do not remember talking about it.

Why you told me just now, you believed you had said so?—I do not know where or when.

Do you know who the fifth man is?—If I was to see him.

Do you know who he was, yes or no, upon your oath?——I cannot know his name, I never saw him before, I should know him only by seeing him again, I never saw him either before or since that night, as I remember.

Upon your oath, have you any reason to believe that you ever saw the fifth man before or since you was robbed?——I have no reason to think that I have, I do not recollect any thing of it.

Mr. Garrow. I am a little more in this secret than my Lord is, and therefore he will pardon my going on, do you recollect saying who he was?——No.

Will you swear you never said who he was?——Yes, I could not say who he was.

But did you?——I never did say it.

Never to any body?——Never to any body, I never could say it.

Have you said it?——I have not.

Have you ever said he lived in your neighbourhood?——No, positively.

Have you never said, that you was afraid to go out, for that he lived in your neighbourhood?——No, never.

How many men were in sight when you and the watchman came first in sight of the men in the Broadway?——I take it there were four or five, perhaps not so many, I could not distinguish.

May be only three?——Yes, there were more than three, there were four or five.

Does your family live at Ranelagh?—Yes.

How long have you lived there?—About a twelvemonth.

Have you any business in town?—Yes, I carry on business at Ranelagh, I am a currier, my manufactory is at Ranelagh.

What had kept you in town so late that night?——I was on business that kept me till past twelve.

Is that your usual time of going home?——There is no regular time for my going home.

Where had you been spending your evening?—I was at the Bedford-square Coffee-house.

Was you alone or in company?——In company with three or four Gentlemen.

Did you sup there?——Yes.

Did you pay the reckoning?—Yes, the reckoning was paid.

Now I ask you for a serious purpose, did you pay your share of the reckoning for that night?——Pay my share! yes, to be sure I did.

Did you or not?—Whether I did or not the reckoning was paid.

Did you pay any thing?—I do not know whether I paid any thing or not.

Then you did not?—I do not recollect what passed; I do not recollect whether I paid the reckoning or not, the reckoning was paid at the house, I was in company with friends.

Which

Which friends paid the reckoning for you, I believe you did not pay it, did you contribute one farthing towards the reckoning?—I was there upon particular buſineſs.

Court. It will be better for you to anſwer, if the gentleman aſks you any improper queſtions which you ought not to anſwer it is my duty to ſtop him, and I will do it, but if he aſks you queſtions that appear at preſent to be nothing to the purpoſe, you cannot judge of that, nor can I, till it appears that they are not; you muſt anſwer them.

Mr. Garrow. Did you pay any part of the reckoning or not?——I do not know whether I did or did not.

Was you ſo drunk you have forgot whether you did or not?——I believe I did not pay any part of the reckoning that night, there were four or five gentleman there, I think two gentlemen paid it.

Was you drunk or ſober?——No more drunk than I am now,

Was you drunk?—I was not.

Was you perfectly ſober?—I was.

How long was you at that coffee-houſe?—Two or three hours.

Now was not the reckoning paid by others, becauſe you had no money in your pocket?—How could that be when I had a guinea in my pocket.

Don't argue with me, was not it ſo underſtood by the company?——No.

Who were in company, give us the names?—Mr. Kendrick, in Cecil-court, and Mr. Allen, in Rathbone-place, were two.

When did you prefer your indictment?—On Monday I think.

Attend a little, I can tell you it was not Monday; recollect yourſelf, and I will make you preſently aſſign a reaſon why it was not Monday?—It was Monday or Tueſday.

Try again, do not you think it was Wedneſday?—I think it was Tueſday.

Why was it delayed?—I had a cauſe in Chancery at that time.

You attended that cauſe?—That was the only reaſon why I did not prefer it.

What is the reward upon the conviction of theſe four men?——I know nothing about the reward, I do not know what reward I am to receive.

How much is the blood money as it is called for four men, out with it?—The reward is nothing to me, I have been told there is a reward.

What is it?—You know better than I do.

Is not it a hundred and ſixty pounds?—I have heard ſo.

Now have you ever propoſed this, that for two hundred and fifty pounds, you would abſent yourſelf, and not prefer any bill of indictment againſt theſe men?—No.

Have you ever ſaid that?——I never ſaid that.

Upon your oath?——No.

Have you ever ſaid, that if their friends could raiſe two hundred and fifty pounds, you would not appear againſt them?——No, I never ſaid it.

Have you ever ſaid, that for any ſum you would abſent yourſelf?—No, I never ſaid any ſuch words, nor any like it.

Have you ever ſaid, you would give this excuſe, that you had a ſuit in Chancery, and that you would abſent yourſelf, till the Grand Jury were diſcharged?——I never ſaid it, nor I never hinted it to any body.

Do you know Mr. Andrews, have you ever ſeen Mr. Andrews on this buſineſs?—No.

Did you ſee him laſt Monday?—No, I do not know any ſuch perſon, I did not ſee him laſt Monday.

Do you know a ſhoemaker in Turnſtile?——I do.

What is his name?—Powis.

By Powis have you ever ſent a meſſage to Andrews?—No, I never ſaw Andrews, I never talked to him at all about this thing.

Do you know any ſuch man as that?—No.

Do you know a gouty man that keeps a coffee-houſe?—No.

JOHN BIRDSAY ſworn.

I watch in the Chelſea road, juſt after I had called twelve on the 24th of January; the proſecutor called halloo, watch! he ſaid he had been robbed by four or five men, I ſaid, ſaid, which way are they gone, he ſaid, towards town, we run as faſt as we could, and came up to Pimlico, and I called another watchman, I did not tell him what was the matter; when I came through Pimlico turnpike, I aſked him if there had been any body gone paſt there, he ſaid, yes; I came to Buckingham-gate, and heard there were four or five gone towards Weſtminſter, but nobody had gone through the Park; the next watchman told me the ſame, the third watchman ſaid, he is juſt before you; in Tothill-ſtreet juſt by the gulley-hole, I ſprung my rattle, I did not ſee any body then, the proſecutor was cloſe by me.

Did you ſpring your rattle yourſelf, or did he deſire you?—I ſprung it of myſelf, and turning round I ſaw a man ſtanding againſt the ſide of a houſe, and Mr. Bowden ſaid, that is one of the men, and I believe he has got a cutlaſs in his hand; I catched at that, but it was a whip, and not a cutlaſs; in the mean time two more men came in amongſt us, ſeeming very innocent, and Mr. Bowden ſaid, that is one, and that is one; ſays he, I will ſwear to all the three; and one of the Weſtminſter patrols brought another man out of Dartmouth-ſtreet, and he ſaid that was another, and he would ſwear to him; he ſaid he would ſwear to them all four.

Were thoſe four men the firſt four men that you ſaw, except the watchmen?——Yes.

They were not together at any time, when you firſt ſaw them?—No, Sir, not all together, only one or two.

Were they taken to the watch-houſe?—Yes.

Were they ſearched there?—Yes.

They are the four priſoners?—Yes.

Which of the priſoners was the firſt that you ſaw?—It was that next to me, Ruſſel.

Who were the two that were taken together?——Thomas and Joſeph.

Were they ſearched at the watch-houſe?——Yes.

Was there any thing found on any of them?—Yes, there was a guinea and two odd gloves found on James, who was taken in Dartmouth-ſtreet, two left hand gloves; there was a knife and a ſtock-buckle, and a part of a ſtock found upon Ruſſell.

Was there any thing found on the other two that were taken together?—Nothing that I ſaw.

EDWARD WILLIAMS ſworn.

I am a watchman; the laſt witneſs called to me for aſſiſtance, I followed him and joined in the purſuit, when I came into Tothill-ſtreet, I followed them as cloſe as I could, the priſoners were all taken up and ſtopped.

What paſſed at the watch-houſe?——James Wiggans was ſearched firſt, two odd gloves were found on James, and two others were found in the ſtreet by a watchman who went out to look for them.

Was any thing elſe found upon James?—I heard there was a guinea found, I did not ſee it: Ruſſel had a ſtock-buckle upon him, and a penknife.

Was there any part of a ſtock with the buckle?—Yes, there was.

JOSEPH CARR ſworn.

I am a watchman; Mr. Bowden and Birdſey came running to me, my ſtand was at Pimlico, they aſked me if I had ſeen any body go by, I ſaid yes, there was ſeveral people gone by; Bowden ſaid, I am robbed, I ſaid I had ſeen ſeen ſeveral people, I did not deſcribe any perſons in particular, I had not noticed any perſon in particular.

When did you firſt ſee any of theſe people?——In Dartmouth-ſtreet, where they were taken; I did not ſee in what manner they were taken, I was behind Birdſey, I was at the watch-houſe when they were ſearched, I cannot tell their different names.

PATRICK KENNEDY ſworn.

The proſecutor gave me charge of the priſoner Ruſſell in Tothill-ſtreet, I heard a rattle ſpring, and I came and ſaw Mr. Bowden and a watchman come down, and they came and aſked whether any body was gone by, and I ſent my partner up a bye-ſtreet, ſtreet, and he brought out this man, he told me he had been robbed; I left them and went to my partner, then I heard ſomebody ſay here they are, and I came back, and I ſaw Ruſſel with boots and a whip in his hand; there were three men taken not far from there.

Was there any body in ſight when you firſt took Ruſſel?—There were a good many people about, watchmen and other people, when I firſt ſaw Ruſſel. I ſaw the other priſoners at the watch-houſe.

Mr. Garrow. How long was it after you heard the rattle rung, before Mr. Bowden aſked you whether you had ſeen four or five men?—I came up to him in about two or three minutes.

When was the bill of indictment preferred?—On Monday.

Think again.—On Tueſday.

On Monday, I believe, Mr. Bowden could not come.—I cannot tell why it was not preferred.

What did Bowden ſay to you about this being a good fetch?—I never had any ſuch converſation with him.

Had you, when together, any ſuch converſation?—No.

At the Juſtice's office?—No, Sir, not as I know of.

No ſuch converſation at all?———I never heard any thing like it, any more than what is common, that every body thinks to have ſomething if they are caſt.

Aye, ſomething if they are caſt: now in conſequence of that what paſſed in whiſpers at the Juſtice's office?———There was not a word about it, as I know of, no more converſation than what is uſual.

Where had you that converſation?——We had not a word.

Upon your oath, have you never had any converſation with Bowden, in the company of the other watchmen, about the reward of theſe men upon their conviction?——Upon my oath I never had.

ROBERT OATES ſworn.

I am a patrol, as I was going my rounds about three quarters paſt twelve, or thereabouts, on Monday night, I was going down Dartmouth-ſtreet, and I heard a watchman's rattle, I made the beſt haſte I could to it, and I ſaw Birdſay and the proſecutor, as I found he was afterwards; I aſked him what was the matter, and he ſaid, had I ſeen five men come that way; I ſaid, no; they ſaid the proſecutor had been robbed, and they had come down this way; my partner turns about to me and ſays, you had better run up Dartmouth-ſtreet again; I looked about and ſaw nobody at the end of Dartmouth-ſtreet, I ſaw lanthorns running by, and I went to them, and coming down Dartmouth-ſtreet, I met a man running along the middle of the way, I croſſed over to him, and aſked him what he was, and ſtopped him, he came into Tothill-ſtreet, and there I ſaw my partner had ſecured three more men, this man did not attempt to eſcape at all, when I deſired him to ſtop, that was the priſoner James Wiggan.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord I have ſent for Mr. Powis, and he has ſeen the meſſenger of the court, and he ſays he will not come.

Court. Send an officer with a ſubpœna, who if he refuſes to come will take him into cuſtody.

——— SKIRVIN ſworn.

I am conſtable of the night, I produce the property that I found on each of the priſoners, I have had it in my poſſeſſion ever ſince; here is a pen-knife, a ſtock-buckle and two pair of gloves, I found theſe in the pocket of the priſoner.

On which of them?——They were not all found in one priſoner's pocket, theſe are the names upon which the things were taken; I put them down at that time; a knife and two of the gloves were found in James Wiggans's pocket, and two gloves afterwards were found in the ſtreet by the watchman; the gloves that were found in his pocket were odd ones, and when the other two gloves were brought in, the proſecutor ſwore them to be his property; here is a pen-knife and ſtock-buckle which was found in Thomas Wiggans's pocket.

What

What do you recollect that from?——I ſearched all the four.

Do you recollect it from your own memory or from the paper?——I put down his name, I found a guinea in James's pocket and a bad guinea.

Was any thing elſe found that he claimed?—No Sir.

Then nothing was found on Joſeph nor Ruſſell?——Not of his property.

Can you be very particular as to which you found them upon?—To the beſt of my knowledge.

I aſk you if you can be very ſure?—I am pretty ſure it was ſo.

Mr. Garrow. You made a memorandum in writing at the time in order to be more accurate?—Yes.

So that you can have no doubt upon it you know?—No Sir.

The things were taken from the ſeparate pockets, and put ſeparate at the time, and againſt them was put the names of the people on whom they were found: were the things mixed?——No they were kept ſeparate and put down from my own recollection.

Was Mr. Bowden preſent at the time when you put them down?—Yes.

He agreed with you that theſe things were right?——He did not contradict me.

Court to Proſecutor. Stand up again and look at thoſe things that were found, look firſt at the gloves?—This is a thin pair that I wear in the ſummer.

What leather are they?—I do not know, they are the uſual leather that I wear.

What do you know them by?——I have worn them for a good while, I know them from no particular mark.

Suppoſe there was a hat full of old gloves put in altogether, could you pick them out?——I knew them immediately as ſoon as I ſaw them, I have been uſed to them a conſiderable time, I know them perfectly well, I know they are my gloves, the gloves that I uſually wear, I mean to ſwear to them; I had two pair of gloves in my pocket.

How happened that?——Them ſtrong gloves I wear for cold weather; this knife I know it is mine. (The knife handed up to the Court.) I had no particular mark on it.

Could you have deſcribed your knife to another perſon?—I know it, I have been uſed to it a great while.

Did you know the maker's name on it?—No.

How long have you had it?—Three quarters of a year.

Do you know the ſtock-buckle and piece of the ſtock?—Yes.

Was there any mark on the ſtock-buckle?—No.

Was there any mark on the ſtock?—No.

Who wrote thoſe marks that are now upon it?——I believe I wrote it at the Juſtice's office.

For what purpoſe?—I am not ſure, I did not know there were any marks upon it.

Have you any remembrance that there was any marks upon it?—No.

Then why did you ſay that you believed you wrote it at the Juſtices?—I put no mark but at the Juſtices.

Do you know whether any thing is written upon it or not?—I do not.

Court. Do you remember the Juſtice deſiring you to put a mark upon it?—Yes.

Then how came you to tell me now that you did not know whether it was marked or not?—I know the ſtock perfectly well; I have been long uſed to the buckle, I have often had it in my hands.

Have you obſerved any thing remarkable in it?—No.

Now I have obſerved ſomething remarkable in it, by which I think I ſhould know it?—I had my buckle for a year and a half, the buttons of it are flat.

The Remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 23d of FEBRUARY 1785, and the following Days;
Being the THIRD SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER III. PART II.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of James Wiggans, &c.

Mr. Garrow. How many ſtuds has it?--Four.

Are you ſure of that?——Yes.

How many prongs has it?—It had four, I am pretty ſure, but I cannot ſay whether there are four now.

Did the ſtuds project beyond the rim, or were they within the rim?—I do not remember.

Has it a ſtrait bar or is it turned?——I never took notice of it.

Is the outſide rim ſtrait or curved?—I think it is curved.

Now with reſpect to this knife, how many thouſand of them do you think were ſold at laſt Bartholomew-fair?—I do not know.

Had you a great coat on that night?—Yes, it was a bitter cold night.

Were your gloves in your great coat pocket?——Yes.

That is an odd way in a cold night, were they all in your great coat pocket?—Yes, in the outſide pocket, the ſtrong pair I think I had on my hands, and my thin pair were in my great coat pocket, I took them out of this pocket here, and put them in my great coat pocket.

Do you know were you bought theſe gloves?——No.

CHARLES CARY ſworn.

I am a conſtable and beadle of Saint Margaret's pariſh, I was in the watch-houſe that night, and about a quarter before one the four priſoners were brought in, and the proſecutor and watchmen came in with them, the proſecutor charged them with a robbery, I aſked him what, and I ſaid we will ſearch them, he ſaid before we ſearched them, he had loſt a ſtock buckle and ſome gloves, a knife, a pair of ſhoe buckles, and a knee buckle, he did not mention what gloves, he ſaid two pair of gloves and a guinea.

Priſoner. That man has been in the Court during the whole trial.

Cary. The proſecutor did not ſay what ſort of gloves they were; James was ſearched firſt, and there was found upon him two odd gloves and a good guinea, and a bad guinea, and ten ſhillings and ſix-pence in his breeches pocket, that was all that was found upon James; the good guinea was found in his coat pocket with the gloves, and the bad guinea and the ten ſhillings and ſix-pence in his breeches pocket: we next ſearched Ruſſell, and we found in his waiſtcoat pocket a ſtock-buckle and a piece of a ſtock to it and a penknife; we ſearched the other two but there was none of the proſecutor's property found upon them.

and

What account did the priſoners give of themſelves?—James ſaid he was a gentleman, I then ſaid we will ſearch him firſt, while we were ſearching him, Ruſſell went to the further part of the watch-houſe and ſat down, I did not ſearch the watch-houſe till after he was gone, but I went after and I found this piſtol, they did not ſay much for themſelves, as for the other two priſoners there was nothing of the proſecutor's found upon them; he ſaid he had loſt two pair of gloves, the watchman went out and found two other gloves.

WILLIAM PARRY ſworn.

I was watchman at the Broadway, Weſtminſter, and at half paſt twelve o'clock the alarm was given of this robbery, and of five or ſix men being together; we ſaw five men coming up to us all in a body, and I took one, that is the one; I know they were all taken in leſs than two minutes, the firſt turned up Dartmouth Street, and I took hold of the next and they came and took the reſt.

Priſoners. We leave it to our council.

JOHN ANDREWS ſworn.

I live in Bridges-ſtreet, Covent Garden, I keep the Nottingham Coffee-houſe, I am acquainted with the priſoner Ruſſell.

Do you know the proſecutor?—No.

Do you know Mr. Powis?—Yes.

JAMES POWIS ſworn.

I live in Newman's Row, in Lincoln's-inn-fields, I am a ſhoemaker.

How long have you known Mr. Bowden?—Mr. Bowden the currier, I believe it might be a dozen or fourteen years.

When did you ſee him laſt?—The laſt time I ſaw him I believe was on Tueſday laſt; he told me on Tueſday to the beſt of my recollection, that he was going to Clerkenwell to find a bill againſt ſome people that had robbed him; I was mentioning the matter to a perſon in our neighbourhood, one Aſhley.

When did you communicate to Bowden what paſſed between you and Aſhley?—On Monday morning I ſpoke to Bowden, and told him the circumſtance, that there were people that were very willing to pay any expences, or words to that effect; Bowden conſented to that, provided he could be ſecured from the laws of his country taking hold of him, and his expences paid, he was very willing not to take away the lives of the priſoners.

What was he to have?—Two hundred and fifty pounds, he did not aſk it, but the gentleman who came along with him, told him in my hearing, that it would coſt him one hundred and ſeventy or one hundred and eighty pounds, as he was bound over; that Mrs. Bowden was likewiſe bound over in forty pounds, to give evidence againſt them on account of the ſtock, which made it five: Mr. Bowden ſaid it was ſo, and after this Mr. Aſhley who was the perſon who firſt mentioned it to me, took me to the gentleman in Bridges-ſtreet, and Bowden was very agreeable according to the advice of his friend, to take it and keep out of the way: I aſked Mr. Bowden if he would agree to be out of the way on the receipt of two hundred and fifty pounds, and when I mentioned the matter Mr. Bowden ſaid it was ſo, and he muſt have ſomething for his expences, and he would go to Bath or Briſtol during the ſeſſions.

What was it Bowden ſaid about the two hundred and fifty pounds?—He did not ſay two hundred and fifty pounds.

He aſſented however upon terms that were talked of, to be out of the way?—He agreed to go to Bath or Briſtol.

Was that the reaſon that he did not prefer his bill on the Monday.

Court. If it was, what then?

Mr. Garrow. If it were true, it would go a great way againſt the credit of the proſecutor, who had firſt accepted it, and now has denied it.

Was

Was there any converſation about attending a ſuit in chancery?——Yes, Mr. Bowden ſent a perſon off in my hearing to the Seſſions-houſe at Hicks's Hall, to acquaint the people that he could not attend, having a cauſe in the Court of Chancery.

Did Bowden ſay at all what he was to have, or what he was to do?——He ſaid, he would go off that evening for Bath or Briſtol, provided I brought him the money, and more over than that, the money I was to give him, I was to put it in a room; and he was to take it.

What money was you to bring to Bowden?——The money I was to receive from Andrews.

Court. Had you any authority from any of the priſoners to make this propoſition?—I had not, that I am clear in, I had ſeen none of them, nor none of their friends.

In conſequence of this you went to ſomebody or other, for the purpoſe of getting the money?——Yes.

Did you get the money?——No.

Did you ſee Bowden afterwards?—Yes.

When?—The ſame day, and the next? I told him that Mr. Andrews had ſent to the gentleman on Poultney-hill, I believe his name is Kidney, and Mr. Aſhley brought me for anſwer, that Kidney would ſee Andrews, and appointed four o'clock; then when I had told him that, he ſent to the Seſſions-houſe, to tell the people he could not meet them that day, for he had a cauſe in Chancery.

Did you get the money?——No.

Did you ſee Bowden after that?——The next day he called at my houſe in the forenoon; I told him I had heard nothing of Mr. Andrews, or the parties, and I ſhould not give myſelf any trouble about it.

What did Bowden ſay to that, when you ſaid, you ſhould trouble yourſelf no more about it?—He ſaid, he was going to Hicks's Hall, that was on the Tueſday; I have not ſeen Bowden ſince.

Court to Bowden. You have heard now, the evidence that Mr. Powis has given?——Yes.

How came you to deny it?—I have an evidence, Mr. Allen that was with me at the time; I think it is very proper he ſhould be heard.

Is he here?—I believe not.

Is this, that Powis has ſaid, true?—No.

What part of it is falſe?——I called on Mr. Powis about ſome buſineſs, and he aſked me to ſtep down ſtairs with him; and he aſked me as he was acquainted with ſome of the friends of the priſoners, if he could get me indemnified againſt all expences, whether I would appear againſt them; there was nothing about Bath or Briſtol propoſed; but if this gentleman, Mr. Allen, was preſent, he would be an evidence.

Court to Bowden. If this evidence of Powis's is falſe, and Mr. Allen is not preſent; you know what to do.

THOMAS SMITH ſworn.

I live at Deptford, I am a baker and freeholder in the ſame county, I have known James Wiggans three years, and have ſome ſmall knowledge of the other brothers; James during that time has bore the character of an honeſt, ſober, good kind of young man; I ſtill entertain the ſame opinion of him, and I believe, and I do ſay, that I would truſt him with the value of the whole ſacks of flour in my ſhop, and that is not a trifle; as for Thomas, I can only ſpeak from general report, and if that report ſays true, he is intitled from that, to as good a character.

ROBERT SMITH ſworn.

I am a freeholder, I live at Deptford, I know all the three Wiggans's, they have as good characters as any young men can have.

GEORGE HAMPSHIRE ſworn.

I know James, his general character has been honeſt, I know the other two as his brothers; I have a high opinion of him I recommended him into the ſame employment I have.

JOSEPH SMITH ſworn.

I live at Deptford, I have known James three years and a half, he is a ſober, honeſt, worthy young fellow, I have ſeen the other two two brothers, and have heard of their character being very ſober and honeſt.

——— HINDES ſworn.

I know Thomas and Joſeph, they are ſober, honeſt, induſtrious, careful, good ſort of fellows; I am foreman to the ſawyers.

WILLIAM KNIGHT ſworn.

I have known James three years, I know very little of the other two, his character is that of an honeſt man, and as far as I know, the other two are ſo.

WILLIAM CRESLOW ſworn.

I have known them all three theſe three years, always very ſober, honeſt, induſtrious young men, as for Thomas in particular, he lived at my houſe ſix months, and at next door eighteen months.

JOSEPH FLETCHER ſworn.

I have known more of James than the others, he was when he was in his Majeſty's ſervice a very obedient honeſt man; I had him in my family, and if he had been otherwiſe than honeſt, I muſt have found him out.

JOHN CRAWFORD ſworn.

I have known Joſeph and Thomas, they were ſtrongly recommended to me; their character has been that of honeſt men; I have nothing to ſay againſt them, I ſhould have no objection to employ them again.

THOMAS GROVES ſworn.

James always bore a good character, I have known him eleven years.

CHRISTOPHER HOBMAN ſworn.

I have known James, I look upon him to be a very honeſt man, that is his general character.

THOMAS HENDLE ſworn.

I have known James theſe five years, the others two years and better, they are very honeſt, good characters, and induſtrious.

The priſoner Ruſſell called no witneſſes.

JAMES WIGGANS, JAMES RUSSELL, } GUILTY, Death.

JOSEPH WIGGANS, THOMAS WIGGANS, } NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

295. DAVID JONES was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 19th day of October laſt, one velveret waiſtcoat, value 2s. one man's hat, value 6s. one pair of cotton ſtockings, value 2s. nine guineas, value 9l. 9s. one half guinea, value 10s. 6d. and ſixpence in money, the property of William Blick.

A ſecond Count, for feloniouſly ſtealing on the ſame day, two bank notes, value 10l. each, being the property of the ſaid William Blick, and the ſeveral ſums of 10l. and 10l. being then due and unſatisfied thereon to the ſaid William Blick, the proprietor, againſt the form of the ſtatute.

WILLIAM BLICK ſworn.

I keep the Bull and Gate Inn, in High Holborn, I bank for many gentlemen in the country, to the amount of many thouſands in the year; on the 19th of October, I gave the priſoner two ten pound bank-notes to take to the bankers, and ten pounds in caſh; it was to take up a bill, which I have intruſted him to do, I ſuppoſe for near a thouſand pounds.

Court. You had intruſted him before? ——Many times; and he took away a hat, which I had lent to another of my ſervants, and a waiſtcoat, and a pair of ſtockings.

What do you mean by banking?——I do buſineſs for gentlemen in the country, charging them an half per cent.

What capacity was the priſoner in with you?——A waiter, it was often very inconvenient for me to go into the city to the bankers, and in conſequence of that he uſed to go.

What banker's?——I do not recollect, I do buſineſs with almoſt every banker in Lombard-ſtreet; it was the 19th of October, after four o'clock, I went to the farm which I have in the country the ſame afternoon; and the next morning very early, a meſſenger came to the farm, to inform me the priſoner was not returned, and the Notary public had called with the bill; I came to town, and went to Bow-ſtreet, and got ſome hand-bills printed, I then took my phaeton, and went down to Chatham, and diſtributed thoſe bills, and about ten days after the priſoner was taken upon ſuſpicion; and being informed by a runner from East Smithfield office, that he anſwered my advertiſement, I went there and found him at a public houſe; he had the waiſtcoat on, but I did not know it then, I know it was becauſe I ſaw it before the Magiſtrate, on the Monday and Thurſday.

Did you know it to be your's?——I never wore the waiſtcoat, but it was my property, my wife told me it was mine, but my wife had promiſed him a waiſtcoat; I am ſure the ſtockings are mine, I ſaw them in a handkerchief; the hat was gone.

Court. How do you know your wife did not give him the ſtockings?——She has ſince told me, that if he had behaved well, ſhe would give him this waiſtcoat, ſhe declared ſhe did not give him the ſtockings; he had only eight ſhillings left when he was taken.

Where were theſe ſtockings taken from, do you know?—From a bureau drawer in one of the bars, I ſaw them about two or three days before, but I cannot be ſure.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council. So you keep a banking houſe and an inn?—Yes, I keep the Bull and Gate Inn.

I believe it is a houſe of civil protection for the goddeſſes that patrol Holborn, and preſide over the fate of drunken men?—I ſhould be glad you would explain yourſelf, Sir.

Is it not a houſe of protection for women of the town?——I neither keep nor procure any ſuch.

Your's is an inn, is not it?—Yes, it is, three hundred guineas a year.

But ſuch women may come in?—I have no buſineſs to aſk them whether they are married or not, it is open for every body, provided they pay their way.

Did you at any time ſay, you ſhould not have commenced this proſecution, but at the inſtance of your wife?—No, Sir.

Did you at any time ſay, that you had proſecuted for things that were not your property?—As to the waiſtcoat, after I came to know that.

Did not you ſay your wife made you bring the proſecution?—My wife does not rule me, I rule my wife.

Did you at any time ſay, your wife induced you to do this, or to do wrong?—Only touching the waiſtcoat.

——— SADLER ſworn.

On the 29th of October, I was ſent to take the priſoner on a charge of robbing the proſecutor of two ten pounds bank-notes, and ten pounds in caſh; I took him to priſon, the next day he had his examination before the Magiſtrate, and the Magiſtrate did not think it was a felony, he was diſcharged of that; then Mr. Blick laid a charge of felony, for robbing him of a waiſtcoat and hat, he had the waiſtcoat on his back, I took it off him, and Mr. Blick ſwore it was his property; here is the waiſtcoat.

Was any thing ſaid about ſtockings?—Not to my knowledge, I know nothing of the hat.

Mr. Peatt. All that you found upon him was the waiſtcoat?——Yes.

The proſecutor did not charge him with theſe ſtockings and waiſtcoat till he underſtood from the magiſtrate, that going off with the notes and money was no felony?——He charged him at firſt only with the notes and money.

Did the proſecutor ſay any thing before the Magiſtrate, in the hearing of the priſoner, ſoner, as to the reaſon of this proſecution?—I heard no other than what I have told you.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I have no further to ſay, than I came from ſea two years ago; I uſed this houſe and ſpent a great deal of money, I lent the proſecutor twenty or thirty pounds, and I was induced to be his waiter, the waiſtcoat was given me, and the hat likewiſe; as to the ſtockings I know nothing about, they are in that bundle that I came away with.

Mr. Peatt to Proſecutor. In what capacity was this boy in your houſe?——As a waiter, I do not pay them any wages.

Priſoner. We have only what we get.

Did you receive him on account of his friends?—I will tell you the real truth, as ſoon as his money was gone, I deſired him to get into a ſhip, for I had ſo much loſs by officers.

Was he a cuſtomer to your houſe before he became your ſervant?—He was very ill when he came, he ſpent ſeven pounds in all; I ſuffered him to remain in the houſe, his place was worth a hundred pounds a year, he was a cuſtomer about four months.

Is it cuſtomary when men have laid out their little property, to make them ſervants?——There was another that I arreſted him by his own conſent, and he was of a good family; this young man's bill was at that time about eight pounds; he came and put forty pounds into my hands, and he drew it out in leſs than two months.

Did you let him remain in your houſe as a cuſtomer, or under the idea of ſervitude?——As a ſervant, the very ſame as all ſervants I ever had, I gave him that place that he might get his money up again, he aſſented to it and waited on all company that ever came.

WILLIAM HOVILLE ſworn.

I know the priſoner, I was ſervant to the proſecutor, I gave the priſoner a hat that the proſecutor gave me laſt April.

Did you at any time hear the proſecutor ſay his wife had made him do wrong?—He ſaid that if he had done wrong it was through his wife.

CATHERINE LING ſworn.

There were an old pair of white ribbed ſtockings about the kitchen, and I ſaid the priſoner might have them, they were not worth a farthing, theſe are not the ſtockings.

Proſecutor. Theſe are not the ſtockings he took from my houſe, they were in the handkerchief before the headborough.

Court to Sadler. What is become of the ſtockings?—Theſe are the ſtockings, there were no other.

Proſecutor. They were ribbed ſtockings my Lord.

Mr. Peatt to Ling. Were the ſtockings ribbed that you gave the priſoner?—Yes, they were ribbed ſtockings, nor worth a farthing.

Proſecutor. They were in the handkerchief with the other things.

Were they new ſtockings?—No.

Were they old?——They were in the middling way, they might be darned in the heels.

Did they lay about the kitchen?—In the tap room there is a bureau where a great number of my ſtockings are, and ſometimes they are thrown in there.

What is the value of them?—They are about five ſhillings a pair.

But what were they worth?——I ſuppoſe they might be worth a couple of ſhillings.

Mr. Peatt. How long was it from the time you ſuſpected the ſtockings were ſtole, before you ſaw them?—I ſaid before I am not clear, I have two dozen pair of ſtockings, I do not know when I ſaw them laſt, till I ſaw them in his handkerchief.

Court. You ſay nothing with reſpect to the bank-notes and money.

Mr. Peatt. I leave that to your Lordſhip.

Mr. Juſtice Gould in ſumming up to the Jury, mentioned the caſe of the man that hired a horſe to go to Sutton, and inſtead of that went and ſold him in Smithfield, which which was reserved for the opinion of the Judges, and held to be a felonious taking; and Mr. Justice Buller mentioned the case of Bass, (Newnham's Mayoralty, No. I. Part III. folio 45.) and concurred in opinion that the possession still remained in the master.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice GOULD.

---

296. JOSEPH LILLIE was indicted for feloniously assaulting Thomas Makepeace, on the king's highway, on the 23d day of October last, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniously taking from his person, and against his will, one stuff gown, value 6s. the property of John Makepeace.

MARIA MAKEPEACE sworn.

I am wife to Thomas Makepeace, I only speak to the property, which is a stuff gown; Thomas Makepeace was my nephew, and is dead, he died through the fright of the prisoner, and the small pox, which he caught at the Old Bailey.

JOHN MAKEPEACE sworn.

Thomas Makepeace is my nephew, he attended here last Sessions, and caught the small pox, he lived with me; I sent him home with a gown that evening, but I know no further, only they took the boy and the man to the Justice before they sent for me.

A WITNESS sworn.

I was coming down Long-acre on the 23d of October, about ten in the evening, and just by the end of Chapel Alley in Long-acre, I heard a little boy cry out stop thief! and the prisoner at the bar ran out of the passage, I pursued him, and called out stop thief! I never lost sight of him, he was stopped by another man; I came up directly, the prisoner was stopped and searched, and the gown was not found upon him then, a person brought the gown up, it was found just by my side.

Mr. Justice Buller. Did you see the gown in the street as you pursued the prisoner?——No, I did not, it was rather a darkish evening.

Court. Are there any examinations returned.

Mr. Shelton. No my Lord.

Did the prisoner say any thing, did he acknowledge any thing?——He did not.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, by the death of the principal, Thomas Makepeace, the case is left deficient of evidence, and you must acquit the prisoner at the bar.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

297. WILLIAM BRADLEY was indicted for feloniously breaking and entering the dwelling house of John Mac Phail, no person therein being, between the hours of eight in the forenoon and four in the afternoon, on the 8th day of February last, and feloniously stealing therein, one iron Bath stove, value 14s. one brass fender, value 2s. one bed sacking, value 4s. two wooden chairs, value 2s. four iron hammers with wooden handles, value 4s. one iron spade, value 18d. one iron fox trap, value 5s. and four earthen flour pots, value 12d. his property.

A Second Count, For breaking his house about the hour of one in the night, on the 9th of February, and burglariously and feloniously stealing the same goods therein.

JOHN MAC PHAIL sworn.

I live in Grub-street, in the parish of Cripplegate, my house that was broke open is in the parish of St. Luke's, there was nobody there, we do not live there in winter time, we have it with a garden; I was in it on the 6th of December, I left some furniture in it.

What

What uſe had you for that houſe?—— As a dwelling houſe when the weather is fine.

Did you mean to dwell there again?—Yes; there was nobody in the houſe, it was broke open, but I am not ſure of the day, I did not hear of it till the 10th, then I went in to examine, and found ſeveral things were taken away; the things in the indictment, and many more: the Bath ſtove was fixed in the chimney in the firſt room in the houſe, the value of that was about 14s. and the ſacking of the bedſtead worth 4s. there was a braſs fender; I locked up the houſe and took the key with me, the key was never lent to any body at all, there was a fox trap, value 5s. and two wooden chairs, value 2s. there were four wooden hammers, value 1s. each, one iron ſpade, value 18d. four earthen flour pots ſtood on the mantle ſhelf, value 1s.

Did you rent this houſe or was it your own?—I rented it, and when I went to look at it, I diſcovered a hole broke at the end of the houſe where they got in, and then the window was ſet open to get the things out; when I examined the houſe, I found this ſtreet lamp which they had to light them, left in the houſe; I cannot tell how far the priſoner was concerned, the other witneſſes can tell you.

JAMES SHAKESHAFT ſworn.

I am an headborough, I produce things which I found in Taylor's-rents, Kingſland-road; on Thurſday the 10th of February, between eleven and twelve o'clock in the morning; the priſoner was in bed, and the ſtove lay by the ſide of the bed, with a fox trap and three hammers, and a rule, and the proſecutor came and owned the property at the office, the priſoner told me the things were his property.

(Two of theſe hammers, the trap, and the ſtove depoſed to.)

SAMUEL HARPER ſworn.

I am one of the headboroughs of Shoreditch pariſh, I went with Shakeſhaft and found theſe things, and took him and the property.

JOHN SMITH ſworn.

I live in Jewin-ſtreet, Cripplegate, I did live at the place, I left it before Chriſtmas, I uſed to go and ſee it every day till it was robbed; I ſaw it the Saturday before the robbery.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

When I took this room there was no lock nor any thing upon the door, and theſe things were up in the room when I took it.

Shakeſhaft. I was going to take the two hammers and the rule, and he ſaid do not take them things for they are my own.

The Priſoner called three witneſſes, who alſo gave him a good character.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing to the value of 4s. and 10d. but not guilty of the burglary.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

298. SOLOMON SPENCER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 15th day of January laſt, one woman's black ſilk hat trimmed with black ribbon, value 10s. one ſilk handkerchief, value 4s. the property of Thomas Hobbs.

MARY DOWER ſworn.

I was going home with a hat, on the 15th of January, about ſix in the evening; and I met a man, and he ſnatched it out of my hand, and run off; I do not know the man, I was carrying it home to a ſervant of Mr. Winter's, her name is Mary Bywater, it was a black ſilk hat, I was carrying it for Thomas Hobbs; I cried out thief! I did not go after him, a man met him and brought him back with the hat with him, I do not know whether he had the hat or the other man.

Was the prisoner the man that was brought back?——Yes.

CHARLES KNIGHT sworn.

I had been down Thames-street, and coming up Dowgate-hill, I heard the cry of stop thief! the prisoner ran past me, and I suspected him and ran after him, and took him with the handkerchief in his left hand, and the hat was in his left hand, and he dropped the hat behind him; I am sure he had the hat in his hand when I laid hold on him, I picked up the hat, and brought him and the hat to the gentlewoman; I asked her whether it was her property, and she said it was.

Court to Mary Dower. What did you do with the hat afterwards?—It was taken to the Poultry Compter, and given to the constable.

JOHN DASHWOOD sworn.

This is the hat I received from the young lady, it has never been out of my possession.

(The hat and handkerchief deposed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was walking along, and a man was walking behind me, and laid hold of me, and asked me whether I knew any thing of the hat and the handkerchief, I told him no; he brought me up to the gentlewoman, she said, she knew nothing of me; and there were several gentlemen persuaded the lady to give charge of me, she said, she did not know me.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped, and confined six months in the House of Correction.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

299. ELIZABETH BARLOW was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 11th day of January last, one pair of silver shoe-buckles, value 20s. and one linen apron, value 1s. the property of William Whitebread; one corded dimity waistcoat, value 12s. the property of Elizabeth Bunn.

RACHAEL WHITEBREAD sworn.

I am wife of William Whitebread, I lost a pair of silver buckles, and a cloth apron, on the 11th of January, from Maiden-lane, Cheapside, the prisoner was servant in the house where I lodged; the buckles were in a clothes-press, she went away in the morning, and took them with her, they were in a pair of shoes that wanted to be heel-pieced.

ELIZABETH BUNN sworn.

I gave the prisoner's mistress a gown and petticoat to wash, and I lost the petticoat, I know the prisoner, she was a servant in that family.

ANN CARTER sworn.

I live in Maiden-lane, Cheapside, the two last witnesses lodged in my house, and the prisoner was servant to me; on the 11th of January the prisoner got up as usual, and lighted her candle in the parlour, and went up to light her fire as I thought; I heard the street door shut about half an hour after, I got up and there was wood on the table, and a candle burning, and the key of the door on the table, and no servant in the house; I waited, and she did not return, I went up stairs and found her clothes were gone, and a white dimity petticoat from the clothes that was hanging up to dry, which I had in care to wash; that was the property of Elizabeth Bunn; about an hour after Mrs. Whitebread missed her buckles out of the press, and an apron.

SARAH FIELD sworn.

I bought a pair of buckles of a young woman, but that person I find is not here, I rather recollect the prisoner, she stood at the door, but I am not positive; at the Justices the prisoner said, it was her sister I bought them off.

Court. Produce the buckles.

(The buckles deposed to by Mrs. Whitebread, they having been mended three times.)

WILLIAM SMITH sworn.

On the 12th of January, Mrs. Carter came to me, to enquire after her maid, and ſaid, ſhe had been robbed; and I went with her to her ſiſter, who directed us to Pear-tree-court, I went there, and did not find her; I came back, and then the ſiſter went with me, and then ſhe went and found the priſoner, I found the priſoner in her ſiſter's room, and ſhe ſaid, do not make a noiſe Mr. Smith, ſhe ſeemed very much flurried; ſays ſhe, I have ſold a pair of buckles belonging to Mrs. Whitebread, and pawned a petticoat for eight ſhillings, which belonged to Mrs. Bunn; and ſhe gave me this white apron, and ſaid, it was Mrs. Whitebread's apron, and bid me give it her miſtreſs. (The apron depoſed to.) the priſoner ſaid, if I would go with her, ſhe would ſhew me where the buckles were ſold, and the petticoat pawned.

Did you tell her, if ſhe would confeſs, ſhe ſhould be dealt with mercifully?——No, Sir, I did not tell her any ſuch thing.

Did you threaten her?——No.

GEORGE LANE ſworn.

I am a pawnbroker in Holborn, I took in the petticoat of the priſoner, on the 11th of January, and lent her eight ſhillings upon it.

(The petticoat produced, and depoſed to by Mrs. Bunn.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

When I came to live at this houſe, I did not know what kind of a houſe it was; when I had lived there two or three days, I found it to be a diſorderly houſe; in about five weeks my miſtreſs wanted me to put on theſe things to go out, and ſhe told me to put on the buckles, and bid me fetch the white petticoat off the line; and ſhe told me afterwards, if I would tell her where they were, I ſhould pay her ſo much a week.

Court to Conſtable. Do you know this houſe of Mrs. Carter's, in Maiden-lane?——Yes.

Is it reputed to be a diſorderly houſe?——I do not know.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

300. THOMAS SAVILL and JOSEPH MEADS were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 11th day of February, one ewe ſheep, value 20s. the property of Samuel Nailer:

And ELIZABETH wife of EDWARD SHIRLEY, otherwiſe SAVILL, was indicted for feloniouſly receiving the ſame knowing it to have been ſtolen.

(The Caſe opened by Mr. Garrow.)

SAMUEL NAILER ſworn.

I live at Ricelip, within four miles of Uxbridge; on the 11th of February, I loſt a ewe ſheep out of my field, it was ſeen over night, and loſt the next morning before eight o'clock; I went round the field, and nigh my hay cocks there was a mark of a man's foot, and a little after that I ſaw where the ſheep had been ſtruggling: I traced the man's foot within a hundred yards of the priſoner Saville's, and Mrs. Shirley's, they live together, the houſe belongs to the woman priſoner; the priſoner Saville lodged there, and the priſoner Meads uſed to diet with them, I got a ſearch warrant and went myſelf with the conſtable, as ſoon as I got to the door, I bolted in and found Mrs. Shirley, and Saville by the fire; I told Mrs. Shirley I had a ſtrong ſuſpicion ſhe had a ſheep of mine about the houſe, ſhe ſaid, there was no ſuch thing, I might ſearch if I would; then ſhe ran away to her bed, and ſaid, it was not fit to be ſeen; we ſearched the cockloft, to ſee if we could find any ſkin or any thing of that ſort, and in the kitchen on a ſwing-ſhelf, I ſaw the inſide fat of a ſheep; the priſoner Saville ſaid, he bought it at Uxbridge, it was the caul of the ſheep, there was a bill down by the oven all over ſuet, and in the place where where they were ſitting, I ſaw a long cheſt, ſhe ſaid, ſhe had ginger-bread and nuts there, I deſired her to open it, at laſt the priſoner Saville ſaid, take the keys and open it, for I inſiſted on breaking it open; I opened it and there was the ſheep whole only juſt the hind legs cut off in an awkward manner, and a piece of the loin cut out, which they had dreſſed; I could not tell whether it was a ewe ſheep or not, the ſkin was not upon it, after they had been to the Juſtice's, I went back again to the houſe, and ran up ſtairs to the bed, and found a ſkin under the bed with ſome of the wool torn off, it lay upon the ſacking of the bed on the cords; and in a ſack where the bolſter ſhould be, I found the ſkin of my ſheep that was marked S. N.

Could you tell by the ſkin, whether it was a ewe ſheep?——I cannot be ſure, but I am ſure it was my own ſkin, it was hardly cold then, Mrs. Shirley ſaid, ſhe would tell me the truth of all; ſays ſhe, Joſeph Meads brought this ſheep into my houſe in the night, and my huſband received it; they live together as man and wife, but ſhe has another huſband living.

They were not reputed to be man and wife?——Not as we know of, Sir, ſhe ſaid ſhe had been married three or four days; Meads, he run away from the ſaw-pit, he was there when we firſt came to the houſe, and we went to ſeek for him there, but he was gone; he was found on the Saturday night, at Uxbridge, I was before the Magiſtrate when he was examined, I ſaw him make his mark to the paper, and I ſaw the Juſtice ſign it, it was read over to him, and he admitted it to be true, this is the paper, I ſaw the Juſtice ſign it; this is the Juſtice's hand writing.

Was the former examination read to him, at the ſame time?—No, it was not; Saville owned that he helped to dreſs the ſheep, that was brought home in the middle of the night, but he did not know where Meads had it from; I have no doubt of this being my ſheep.

Did you compare the carcaſe with the ſkin that you found on the bed?—Yes, it all fitted.

Court. How came this woman Saville to ſay any thing, what means did you make uſe of to make her confeſs?——I made them no promiſe, that I would not hurt them.

Was any promiſe made to Meads, if he would confeſs it?—He told the people at the public houſe, I do not know who it was that firſt prevailed, I cannot ſay what was ſaid to him.

Recollect yourſelf, was it ſo or was it not?——There was a man talking to him, he might ſay ſo, I cannot ſay, I heard him ſay, tell the truth, he ſaid, it will be the better for him.

Who was that man?——I forgot his name, he lives at Uxbridge, he is not here, but I heard him ſay ſo.

Upon that he was prevailed upon to confeſs?—Yes.

Mr. Garrow. He had given you no account before?—No.

Court. You cannot read that confeſſion.

Mr. Garrow. Did you at the houſe where you found the ſheep ſkin, ſay any thing to Mrs. Shirley or to Saville, about confeſſing or telling the truth?—— I did not, the woman ſaid to me, as ſoon as we found the mutton, now ſays ſhe, I will tell you how we came by it; this Joſeph Meads ſtole the ſheep, and my huſband helped to dreſs it, and it was put into the cheſt; and the priſoner Saville owned he helped to kill the ſheep, when it was brought home.

Mr. Garrow. There had been two converſations with Meads, at the public houſe, about ſheep ſtealing?——Yes.

At the time he made the confeſſion at the Juſtices, about the ewe ſheep of your's, had there then been any thing ſaid to him, like to what my Lord has been ſaying?——Not a word.

Court. I aſk you whether when he made the confeſſion about your ſheep, at the Juſtice's, any thing was ſaid to him, in order to induce him to confeſs?——No, Sir, there was not.

Was

Was not it ſaid to him, it would be better for him to tell the truth?—The Juſtice told him ſo.

Did the Juſtice ſay that before he had given his account or after?—Afterwards.

Court. When he was carried before the Juſtice, what was he accuſed of?——Of ſtealing my ſheep.

Did the Juſtice or any body elſe ſay to him then, it would be better for him to tell the truth?—Firſt the Juſtice examined me, in the preſence of the priſoner, then I told him what I told you, and the Juſtice aſked the priſoner if he had ſtole the ſheep.

Did the Juſtice ſay any thing more to the priſoner?——He aſked him if he ſtole my ſheep, and he anſwered yes; and he told him where and when.

When was it then, that he told him he had better tell the truth?——That muſt be at the laſt.

Upon your oath, had he ſaid ſo before the priſoner had ſaid, he had ſtole your ſheep?——No, Sir, not before, it was after, I am quite clear of that.

(The confeſſion read, ſigned the mark of Joſeph Meads, taken before me Thomas Fellows, to wit, confeſſes this examination, being further examined.)

Court. This is a further examination, which examination do you ſpeak of now, becauſe if the Juſtice made two examinations, one of them was after he told the man to tell the truth.

JOHN MERCER ſworn.

I took the priſoner and carried him to the Juſtice's, I was not there when the firſt examination began, nor Churchill was not there.

Court to Proſecutor. When was the examination you talked of?——That was on Friday.

JAMES EWER ſworn.

I was preſent with Shirley, I was at the examination of Mead on the Sunday morning.

Was you there on the Friday?——Yes, Mead was taken up on the Saturday night, he was examined a little on Saturday night, I was not there.

Who took him firſt?—Mr. Mercer took him firſt, at the public houſe.

Mercer. He was taken up on Saturday, in the afternoon.

Did he ſay any thing about this matter before he was taken to the Juſtice's?——I ſaid to him, Joe I am ſorry to ſtop you, I am ſorry for what you have done, he ſaid, he was ſorry for it himſelf.

Did you ſay, I take you up for ſheep-ſtealing?——He heard me ſpeak of it in the houſe.

Court. You took Meads up?—Yes, at the Marquis of Granby, at Uxbridge.

Did you tell him what you took him for?—I told him as ſoon as ever the conſtable came to take him in poſſeſſion, that it was for ſtealing Mr. Nailer's ſheep, I am ſure of that.

What did he ſay to that?—I cannot tell the words particularly.

To what purpoſe?—No otherwiſe than that he ſeemed to be very ſorry for it for it.

What did he ſay?——I cannot recollect the words, but in the diſcourſe while we ſat there, I ſaid to him, now Joe was you the perſon that ſtole the ſheep or Thomas? no, ſays he, I did not ſteal it, Thomas did it, and I was with him, and he caught it behind the hay-cock.

Had you ſaid any thing to him before, that he had better confeſs?——No.

Was you ever preſent when Saville was examined?——No.

Did he give you any directions about where you might find any thing?——Afterwards, but not before he was examined a ſecond time.

WILLIAM CHURCHILL ſworn.

I went with Mr. Nailer to execute this ſearch warrant, Saville and the woman both ſat by the fire, I told her I had a ſearch warrant, to ſearch for a ſheep, ſhe ſaid, ſearch and welcome; and the firſt thing we found was the caul on the ſhelf,

In ſhort the ſtory Mr. Nailer has ſaid, is true.

When Meads was there before the Juſtice, did you hear the examination read to him?——I heard the paper read to him.

What did Saville ſay?——He ſaid he knew nothing of the matter at firſt; but after we found the ſheep, he ſaid, Meads came there ſome time in the night, and called him up, and he ſaid he got it downright honeſtly, he ſaid it was alive, and he helped to kill it; the woman ſaid, ſhe knew nothing of the matter, ſhe ſaid, at eight ſhe ſaw it in a box.

Court. Did Saville always continue in the ſame ſtory?——Yes, Sir, all the while I was there.

JAMES EWERS ſworn.

I went on Sunday morning, to hear Meads examined before the Juſtice, I heard Saville examined, he ſaid, he knew nothing at all about it, any otherwiſe than Meads brought this ſheep ſome time in the night, and he let him in; for he owned that he helped to kill it.

PRISONER SHIRLEY's DEFENCE.

My huſband was in bed, and went to bed that night; I was married the Monday before Shrove Tueſday, at Marybone.

Court. Have you any proof of that?—I was married at Marybone, there were ſix couple married at the ſame time; they told me I might have my certificate for eighteen pence, the woman that had the keys of the church ſaid ſo.

PRISONER SAVILLE's DEFENCE.

She is my wife, I married her the Monday before Shrove Tueſday.

How came you not to get a certificate of your marriage?——We were ſhort of money, we had but two-pence when we had been married.

Court to Mrs. Shirley. Have not you another huſband?——I do not know what is become of him, he went to America five or ſix years ago; I have not heard any thing of him theſe ſeveral years.

Court to Proſecutor. Do you know any thing of her former huſband?——They tell me he is living now, and lives near London; they ſay, he is in the City Militia at this time.

JOSEPH MEADS, GUILTY Death.

THOMAS SAVILLE, ELIZABETH SHIRLEY, } NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

301. The ſaid Thomas Saville was again indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 19th of January laſt, one ewe ſheep, value 20s. the property of Jaſon Wilſhin; and the ſaid ELIZABETH SHIRLEY was again indicted for feloniouſly receiving the ſame, knowing it to have been ſtolen.

SAMUEL NAILER ſworn.

Joſeph Meads was taken into cuſtody, on the 12th of January.

Court. Don't tell us what he ſaid, he is convicted?——I don't know any thing beſides what I heard from him.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

302. JAMES OAKES was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Thomas Drake on the King's highway, on the 10th day of February laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will, four pieces of printed callico of the length of one hundred and twenty yards, value 18l. the property of Robert Martin.

(The witneſſes, except the Proſecutor, ordered to withdraw by the deſire of Mr. Chetwood, Priſoner's Counſel.

THOMAS DRAKE ſworn.

I am a porter to Mr. Martin, No. 36,

Cateaton-ſtreet, a Manchester Warehouſeman; on Thurſday the 10th of February, between eight and nine, I went with a load to Well-ſtreet, Wellcloſe-ſquare, it was about eight when I was at Well-ſtreet, I ſet off about ſeven o'clock from our houſe, and I always reckon an hour to go there and back again; I went there with a load, and I had four pieces of printed callico to bring back, the pieces contained twenty-eight yards each, they are of the value of 18l. 4s. Mr. John Craydon of Well-ſtreet gave them to me, they were the property of Mr. Martin, they were our patterns; I had carried them to Mr. Craydon's for him to look at.

How many days before had you carried them?——I cannot ſay the particular day.

Can you ſay with certainty that theſe are the ſame goods you carried a few days before?——Yes. As I was coming down Well-ſtreet I met the priſoner, I never ſaw him before to my knowledge, he appeared to be very much in liquor, he aſked me the way to Thames-ſtreet; I aſked him what part of Thames-ſtreet? he ſaid, pretty near Black-friars; I told him to return again with me, for he was going quite the reverſe way; he then aſked me to let him carry my load, which I refuſed, he then aſked me to go into a public houſe and drink a glaſs of gin, which I refuſed; he ſaid he was going to Great St. Thomas Apoſtle's; I told him I was going part of the way, and I would ſhew him as far as I went; he came along Fenchurch-ſtreet, along Lombard-ſtreet, and along the Poultry, as far as the top of Queen-ſtreet, Cheapſide; there I directed him and left him, but when I got down King-ſtreet, about half-way, he overtook me, and came right front me, he then got hold of my load, and got it off my head, and ſaid, he inſiſted on having it, and he ſtopped me when he did this; I reſiſted him, there was a ſtruggle between us for a very ſhort time, he ſaid ſomething to me, but I cannot repeat the words; I got it from him again by a ſudden pluck, and being near home, I ran as faſt as I could.

How long had he it?——But a very little time.

Had he it compleatly from you?——I had hold of it with one hand, I never let it go compleatly, but he had it in his arms.

Was it ever out of your poſſeſſion at all?——No, I cannot ſay it was; as ſoon as I felt it go, I immediately ſnatched it with my hand.

When you ſnatched it with your hand, it was clear from your head, was it not?——Yes, quite gone. I ran home with it as faſt as I could, and he ran after me to my own door, and took it away again, he had it then compleatly; I let it go, and ſecured him; when I ſecured him he had the bundle.

Did he ſnatch it the ſecond time?——He laid hold of it, I made no reſiſtance, but caught hold of him and rung the bell inſtantly; the door was open, he let go the bundle, it went to the ground, and I pulled him into the houſe; I never loſt ſight of him, the priſoner is the man; he was with me altogether about a quarter of an hour, and when I got him into the warehouſe he fell down and appeared to be drunk, then he got up and fell down again, and appeared to be very drunk.

Did it appear to you from the whole of his conduct to you that he really was drunk, or that he ſhammed drunk?——He appeared to be very drunk when I firſt met him, but when I met him in King-ſtreet, he appeared to be very ſober.

Mr. Chetwood. You have enquired, I believe, where this man lived ſince?——Yes.

You find he lives in Saint Thomas Apoſtle's, as he ſaid?——Yes, his dwelling houſe is there, he told me ſo that night, I have heard he is a houſekeeper there, and has a penſion from government, and is a ſhoemaker, and is diſordered in his head at times.

Did not you hear he was diſcharged the army for it?——No.

Did not he ſay it was his leather?——No, never.

Did

Did not he ſay it was a bale of leather?——No.

Did he ſay it was his bale?——No.

What did he pull it off your head at your own door?——I had it in my arms.

Was it a heavy bundle?——No not very heavy.

There were a great many people about at eight at night?——No there were not.

Did not you really ſee and perceive that he was very drunk in the warehouſe?——He ſeemed ſo then, but not in the ſtreet.

It was not very eaſy for a man to ſnatch that from a ſtout young man like you?——He did not ſnatch it quite from me.

Did you obſerve any body with him?——I did not, I heard a voice.

Did not he tell you he had loſt ſome leather that evening?——No, he told another perſon.

JOHN TURNER ſworn.

I am warehouſeman and clerk to Mr. Martin; on Thurſday evening the 10th of this month the priſoner was brought into our warehouſe by the porter Thomas Drake, between eight and nine, about half after eight; the priſoner when he came into the warehouſe, at firſt ſeemed to be exceedingly in liquor, and I being at ſome diſtance went to the priſoner, he was reeling againſt a pack of ſheeting, I went up to him and told him it was exceedingly hard that our men could not go about the ſtreets like other porters without being ſtopped by him, to which he ſaid at firſt, he did not ſtop him; I then told him I was ſure he would not have been brought there if he had not; he ſaid the reaſon he ſtopped him becauſe he had loſt a large quantity of leather; I told him that was a very wrong way of looking for his leather, that he ſhould apply to the public office, and not ſtop porters; to which he ſaid he had applied to the public office in Bow-ſtreet, and ſaw Sir Sampſon Wright; I ſaid then his name was upon their books; to which he ſaid his name was not down; he then told me he was a very good kind of man, and ſaid he rented two houſes, the one he let out, and the other he occupied himſelf, one he ſaid was in Saint Thomas Apoſtle's, and the other in a court near there, but I have forgot the place; I am ſure he ſaid one was in Saint Thomas Apoſtle's.

Did he ſay where he lived?—I think he ſaid in ſome court in that neighbourhood. I told him I was afraid he was not looking for leather at that time of night; and he ſaid he ſhould not give me any anſwer, for I intended to take an advantage of him, I told him that was far from our intention.

Did he really appear to you to be drunk or not?——When he went away he did not.

Is that Mr. Martin's chintz?——I cannot poſitively ſwear to it, we had ſome of them in the houſe ſome few days before, ſome of the pattern was given to the porter to ſend to Mr. Craydon.

Mr. Chetwood. Had you good nature enough if the man was in liquor, before you ſent for an officer, to ſend to ſee if he lived there, and was a man in credit?——We did not.

How came you not?—I do not know it was my buſineſs, if I had left the warehouſe it would not have been proper.

You know you ſaid you did not want to take any advantage of the man?——I have heard ſince that he does live there, and has the leaſe of a houſe.

Did you ſearch him there?—No.

Was he ſearched in your preſence?——He was not, he was ſearched at the Poultry Compter.

What was found upon him?——I cannot tell, becauſe I was not there.

Have not you heard?——I would not go by hearſay, I heard he had a new pair of ſhoes in his pocket, and a ſize-ſtick to take meaſure by.

HENRY SOAME ſworn.

I am a tallow-chandler, on the 10th of this month I was going down Cateaton-ſtreet, where I live, and I ſaw a man running after Mr. Martin's porter.

How far might he run after him?——I ſup-

I ſuppoſe I did not ſee him run above twenty or thirty yards.

Deſcribe to us how he ran?——Each of them ran as hard as they could to all appearance, the priſoner was behind.

Should you have taken him by his running for a drunken or a ſober man?——Moſt certainly for a ſober man.

Then at this time there was nothing appeared to you that ſhould make you think that the man was in liquor?——There was not, Mr. Martin's porter caught hold of his maſter's bell at the door, and pulled it ſharply, by that time the priſoner overtook him, and there was a great ſtruggle between them at the door, the door was opened, and Mr. Martin's porter pulled him into the houſe, and the door was ſhut, I ſaw a parcel which the porter had when he was running, but I did not ſee what was done to it by any body; the door was ſhut after he had dragged him into the houſe, and the parcel ſhut out of doors; I pulled the bell and ſomebody came and pulled the parcel in doors.

Did you ſee the priſoner do any thing to the parcel?—I did not.

Was you ſo ſituated that you might have ſeen it?—I believe I might.

Did they paſs very quick?—Very quick.

Did you go into the houſe?—I did not.

Look at the priſoner, is that the man?——I cannot ſwear that is the man, it was ſo dark.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I remember nothing of it, from the time I was in the public-houſe till I was a priſoner, I do not remember ſeeing the face of any mortal.

SAMUEL LAWE ſworn.

I live at the Sun in Roſemary-Lane.

Did you ſee the priſoner on the 10th of February at your houſe?—To the beſt of my knowledge it was this day fortnight, he was with ſome company, and he had ſix or ſeven pints of beer, he went away about ſeven, he appeared to be rather diſguiſed, I knew nothing of him before.

What time did he leave your houſe?—To the beſt of my knowledge it was between ſeven and eight.

Did he come away by himſelf?—Yes, to the beſt of my knowledge.

Had he any ſhoes about him?—None that I ſaw; he told me in diſcourſe he was a ſhoe-maker, and kept a green-ſtall.

How long might he be in your houſe?——I ſuppoſe he might be there from between three and four to that time; he told me he came to look after a Jew that owed him ſome money; I never ſaw him before, but the next day his wife came and enquired about it, and told me he was taken up, and ſhe ſaid he kept a green-ſtall and ſhoemaker's ſhop.

How long have you kept that houſe?—About eight months, I married the widow.

BENJAMIN DODSWELL ſworn.

I live in Tothil-fields, I am a tanner, I had twenty ſeal-ſkins for the priſoner to tan.

What became of thoſe ſkins?——He had ten of them away, and the other ten I ſent him, and he would not take them in of my man, he ſaid they might not be the ſkins.

Have they not been loſt by ſome means or other?—I cannot ſay.

Where not theſe ten ſkins by ſome miſtake ſold to a man in Weſtminſter, who was a quaker?——There were ſeven, and they were returned to the priſoner, and he would not accept of them, there were ſome done, but they lay and rotted, therefore I thought it was better to ſell them.

Did not you declare that he had acted like a madman in this affair?——He did not behave in a proper manner.

Did he appear like a man that was a little touched in his head?——I cannot ſay he behaved in a proper manner the two or three laſt times I ſaw him, he appeared like a madman more than any thing elſe; I thought he was very much out of the way when I ſaw him.

Court. How long have you known this man?—About twelve months back.

Do you know where he lived during that time?———He told me he lived at Knightſbridge.

Mr. Chetwood. I believe he removed from Knightſbridge?——My man brought me word that he was failed for debt, and run away from there.

What ſkins were theſe?—Seal ſkins.

Are they uſed by ſhoemakers?—Yes.

How many of theſe ſeal ſkins did you return to him?——Ten, and he ſaid there were but eight, the other ſeven were ſold to the Quaker's in the Broad-way, and the other three were not dry.

What became of the other three?——I ſent the ten to him and he refuſed taking them, he was then laying in bed, and would not ſo much as ſee the man, nor ſuffer the ſkins to be taken into the houſe.

DANIEL BLANY ſworn.

I have known the priſoner between two and three years, he belongs to the ſociety that I am clerk of, he has belonged to that ſociety two years, the 19th of laſt September.

What is the name of that ſociety?——The Rodney Society, a benefit club in caſe of ſickneſs: I have ſeen him many times when he has drank more than he ſhould do, when I have ſeen him what I call drunk; he ſometimes has got up and danced about the room more like a mad man than any thing elſe, but I never ſaw any harm of him, nor never heard any ill of him before this affair; I knew him when he lived at Knightſbridge, but his home is now in St. Thomas Apoſtle; he is a ſhoemaker by trade, but his wife follows green grocery, I have heard he had a leaſe of the houſe, and I did ſee the leaſe, it was made to him by the name of James Oakes.

SAMUEL MITCHELL ſworn.

I live in Bedford-ſtreet, Covent Garden, I have known the priſoner near three years, I belong to the ſame ſociety, I am a ſhoemaker, and he is a ſhoemaker; I never heard any thing amiſs of him in my life, he always was a very juſt upright man, he has received ſome wounds about his body and head as I have been told, and when he gets a little in liquor he is more like a man that is fit for Bedlam which I have ſeen.

Can you call him a reaſonable man?—I have ſeen him diſtracted when in liquor, and acted like a mad man; with the value of three or four pints of beer he was not fit for the company of any reaſonable man; liquor did not take the ſame effect with other men, he has appeared to me to be ſober when he came there, and in a very ſhort time he was like a raving mad man.

Court. Have you yourſelf ever drank in company with him?—Yes, many times drank a ſmall quantity of beer.

What ſtate has he been in then?—Not fit to keep reaſonable men company; I believe, and am almoſt ſure he was a ſoldier, becauſe I have ſeen him with ſome of the ſame regiment.

THOMAS EDWARDS ſworn.

I live at No. 5, near Lamb's Chapel, near Cripplegate Church; I have known him near two years, I do not belong to any club with him, I have been in his company ſeveral times; when he is in liquor he is like a man out of his mind, part of three or four pints of beer would do it, I have often ſeen it; he is a very honeſt man and works for me and my children, and he does me a deal of juſtice: when he is in liquor he is rather like a man out of his mind ſeemingly to me.

What are you?—I am a hackney coachman, and rent a houſe of fourteen pounds a year.

WILLIAM DOWN ſworn.

I am a taylor, I am attending here on another trial, I was much ſurpriſed to ſee the priſoner here, I knew nothing of this; I have known him between two and three years, but when he is in liquor, he is moſt extraordinary being I ever ſaw in my life.

(The diſcharge of James Oakes read, ſigned James Huſſey.)

GUILTY

Of ſtealing, but not violently from the perſon.
Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the London Jury before
Mr. ROSE.

---

303. WILLIAM WESTON was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Joſeph Birch on the king's highway, on the 31ſt day of January laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will, one canvaſs purſe, value 1d. and nine ſhillings in monies numbered, his property.

(The witneſſes examined apart.)

JOSEPH BIRCH ſworn.

I am a waggoner, on the 31ſt of January laſt, I was on Finchley Common, my waggon had been gone on before two hours, and I was coming after, and at the corner of Brown's Wells, near the ſeven mile ſtone, I was met by two footpads armed with two piſtols; they laid hold of my horſe, and bid me deliver my money, or they would blow my brains out; I ſaid I had not much but what trifle I had they ſhould be welcome to, and not giving it as ſoon as they ſpoke, one of them ſaid, in a minute Sir, I will blow your brains out; I delivered my money, nine ſhillings in a canvas purſe; then he looſed my horſe and bid me go, I ſaw him again that night, that was the priſoner, the other got away.

Court. What time in the evening was it?——Seven, it was dark then.

Quite dark?—Quite dark.

Had you ever ſeen the priſoner before?—Not before then.

Were their perſons diſguiſed?—No they were in their proper dreſs.

You ſay it was dark?—It was not dark, it was a freſty night and very light.

I think you ſay that the waggon had gone on a conſiderable time before?——I ſuppoſe it was near two hours before, we had loſt a dog, and I had ſent off the other man; I was at our inn, the Caſtle in Wood-ſtreet all the time.

Had you drank freely?—I was perfectly ſober as I am now; I rode to the Swan and Two Necks, which was about a mile, and the hoſtler ſaid Joe, have you been ſtopped? I ſaid yes, and the landlord came and aſked me; and Richard Spencer was there, and he perſuaded me to go and ſeek for the man, ſays he, I have been ſtopped, and I ſhould know one of them; we went to the place where I was ſtopped, I ſaid Richard this is the place, and we looked acroſs the common a little diſtance, and ſaw a man ſtanding, ſays he, this is the man, and there was another, he ſaid halloo, but he would not ſpeak; he ſaid damn you, but I will make you ſpeak, and we ran after him directly, and they took to their heels and ran; we purſued them about fifty or ſixty yards, and Richard had an iron poker in his hand, and he threw it at one of them, whether he hurt him or no I cannot tell, but they divided; he ran after one, and I after the other; when he purſued him he turned again, and fired upon him, I ſaw the flaſh, the other that I purſued jumped into a little brook, and I jumped after him, and he got away; then Spencer called for my aſſiſtance, he had a man down, and I came up and there was the priſoner; when I came there he ſaid damn him, he has ſhot at me, hold him while I put the piſtol in my pocket; the priſoner is the man, but he has not the ſame dreſs on now.

Court. Can you venture to ſwear that thoſe two perſons, that you found on your return, were the ſame two that robbed you?—Yes, that I ſafely can.

Why you ſay you never ſaw them before?—I have ſeen him before in my travels, but I did not know that he was the man then; he might be the value of two minutes in

in robbing me, I will venture to swear that he was the man, so help me God.

In the former part of your examination, you told me that you had never seen the prisoner before in your life? now you say you have seen him before?—I have seen him pass on the road before, I know his father very well by sight, I never conversed with him, nor had any acquaintance with him.

RICHARD SPENCR sworn.

Do you know the prosecutor Joseph Birch?——Yes, I was in company with him on the 31st of January, on Finchley-common, at Mr. Farling's, Brown's Wells; I took the prisoner within a hundred yards of Brown's Wells, I am servant to Madam Lucy, on Finchley-common, I had been at London, and was returning back at the time; I did not stop at this public house, but I met with the prosecutor on the road, at the side of the Common, about two hundred yards.

Did you enter into conversation with the prosecutor?——None while I took the prisoner.

How came you and the prosecutor to meet that evening?——We met just as the accident happened, at the Swan and Two Necks; I made my home there that night, my mistress was in town, we had been with my mistress's goods that night to town; the prosecutor came in, and said, I am robbed of nine shillings, says I, I will go back with you, if you will go with me; I have known the prosecutor these good many years, I took the poker out of the fire, and went back with him, and within about two or three hundred yards of Brown's Wells, there were two persons standing, and I said halloo! and they made no answer, and I said, halloo! again, and they made no answer; and I made up to them, and the one run one way and the one the other, I pursued one and Birch the other, and the one I pursued turned round and fired his pistol at me, that was the prisoner, that I am sure of; the pistol flashed in the pan, but went no further, I tripped up his heels and threw him down, and took the pistol from him; here is the pistol, he run it into my side when I kicked his heels up; we took him into Brown's Wells, and went to seek for a constable; and then two others fired at me, we kept him in custody, and he was afterwards carried before a Magistrate, and committed.

Prisoner. When I was before the Justice, he swore I fired at him three times!—I never said such a word, I said, he fired at me with his pistol, and the other two fired at me as I went along; I had two more pistols attempted to be fired at me, the one made a report, and the other did not.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going down to Barnet to my uncle, and the other side of Brown's Wells, two men came up to me, and said, halloo! and I made no answer; and they immediately followed me, and said, life for life, and I immediately run off, and they followed me.

How do you get your living?——I have been a gentleman's servant lately.

Was you in service at this time?——I was out of service, I was going to my uncle who lives at Barnet, I have witnesses to my character.

The remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will also contain (amongst others) the remarkable Trial of Monsieur JACQUES PHILIP HARDY, Secretary to the Compte de Mirabeau, with the evidence verbatim, of Mademoiselle Amelia Henrietta Van Haren, Spinster, Sir Gilbert Elliott, Baronet, and others.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commission of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middlesex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wednesday the 23d of FEBRUARY 1785, and the following Days;

Being the THIRD SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER III. PART III.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noster Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of William Weſton.

The Rev. WILLIAM ROMAIN the younger ſworn.

I am ſubpœned to this man's character; I have known him perſonally about three years, I am a clergyman, I live in Berkſhire now, but at the time I knew him, he lived with me at South Mims, near Barnet; he was footman to me, for I believe more than a year and half, he was a very ſober ſervant, and I believe, very well thought of by every body in the neighbourhood, as well as in our family; he has left my ſervice about a year and four months, as near as I can recollect; I viſited at the gentleman's houſe that he went to live with, which is this gentleman, Mr. Caſamajor.

—— CASAMAJOR, Eſq. ſworn.

I have known the priſoner about fourteen months, he lived as a ſervant with me about eight months; he quitted my ſervice about the middle of laſt July, he had an exceeding good character while he lived with me, and was a very good ſervant; he gave me warning, he underſtood nothing of horſes; I never heard of him till about a fortnight or three weeks ago, his uncle applied to me.

Then from July you are a total ſtranger to the manner in which he conducted himſelf?——Yes.

What way of life is his uncle in?—He is a barber, a very reſpectable honeſt man.

Court to Priſoner. I will examine any more witneſſes you may think proper to call, but after two ſuch reſpectable witneſſes as theſe, it does not ſeem to me that you want any more witneſſes to character.

THOMAS PARSLEY ſworn.

The priſoner was an apprentice to me, I am a barber and hair-dreſſer, my wife is related to him; I have known him for a courſe of years, he behaved very well to me, and has been with me to and fro eight years; I left off buſineſs and gave him his indentures up.

Has his general reputation been during the time that you have known him, that he was an honeſt young man?——I knew nothing to the contrary.

Did you ever hear any thing to the contrary?—No, Sir, I never knew any thing laid to his charge that he was guilty of.

WILLIAM BISBURGH ſworn.

I have known him ſeven or eight years, I never never underſtood his character to be any thing but very good, I never heard any thing bad of him in my life; I ſhould have truſted him as ſoon as any man I know upon the face of the earth.

Court to Priſoner. Have you any witneſſes to give the Jury an account why you were at that place at that ſeaſon of the night?

Priſoner. My Lord, I was rather late, I was going to Barnet to ſee my uncle.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

304. JAMES COYLE was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting William Wickham, Eſq; on the King's highway, on the 7th of February, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life; and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will, one watch made of gold, value 15l. one ribbon with a medallion with hair therein, ſet in gold, value 30s. three ſtone ſeals ſet in gold, value 3l. one metal watch key, value 6d. and twenty-eight ſhillings in monies numbered, his property.

(The Caſe was opened by Mr. Abbot.)

WILLIAM WICKHAM, Eſq; ſworn.

On the evening of Monday the 7th of February, I paſſed through Covent Garden, meaning to turn down Bridges-ſtreet, but the carriages were ſo thick I did not go down; I went down Little Ruſſel-ſtreet, which leads into Drury-lane: I was quite alone; I had at that time, a gold watch, a ribbon with a medallion with hair ſet in gold, three ſtone ſeals ſet in gold, and one baſe metal watch key gilt with gold, one guinea in gold, and twenty ſhillings in ſilver; when I was in Ruſſel-ſtreet, I took my watch-chain and buttoned it in my breeches pocket, I had not ſeen my money ſince I left Mancheſter-ſquare, but I know I had it that afternoon; I buttoned my coat to the bottom, and put my hands in my coat pockets, and covered my breeches pockets with my coat pockets; I intended to go among theſe men, I ſaw eight or ten men puſhing about at the mouth of a court, which is directly oppoſite to the ſtage door of Drury-lane playhouſe; I preſume it muſt be near eleven, the King and Queen at that time came out, and the footmen were ſtanding at the back of the carriage, which was quite light by the number of flambeaux; I attempted to paſs through the horſemen, to get on the other ſide, then I was quite cloſe to the horſes; I am not ſure, but I think one of the guards put his hand down and ſtopped me, but perhaps it might be one of the horſes, for they ſtood very cloſe; I then ſtepped back to the pavement, meaning to go all the way back to Long-acre, rather than go through them; as ſoon as I ſtepped back, either one or two who were behind me, nearer Covent Garden, but I think there were three, had got below me, to puſh me into the thick of the mob.

Was the priſoner one of theſe two or three people?——No, certainly not.

Did you keep your hands in your pockets, Sir, all the time, or how long?——I kept my hands in my pockets ſome time, I cannot ſpeak with any certainty as to the time, but I took them out to ſecure myſelf, as I was puſhed about for the ſpace of two minutes; I am quite ſure the priſoner was one who puſhed me, when I was amongſt theſe people, I knew him again the next morning; I was raiſed off my legs, I was apprehenſive I ſhould loſe my balance and fall under the horſes feet; they got under my arm and raiſed me up.

In what manner was you lifted up, with a degree of violence?——Very much ſo, I ſuſpected what the caſe was, and I was determined to keep my hands on my pockets as long as I could; on putting my hands down again, which I did inſtantly, I found my left hand pocket turned inſide out; I put my right hand down, and in putting it down, I caught a man's wriſt, I almoſt inſtantly put down my left hand, but not my right quite ſo ſoon; my money was in breeches pocket, and putting down my right hand I caught a man's wriſt, I cannot ſay whether in my pocket or not.

right

Court. Whereabouts did you catch that hand?—I cannot ſay with any certainty, I put my hand down to ſecure my pocket, and I caught hold of his wriſt, that was the hand of the priſoner; I kept hold of his hand four or five minutes before I ſecured him, the moment I got hold of him, one or two preſſed upon me, I reached my left hand over them, and caught him by the collar, I held him there for ſome time, the reſt attempting to get him out of my hand by all the means they poſſibly could.

Did any converſation paſs at this time between the priſoner, whoſe hand you caught, and the other man?——Oh, frequently, the words, "pull him up the court," or "pull me up the court," were frequently repeated; the priſoner was talking to them the whole time: I have no recollection of what the priſoner ſaid, they repeatedly ſpoke to one another, the priſoner ſeemed very anxious to eſcape, he turned his head the other way; I tore his coat entirely off his back, and his ſhirt too before I got him ſecured; I called out repeatedly for aſſiſtance, but I believe the Horſe Guards dare not diſmount, as the King and Queen were expected out; the priſoner's coat, and part of his ſhirt, and part of his neckcloth came off in my hand; the moment I got him out, I had him in my left hand, and he got from me a little way, about a yard or two I ſuppoſe; I immediately ſprung after him, and caught hold of him by the hair of his head, and pulled him backwards as well as I could, and I believe at that moment one of the guards diſmounted, and I dragged him between the horſes; I am ſure this is the man, I never loſt him for an inſtant, except that moment that he was out of my hand, and I caught him again; when I dragged him between the horſes, two of his companions followed me between there.

Were theſe two of the men you ſaw puſhing?——I cannot ſay, though I have very little doubt of it in fact; one man ſtruck me twice on my breaſt very hard, ſo hard that if he had had room for a blow he muſt have knocked me down, that was evidently with intent to reſcue him; one man I ſhould know again wherever I ſaw him; I went with him to the Brown Bear in Bow Street, he was there ſearched, and nothing found upon him, I could not ſearch him before; I ſaw no watchman all this time.

Mr. Keys, Priſoner's Council. I think this tranſaction happened at the moſt critical time, when the ſtreet is moſt crowded?——Yes, there was a large concourſe of people got together.

The foot path is extremely narrow?—Yes.

You ſay you was very much confuſed?—Certainly.

You was apprehenſive you might meet with a loſs thereabouts, therefore you took every poſſible precaution?—Yes.

Then the fear of loſing your property, neceſſarily took up a great part of your attention?—Undoubtedly.

Court. Did you ſee any puſhing and ſhoving about till you came up to them?—I did not.

Are you ſure of that?—Yes.

JOHN TOWNSEND ſworn.

I attend the Public Office, in Bow-ſtreet; on this night I was juſt coming up towards Bow-ſtreet, and I heard that gentleman had juſt loſt his watch and money, I believe it was eleven o'clock, and I ſaw a vaſt crowd of people all ſtanding together, where I ſuſpected the place muſt be; I immediately made up to the man there, and ſaw the priſoner at the bar in cuſtody of the conſtable of the houſe; the proſecutor immediately gave me a blow on my breaſt, and I fell a little backwards, and I called out to the conſtable to take him to Bow-ſtreet, to the Brown Bear, and there I ſearched him, I found nothing on him.

Did he ſay any thing?—He forced his diſcourſe to me, and ſaid Townſend I never was near the gentleman at all, I am not guilty; his cloaths were torn very much.

Had you come up to the crowd by that time?—Yes, I ſuppoſe not above a minute or two before; I was at the croſſing where the robberies generally are done, and there was ſuch a mob, and ſo many coaches, I could not get up at any rate, till I came almoſt to the corner of Bow-ſtreet; when I received a blow from the proſecutor, I was cloſe to the corner of Bow-ſtreet, the priſoner was then in cuſtody of Blandy, I did not ſee the priſoner and the proſecutor at any time, till I ſaw the priſoner in cuſtody.

Are you quite ſure as to the perſon of the priſoner at the bar?—Yes, I am.

Mr. Keys. How long have you been an officer at the office?—Two years.

You know there is a reward?——I dare ſay you would not wiſh me to ſay I do not.

So the proſecutor miſtook you for one of the gang, and hit you a blow on the breaſt?—He did hit me.

There was a vaſt croud of people?——A great number, as there always is.

When the King and Queen are there, the crowd is greater than ordinary?—Yes, certainly.

Then how many people do you imagine there may be generally about the ſtage door, when the King and Queen are coming out?——I cannot tell.

Several hundreds?——I do not ſay that.

Are there a hundred?—I cannot ſay on my oath.

Are there fifty?——There may, fifty is a great many.

You found nothing on this man?—No.

Mr. Abbot. Pray whereabouts was that crowd that you mentioned?——Oppoſite where the King comes out.

Where were you ſtruck?——Juſt by the corner of Bow-ſtreet.

CORPORAL ELLIS ſworn.

I am a corporal in the Life Guards, I was on guard at the Play-houſe, nearly oppoſite the door where the King comes out, my face was towards the Play-houſe door.

Did you ſee any croud in the ſtreet at that time, before you or behind you?——I did not ſee much, I heard a buſtling ſeveral times there, I turned my head round, and ſaw a gentleman, the proſecutor who ſtands there, in diſtreſs; I called to him once or twice, and made an interval to get him between our horſes; the proſecutor was a little to the right of me, but he was ſo engaged he could not pay attention to me.

What was he about?—I ſaw that they were going to do him an injury, I drew my ſword, and cut at ſeveral of them with the broad part of my ſword, they appeared to me to be ſhoving him about; as I was uſing my ſword, and hitting them over the arms and ſhoulders, the proſecutor called to me, and ſaid, ſoldier, I have got hold of the man that robbed me, I beg you will aſſiſt me to take him; I returned my ſword into the ſheath, and ſeized the priſoner at the bar behind the neck, I am ſure of the priſoner; the captain called to me and aſked what we were doing, upon that I let my hold go, and ſays to my comrade, get off your horſe and aſſiſt the gentleman to take him, he got off and ſecured him, the priſoner was brought into the line and carried acroſs the ſtreet; two men followed him, but I ſaid to them, if you do not go back, I will cut you down.

Did theſe two men appear to you to come to aſſiſt the gentleman?—It did not appear ſo to me, it was not very eaſy to paſs backwards and forwards.

Did the people you ſaw behind you appear to be paſſing onwards or backwards?—It was impoſſible for any body to paſs by at that minute.

Mr. Keys. There generally is at that time a number of people to ſee their Majeſties come out?——Yes, it is very uſual when they are juſt expected.

Then a perſon might be very honeſtly puſhing and ſhoving to get that ſight, without any bad intention whatever, that is a thing that frequently happens?—I ſaw no great puſhing, they were looking with their faces that way, I ſaw no ſhoving but by this party, but I have ſeen people crowd; I had my eye on this tranſaction about half a minute, before I was called to make the obſervation I did; my attention is directed to the King and Queen when they are coming out.

THOMAS STONE sworn.

I am a life-guards-man, I recollect being at the Play-house on Monday was a fortnight, in little Ruſſell-ſtreet, facing the ſtage door where the King and Queen go in and come out; there was a crowd behind, I had been remarking a crowd, and remarking about nine or ten people; the firſt I ſaw was a kind of girl, or a very little woman that had got among them, that they were ſhoving along, I heard ſome of them call out turn her up the court, ſhe begged for mercy, and ſaid they would almoſt kill her; this crowd was juſt behind me, oppoſite the ſtage door, then I looked towards the ſtage door for two or three minutes; I then ſaw them huſtling a gentleman's ſervant in livery, and a woman, when they came oppoſite to me, ſhe begged to get out of the crowd, and ſome of them ſtooped down and picked up her patten, and followed her and gave it to her; theſe people were ſtanding behind, and I was remarking them; I then kept looking behind me, and ſaw them coming again, ſome of the ſame people I had ſeen before, and I ſaw a gentleman amongſt them, I ſaid to the corporal only look now, you never ſaw ſuch a ſet of rafcals, they have now got a gentleman whom they are uſing very ill, the corporal then drew his ſword, and ſtruck at one of them, and drove him to his horſe, which I believe was the perſon the gentleman had hold of; and I diſmounted my horſe, the proſecutor is the gentleman, I cannot tell whether I ſhould know the man that he had hold of, I was in ſuch a flurry in getting off my horſe, and the captain at the ſame time ordered me to mount my horſe, and aſked me what buſineſs I had off.

Had the gentleman hold of this perſon whoever he was?——Yes, he had, he did not let him go afterwards while I ſaw him.

Mr. Keys. Then the people were ſo far from behaving diſhoneſtly, that you ſaw them give the woman her patten?—Yes.

WILLIAM NORTON ſworn.

I am a life-guards-man, I was on duty this night next to the laſt witneſs, I ſaw a croud in the ſtreet behind me, all I ſaw was a great many people that were going by, and I ſaw the laſt witneſs aſſiſt the proſecutor in pulling the priſoner out, the priſoner is the man I am ſure, I took notice of him, they huſtled every body that came by, it is common at thoſe times.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I have ſome gentlemen at the door, I am as innocent as the child unborn; I had been at work very hard that day, I was juſt come out of a public houſe.

The priſoner called two witneſſes to his character.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

305. THOMAS WEST was indicted for feloniouſly returning from tranſportation, and being found at large, on the 4th of February, in the pariſh of Hendon, before the expiration of the ſaid term, againſt the ſtatute.

DANIEL BUSHNELL ſworn.

I am gaol-keeper at Reading, I ſaw the priſoner tried and condemned, and he afterwards broke out of my gaol; he was brought from Newgate by a habeas, he was in gaol about a month before the aſſizes, and then till the 30th of November, then he broke gaol with ſeveral more priſoners; I can ſpeak poſitively to the man, he was afterwards ordered for tranſportation, he was condemned for horſe ſtealing; I think it was a horſe of thirty pounds value, one John Gutteridge was condemned with him at the ſame time, on the 30th of November; I was up here with a priſoner, and he and eleven more burſt the gaol, and broke through my dwelling; I was in town while they broke out, and I ſaw the priſoners in gaol the day before, I appointed an extraordinary watchman whilſt I came to town; here is a true copy of the record, which I examined examined myſelf, the record was at Mr. Prices's the clerk of the aſſizes.

(The copy of the record of the priſoner's conviction read by Thomas Shelton, Eſq; Clerk of the Arraigns, and examined by the Court.)

(The original order ſigned by Mr. Price, read and examined as before.)

" Berks, at the aſſizes, Monday the 19th " of July, recorded, that the ſaid Thomas " Weſt together with one George Ewing " were to be tranſported for life."

Court. You are ſure this is not Ewing? —Yes, I am ſure this is Weſt, Ewing is in gaol now.

DENNIS M'DONAND ſworn.

On the 5th of this month, the witneſſes that are here brought the priſoner to the Rotation-office, in Litchfield-ſtreet; I am ſure that is the man that was brought to me.

HENRY CRISP ſworn.

I am a fiſherman, on the 4th of this month, I was at the Hoop at Hendon, between ſix and eight, and this man came in, Hendon is in the county of Middleſex; I never ſaw the priſoner before, he called for two penny worth of gin and water, we were in another room, and he would come into company, he ſat down, and aſked me how I did, I told him I knew nothing of him, I aſked him to drink; then he would lay a wager with me, that he had been further to ſea than I had; and I ſaid, very poſſibly he might; then he went out and was gone ten minutes, and I aſked the landlord who he was, he ſaid, he did not know; then he returned, and I told him I did not chooſe to have any more of his company; then he went into the tap-room, and I was ſoon after called to the aſſiſtance of the landlord, I took the priſoner into cuſtody, and kept him all night, and the next day I took him to the cage; then the conſtable put a pair of handcuffs upon him, and ſearched him, and found two picklock keys, ſix ſlugs, and one ſmall ball in his pocket; then the conſtable took him to the Rotation-office, in Litchfield-ſtreet, I ſaw him there the Monday following, I am ſure that he is the man I ſaw at Hendon.

THOMAS BOMBAY ſworn.

I took him at Hendon at the ſign of the Hoop, I was in company with Criſp; I took him on account of his producing a piſtol, I have the piſtol, I ſaw it in his hand, he dropped it; we ſat up with him all night, then we took him to the cage, and charged a conſtable with him, and took him to London, I am ſure he is the man.

JOHN RUDD ſworn.

I was at the Hoop by myſelf, and ſaw the priſoner there on the 4th, I ſaw Criſp and Bombay there, and helped to take the priſoner; we kept him all night, and took him to the cage next morning, and then we brought him to the Rotation.

WILLIAM SPOONER ſworn.

I know the priſoner, I ſaw him on the 4th, between ſix and eight, I helped to take him, and kept him in cuſtody that night, and the next day he was taken to the cage and the Rotation.

DANIEL HARRIS ſworn.

I know the priſoner, I ſaw him at the Hoop, we took him into cuſtody, he was taken on ſuſpicion, having a piſtol upon him.

Priſoner. I never received any ſentence at the bar, and when the gates were open, I walked out as the reſt of the priſoners did.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

306. JACQUES PHILIP HARDY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 10th day of January laſt, in the pariſh of St. Andrew, Holborn, one printed bound book, hank, value 2s. twenty-seven Holland shirts, value 15l. two cotton night caps, value 2s. six pair of silk stockings, value 40s. two muslin stocks, value 5s. and one muslin cravat, value 4s. the property of the Compte de Mirabeau; and two lawn handkerchiefs, value 10s. and one linen handkerchief, value 2s. the property of Mademoiselle Amelie Henriette Van Haren, spinster.

The prisoner being a foreigner was informed by the Court, that he might have a Jury of half foreigners, but he said, he chose to be tried by a Jury of all Englishmen.

Court. Give the interpreter the indictment, and let him read it to him in French.

Mr. JESTERMAN sworn Interpreter.

Ask him if he is guilty?——Not in any ways.

How will you be tried?——By God and this Country.

(The Jury sworn.)

The indictment opened by Mr. Garrow of Council for the prosecution.

The witnesses examined apart at the request of Mr. Silvester and Mr. Parke, Council for the Prisoner.

Mr. Fielding, of Council for the Prosecution, opened the Case as follows:

Gentlemen of the Jury, when I get up after my young friend, Mr. Garrow, it must necessarily surprise you to see two of us to support this prosecution, and two of my learned friends appearing as Council for the prisoner; but Gentlemen, as you have already collected that the parties here are both foreigners, you will expect from us a particular regard to our duty, you will expect from us a regulated conduct, that we on the part of the prosecution should be careful not even to attempt to enflame your passions, nor to aggravate the conduct of the prisoner at the bar: you will expect likewise from my learned friends on the other side, a regulated decorum in the cross examination of the witnesses; in this country Justice is always administered to the admiration of the world, in such a way as to extort approbation even from the prisoners themselves; the prosecutor is a man of public character, he is a man of great literary fame, and well known in France; the prisoner was his secretary. Gentlemen, in consequence of feeling that I am engaged in a particular duty out of the common track, it is that I assure myself I shall not be chastised by his Lordship in going a little out of this case, in order to account for the conduct of the prosecutor, and the manner in which this prosecution has arisen. The Compte, when he came over to this country, in August last, had packed up a number of very valuable effects; and when I tell you that he had lost a manuscript, which he valued infinitely more than the most precious jewel he ever possessed, and which was no less than the correspondence between Voltaire and a gentleman of great literary fame, a Monsieur D'Alembert; and attributing this loss to the carelessness or neglect of the man at the bar, he became a little angry with him; there was a woman in the family of the name of Champante, she was dismissed, and then several things were missing that were brought to England, and amongst the rest the subject of the present inquiry; there were some shirts, these were afterwards found in the box of the prisoner at the bar: therefore, Gentlemen, it is on this circumstance alone, that you are to bestow your consideration; you will hear from the witness, from a Lady who saw these shirts in England, who knew them to be the Compte's property, she will tell you the manner in which they were found, and where they were found; and it will be clearly established in proof to you, that these, being the Compte's property, were found in the possession of the prisoner; and it will then become him, to give a clear account how he came by them. I should not have stated the other circumstances, but I thought it necessary to assign to you the sole motive for this prosecution: the lady shall stand forth here, and tell her story; you will from thence thence collect, whether there is ſufficient proof of the felony, and of the guilt of the party; and I am ſure you will do by him, all that he can with; if he is clearly proved to be guilty, you will pronounce him ſo; but if on the contrary, you are not ſatisfied of that guilt, you will more chearfully diſcharge the other part of your duty, which calls upon you to acquit him.

AMELIA HENRIETTA VAN HAREN ſworn.

(The oath explained by the Interpreter.)

Mr. Garrow. Was the priſoner at the bar ſecretary to the Compte de Mirabeau?—Yes.

Was there a ſervant in the family of the name of Champante?—The perſon named Champante was diſmiſſed the ſervice of the Marchioneſs the mother of the Compte, and afterwards taken into my ſervice.

She was in England?——Yes.

When was ſhe diſcharged from your ſervice?—The 19th of January.

On her being diſcharged at that time, did you miſs any part of the property of the Compte?--Both of the Compte and my own.

Did the priſoner live at the houſe, where the Compte had his apartments?——He lived in the ſame houſe in England, but not in France.

Had he any box there?——He had his furniſhed room in Mrs. Bailey's houſe, where there were a great number of cheſts and drawers, and boxes, which he made uſe of.

Had he any box which he made uſe of, for his own uſe?——There was one which was part of the furniture of the room, which was appropriated to him, and uſed entirely for his own effects.

At the time that Champante was diſcharged, did you examine the contents of that box?—The next day after ſhe was diſmiſſed, I was ſent for while the priſoner was gone out of the houſe.

Was this box locked or open?——It was open.

Did you find any part of the property of the Compte or your own in that box?——Two handkerchiefs belonging to me, which were marked with the name of Harry inſtead of my own, and two ſhirts of the Compte's, the marks of which ſtill remain.

What marks had been taken out, and what marks had been put in?—H. and afterwards P. H.

Who made the H. on theſe handkerchiefs, who had marked them originally?—Myſelf.

Had you ſeen and uſed theſe handkerchiefs in England?——They were alternately worn round my neck coming from Brighton, and were loſt two days after.

Have you theſe handkerchiefs here?—Yes.

Look at them, and tell us whether you are ſure thoſe are the handkerchiefs you had England, and that you loſt?——Oh! certainly.

Do you know them by the mark or by the hemming?—By the hemming as well as by the mark.

Are you ſure them are the handkerchiefs you found in the priſoner's box?——Very ſure.

Who marked the Compte's ſhirts, found in that box?——I cannot tell, ſomebody whom I do not know.

Have you ſeen thoſe ſhirts in England?—I have ſeen theſe and twenty-five more that are miſſing.

Who was preſent at the time when you ſearched the box?—I and the Compte examined it firſt ourſelves, then we found one, then I called up a girl that was in the houſe, and that girl ſaw me find the other handkerchief; I was alone with the Compte when I found the two ſhirts, and the handkerchief.

Was you preſent at any time, when the priſoner was told that theſe things were found in his box?—Yes.

What did he ſay?——He ſaid, appearances were againſt him, but that he muſt be heard; and then he was aſked, why did you go out to give notice to Madam Champante, that ſhe was ſuſpected? to which he anſwered, when I think any body

—you is in danger of being hanged, I muſt inform them.

Did he ſay any thing about theſe handkerchiefs and ſhirts being found in his box?——He ſaid, it might be a miſtake of Madam Champante, when his own linen was brought back; and when the change of the mark was obſerved to him, he anſwered nothing.

Mr. Baron Perryn. Do you know who waſhed the Compte's linen?—She is here, I do not know her name.

Did the ſame perſon waſh the priſoner's linen, that waſhed the Compte's?——I do not know.

Mr. Garrow. Were theſe linen clean or foul?—Clean, one of the handkerchiefs had been put round my neck, but it was clean.

Croſs-examined by Mr. Silveſter.

Be ſo kind as to aſk this lady, how long this man had lived with the Compte?——Some few months, while he was in France, but had never lived in the houſe till he came to England.

Whether the Compte and ſhe came from France together, or whether the Compte came firſt in a hurry?—We came together, the Compte and me in a poſt-chaiſe, and the priſoner on horſeback.

Did you leave Paris together?——Yes.

What was the occaſion of the Compte's leaving Paris.

Mr. Fielding. Your Lordſhip will forgive me, being Council for foreigners, if I am a little more attentive than I ſhould perhaps be on another trial; I ſhould hope that any attempt to throw any imputation on the proſecutor, will be corrected by your Lordſhip.

Mr. Juſtice Buller. I cannot correct it, if it is evidence; becauſe thank God, we live in a country, that whether a man is a native or a foreigner makes no difference.

Mr. Silveſter. I certainly will aſk no improper queſtion, nor any queſtion I would not aſk any Engliſh perſon, ſtanding there; Why did you leave Paris?—The Compte ſaid, he was tired of being in France, and I wiſhed to ſee England.

Do you mean to ſay, upon your oath, that was the only reaſon, why the Compte left Paris?—There was nothing ſaid by the Compte, and I deſire it may be aſked of the Compte himſelf.

When you came to England, by what name did you go?——The name of Van Haren, and I deſire you will call a number of witneſſes which are here to prove it.

Aſk the lady, whether ſhe did not go by the name of the Counteſs de Nara?——Never in her life.

Aſk this lady how long ſhe has lived with the Compte, either here or in France?—Do you mean to aſk how long I have been acquainted with the Compte.

How long have you lived together in the ſame houſe.

Court. Explain to her that we do not want to know her connections?——Since I arrived in England.

When Madam Champante was diſmiſſed, did not you examine at that time, your's and the Compte's linen, and other property?—I examined my linen, and found a good deal miſſing, to which Champante anſwered that it was among that that we left in France, to which I anſwered that was impoſſible, for I have had theſe two handkerchiefs in London.

Aſk her if ſhe did not leave Paris in ſome confuſion and hurry?—Yes, we were glad to get into England.

Whether ſhe did not leave Paris before ſhe had collected all her property and things?—I had collected all my effects before I left Paris, and put them in boxes, with orders that Madam Champante ſhould bring them to the place where I was going; and the Compte gave orders to the priſoner to the ſame effect.

Did not the Compte leave Paris, in ſuch a hurry, as to leave part of his property behind?—He left part of his effects, which the priſoner and Champante were intruſted to bring, and which they left behind, of their own authority.

Did

Did not you order part of your property and the Compte's to be left with Madam Julie, in France?—Nothing of what concerned the boxes.

Did you and the Compte leave any thing behind there?——Madam Julie came to the houſe, and took away ſome buſts of Porcelain, but theſe had nothing to do with the boxes.

Do you mean to ſay, that all the Compte's linen was packed up, and that you left Paris deliberately, and at your own leiſure?——All the Compte's and my own, we had no other precipitation, but to get to the pacquet-boat in time.

I aſk from Paris?—No.

Did you know at Paris, when the pacquet-boat went?——We did not know exactly, one ſaid, it went off at one time, and another at another, and we thought it beſt to go.

Does not it go at every hour from Calais?——We did not go by Calais.

By what way?——We took the pacquet boat, which was to bring us from Deipe to Brighton, but it brought us from Deipe to Shoreham.

Do not theſe pacquet boats go from Deipe every day, and every hour in the day?——We aſked, and received for information it was not ſo, therefore we hired a pacquet of our own.

What was the occaſion of the hurry, that you was obliged to hire a pacquet of your own, and not wait for the pacquet?—Becauſe we feared contrary winds.

Jury. That was after you got to Deipe, did you leave Parris in any hurry?—No, we were to have gone off the night before, and we did not go off till the next morning.

This box that was examined, was the room in which it was open?—It was open, becauſe Mr. Hardy had run away in ſuch a hurry to Champante, that he had not time to ſhut his room.

How did you know it was his intention to go to Champante?——He had aſked the Compte's leave to go, who had forbid him, notwithſtanding that he went, and was followed by Mr. Dawes, who ſaw him go to Champante's lodgings.

Did not the Compte order him to go to Champante?——He forbid him to go, and ſaid he would go himſelf.

Had he ordered him that day to go?——Not at all.

Jury. Was there any lock on the box?—I do not know, it was open.

Court. Aſk her a little more about the box, in whoſe room was it?——In Mr. Hardy's own room, in Mrs. Bailey's houſe.

Was it in the one pair of ſtairs or two pair?——In the garret, the houſe is three ſtories high, and garrets over, this was in the third pair of ſtairs.

Did not you mark your linen with the firſt letter of your name?—With nothing but an H. becauſe it is my family name.

Do you know whether that room of the priſoner's was uſually kept locked up or not?——I never was in the room but in day time, when Mr. Hardy was there, then it was open.

Mr. Baron Perryn. Was it open when you came to ſearch?—It was open, as Mr. Hardy had not had time to go up; one night I was obliged to go up, being ill, to call ſomebody to my aſſiſtance, and the room was then locked, and he was in it, and the key within ſide.

(The handkerchief produced.)

Mr. Silveſter. There was a P. in this?——Yes.

Who took out that P.?——I took it out myſelf, becauſe there was no intention of proſecuting before the papers were found to be miſſing.

Then you yourſelf took out the P.?——Yes.

Mr. Fielding. Have you any doubt whether theſe handkerchiefs are yours or not?—I am ſure of it, I know theſe two handkerchiefs by having been uſed to wear them round my neck, I had four more, they were loſt.

Did not you produce theſe handkerchiefs before the Juſtice?—Yes, and it was the

Juſtice

Juſtice who deſired me to leave them in the ſtate they were.

Mr. Baron Perryn. When was this mark put in?—It was put in after it was taken out of the box.

Into both handkerchiefs?——The red H. was left, but the black H. was put in by myſelf, the red H. was badly done, from one handkerchief I took away P. H. in red, and ſubſtituted H. in black, and in the other that had the red H. I only took away the P. and left the H. there.

Mr. Silveſter. Is all this ſince you found them in the trunk?—Yes.

What is become of the ſhirts?——Here they are.

What mark is there upon the ſhirts?—M. ſome of the Compte's were marked C. M. others I. B. and thoſe that belong to that ſet were marked only with an M.

Did you put that mark on the ſhirt?—No.

Mr. Baron Perryn. Had they additional marks on the ſhirts beſides the M. when the found them in the box?—No.

Are they juſt now as you found them?—Yes.

Who gave out the Compte's linen to waſh?—Sometimes myſelf, but very ſeldom, almoſt always Champante.

Sir GILBERT ELLIOTT ſworn.

Mr. Fielding. Sir Gilbert, I believe you attended the Juſtice?—I was there at two examinations, but not at the firſt.

Was you there at any time, when any queſtion was aſked the priſoner, relative to theſe ſhirts and handkerchiefs?——Yes, I was, I think he ſaid of the ſhirts, it muſt be a miſtake of the waſherwoman's; of the handkerchiefs, he ſaid they were his own, that the Compte never had any ſuch.

Mr. Parke. Did not you underſtand either from the Compte, or this lady, that they had left Paris in a great hurry and confuſion?—I have heard from the Compte an hiſtory of his own life, I have been acquainted with him.

Court. It certainly is not neceſſary to go into his whole hiſtory?——He came away from Paris in no diſgrace undoubtedly, but that he had reaſons for leaving Paris is certain.

And that he left it in a hurry?——For no reaſons that ſhould make him afraid to go back, the fact is, that from his account a number of things were loſt.

Did not he come to avoid a letter de cachet?——No Sir, he apprehended ſuch a thing might come, he had loſt a law ſuit, and he had had diſagreeable explanations with the keeper of the ſeals.

Mr. Fielding. My Lord, being aware of this, there are ſeveral noble perſonages, and my Lord Peterborough, I ſee there, who will ſay what he knows of the Compte.

Court. If Mr. Silveſter means to give evidence to impeach the Compte's veracity, this evidence will be proper to meet it.

Sir Gilbert. I am ſure every man will think as I do, that he is a man of perfect honour, that there is nothing in his conduct reproachable.

Mr. Fielding. I am extremely glad Sir Gilbert has given this idea, becauſe certainly my learned friend did drive at that.

Mr. Parke. Then we need not trouble Lord Peterborough.

Court. Were the handkerchiefs before the Magiſtrate claimed as being the Compte's? I am not ſure, I was inaccurate in the expreſſion, but I meant they never had ſuch, and he ſaid they were his, and that they never had ſuch.

Mr. Fielding. They were produced before the Juſtice as the property taken?—Yes, I remember perfectly this lady gave the ſame evidence as to their being hers, as to the marks.

Mr. Silveſter. Were they not in the commitment all called hers, the Compte and this lady live together?—Yes.

When they were examined they gave evidence of ſeveral other things, beſides theſe, that were loſt?——At the third examination the Juſtice thought proper to put the handkerchiefs out, but he reſerved only the ſhirts, which ſhirts were the Compte's.

Mr.

Mr. Garrow. And the Compte has ſince been adviſed to inſert the handkerchiefs in the indictment.

Court. What reaſon did the Juſtice give?—This reaſon; he aſked a friend of mine, in whoſe cuſtody they had been? he ſaid, in the cuſtody of Champante as her maid, he ſaid that for that reaſon he thought that they could not be conſidered as a theft.—

Mr. Garrow. The Juſtice was miſtaken, the cuſtody of Champante was the cuſtody of her miſtreſs.

JOHN BAYNES ſworn.

I was preſent before the Juſtice at this examination, I rather differ from Sir Gilbert in one reſpect, which is this, I remember the queſtion being put to the priſoner relative to theſe handkerchiefs, he ſaid the Compte never had ſuch handkerchiefs; for I remember one particular expreſſion, that when he was at Paris, the Compte had wanted to get ſome ſuch handkerchiefs of a woman, and that ſhe would not truſt the Compte without he would anſwer for the payment; the reſult of it was he claimed them as his own; he certainly claimed them as his own.

ELIZABETH DOWN ſworn.

I am maid ſervant to Mrs. Bayley, Compte de Mirabeau has apartments there.

Mr. Garrow. Do you remember the time that the maid ſervant was diſcharged?—Yes.

Was you in the priſoner's room at any time when Madam Haren was there?—Yes.

What did you ſee paſs at that time?——The lady took me up into the ſervant's room.

Do you remember when that was?—No, I cannot ſay: the maid ſervant was diſcharged on the Sunday, and this was on the Monday: the lady bid me hold my lap, and ſhe gave me ſome things out of Mr. Hardy's box.

What things did the lady take out of the box?—There were ſome ſhirts and ſtockings, I did not take particular notice; ſhe took a handkerchief out, which ſhe ſaid was hers, it was marked P. H. I ſaw the mark.

Mr. Silveſter. You do not underſtand French?——No.

And the lady does not underſtand Engliſh?——No.

So that you could not have much converſation?——No, Sir.

Mr. Garrow. But ſhe communicated that to you as her own?——Yes.

Look at theſe handkerchiefs, were theſe the ſort of marks?——It was ſuch a mark as that, it was marked with red ſilk.

Mr. Silveſter. All that you know is, that it was a white handkerchief.

Mr. Garrow. In what way did the lady communicate this information to you?——No particular way, I cannot underſtand her, only I went up along with her, ſhe ſhewed me by ſome action, it was hers.

Court. Did ſhe ſay any thing to you that you underſtood?——No, ſhe took and opened it, and bid me take notice, that was her handkerchief.

What word did ſhe make uſe of?—She bid me take notice, ſhe ſhewed it to me ſo.

Did you conclude from that, that ſhe was claiming it and noticing of it?—Yes.

Mr. Fielding. Did ſhe ſay, dis mine?—Yes.

Mr. Silveſter. Was the door open?—Yes.

And the box was open?——Yes.

Mr. Baron Perryn. Was it the handkerchief that had the P. H. or the H. only?—P. H.

Mr. Silveſter. She bid you hold your apron?—Yes.

In what language?——All the things were taken out and put in my apron; I underſtood her in a good many things.

Mr. Baron Perryn. Did ſhe give you any reaſon to think, at the time, that the P. had been added to the H.?—No, ſhe made no pretence of that ſort at that time.

Mr. Garrow to Mademoiſelle Haren. Madam, do you underſtand a little Engliſh?—

(In English.) I can underſtand more than I talk.

Can you tell me in Engliſh whether the handkerchief you have produced is yours? —It is mine.

Are you ſure it is yours?—Yes.

Did you ſhew it to this little girl, when you took it out of the trunk?—Yes.

Mr. Silveſter to Downs. Then all the ſhirts were taken out?——Yes.

Did they claim any of the ſhirts when taken out?——No, nothing but that handkerchief.

Court. Who carried the things out to waſh?——The lady gave them.

Were the Compte's things and the ſecretary's carried out together?—I believe they were.

Did they come home together?—I believe they did.

Compte de MIRABEAU ſworn.

The oath tranſlated into French to him by the Interpreter.

Examined by Mr. Fielding.

Aſk the Compte, if the priſoner lived with him as his ſecretary, and when?—— Yes, about fifteen months, but I cannot aſcertain the day upon oath.

Do you recollect when your female ſervant, Champante, was diſmiſſed?—About ſix weeks ago: there are ſeveral witneſſes here that can prove the days, I do not recollect the days.

How ſoon after ſhe was diſmiſſed was it, that you, in company with the lady, went up to ſearch the box of the ſecretary in his room?—The next day.

What led to that examination?—The circumſtance of Mr. Hardy going to the Bell Inn, in Holborn, to let this Champante know that ſhe was ſuſpected, and that I meant to ſearch her things, which circumſtance induced me to ſuppoſe Hardy to be an accomplice, and was the reaſon why I went up ſtairs in order to ſearch.

What paſſed when you went up ſtairs in company with the lady, and examined the box?——Almoſt upon opening the box, at top, under a very thin covering of linen that were there, two ſhirts were diſcovered, that were mine, theſe are the ſhirts that were taken out of the box.

Was there any thing elſe taken out of the box?—I was not preſent at the time when the handkerchiefs were found.

When did you ſee the priſoner after this?—The moment after and the moment before; for I had found him at the Bell, in Holborn, where I had forbid him to go.

What paſſed between you and the priſoner after this diſcovery?—I told him of the circumſtance of his going to give notice to Mrs. Champante being ſuſpected, after the poſitive orders that I had given him, and the circumſtance of finding afterwards the effects in the box perſuaded me he was an accomplice in this theft, of which Mrs. Champante was ſuſpected, and therefore I ordered him to go out of the houſe directly.

What anſwer did the priſoner make?—The priſoner ſaid, with reſpect to the notice which I have given to Mrs. Champante, appearances are againſt me, but Monſieur Le Compte, if you was to ſee any body likely to be hanged, you would tell them to make their eſcape; with reſpect to the ſhirts that have been found in my poſſeſſion, you know very well the neglect of Madam Champante, and her diſorder, it might have happened from neglect of hers, or a miſtake of the waſherwoman's.

How ſoon after this was it that you applied to the Magiſtrate on this buſineſs?—At that time I did not intend to proſecute the priſoner, and ſo far was I from ſuch an intention, that I told him to come to my houſe, when certain boxes, which we expected to arrive from France, were come, in order that he, the priſoner, might aſcertain what effects there were that belonged to himſelf, and what effects Mrs. Champante claimed, and what were belonging to me, if they could be found; accordingly Mr. Hardy came ſeveral times to me after that, in order to enquire whether the boxes were arrived, and at each time I aſked him where he lived, and his anſwer at each time

I aſked

I asked the question, was, that he did not know the name of the ſtreet; it was only from the time that this box arrived, that the priſoner ceaſed coming to my houſe; the box came on Saturday, and the Sunday morning after I ſaw the priſoner at Mr. Spilſbury's; there I told the priſoner to come to me on the Monday following, becauſe I had a letter to give him; he aſked me what that letter was, and if the box was arrived, to which I anſwered in the affirmative; he promiſed to come to me the next morning at nine, but never made his appearance, and it was only through the priſoner's not coming to his appointment, that I was convinced of his bad intentions towards me: I went to Bow-ſtreet, on the Monday.

What day of the month was that Monday?——I do not remember, but it may be known by the warrant itſelf.

Was you preſent when the priſoner was ſearched, when he was apprehended on the warrant?——I was not preſent when he was taken, I was then in the Houſe of Commons, but I was preſent when he was examined.

Did you ſee any property of your's of any ſort taken from him?—Upon examination, the priſoner produced two pacquets of a ſingular nature, which perſuaded me, there was ſome manœuvre going on againſt me at Paris; and this paper together with a ſmall book that belonged to me, was found in the priſoner's pockets, and were delivered to the Juſtice of Peace.

What was that book?——A number of the Journal of Monſieur ——— the King of France's brother, of which I have other copies by me.

Mr. Silveſter. A number of a book called Journale de Monſieur?——The Juſtice ordered the pacquet to be ſealed, and delivered to the conſtable who had the priſoner in care.

Mr. Parke. Was not Madam Champante diſmiſſed the night before you ſpoke to the priſoner about the ſhirts?—Madam Champante was ſent away before ever I ſpoke to Mr. Hardy about theſe ſhirts.

Had not Madam Champante the ſole charge of your linen, and Madam Van Haren?——Madam Champante never had the care of my linen, becauſe a lady's woman in France, never takes care of the linen of the men.

Did you underſtand when Champante was diſmiſſed, that Madam Van Haren had expreſſed herſelf, that every thing was right?—When Mrs. Champante was ſent away, I and Madam Van Haren doubted not, nor do we now doubt, Madam Champante had robbed us.

Did you then expreſs your ſuſpicions to the priſoner of that?——Often times, and ſo much the more particularly, as at that time I did not ſuſpect the priſoner, I ſpoke to him rather in confidence than ſuſpicion.

What was your motive for ſuffering Champante to go away, when you ſuſpected ſhe had robbed you?——What do you mean, by permitting her to go.

Diſcharging her?——She was diſmiſſed merely becauſe ſhe was thought a thief.

Mr. Garrow. You are not quite correct in that anſwer; he ſays, in France it is the principal to turn away a thief.

Court. If you was at that time convinced that Champante had robbed you, as you now ſay you was, why did not you proſecute her?—At the time I had no intention to proſecute her, nor had I any intention to proſecute the priſoner, or any body for ſuch trifling things as ſhirts; the buſineſs of this proſecution is of much more importance, and if not of ſuch importance, the priſoner would not be ſupported in his cauſe.

The next morning after Champante was diſcharged, what did you ſay to the priſoner?—It was not diſcovered till the next morning, that the ſhirts were miſſing, when I told the priſoner of it; that theſe ſhirts were there, and that there were ſeveral other ſhirts and effects to a great amount miſſing; I was ſo far from ſuſpecting the priſoner's probity then, that I told him that Champante had committed the theft, and that if ſhe concealed theſe things any where, or if ſhe had pledged them any where, he ſhould take take them out; the queſtion had preceeded the diſcovery, and therefore the priſoner ſaid at once, ſhe lives at the Bell; as ſoon as the priſoner was acquainted with the diſcovery of the ſhirts, then he ſaid, he did not believe ſhe was at the Bell, and that ſhe was gone away that day; I then propoſed to Hardy, to go to ſee whether ſhe was at the Bell, and then I ſeveral times after forbid him to go, and it was then that the priſoner went out, and was traced to the Bell, from which circumſtance my ſuſpicions of the priſoner were founded.

Before Hardy propoſed going to the Bell to Champante, did not you propoſe to him, to go to the Bell to aſk where theſe ſhirts were?—No.

When you came to the Bell, you found the priſoner there?——Yes.

Did you aſk Champante about your ſhirts, and what did you ſay to her?—The firſt thing I ſaid, upon coming into the room, and ſeeing Hardy there, was, what are you doing here, Sir? the priſoner anſwered, I came here to ſee whether your ſhirts were here, I told him I had forbid him; when I came to ſpeak to Champante, I told her I miſſed a great many ſhirts, and aſked what was become of them.

How many did you ſay?—I think ſeven and twenty, but I cannot be ſure.

Did not Champante in your preſence, and in the preſence of the priſoner, ſay that you had but ſixteen in England?—No, ſo far from ſaying that I had no more than ſixteen ſhirts in England, ſhe excuſed herſelf, by ſaying, at the houſe where you lodged every thing was open, what would you have me ſay to the matter, look and examine my things.

Did ſhe then offer to open all her trunks for you to ſee whether any thing was there? She did ſay look into my boxes, becauſe ſhe had none, ſhe had parcels: but I am not arrived to this time of life, without knowing that when any body ſays, look into my parcels or boxes, I am to underſtand that nothing is to be found there.

Tell him he is only to anſwer to facts, without making his own deductions?—If I am called to ſpeak the truth, I muſt ſay the whole truth.

Did not the priſoner return with you to your lodgings?—He followed me, but I do not know whether he came into the houſe the ſame time with me.

Did the priſoner come to your lodgings after you?——I cannot ſay upon my oath, whether he came in at the inſtant, I believe I ſaw him a little time after.

After the priſoner returned to the lodgings, did not he of his own accord, produce his box before you and Madam Van Haren?——He did not offer his box to be examined by me, the things had been examined before, and his effects were then upon the ſtairs.

But he did produce his box?——No.

That day you diſcharged him?—That day, and that inſtant.

Did you pay him his wages?——I paid him nothing, becauſe I owed him nothing, he was indebted to me.

How many months had he ſerved you?—I cannot aſcertain upon oath the preciſe time, but I arrived in England in the month of Auguſt, and he was from thence.

What had you paid him?——I do not think I am bound to anſwer that queſtion, neither can I do it, unleſs I look over my books of my ſtated expences.

Had you given him money?—Yes, before witneſſes.

How much?——I do not think myſelf bound to anſwer that, neither can I do it upon oath, at this preſent moment.

Did you give it him for wages?——Yes, that will be ſeen by the civil action, that is to be tried.

When was that civil action commenced by the priſoner?——By way of recrimination, three or four days after he knew that the warrant was iſſued out againſt him, as appears by the writ.

Mr. Silveſter. Deſire him not to make a ſpeech, but to ſay the dates?——The writ will certify much better than my memory.

When

When was you ſerved with that writ, when was the priſoner taken up?——More than a week after.

After the writ was ſerved upon you?——Yes, but the warrant was obtained three days before.

Court. For what ſum was you arreſted?——He claimed thirty pounds.

Mr. Parke. Did you ſay what wages you would give him.

Mr. Garrow. We are trying the right of the man to recover on the aſſumpſit of the civil action.

Mr. Silveſter. It is very unfortunate that this gentleman the Compte, makes a ſpeech on every queſtion that we aſk him, by which means our queſtions loſe their effect.

Did the Compte before he took out a warrant againſt the priſoner, ever ſee him at the houſe of Mr. Spilſbury his printer?——Yes, I ſaw him on the Sunday morning, I only got the warrant on a Monday.

You ſaid nothing at that time, as to the diſhoneſty of the priſoner to Mr. Spilſbury? I told Mr. Spilſbury before that, that I had ſtrong ſuſpicions againſt him, and as Mr. Spilſbury was printing my work at that time, and the proofs came through the priſoner's hands, I cautioned Mr. Spilſbury's ſon, not to truſt the priſoner with the proofs any more, becauſe the priſoner was turned out of my ſervice.

You ſaid nothing to Mr. Spilſbury's ſon about the priſoner having robbed you?—I did not know at that time Mr. Hardy had robbed me.

But it was after the priſoner had left your ſervice?——I never thought of proſecuting the priſoner, on account of this trifling matter of ſhirts, I never thought of denouncing the priſoner as a thief on that account, but when the box came, which certified to me that I had loſt effects of much greater conſequence, then it was I determined to proſecute him.

Priſoner. I refer my defence to my council.

MARIA TERESA CHAMPANTE ſworn.

Jury. We with that the other witneſſes that are for the priſoner, may withdraw.

Interpreter. She does not underſtand Engliſh at all.

Mr. Silveſter. Was not you ſervant to Compte de Mirabeau, and Madam Van Haren?——I do not know Madam Van Haren, I know Madam Van Nara.

Do you mean that lady?——Yes.

Was that the name ſhe uſed to go by?——I went into her ſervice, when ſhe bore that name at the hotel.

What name did the lady go by in England?——I never knew her by any other name, than by Madam Nara.

In what manner did the Compte, and Madam Nara leave Paris?—The Compte made his eſcape from Paris, and was near a league from Paris, at a friend's houſe.

Who was with him there?——He went from the houſe by himſelf, in a ſtreet called Recqueſde Loyue.

What orders had the ſervants when he was gone?—The Compte had no domeſtick but myſelf, the other domeſtick he had, he had ſent off at twenty leagues diſtance, that he might not know he was leaving Paris.

Did you leave Paris in a great hurry?—Yes.

Had you time or leiſure there to pack up all your things?——No, we had no time, we put up the linen together which the boxes would not hold, we put it in a ſack, we had orders to depoſite it with Monſieur Goddard, a friend of the Compte's.

Did you take care of the Compte's linen, as well as the ladys?——At Paris the Compte had a ſervant who took care of his linen, and I never had the care of the Compte's linen in particular.

Do you recollect what linen was packed up?——I cannot tell the quantity of linen, but Madam Nara took an account of it.

Do you know the quantity of linen the Compte had in London?—I never knew it.

Who gave it to waſh?——The lady herſelf.

Who gave out Hardy's linen to waſh?—He uſed to give it to me, and I uſed to give it the waſher-woman.

Did you give the Compte's, and Madam Nara's linen to the ſame waſher-woman?—Yes.

Yes, the ſame waſher-woman, and made out a bill for Mr. Hardy's linen, and the Compte's.

The Court and proſecutor's council conferred ſome ſhort time, then the Court ſaid.

Sir Gilbert, the proſecutor has conſented to drop this proſecution, but only on condition of the reaſon of this perſeverance being made public; he thinks that neceſſary?—I am able to give that information, becauſe this proſecution was begun and perſevered in by my advice; the Compte dined at my houſe at the time he received the firſt information, that his boxes returned from France empty; he aſked me what he had beſt do, I adviſed him immediately to arreſt Hardy, as the beſt chance; he took that advice from me, and immediately took out a warrant; ſome days after, he was arreſted at the ſuit of Hardy, which certainly appeared to me and to him a recrimination: now this public explanation is neceſſary, becauſe it has been inſinuated, that this is a malicious proſecution: but the reaſon for my adviſing the proſecutor at firſt, was to recover the property, and the reaſon for perſiſting in it, was this, that at the public examination of the priſoner in Bow-ſtreet, ſome of the priſoner's friends were preſent at the time, and he was adviſed to reſerve his defence, but he aſked whether he might not make his defence then, becauſe he ſaid he would ſhew the Juſtice, that the Compte was not a perſon, that was to be believed on his oath; when I heard that, I adviſed the proſecutor to perſevere in this proſecution, as I had then known him a great many years, and had been his ſchool fellow, and had as full a conviction of his honour, as I have of my brother.

Court. Sir Gilbert, you will take the trouble, to tell the Compte from the Court, there is nothing has dropt, that throws the ſmalleſt imputation on him, he has acted very wiſely, and his honour is not in the leaſt degree impeached, by any thing that has occurred in this proſecution.

Mr. Silvaſter. I muſt tell you one thing, that two perſons whom you do not know, applied for the money before the arreſt.

Court. The attempt to throw a ſtain on the Compte's honour, was very improper, becauſe it is not the ſame thing for a Frenchman to run away, as it is in England; but Sir Gilbert Elliott ſays, that he knew him in France, and that he was unfortunate in a law ſuit, and it was neceſſary for him to quit the country.

Sir Gilbert Elliott. He had had a converſation with the keeper of the ſeals, and was rather lively, and he thought proper, right or wrong, to print that converſation.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, you will find the priſoner not guilty, for there is no ground for this charge againſt him.

NOT GUILTY.

Mr. Baron Perryn to the Interpreter. You will tell Mr. Hardy, that the Judge that tried him, thinks there is no imputation on his character from the evidence.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

307. JAMES COWAN was indicted for burglariouſly and felonioniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling-houſe of John Ranoe, about the hour of nine in the night, on the 8th of January laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, one looking glaſs in a mahogany frame, value 5s. 3 woollen blankets, value 10s. two pair of ſheets, value 10s. one night gown, value 10s. one great coat, value 15s. part of a pair of velvet breeches, value 5s. and a cloth coat, value 3s. his property.

JOHN RANOE ſworn.

I am a taylor; I keep a houſe in Oxendon-ſtreet, I lived there on the 8th of January laſt, I have nothing to ſay againſt the priſoner, only on the 8th of January, about nine, I heard the watchman's rattle, and I went out, and he was arguing with the priſoner, and there was a large bundle tied tied up in a blanket, juſt at my door, on the pavement, and I, in a joking manner, ſaid, watchman, what do you ſtop the poor man with his bed for? and the watchman ſaid, in a rough manner, it is not a bed, but it is ſome of the neighbours property, with that he brought the bundle into an empty houſe, and ſaid, this bundle came out of this houſe, with four fellows, and he laid down the bundle in the empty houſe, which was dirty, I ſaid, do not let it lay there in the dirt, and I took the bundle myſelf, and moved it, and I had the curioſity to look into it, to ſee what it contained, and the firſt thing that appeared to me was this plaid night gown, which is made of worſted.

What is the value of it? put the loweſt value on it.—Two ſhillings, I ſuppoſe.

Have you had it any time?—I have had it theſe thirty years, but it was whole and good; and I then ſaid, Good God! watchman, this is my bundle; why, ſays he, if ſo, you are robbed; ſo I dropped the bundle down, and ran home, and alarmed my family, and I ran up three pair of ſtairs, where I knew this gown was, and there I miſſed what are contained in the indictment; they were all in the two pair of ſtairs and in the garret, that I am quite ſure of, I ſaw them that day in their proper places, not tied up in a bundle; when I miſſed theſe things, I went down ſtairs, and the watchman brought in the bundle, and it contained the things mentioned in the indictment, except the looking glaſs in a mahogany frame, which was taken away intirely; there were in the bundle, including the blanket that tied up the bundle, three woollen blankets, value twelve ſhillings, I have had them ſome time, I do not know the blankets by any marks, only miſſing them from the bed; two pair of linen ſheets, value 10s. I do not know that they had any mark, I only ſuppoſe them to be mine by miſſing them from the bed; there was one woolien ſurtout coat, value 14s. this is it which I have on; it was not finiſhed, and had not the buttons then, I can ſwear to it, it was my own making, there was a pair of velvet breeches, that were in my room; the value of them is about ſeven ſhillings, they were not finiſhed, they were my ſon's work, the ſtuff coſt me ſeven and ſixpence, they were in the garret, there was a cloth coat belonging to one of my lodgers, which I had to repair; that was in the room, I know the coat extremely well, it was a blue one, it had my work in it, I value that at three ſhillings; I kept the things, but I have not brought them with me.

In what ſituation was your family at that time?——There were ſome in the fore room, and ſome in the kitchen, the garret windows were entirely broke; one of the caſements entirely broken wide enough to let in the body of a man, I was in the garret about four.

It was light then?——Yes.

Is your houſe adjoining this empty houſe?——Yes.

Is there any poſſible communication from this empty houſe to this garret window?——They got in at the back door of this empty houſe and got up ſtairs and out of the garret window, and went along the leads to our houſe.

Did you hear any diſturbance in the garret at any time?——No, but I have no doubt, but they came in that way, they broke one caſement all to pieces; that was the caſement that was fixed, not the one that opens, I imagine they put their hands through to undo the other caſement, becauſe the other was open but not broke.

Can you ſpeak whether the other window was open when you laſt ſaw it?—I am ſure it was not, there is a bed in the room, and I paſted paper all round the caſement, and I am ſure it was all ſafe when I ſaw it; the watchman afterwards brought this chap.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. Your family were not gone to bed?—No.

You had not ſhut up your houſe faſt all over?——No.

It was as it is in the day time?—Yes.

Not as it is when you go to bed?—No.

What is the value of theſe old ſecondhand things, would not seven or eight and twenty shillings be the value of them?—No, nor two pounds nine neither.

FRANCIS BAYLEY sworn.

I am a watchman in this neighbourhood, my box is opposite the empty house, I came out between eight and nine, and I examined the back door of this empty house, and it was seemingly fast.

In what way did you examine it?——I shoved my stick against it in the usual way, and it appeared to be fast, I examined about the court, at that minute I heard the bolt of a door, or something like it put back; I turned about, and saw a man with a bundle, and another man underneath that rushed out, and two others.

Who had the bundle?—I do not know; the prisoner at the bar and another man rushed out, immediately after this I looked about, and then I called out stop thief! and sprung my rattle and ran, but the three were soon out of sight.

Was there any lamp near the door?——It was quite light, the lamp was not quite four yards from this door I am sure, besides my lanthorn gave a very good light; I ran after them, and when I came to the prosecutor's door, I came up to the man that had the bundle, and made a blow at him, and came within a blow of him, and he dropped the bundle; I do not know him, I saw only his back.

Did the two men come out at the same instant?——Yes, the two first and the two last.

Do you know whether the prisoner at the bar was one of them?——I am sure he was one of the two last that came out, he with the bundle came out first, and another man along with him.

Did they all four run?—Yes, but the other three run faster than the man with the bundle, one of the two last had something under his arm, which appeared to be a glass; I saw something of the frame, something of wood, but I did not see the glass.

Can you say, whether the prisoner was one of the two last or the two first?—One of the two last, but there was very little difference between them.

Was it the prisoner or the other that had the wood underneath his arm?——I am not sure which of the two had it, but still I am of opinion that it was the other, the man dropped it, and I stumbled against it, and it tumbled me over and over, that hindered me from having them; he who had the bundle was last then, I then sprung my rattle, and the prosecutor came out.

When did you take the prisoner?——This was the 8th of January, and the 15th I was was walking through Whitecomb-court, and I saw the prisoner and two girls of the town together, and I knew him again and took him.

Can you speak with certainty, that the prisoner at the bar was one of the men?—Yes.

How long did you see him?——He only looked about he went off as quick as thought, he went along as quick as he could I dare say, for he knew me.

Had you ever seen the prisoner at the bar before?——Yes, several times.

Do you know his person?——I do.

How long have you known him?—I have seen him several times since May last.

Was there any conversation between you and the prisoner at the time of the robbery?—Not a single word, I had seen him several times before.

Had you conversed with him before?—No, never, but I have seen him in company.

Did you know him by name?—No.

What did you say to him when you took him?—I do not remember any particular, it was in an entry in a public house, I went in, there were liquors, he paid for his liquor, and asked me to drink, I said no.

The Remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be published in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 23d of FEBRUARY 1785, and the following Days;
Being the THIRD SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,
LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,
PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;
And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER III. PART IV.

LONDON:
Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)
And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane; and
S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.
M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of James Cowan.

What is the name of that public-houſe?——One Sargent keeps it; I then followed him, and told him he ſhould come with me, he aſked where, I ſaid he ſhould know by and by; he ſeemed agreeable to come, and I thought to have made him faſt, and when he came to the door he ſprung away, and ſaid, you buggerer you have not got me yet.

Did he get clear away from you?—Yes, he got into Sydney's-alley, and two gentlemen ſtopped him.

How long did you loſe ſight of him?—About a minute, and then I took him into cuſtody.

Mr. Garrow. But hark ye! my maſter watchman, you knew this man from having ſeen him in company ſeveral times?—I never was in his company, but I have ſeen him drink a glaſs.

Did you purſue theſe people that came out of the houſe?——Yes, or I would not have got the fall I did.

You did not take any of them?——No.

From the 8th to the 14th, did you lodge any information againſt the priſoner, before any Magiſtrate?——No.

As you knew the man, how happens you did not?——Becauſe I thought I could ſoon meet with him, and I did not know his name.

Do you remember aſking him to give you a glaſs of gin that night, when you took him?——I remember I did not, I ſearched him.

Did you ſearch his lodgings?—Never.

You have never found any of the property of this man, except what was taken from the firſt man that came out?—No.

What ſort of night was it?——I do not know.

It was a ſort of a by place?——It was Whitcomb-ſtreet.

This man paſt you as quick as thought?——Yes.

So you think yourſelf warrantable upon that, to come here and ſwear poſitively to him?—Yes.

Well, you may get twenty pounds by it, perhaps?——I do not want a farthing.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

As I was coming from Market-lane, I had been to one Mr. Innes, an acquaintance of my father's; I went into a houſe the corner of Coventry-ſtreet, and two young women omen ſaid, it was a very cold night; the atchman came in, and aſked me to give im a glaſs of ſomething, I denied him beauſe I did not know him; he went out at he door, and turned round, and aſked me ho I was, I ſaid, I was a cabinet-maker; ys he, you muſt come with me, I went, nd when he came to the door, I ſaid, I had one nothing, and I will not go with you; hen he took me to the watch-houſe, he id, he had ſeveral ſuſpicions of me, for oot-pads, and burglaries; he ſaid, he knew othing of me himſelf, but he ſaid, he ould bring ſome body to ſwear to me, I do ot know at this time where the gentleman ives, nor the ſtreet; I had been moving hat day, which was the 8th of January, ll the day, from Lambeth to Covent-Garden, and my wife and father was putting up the things in the room, and I returned ome about ſeven or eight at night; the woman that lives in the one pair of ſtairs let me in, and ſhe ſaid, I believe your father or wife are gone out, will you come in; I went to my ſiſter's and returned, and the gentlewoman can prove I went up ſtairs ſoon after, and was not out afterwards; the watchman ſaid, in my preſence, that he never ſaw any body come out of the empty houſe.

Court. The priſoner has ſaid, that you have declared, you never ſaw any body come out of the empty houſe, in his preſence; is that true, did you make any ſuch declaration?—No.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

308. JOHN OLIVER and JOHN JOHNSTON, otherwiſe BANDY, were indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting John Briant Cecil, on the King's highway, on the 13th of December laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, feloniouſly taking from his perſon, and againſt his will, one linen cloth, value 18d. and eighteen mutton-pies, value 1s. and twenty-four copper half-pence, value 12d. his property.

JOHN BRIANT CECIL ſworn.

On Monday the 13th of December laſt, about ten minutes before nine, I was robbed by ſix or ſeven perſons of which the priſoners were two; I know the priſoners, I was at St. George's in the Eaſt, they followed me out of the Blue Anchor, in the Back-lane; and when I had got a little way out of the houſe, they came behind me, and laid violent hands upon me, and took out of my pockets, all my money I had, and all my pies, which I had made for my livelihood, which I value at one ſhilling; they took from me better than eighteen mutton-pies, I loſt alſo one ſhilling in half-pence, and one linen cloth, value one ſhilling and ſixpence, I did not loſe any thing elſe; the priſoner Oliver took the things out of my pockets, and the other took away ſome of my pies, there were four or five more, they came and put ſomething before my mouth, and would have put ſomething before my eyes, but I prevented them, I am ſure the two priſoners were among this number, I knew them well before; by all accounts they get their living by picking pockets chiefly, and they are not known much for any thing elſe.

Priſoner. The proſecutor ſaid, he did not know who the perſons were that robbed him, he wiſhed he did.

Now was you always in the ſame ſtory?——Yes.

Jury. Were there any lamps by you?—It was light, for there was a woman ſitting ſelling ſprats, over the way.

Court. Was it not dark night?——It was, but there was a woman ſitting with a candle very near the place, ſo that it was as light as it is now.

WILLIAM WHITEWAY ſworn.

I know nothing of the tranſaction, I am only bound over as one of the apprehenders.

Priſoner Oliver. I know no more of it than a child, I never was guilty of any ſuch thing in my life, nor never in gaol.

Court.

Court to Whiteway. When were they apprehended?——The firſt of this month, I think it was, the proſecutor came to me, and ſaid, he had ſeen one of theſe lads in Roſemary-lane, and I went with him, and picked him out, he mentioned Johnſon; and when Oliver was apprehended, he cried, and ſaid, it was very hard one ſhould be hanged for all the reſt.

Priſoner. The proſecutor had not money to carry on this proſecution, and Whiteway offered him money to carry this proſecution on, ſays he, keep up your ſpirits, never mind it, I will gammon for you.

Whiteway. I do not mind what they ſay. there never was any ſuch converſation paſſed.

SOPHIA ANDERSON ſworn.

I attend for the two priſoners, I came to ſpeak concerning the proſecutor, who informed me he did not know who had robbed him, this was in Roſemary-lane, I ſaw him, and ſaid to him, Betty informs me you was robbed? yes, ſays he, I do not know who it was, I wiſh I did, I would hang them if they had twenty necks.

What time was this that he told you ſo? —About a fortnight before Chriſtmas, I know nothing of the priſoners, but by ſight, I know one by ſight, becauſe his mother deals in Roſemary-lane, the ſame as I do.

BOTH GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

309. GEORGE VANDERBECK, JOSEPH RAWLINS, JOHN WHITE and ABEL DRUDGE were indicted for that they, on the 24th of January laſt, 300 lb. weight of lead, value 45l. belonging to the Right Honourable Lord Camelford, and fixed to a certain building of his, feloniouſly did rip, cut, and break, with intent to ſteal the ſame.

WILLIAM GRADE ſworn.

I am a gentleman's ſervant, I know my Lord Camelford's houſe, I was drinking a pint of beer with a friend, and I heard an alarm of thieves over at the houſes oppoſite, I ran immediately out, and ſaw three men at the top of the houſe of Lord Camelford, the houſes are not finiſhed; I ran round and gave the alarm, I went into the houſe, and Mr. Coates with me; and at the bottom of the houſe, I ſaw Vanderbeck and Rawlins, I laid hold of Vanderbeck, and the little coachman that was with me, laid hold of the other, and I told him if he offered to reſiſt, I would ſhoot him; he ſtruck me two or three times, I tied his hands behind him, he broke looſe, but being overpowered he became more eaſy, he told me fifty times to ſhoot him; after I took them, I proceeded further into the houſe, and at the two pair of ſtairs I found White in the chimney corner, then we went in purſuit of the other, Mr. Coates went to the top of the houſe; they were going down again, and Mr. Coates recollected himſelf, he would go and ſhut the trap door; he called out, here is another, and under the ſtairs we found Drudge, he was wrapped in ſome ſhavings.

Priſoner White. He certainly took me in the chimney corner, but becauſe he preſented a blunderbuſs, I retreated there.

GEORGE COATES ſworn.

I was at the taking of the priſoners, I ſaw them firſt go to the empty houſes of Lord Camelford, I ſaw four people at the top of theſe houſes, I went home and got a brace of piſtols, and we took Vanderbeck and Rawlins below ſtairs; then White was taken next in the chimney, and the other under the kitchen ſtair-caſe, the lead was ripped up, and I ſaw it fitted to the place by Mr. Burton, the plumber.

THOMAS MILLS ſworn.

(The lead produced and ſome tiles.)

Here is an old caſe knife which is broke off, here is a ſcrew driver, and a hold-faſt, and this is a bed ſcrew.

BUR-

BURTON sworn.

I am plumber to Lord Camelford, I have seen this lead fitted to the places, there was about a ton of lead gone, but there was several pieces doubled up in my Lord's coach-house, I am sure this piece came from the side of the dormer window of the trap door; my Lord purchased these two houses of the builder, that his house might be inclosed with iron rails, and they are now to be let, to any body that will finish them; there has been no workmen upon them, he bought them at measure and value.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I heard the alarm of thieves, and a man said, there are two thieves at the top of the house; and I went to the back of the buildings, the lamplighter said, you are all afraid to go in, he clapped his ladder, and I went down, and George came down, I was one of them that went with him.

ALL FOUR GUILTY.

Each to be whipped and confined six months to hard labour.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

318. HENRY MURPHY was indicted for burglariously and feloniously breaking and entering the dwelling house of Genteel Chappell, about the hour of seven in the night, on the 10th of February, and burglariously stealing therein, nine yards of worsted stuff, value 30s. his property.

GENTEEL CHAPPELL sworn

I live at No. 103, Drury-lane, I am a man's mercer; on the 10th of February between six and seven in the evening, I was in the room behind the shop, and hearing a noise I went into the shop, and one Thomas Taplin informed me I had been robbed, that he had followed the prisoner home, and came back to inform me of it; I immediately went to the constable, to take him to the house as I was informed; and went in, and in the garret were the prisoner's father and mother, and another young man, and there was a piece of shag found in the garret, that belonged to the prisoner's father and mother.

Did the prisoner live there?—We went there to search for him.

THOMAS TAPLIN sworn.

I was coming by the prosecutor's, about half past six, and I saw the prisoner break the window, I knew the prisoner by sight, very well, and I saw him take out the goods; I watched him to the Artichoke, in White Hart-yard, I came back and informed the prosecutor, I am quite sure I saw him break the window, and take out the things.

Did he see you?——I do not know, I knew him before by sight very well, we got two constables and searched the house.

GEORGE MARCH sworn.

I was standing at my master's door, and I saw him break the window of the prosecutor's, and take out a piece of goods, and run down White Hart-yard.

Are you sure the prisoner was the person?——Yes.

JOHN FERNEAU sworn.

I went to search the room, and there I found this piece under the bedstead, and the prosecutor swore it was his property.

Who lived there?——The prisoner's father and mother, and the prisoner lodged in the fore garret.

(The piece of shag deposed to, having four marks on it, and two particular spots, which the prosecutor noticed before, and the value of it 4s. 14s.)

Was this shag in the shop that afternoon?——I cannot be sure of that.

Had you sold it?——No.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was not in my mother's apartments not for four hours, and I cannot be answerable ſwerable for what is brought into her apartments.

Guilty, Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

311. THOMAS IVES was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 21ſt of January laſt, one mare, price 30s. the property of Jacob Cave.

JACOB CAVE ſworn.

On the 20th of January, I loſt a grey mare, from the ſide of the common, in the evening I ſent to the boiling-houſes, and heard of her from one William Podock, I only prove the property.

WILLIAM SEASONS ſworn.

On the 21ſt of January, about ſeven in the morning, I was in my publick houſe, and I ſaw a man go by with a horſe or mare, it was a grey one; I then ſaw the priſoner and one George Baker, a horſe-boiler's ſervant.

What horſe-boiler?——One Parry, in Sharp's-alley; they were agreeing for the mare, I then ſays to them, you cannot agree ſeemingly, ſhe is a very poor horſe, you had better agree if you can, they agreed for fourteen and ſixpence, and I changed Baker a guinea to pay for the mare; they had a pint of purl, I went to look at the mare again, ſays I, it is a pity this horſe ſhould be killed, ſays Baker, I recollect this is the very mare that the man has been at our ſhed about this morning; the man was then gone, he had ſaid, he had brought it out of ſome part in Surry, as ſoon as he came back, he equivocated, and I took him into cuſtody, we then enquired at the Ram, Smithfield, and heard of the owner; in a day or two, I ſaw him look at the mare in the preſence of two perſons, it was the ſame mare the priſoner ſold, it has been in my ſtables ever ſince.

Priſoner. I leave it to the mercy of the Court; I have a great family, and I am ſorry for what I have done.

GEORGE BAKER ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner go by on this grey mare, I aſked him if it was to ſell, he ſaid it was; I aſked him the price, it was too much money, we could not agree; Mr. Seaſons interfered, and I gave him fifteen ſhillings for it; he wanted ſixteen, and I offered fourteen; he told me he travelled all night with a waggon or cart, and a perſon had bid him bring it up from Hounſlow; I aſked the man ſeveral queſtions about the road he came, and Seaſons took him into cuſtody; we went to the Ram in Smithfield, and heard of the owner; it appeared to me the man was in a ſtate of neceſſity, he ſeemed to eat in ſuch exceſs, and I really think it was through a ſtate of hunger. Seaſons. About him I found a paſſ, craving charity.

Priſoner. I went to Seaſons's houſe to ſee this mare, and ſhe was mine, I value her at thirty ſhillings.

Priſoner. I ſhould be glad to be pardoned this once.

Guilty, Death.

He was humbly recommended to mercy by the proſecutor.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

312. ROSE FITZPATRICK was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of George Wright, about the hour of ſeven in the night, on the 13th of January laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein one ſtuff petticoat, value 5s. one ſilk petticoat, value 3s. one great coat, value 20s. one cloth coat, value 15s. one woollen coat, value 5s. one pair of velveteen breeches, value 5s. one apron, value 12d. one handkerchief, value 6s. and one cloak, value 5s. the property of the ſaid George; and one linen jacket and coat, value 6s. the property of Mary Wright.

GEORGE

GEORGE WRIGHT sworn.

I live in Dean-street, St. Andrew's Parish, my house was broke open on the 13th of January, in the evening between seven and eight, I cannot tell exactly; they came in at the street-door, but I cannot say, whether the street door was upon the latch or not, somebody came in unknown to me, and went up stairs to the first floor, and opened the dining room door, with a false key, my daughter about half an hour before, brought it down the key into the kitchen, where I and my wife were, and laid it in it's place.

Was there any thing broke?—Nothing; I lost a jacket and petticoat, and a surtout coat, and a cloth coat, the fellow to this waistcoat, I value the great coat at two pounds eight shillings, and the jacket and petticoat at twenty shillings, a cloth coat, valu fifteen shillings, it was not much worn, and a pair of black velveret breeches, lined with leather, they are quite new, I never wore them, they cost me twenty-seven shillings, I value them at twenty shillings, there was another coat, what they call a Bath coat, with a green cape; I know my things were in the room that day about ten or eleven o'clock; I heard nobody in the house; I was below in the kitchen cleaning my tools, I am a millwright by trade, and I says to my wife, I have some tools lay in the chest up stairs, I will fetch them down; I took the key which my daughter brought down, and when I went up stairs, the door stood wide open, I was coming down in a passion, and I looked to see whether the bolt was slipped, and I found the bolt was back, that was before eight, it might be twenty minutes after my daughter was up there, or more; I called to my wife, and my daughter ran up stairs, and she declared that she locked it, and it had been opened, I had given a strict charge about it; I directly went and said to my son in law, run down to some of the pawnbrokers, and I will go to the others, so he went one way, and I went the other; and a young man from Mr. Dobree's came to my house, and brought me some of the things, and I found some at Mr. Lane's, the corner of the coal-yard, there I found a cloak.

Court. What time did you find that at Lane's?—The next day, and I found the coat that is the fellow to this waistcoat, and a petticoat of my wife's, that had been pledged at Mr. Welton's.

MARY WRIGHT sworn.

I am daughter to the last witness; I locked the door of the one pair of stairs, a little before seven o'clock, on the 13th of January.

Are you sure it was locked?—Yes, I always try it, and I tried it then, there are two people in the house besides us, and they might leave the street door open; there was a coverlid taken off the bed, and a blue stuff petticoat, and a green silk petticoat of mine.

Were they up stairs when you locked the door?—Yes; I cannot say where my father's great coat and breeches were; there was a jacket and petticoat and handkerchief of mine hung over a chair by the bedside, and a white cloak of mine hung behind the door, there was one shirt and apron, but I cannot tell whether they were in the room when I locked the door.

ANN WRIGHT sworn.

I cannot say whether the outer door was fast or not, but the cotton counterpane was in the room that afternoon, the value of it is four shillings; a quilted stuff petticoat, four shillings, a silk petticoat, three shillings; my husband's great coat was there before I went into the kitchen to wash, I saw them there before I went down; there was a shirt, value two shillings, a linen apron, value one shilling, and a linen handkerchief and a white cloak, value four shillings, and a jacket and coat, value four shillings.

GEORGE LANE sworn.

Here is a cloak that I took of the prisoner on the 13th of January, between seven and eight in the evening; I did not know the prisoner, but I am positive it was her that that brought it, I ſaw her again the next day, I am poſitive as to her perſon.

(The cloak depoſed to.)

HENRY BAKER ſworn.

Here is a woman's petticoat, and a man's coat, which I took in of the priſoner, on the 13th of January, it was full half paſt eight or near nine.

(The petticoat and the coat depoſed to.)

RICHARD GRAINGER ſworn.

I have a great coat I received of the priſoner at the bar, on the evening of the 13th of January, about a quarter before nine.

JOHN YOUNG ſworn.

I was ſent for on the 1ſt of February, to take this woman into cuſtody, I ſearched her and found theſe keys upon her, a bunch of different ſize keys, I took her to Mr. Juſtice Walker's on Monday, and then I heard this man had been robbed; the Juſtice committed her, and ſent me to try whether the keys would open this man's door, and this key opened it as well as if it was made for it.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I pledged the things for a young man, and I was going to drink ſome pepper-mint with him, and he run out, and I never ſaw any more of him: as to the keys, I picked up five of them on Clerkenwell-green, and one ſmall one belongs to my box.

The priſoner called one witneſs to her character.

GUILTY, Death.

She was humbly recommended to mercy by the Jury.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

213. ROBERT ROBERTS and WILLIAM BLANN were indicted for burglariouſly and felonioully breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of George Percival, about the hour of eight in the night, on the 5th of February, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, two cloth coats, value 30s. one ſilk ſhag waiſtcoat, value 18d. one pair of velvet breeches, value 21s. one pair of ſtuff breeches, value 18d. one pair of cotton ſtockings, value 2s. 6d. the property of John Morgan.

JOHN MORGAN ſworn.

On my return home to Mr. George Percival's, in Prince's-ſtreet, Leiceſter-fields, on the 5th of February, there was a great crowd at the door, it was after ſeven in the evening when I went out, on my return it was after nine, I was informed the houſe was broke open; I immediately went up ſtairs, and found the door had been opened, the key was within-ſide when I left it, there are ſome other lodgers in the ſecond floor, but I found the door had been broke open, having been locked by the thieves who came in at the window, the things were hanging upon pegs in the room, and I found them gone. I applied to Juſtice Hyde, and ſome of the officers came with me, and went out upon the parapet through the window, and ſome of my things were dropped in the gutter; after that I went into the publick houſe, and got up upon the top of the houſes, and at a houſe in Liſle-ſtreet, I found a trap door; the houſes were ſearched, and nothing found. On Thurſday, the 17th, I went to the houſe of Mr. Moffat, a ſaleſman, in Leceſter ſtreet, to buy a coat, and there I ſaw my own coat that had been ſtolen, I was ſure it was my own coat, but the buttons of it had been taken off, and others put on. I told Moffat it was my coat, and he ſaid he bought it: the next morning I got a ſearch warrant, and then Mr. Moffat produced a pair of velvet breeches, which were mine, and which, he ſaid, he bought at the ſame time with the coat; I ſaid nothing to the people, only ſaying it was my coat.

Then you did not aſk any further queſtions?——No.

What I mean is this, was there any unwillingneſs in Moffat, or the people in the houſe, house to shew the things, or to give you information?——Not the least.

Was the alteration in the buttons, better or worse buttons?——Worse.

Are you sure of that?——Certainly.

What sort of buttons had been on it before?—It was a gilt button, with a border to the edge of it.

How do you know the coat to be yours?——At the sight of the coat, I knew it immediately for the colour, and examining the sleeve corresponded exactly with the directions I gave the taylor, being particular in having two buttons on the sleeve, to make it button close to the wrist, and the collar is what they term a stand up collar.

Was it so by any particular directions?—It was the taylor's own doing, they are generally made so.

Are they not frequently made with two buttons?——Yes.

Then there seems to me to be nothing by which you can identify this coat, except the circumstance of its fitting?——The part where the buttons had been sewed on the facing, had been unripped, and new sewed again.

Court. The other side is not the same, is the taylor here who made the coat?——He is.

Upon the whole you have no doubt but it is your coat?—I am confident of it.

THOMAS CROSBY sworn.

Where did you get these breeches?——Out of Mr. Moffat's house.

Have they been in your possession ever since?——Yes.

Prosecutor. I described every mark before I saw them at Mr. Moffat's, I ordered horn buttons put to the waistband, and the flap, and the pockets, and death-head buttons to be put to the knees, and the garter to be the same as the breeches, and I found them answer every description.

Upon the whole are you satisfied that these are your breeches?—Yes, I am.

Did the same taylor make the breeches that made the coat?—No, the man's name that made the coat is Bell.

GEORGE BELL sworn.

I am a taylor, I work for Mr. Taylor, in Duke-street, St. James's, I made this coat for Mr. Morgan, I cut it for him, I did not sew it, I know it to be the same for several reasons; I know it by having taken it in at the top of the sleeve, and the side it was rather too big; it is visible to me, being my own work, it would not be visible to any body else.

Can you judge as a workman, whether one side of it appears to be unripped?——Yes, it is plain, it is to put on these buttons.

Is there any other mark, except the circumstance of this being unripped, that could enable you to judge, that the buttons on that coat had been changed, if you had never seen the coat before, could you have told that it had been unripped?—I cannot justly say that, I should have believed it to be so, but I would not wish to swear it.

Take a penknife and untip a part of the facing, on the side next the buttons?—The buttons were never put on by a tradesman.

Could you as a workman have judged of it, if you had never seen the coat before?—I Now I have unripped it, I see as a workman, that these buttons were never put on by a workman.

What buttons were on the coat when it was made at first?——I cannot exactly remember, but it was a gilt button, with a small border, plain in the middle; I believe it was a double border, but I cannot be exact, but it was plain in the middle.

Which of the buttons were best, these that are on now, or those that were on before?——Those that were on before were the best a great deal.

Would it sell for more with these buttons, than it would before?——I do not know.

Does it appear to you, as a workman, that the coat would be made more marketable, by changing the buttons?——They certainly were better before.

WILLIAM DOWNS ſworn.

I am a taylor, I made a pair of black breeches for the proſecutor, it is as eaſy for me to know my own cut and work, as it is for me to know my own hand writing.

Look at theſe breeches?—I will venture to ſwear they are my making.

You have no doubt of it?—None in the leaſt.

Did you make them in the uſual way, or by a particular direction?——By a particular direction, as to the horn buttons at the top, and death-head at the knee, we do ſo ſometimes without a particular direction, but that was a particular direction, I am poſitive they are the breeches I made.

MARY PERCIVAL ſworn.

The proſecutor lodged in my houſe; on Saturday the 5th of February, I was below in the parlour at work, about a quarter after eight in the evening, and I heard a window thrown up, I apprehended it to be at the top of the houſe; a young man who lodges in the ſecond floor was in the houſe with me, and nobody elſe.

Was he above ſtairs or below?—Above; I took the candle and run up ſtairs, and went into his room, and deſired he would ſtep up ſtairs with me into the garret, for I thought ſomebody was in the houſe; I went up with him, and the room door was locked, which was the proſecutor's; about half an hour before, I went up to ſee if the windows were all ſafe, and to turn down the beds; I am ſure the windows were all ſhut then, and I had left the door open, not ſhut: finding the door locked, I was very much ſurpriſed, I ran down for aſſiſtance, the young man ſtaid above at the door, I went up ſtairs, and by that time I got up ſtairs, the door was burſt open; nobody was in the room, the window was wide open.

Was the houſe door ſhut or open?——Shut.

Was it upon the latch, ſo that any body could get in, without knocking?——No, it was locked.

So that any perſon could not come in at the ſtreet door, and have got up to the room?—Impoſſible.

(The Conſtable called again.)

Court to Croſby. In what manner did Moffat behave?—He behaved exceedingly well, he rather thought it was hard to have his houſe ſearched being a man of great property.

Did you or Morgan inform Moffat, that the coat that had been ſhewn to Morgan the night before, was a part of his property that was ſtolen?—Yes, and he ſaid then he had a pair of breeches, that he bought of the ſame perſon.

Did you inform him before you ſearched, that that coat was a part of the property that was ſtolen?—Yes, before we ſearched.

You are ſure he was told by one of you, before you ſearched at all?—I remember it, becauſe I ſaid, Sir, the man has been robbed of all his wearing apparel, and he is but a poor ſervant.

Now after you had told him that the coat, that had been ſeen by Morgan, was a part of the things ſtolen, what did he ſay?——He produced the breeches, after I had been up ſtairs, and ſearched two or three rooms.

After you had told him that that coat was a part of the things ſtolen?—Yes, he rather ſeemed to be a little ruſty of the matter, and talked that he was a man of property, and ſhould not be uſed in that manner, and he further told me he ſhould take notice of it; I told him I muſt execute my office.

When you went there, you told him what you came to ſearch for?——Yes, and that it was for wearing apparel, that was ſtolen from a houſe in Princes-ſtreet, and the coat that Morgan had ſeen the night before, was a part of the property; I ſearched the ſalſhop, and two of the wardrobes.

Where were the breeches produced from?—One of Mr. Moffat's acquaintance came up, up, and ſaid here is a pair of breeches, which we bought with the coat, and I came down ſtairs and found the breeches on the compter, but where they were taken from I do not know.

Who came up to tell the proſecutor?—A gentleman's ſervant.

Proſecutor. Mr. Moffat produced the breeches, from ſome other black breeches, while we were above ſtairs.

Court to Croſby. How long might it be before you were called down, and the breeches were produced?——I ſuppoſe it might be a quarter of an hour, or twenty minutes the outſide.

Did you aſk Moffat at all, why he had not told you of the breeches, when he firſt came in?—No.

Did he give any reaſons why he had not? No, when he produced the breeches, I aſked him upon his word, ſays I, Mr. Moffat have you any more property of the proſecutor's, I ſaid I believe I can take your word, he ſaid upon his honour he had not; we went to the parties where he had them, we never found any more property, we then went to the lad that he bought them of, that was Iſaiah Iſrael; we apprehended the priſoner by the information of one Wolf.

Was any thing found upon the priſoner?——No, he drew a knife upon me.

ISAIAH ISRAEL ſworn.

Court. Attend particularly to the queſtions that I aſk you, and confine your anſwers to the queſtions; I tell you before hand, not to ſay any thing of this fact that may affect yourſelf, unleſs I aſk you to tell the whole ſtory.

What is Robert Moffat?—A ſaleſman and taylor.

What is your buſineſs?—I am a dealer in old cloaths.

Have you dealt long with Moffat?——Three or four years.

Do you deal conſiderably in old cloaths?——Yes, I have bought and ſold things of Moffat.

Who is Pennell Wolf?—He is an old cloaths man.

Do you ever buy of him?—Yes, I have bought cloaths of him ſeveral times.

Is it common in your buſineſs to buy and ſell of each other?——Yes, very common.

I have aſked you no one queſtion with reſpect to this property at all, you will go out till you are called again.

PENNELL WOLF ſworn.

Do you know the priſoner?—Yes.

What are you?—A cloaths man.

Do you know Iſaiah Iſrael?—Yes.

Did you in the courſe of this month ſell any cloaths to Iſrael?—Yes, this day three weeks, I ſold him ſome cloaths between two and three; there was a coat and breeches, and a great coat, and ſeveral articles for three pounds ten ſhillings.

How long had you had them in your poſſeſſion?——I bought them of the priſoners about eleven, I had not had them quite three hours.

What are the priſoners?——I do not know.

What buſineſs did they follow?—I do not know, but when I came to St. Giles's, between ten and eleven, I bought them things of them.

Who did you buy the things from, that you ſold to Iſrael?——From the two priſoners, they were both in a room.

Should you know the things if you ſaw them?—I have examined them, and could not ſwear to them, becauſe I had them ſo little while in my hands, but they are like them, we have ſo many things we can hardly know them again, but they look like the ſame; there was a drab great coat, and two or three cloth waiſtcoats, there was another cloth coat.

Where did you buy theſe things?——At St. Giles's, up two pair of ſtairs.

Who called you up?—Robert Roberts.

Was the other priſoner there?——Yes, he was in the room at the ſame time.

Who produced them to you?——Robert Roberts told me to look at theſe things, they were laying on the ground.

Did you bargain with him or the other?——They both of them ſaid look at the things,

and I asked them the price, Blann told me the price was four guineas, and I bid them three.

What did you give them for all the things together?—Three pounds five shillings.

Did you pay them then?—Yes.

Who did you pay the money to?—Robert Roberts.

Who did you agree with for three pounds five shillings?—Robert Roberts.

What did Blann say?——That I might have them, they both said I might have them.

Are you sure of that?—Yes.

Had the coat the same buttons on, it has now?——I cannot tell indeed, it looks like the same coat, the coat was a good coat, but I cannot speak to the buttons.

Attend to this question, did you sell anything that morning to Isaiah Israel, except what you had bought of these two men?—No.

Are you clear of that, whether these are the things or not: were the things that you sold to Israel, bought of these two men?—Yes.

Are you sure of that?—Yes.

(Isaiah Israel called again.)

Do you remember buying any thing of Wolf?—Yes.

When was it?—This day three weeks, on a Monday.

Do you recollect what the things were? Yes, I recollect some of them, but not all rightly.

What do you recollect?—This coat and breeches, and a drab coat, a great coat, and another mixed coat, I bought them from Wolf.

How long were they in your possession afterwards?——Not above five minutes, I went with some of the things to Rag-fair, and sold them there, and this coat and breeches, I sold to a taylor in Houndsditch, who deals in old clothes; and I sold the other things to different people, but this coat and breeches, and another coat, I sold the same day, a few minutes after I bought them.

What is that taylor's name?—Joseph.

Is he here?——No.

How do you know that was that coat and breeches?——I know them if I see them; this is the very same coat I bought of Wolf.

Had it the same buttons on then that it has now?——No, my Lord, it had not, there was a very handsome fashionable gilt button, a very large one on it then.

Are you sure they are the very same things?——Yes, my Lord, I am very positive of it; I took them afterwards of Joseph again, he told me I sold them too dear, so he desired me to take them, and sell them for the most advantage I could.

What did you sell them to Joseph for?——I sold them to Joseph with another coat, for two pounds four shillings.

When did you take them back from Joseph?——Last Thursday week.

Are you sure yourself, independent of any information you received from Joseph, that the things you took back from him, were the same that you sold him?——I am quite sure they are the same clothes I sold to him.

Were the same buttons on when you took them again?——He told me he took off the buttons, which was a very handsome button, and put them on a new coat, which he had made for himself.

Who did you sell them to, after you had them from Joseph?—— I sold them to Mr. Moffatt, on the Thursday.

What did Moffatt give you for them?—For this coat and breeches, he gave me one pound fourteen shillings; I did not receive the other coat from Joseph again, he sold them himself.

ROBERT MOFFATT sworn.

Were the things that were found in your shop, the same things you bought from Israel?—Yes, I am quite sure of that.

Why did not you tell them of the breeches before they went up stairs to search?——It did not occur to me that I had them.

Court to Wolfe. Did you know these prisoners before?—No.

Crosby

Crosby. I know them, my Lord, they lodge at the corner of St. Giles's, I have known Blann many years.

How long had they lodged at St. Giles's?—I do not know.

Did they lodge any time lately, in Lisle-street, or Princes-street, or any where near Leicester-fields?—No, my Lord.

Court to Prosecutor. Was the house that you speak of, in Lisle-street, on which there is a trap door, that goes out upon the top of the houses; is that a public house, or a private house?——The house that we went out of, was a public house, which was open, but the other was private.

Court to Crosby. Which way did you go?—Up to the top of the houses, through the public house, there was a trap door to the publick house, the trap door was fastened, I could hardly get it open, I broke my stick in wrenching it open.

What other trap door did you find that communicated with the leads?—I found none till I came to the second door, there I found a trap door that went into a small garret that was wide open, and that was the door of an empty house; I went down into the empty house, and searched every room and closet, but nobody was there, nor anything; when I came to the door of the empty house, it was a spring lock, with a large knob to open it, and a very easy lock, and would easily shut too after any body that went out.

PRISONER ROBERTS's DEFENCE.

I work very hard for my living, I go out with a jack-ass every day; going out one morning, I saw this Wolf with his bag on his back, crying old clothes; he was talking with two other men, I used to see him almost every morning with a parcel of loose sort of fellows that resorted there, I never sold him any thing, nor never had any conversation with the man in my life.

PRISONER BLANN's DEFENCE.

I have nothing to say, I did not know the man before he came here, I was taken in trouble for another affair.

The prisoner Roberts called three witnesses to his character.

BOTH GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

314. ELIZABETH CASTLE was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 30th day of January last, twenty-one pounds weight of beef, value 5s. the property of Thomas Worster.

Robert Hardy, saw the prisoner coming out of the prosecutor's shop, with a piece of beef, and suspecting her, he informed the prosecutor, who pursued the prisoner, and took her with the beef upon her.—She confessed taking the beef.

Prisoner. I found the beef in the fields.

GUILTY.

Privately whipped.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

315. RICHARD ENTWISTLE and RICHARD CLARK were indicted for feloniously assaulting Joseph Randall, on the King's highway, on the 18th of January, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniously taking from his person and against his will, one silver watch, value 40s. one steal watch-chain, value 6d. one stone seal set in base metal, value 2d. one base metal watch-key, value 1d. and one steel padlock key, value 1d. his property.

JOSEPH RANDAL sworn.

I live at Hoxton, I was robbed on the 18th of January last, a little before eight o'clock, by four men, who said nothing to me but pushed me across some logs.

Court. Was you sober at this time?—I had been drinking, but not to hurt myself.

How far was you affected with the liquor?—Why, I cannot ſay I was affected very much.

Did you know what you was about?—I did.

Had you been at a public houſe in the neighbourhood there?——The laſt houſe I was at, was the ſign of the White Horſe; I did not ſtay above ſeven minutes, I had been at another public houſe about an hour; after they threw me acroſs the logs, I was partly ſtrangled with the blow, and one thing or another; a woman came along and ſaw me lay, and theſe four men were all ſtanding together, the woman had a candle and lanthorn, ſhe looked round, and hearing me groan, ſhe ſqualled.

Then you at this time was almoſt inſenſible?——Not inſenſible, but I could not ſpeak.

What deprived you of your ſpeech?——Why ſome how or other, they gave me a puſh with a hand, or hit me a ſlap on the face, and my cough took me.

Can you tell whether they did any thing to you after you was down?——I cannot tell what they did, nor for above a minute, the woman came and hallooed out, for God's ſake, there is a man that is very much in liquor; then I put my hand into my pocket, and I miſſed my watch, and I ſaid, I have been robbed, I then ſaw two of the men walking off.

What became of the other two?—They ſtood by me, for the woman ſaid, for God's ſake, friend, help the man up, he is very much in liquor, and ſee him home.

Did you get your watch again?——I never heard of it.

When was the laſt time you had your watch in your hand?——At the White Horſe, I put it in my breeches pocket.

Did the chain hang out?——No, it did not hang out, for I was attacked at the door of the White Horſe by two men who took hold of my chain there, that made me go in.

What two men were thoſe?—The men that went away, I went in there for ſafety.

Did you feel who took your watch?——I did not feel it go at all.

Do you know the priſoners or either of them?—Theſe two men were in the gardens along with the other two, but which of the four took my watch I cannot tell, there was a woman there too which I did not ſee.

Can you ſwear that theſe two men are two of the four?——Yes, theſe two men ſtaid and helped me up, I believe it was almoſt dark.

Then what have you to ſay againſt theſe two men?——I cannot ſay they took my watch.

Do not you think it is more likely, that if your watch was taken, it ſhould be taken by the men that run away?——Poſſibly it might, I do not know which took it.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council. The woman ſaid, you was very drunk, do you mean to take upon yourſelf to ſay, that you never ſaw theſe young men before?—Never before that time.

How did you deſcribe one of theſe as dreſſed, before the Magiſtrate?—In a light coloured coat, not one of theſe, but one of the four.

LUCY MASON ſworn.

The proſecutor is my landlord, I lodge in his firſt floor; it was a little before eight, about five minutes, I was going to Shoreditch church for an apothecary, not in company with the proſecutor; as I was paſſing I ſaw a parcel of men and a woman, ſtanding all together, I believe there were four men; the proſecutor was ſitting on ſome logs, and two men were tripping him up, and I thought him very much in liquor, I had a candle and lanthorn, and I heard a groaning, and ſomebody making an odd noiſe, and I aſked what was the matter, and I took hold of the proſecutor, and ſaid, it is my landlord, and he fell backwards over the logs; I really thought him very much in liquor, and called for aſſiſtance, and theſe two young men at the bar, offered to ſee him home.

Court.

Court. This will never do, Gentlemen.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice GOULD.

---

316. WILLIAM SHARP was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Charles Wolfran Cornwall, Eſq; on the 29th of January laſt, about the hour of one in the night, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, one ſattin robe, value 40s. ſixty yards of gold lace, value 40l. one coat, value 5s. two waiſtcoats, value 4s. one pair of leathe. breeches, value 10s. a pair of ſilver buckles, value 5s. one pair of ſilk breeches, value 10s. a great coat, value 5s. ſix pair of ſilk ſtockings, value 10s. two hats, value 6s. thirty-four ſilk handkerchiefs, value 3l. twenty linen handkerchiefs, value 20s. a gold ſnuff-box, value 5l. and five guineas, his property.

The Caſe opened by Mr. Silveſter.

ELIZABETH GOODWIN ſworn.

I live with the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, his houſe was broke open between the 28th and 29th of January, the under butler faſtened the door, I got up firſt in the morning, I came down about ſeven, and found the library door was ſhut, and the windows ſhut, I went in and the drawers were open, and the locks broke, and ſome of the papers on the ground; I went into the next room, next the Thames, and one of theſe windows was open, the ſaſh was thrown up, and half the window ſhutter was off; the nails were drawn off from the hinge; a yard door which leads to a garden that adjoins to the Thames was open, and a large candle box was removed from the foot of the back ſtairs to the yard door.

Court. Had you obſerved that window that evening, was it faſt when you went to bed?——It was.

At what o'clock did you go to bed?——After eleven.

THOMAS TANNER ſworn.

I am under butler to the Speaker, this window was faſtened the night before it was broke open, with two croſs iron bars, a piece of the window ſhutter was taken off, and ſet up an end againſt the wall in the garden; the bars were unhooked, and the window cur ain down.

In what ſtate was the room?——Dirty with people having been in, nothing was taken out of that room, but out of the parlour.

——— MANN ſworn.

I am the Speaker's train bearer, one of the footmen came to my houſe on Saturday morning about ſeven, and deſired I would come immediately to the Speaker's; accordingly I went to the library, there the Speaker was; I ſaw the bars broke open, and in a very different ſtate to what it was in the evening, when I went away, and his clothes thrown about, ſome taken away, and ſome remaining; I put the gold gown the day before into the box, the bag was thrown down at the bottom of the ſtairs, and the gown taken out; I found the Speaker had loſt ſeveral articles, a brown coat and waiſtcoat, a ſcarlet waiſtcoat, velvet breeches, black ſilk breeches, ſix pair of ſilk ſtockings, a ſervant's great coat, and two hats, the property of the Speaker; and a great coat, and a ſhirt that belonged to one of the ſervants; I went to a public houſe at Lambeth, on Monday about one, and there I found the things, I found a brown coat and waiſtcoat, a pair of velvet breeches, black ſilk ſtocking breeches, a pair of doe-ſkin breeches, and three ſhirts, all the Speaker's; a livery hat, ſix pair of ſtockings, two hats, a ſervant's great coat, a ſcarlet waiſtcoat, all together in one bag; the Speaker's gown was never found; I then went to Sir Sampſon Wright's, and from Sir Sampſon's I went to the priſoner's houſe, on Monday after church, which was the 31ſt of January; the 30th of January any was kept, we ſearched the priſoner's houſe and found nothing but a pair of boots which they brought away with them.

Did you make any obſervation on theſe boots?——Thoſe boots were taken to the Speaker's houſe, I ſaw them, and I ſaw they tallied exactly with the marks in the Speaker's garden, I further obſerved to the Speaker, that I thought that one of the perſons that broke in, had nails in his ſhoes, I compared the foot with the boots, and they exactly tallied; I compared the pegs on the right foot.

(A piece of the heel-piece being off, the pegs ſtood up, handed to the Jury.)

Had you obſerved before you ſaw the boots, which foot it was that had theſe marks, whether the right or the left?——I did not.

Had you obſerved before what number of holes were made by the pegs?——No, but afterwards, when I had the boot, I ſaw the boot put upon the ground, and it exactly tallied.

Did you make any obſervation on the boot being compared with them?—No.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. You have ſeen ſomething, that looked like the impreſſion of nails?—The bo e appeared as if the perſon that wore them, had trod a good deal in mud.

Whether it was town or country mud, you do not ſwear, I am ſure?—No.

What weather was it Saturday, Sunday, and Monday?——Very dirty weather, the Sunday and Monday was very dirty.

You did not cover the impreſſion after you firſt obſerved it?——No.

The appearance to you, was like that of a man with nails regularly put into his ſhoes?——Not very regular, but I did not count them.

——— HAMMOND ſworn.

I keep a public houſe at Lambeth, it is I ſuppoſe about two hundred yards from my door to that Gentleman's houſe, he has lived there about ſix months.

Mr. Silveſter. Where were theſe things found?—Down in an old cellar, which my landlord keeps for the uſe of buildings.

How near is that cellar to the priſoner's houſe?—I ſuppoſe it is about twenty yards, not further.

When did you find theſe things?—Laſt Sunday was three weeks, I was repairing my tap-room, and I aſked my landlord to let me have a little lime and hair; he told me the door was nailed up, and I might force it open, and the next day me and one Nicholls went to the cellar, and Nicholls ſaw a great coat, then I ſaw two hats, then we proceeded to the dark corner, and I kicked my foot againſt ſomething, I thought it had been a man; theſe were the ſame things Mr. Mann had from me.

Mr. Garrow. Whoſe cellar is this?—It belongs to Mr. Thomas Brookes.

The priſoner has nothing to do with it?—Nothing at all.

It is near his houſe, and near your's?—It is in a court where there are ſeven or eight houſes ſurrounding it, the priſoner's houſe is in another ſtreet; there is a paſſage to that houſe, and ſeveral more.

It has not been uſed except for putting hair in, for a long time paſt?—No.

Mr. Silveſter. Did you ſhew this cellar to Atkins?——Yes.

JOHN ATKINS ſworn.

I went into the cellar, and I meaſured the pair of boots which were found in the priſoner's houſe, that were in my poſſeſſion, there is a window, and there is a hill of dirt, and three ſteps made in the dirt, not ſtone ſteps.

Court. How far is the window of the cellar from the priſoner's houſe?—As far as from me to your Lordſhip, not a great way, there is ſome paling that parts it from his houſe, and there is a little bit of a wicket-gate, that comes out of his houſe.

Did the other man make any obſervation?—No, he was only with me, and one of the Juſtices was with me.

Mr. Garrow. How many more houſes are there, within the diſtance of this cellar?—A great many little habitations.

What

What ſort of a neighbourhood?—Like every other ſort.

What ſort of dirt was this?—Rubbiſh.

Likely enough to be affected with rain?—No rain could get to it, it was covered with a houſe, I ſuppoſe the dirt had been flung in at the window.

Now I ſhould think the rain would run down that hill?—If it could get at it.

How much longer is your own foot?—I did not meaſure.

How many thouſand more feet there are of the ſame length you do not know?—No.

PATRICK MACMANUS ſworn.

I belong to Bow-ſtreet, I found this boot in the priſoner's cloſet in his lodgings, there was nothing found belonging to the Speaker, I know nothing of the foot-ſteps in the cellar; when I came to the Speaker's, Mr. Mann and I went into the Speaker's garden, and we meaſured in particular this boot, and all the way on the water-ſide in regular ſteps; this boot fitted exactly, and all the way the peg marks; the marks were not ſo regular as that, but there were viſible holes; all on the right hand ſide, the ſide next the wall, I took notice of it, becauſe Mr. Man ſaid, the perſon had nails in their ſhoes.

Court. Then the holes were in the earth before the boot was put on the earth?—Yes, there were ſome places that appeared three, and ſome four; there were marks upon them all.

Did it tally in length and breadth?—Yes, as nigh as any thing could do in the world.

Mr. Garrow. That is to ſay, that in all the impreſſions there were marks of ſomething: be ſo good to look at theſe pegs, and tell me upon your oath, whether you think that boot has been worn ſince the heel tap as it is called came off?—I do not know whether it has or no.

Mr. Garrow. The pegs appear to be perfectly freſh; with permiſſion of the Court, I will take off the heel of this other boot.

(Takes it off, and the pegs appeared juſt the ſame as the other.)

Mr. Silveſter to Macmanus. How far was the houſe from the water-ſide?——It leads round, it was on the ſoft ground where they trod.

Court to Goodwin. Had any of the candles been made uſe of?—No.

Had any been lighted?—No, Sir, there was a whole candle dropped in the garden, that had not been lighted.

Priſoner. I have nothing at all to ſay, I am innocent of all I am accuſed of.

The Priſoner called five witneſſes to his character.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

317. SAMUEL LAVENDAR was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 13th day of January laſt, one wooden firkin, value 4d. and fifty-ſix pounds weight of butter, value 30s. the property of Thomas Cox.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

---

418. CATHERINE BROWN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 5th day of February, one cloth coat, value 3s. one waiſtcoat, value 12d. one pair of leather breeches, value 6s. one pair of cloth breeches, value 12d. one pair of jean breeches, value 12d. one pair of ſtone knee buckles, ſet in ſilver, value 12d. the property of Vincent Eades; and three linen ſhirts, value 3s. the property of David Mercer.

GUILTY.

To be confined to hard labour ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

319. WILLIAM BIRD was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 18th of December last, one loin of pork, value 2s. the property of John Birch.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

The preceding three were tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

320. WILLIAM INCH, otherwise WILLIAM INCHES, was indicted for that he, together with one John May and Henry Rundell, on the 2d of August, in the 24th year of his Majesty's reign, in the parish of Ringmore, in the county of Devon, with force and arms, to wit, with divers large sticks and weapons, did assemble, in order to be aiding and assisting in taking away from Samuel Woodhouse, one of the officers of excise, a large quantity of Geneva, to wit, twenty-seven gallons, being uncustomed, and liable to pay duties, which had not been paid, or secured to be paid, after seizure of the said Geneva by the said Samuel, against the statute, and against the King's peace.

A second count, For that he, together with one John May and Henry Rundell, on the same day and place, with force and arms, being armed with divers offensive large sticks and bludgeons, unlawfully, riotously, routously and feloniously, being so armed, on the said Samuel Woodhouse, one of the officers of our Lord the King, in the due execution of his office, in the due securing the said geneva, unlawfully, riotously, routously and feloniously did make an assault and affray, and aid and assist in rescuing and taking away from him the last mentioned geneva, after seizure of the same by the said Samuel Woodhouse, being such officer as aforesaid.

A third count, For that he, on the same day and place, together with the said John May and Henry Rundell, unlawfully, feloniously and forcibly, did hinder, obstruct and oppose the said Samuel Woodhouse, one of the officers of our Lord the King, in the due execution of his office, in the due securing a large quantity of geneva, to wit, twenty-seven gallons, being uncustomed goods, liable to pay duties, and not paid or secured to be paid, which said geneva had been lately before seized by the said Samuel, against the form of the statute.

Counsel for the Crown.

Mr. Attorney General — Mr. Serjt Walker
Mr. Solicitor General — Mr. Wilson
And Mr. Silvester.

Council for the Prisoner.

Mr. Garrow.

The indictment opened by Mr. Silvester, and the case by Mr. Attorney General, as follows:

May it please your Lordship, and you Gentlemen of the Jury, this is an indictment against the prisoner at the bar; which charges him, together with two other persons, with a very heinous offence, against the laws for the protection of the revenue of this country; an offence which the wisdom of the legislature has thought fit to make capital: and Gentlemen, it is for me to state to you the offence, as created by the act of parliament; and to state very shortly and not with many observations on the evidence, and then to leave that evidence under my lord's correction in your hands, from which I am sure the legislature and the country will receive ample justice, and that is all that is wished by this prosecution: By the act of the 19th of George II. there having been at that time in the country, and I am affraid the practice still remains, of numbers of persons associating themselves together, and assembling for the direct and avowed purpose of carrying their illicit trade into execution; and great bodies of men sometimes disguised, and sometimes armed and not disguised, have assembled together, and in short, almost threatened the destruction of the revenue: that act enacts, that if any persons to the number of three or four, armed with fire arms, or other offensive weapons, shall be assembled, aiding and assisting, in the running, landing, or carrying carrying away prohibited or uncuſtomed goods, or goods liable to pay any duties, or in caſe any perſons to the number of three or more, being ſo armed, and that with fire-arms, and other offenſive weapons, ſhall be aſſiſting, or ſhall forcibly hinder, obſtruct, and every ſuch perſon ſhall be guilty of felony, without benefit of clergy; ſo that you ſee the offence, with which this perſon is charged, is that he, with two other perſons, in the firſt place was aſſembled, with intent to do ſome of the things mentioned in the act of parliament, in the next place, that he actually did aſſiſt in carrying away prohibited goods, after they had been ſeized, and likewiſe that he, being ſo aſſembled, and ſo armed, did oppoſe the officers in their duty; and under my lord's direction, who will ſtate the law to you, I ſhall ſubmit, if this caſe is fully proved, that the priſoner will appear to be guilty. Gentlemen, the indictment charges this man, and two other perſons with this offence, and it will be neceſſary to prove in order to bring the priſoner within this law, that there were three men of them, and therefore though the other two are not apprehended, and whether we ſhall be able to apprehend them, I cannot ſay; yet it will be neceſſary for you to take into conſideration, the caſe of the other two; but if the facts come out as they are ſtated to me, there will be no doubt of their guilt, any more than of the priſoner's: the priſoner, and thoſe two other perſons, are belonging to a place called Corſham, in Cornwall; a place noted for perſons of the deſcription of the priſoner; they had been ſeen loitering about Ringmore, which was not the place of their abode: on the firſt of Auguſt, one Richard Valentine being informed of ſome ſmuggled goods, applied to Woodhouſe and one Toy, who is an officer, to aſſiſt him; accordingly the next morning about three, theſe three officers went to the houſe of this man, where they had the information; they ſearched all the furz-buſhes, and found nothing, at laſt Toy went to Kirſwood's houſe, and found ten anchors of foreign ſpirits, containing nine or ten gallons each, concealed under ſome hay, that was in the barn; he immediately ſent for the other officers to come to his aſſiſtance, they came and ſeized the goods, and left Woodhouſe to take care of them, while the other two men went in ſearch of more: in about a quarter of an hour the priſoner, with two others, came into the yard, with large bludgeons in their hands; and one of them with a walking-ſtick which had a tuck in it; they began to break out, and attempted to ſtave the caſks, and the priſoner ſwore he would have them from the officers. Woodhouſe ran to fetch the other officer, and before they returned, theſe three men, the priſoner, and May and Randell, ran off with the liquors which the officers had ſeized; they returned again, and ſwore they would have the remainder; upon which Toy took up a bag of tea, and theſe three men followed him; they forced open the parlour door and took the tea from him, and carried it into the yard where Woodhouſe was, who endeavoured to get it away from them, upon which Randell ſtruck him a violent blow with his bludgeon on the temple, which brought him to the ground, and rendered him totally inſenſible; upon this Toy came up, and he began to be very active, and he with a bludgeon with ſeveral claws ſticking out of it, by which I ſuppoſe is meant, they are the roots of the ſtick, not any iron fixed into it, as I ſuppoſe, but the wood ſo pointed as to make excreſences, and ſharp ones; he made a blow at him with this, and that took off the brim of his hat; Toy came and reſcued him: the three ſmugglers then became more violent; they ſwore they would have all the things; the officers told them they ſhould not; and the officers finding they were determined to preſerve the things went away: it is upon this act you are to determine whether the priſoner is guilty. Gentlemen, it is not for me to make any obſervations, but ſuch as naturally ariſe out of the direct caſe; I do not wiſh to inflame your minds; the queſtion is a queſtion of fact; what the law is, his Lordſhip will explain; explain; and upon applying that law to the facts, as they appear to you, will depend the verdict you are to give: all I can say is, that if the prisoner is guilty, he is undoubtedly a very proper object of justice; and unless these prosecutions are carried on with effect, wheresoever there is a fair and proper example, it will be impossible the revenue of this country should much longer escape destruction.

FRANCIS TOY sworn.

Examined by Mr. Solicitor General.

What are you by profession?—An excise officer.

Was any application made to you, by any of your brother officers?——Yes, by Richard Valentine, an officer of the customs.

For what did he apply to you?—He said he had received an information of smuggled goods, and he desired I would assist him; we went both to the place appointed by the informer, first of all calling on the supervisor at Kingsbridge, to go with us, his name is Samuel Woodhouse; we then went to the place appointed by the informer, to a cross road, by the desire of the person that had informed us, this cross road lay in the neighbourhood of Ringmore.

What county is it in?—In the county of Devon.

How far is this place from the sea?——Hardly a mile, we staid in the road till day light, then we went to the publick-house; on the morning of the 2d of August, Woodhouse joined us, we then separated, I searched some furze bushes and lakes, which were mentioned to us, we found nothing there; Valentine was searching separate, as well as I, we found nothing there, I then went to the place called the house of one John Kirswell, near Ringmore, called the parsonage house.

Did you make any search at this parsonage house?—Yes.

What happened in consequence of that?——I first went into a barn, and searched it round, and I found a bag of tea concealed under the floor, about half a hundred weight, I found nothing else in the barn; next I turned round a corner of a hay-loft, I examined it and there I found ten casks of foreign geneva, I tasted one of them.

In what situation were these ten casks?—They were concealed under the hay, in different parts of the loft, upon this I removed some of them from the loft into the yard.

Where were Valentine and Woodhouse at this time?—I had lost them for sometime they came up to me, and I told them it was very difficult work to remove all the casks; I went into the house, and desired to have assistance in removing the rest.

Did they come and assist?—They did.

When the liquors was so removed into the yard, what passed then?——Then we agreed that Woodhouse should stay there, while Valentine and me went and searched further, he was to stay in the yard with the liquor.

Did you make further search?——Yes.

What was the consequence of that?—We went into a field of barley adjoining the house, and soon after we got into it, Valentine found another cask of liquors in the field.

Court. What liquor was it?——We supposed it was gin, we did not taste it then.

Did you after?—Yes, we had it, it was geneva.

Did you find any thing else in that field of barley?—Some little time afterwards, Valentine found a half hundred bag of tea, and soon after we found this last bag of tea; we heard a noise of some person calling, we soon understood it to be the supervisor, Mr. Woodhouse.

The Remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be published in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 23d of FEBRUARY 1785, and the following Days;

Being the THIRD SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND,

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER III. PART V.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

MDCCLXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of William Inch.

What diſtance was you at this time from the yard where Woodhouſe was left?—I believe it was a quarter of a mile, we returned to Woodhouſe; we met the ſupervisor at the field gate adjoining the yard in a very great hurry, we all three went back to the yard again.

Court. Who was in the yard when you came back?—I think there was the ſupervisor and a neighbouring man, there were no ſtrangers there; I think there was a man ſtanding at a little diſtance.

What, was the labouring man to aſſiſt Woodhouſe?—I do not know what Woodhouſe had ſaid to him, he was not called there by Woodhouſe, he came himſelf firſt of all, from hearing a ſeizure was made, his name is Hall.

When you all three came back to the yard, what did you do?—We meant then to remove theſe goods from the yard into the farm-houſe.

Did you proceed to do ſo?——Yes.

What paſſed on that?—I carried in the laſt bag of tea myſelf, and as I was entering the door with this tea, I ſaw three men at a diſtance coming to the farm houſe.

Who were they?——William Inches, the priſoner, was one, John May, and Henry Rundell, as I underſtood their names to be ſince, I have ſeen them all before, but had no great acquaintance with them.

Court. Where did you ſee them?——Directly oppoſite the farm-houſe door, they came over a ſtile and run directly after me.

Did you ſee them coming over the ſtile?—I cannot ſay I ſaw them coming over the ſtile, they were juſt by the ſtile, they might be over, there was no other way for them to come but over the ſtile, that was about a hundred yards from the houſe, they purſued me into the houſe; I carried a bag of tea into the parlour on the left hand, and ſhut the parlour door.

Court. Did you ſhut the door of the houſe?—No, I ſhut the door of the parlour, there was no bolt to the beſt of my remembrance, I put my knee againſt it, and kept it as long as I could.

What did theſe three perſons do?—They forced the door open upon me, and I after them when they came in, whether they meant to murder me, for by their threats before they broke in, I expected they would; they made uſe of a deal of ill language that I cannot repeat, open the door door you b—g—r, and all the names that they could.

What did they say they would do?——Murder, or something of that sort.

What sort of language was it?—Threatening language, I was terrified or else I could have kept the door longer, my strength was gone through fear, but I did not open the door myself, they forced it open, then the prisoner said I should not be hurt, provided I would deliver up all the goods, for the goods were theirs, and they would have them.

What became of the bag of tea and the goods?—The bag of tea was taken out by one of them, it was laying on the floor in the parlour.

Had these men any thing in their hands?—They had bludgeons in their hands, large sticks.

Court. Tell us what you mean by these sticks?——The stick that the prisoner had in his hand, was a stick with a large head to it, about three feet long.

How thick was this stick?——A pretty large stick, with a big head.

What sort of a head?——It was a big head, out of which there seemed to be several claws.

Court. Were there or were there not claws, do not tell us of seeming?—There were something that projected out about an inch long, they seemed to be sharp to the best of my remembrance; the others had sticks and bludgeons, one of them had a stick and bludgeon, and one had a long stick and a short one.

Court. What sort of one was the short one?—They call it a bludgeon, I believe the other was a walking stick.

Are they usually called bludgeons?——Yes, Randell had the walking stick, and the short stick, May had a stick in his hand, I cannot remember what sort of a one it was.

What sort of stick was it?——It was a large stick.

How large?—About the size of a common walking stick.

Was it as large as this?——Larger than that.

How long was what you call a bludgeon?—About half the length of this, and I believe three times as thick as this.

How much thicker than that stick, was the stick that May had?—It was thicker than that, but I cannot tell how thick.

Court. Did you observe the stick that May had in his hand, so as to be sure in giving us an account of the size of it?—I remember him to have a stick in his hand, but I cannot tell the size of it, I cannot say whether it was thicker than that or not, I was very much hurried at the time; after some little time, I followed them into the yard, and Woodhouse was in the yard; I observed Rundell and Woodhouse have the bag of tea between them, Rundell would have it, and Woodhouse said he would lose his life sooner than he should have it, I then told Woodhouse I would stand by him.

Was the prisoner present at this time?—Yes.

Were all three present at the time?——Yes.

What passed upon this?——Soon after I saw Mr. Woodhouse knocked down by Rundell.

What did he knock him down with?—With a long stick, I believe it was one or other of the sticks, but I believe it to be the long stick.

Whereabouts did he strike him?—Upon the temple, he was insensible for some time, and as soon as he came to himself he shewed the mark; after Woodhouse was knocked down, there seemed to be a general scuffling, and the prisoner made a blow at me with his bludgeon, that was the bludgeon with the claws, he missed my head, and cut down the brim of my hat, (The hat produced,) the hat has been sewed and worn since, but it has not been torn further; it is just the same as it was, it hung down on my shoulders, as soon as the blow was struck.

What passed after this?—I attempted to catch the prisoner's stick, and I did get hold of the best end of it, some little time, and

May

May jumped to his assistance; I had hold of the big end of it, and in the scuffle I fell, I had a tuck in my hand, and they attempted to take the tuck from me, but Valentine came to my assistance, and they could not get it from me, they quitted me, and then I got up; I then went towards the prisoner with my tuck, I told him I would make the best use of the weapon I had, if he attempted to strike again.

What became of the liquors and tea?—The remainder of the liquors and the tea we stowed after some time, the bag of tea was then there in the cart by us, and some of the geneva.

What became of the liquors?——We got horses after some time, and carried them off.

Did you carry the whole?—We carried off eight casks out of the eleven, I do not know what became of the other three, I did not see them carried away.

Mr. Garrow, Prisoner's Council. Mr. Toy, you had each of you a tuck I believe?—Not all of us.

How many of you had tucks?——I had one, and Woodhouse had one.

What arms had you before you got the supervisor's tuck?——I had it to search with.

So all this contest was about the tea?—The contest was first about the liquor.

How long was it after you made the seizure of the geneva before Woodhouse and Valentine came to you?——I cannot tell, it was some time.

Then you and Valentine went into the field, and there you made a seizure of some more geneva?—Yes.

You left your seizure in the care of Woodhouse, while you went into the field?——Yes.

Now you have said the prisoner made a blow at you, what sort of a stick was it with?——A common Devonshire walking stick.

This was a very uncommon one?——It was a very dangerous weapon, I would not be struck with it for five hundred pounds.

No, nor I with a common walking stick, you have told us that Rundell had a tuck and bludgeon?—Yes.

A bludgeon is infinitely shorter and much thicker?——Yes.

Now did you ever, in the course of your life, see a bludgeon three feet long?—I do not know, I look upon the stick that the prisoner had, to be a more dangerous weapon than a bludgeon.

May be so, so was your tuck stick you know; how much milk punch did you drink after this business was over?—I do not know.

Why who drank the milk punch, the three officers, and the three smugglers?—I did not sit down to drink, I drank none in the house.

Did you drink it in the yard? come, come, it does not make much difference, however you did drink a good quantity?—I do not know what quantity, they offered me several times, and at last I did drink some.

You do not know what became of the other three casks?—Yes.

How soon after the information was the prisoner taken up?—I really do not know.

I will help you, was he taken up till January?——No.

Did you apply to any Magistrate for a warrant against this man?—We acquainted the board with it, and waited the board's directions.

In what month was the indictment preferred?——I do not know.

Was not it in the September sessions? was you present at the time he was apprehended?—Yes.

Did you dine together?——No.

Woodhouse did?—I cannot tell that.

Yes you can, where was he taken?—At Kingsbridge.

Do not you know that he and Woodhouse had been dining together that day?—I do not know, I have heard it from Woodhouse, that the prisoner and he had been dining together the day before.

You cannot tell me how long it was after the the ſeizure, that Woodhouſe came to you? I cannot ſay, it might be half an hour or rather more.

I think you ſay, you run your tuck againſt his breaſt?—I put the tuck againſt his breaſt, but then I only told him that in caſe he ſtruck me again, I ſhould make uſe of it.

SAMUEL WOODHOUSE ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Serjeant Walker.

I am a ſupervifor of excife, I was laſt Auguſt at Kingſbridge, in Devonſhire; Valentine and Toy came to me in the evening of the 1ſt of Auguſt, to acquaint me, that they had received information of ſome ſmuggled or run goods having been landed at Ringmore, and they deſired me to go with them, I told them it was not convenient, but I would meet them the next morning, and I met them the next morning about ten o'clock; it is about ſix, ſeven, or eight miles from Kingſbridge, I cannot be poſitive to a mile; when I met them there in the morning, we agreed to ſeparate, and did ſeparate to ſearch the brakes, and hedges, and fields, and in any place where we thought any thing might be concealed.

Court. The other witneſs ſaid lakes?—I found nothing.

Where did you ſee the priſoner?—I ſaw him at Tom Rundell's houſe, there I ſaw the priſoner, and a perſon that was called May, and a perſon that was called Rundell or Randell.

Do you know the Chriſtian name of that man that was called Rundell?—I did not know his Chriſtian name, nor I did not know Inch's Chriſtian name.

But was that the priſoner at the bar?—I ſhould know him again if I was to ſee him; I have no doubt but it is the ſame perſon, I am ſure it is the ſame perſon; I returned back to Ringmore town, and received a meſſage from Mr. Valentine, as I think, by a little girl, to requeſt us to come to him at the parſonage houſe, where one Creſwell lived; I ſaw May and Rundell again in a meadow, where they were making hay; Valentine and me went in conſequence of this meſſage, and when we got there Toy was taking ſome caſks out of a barn into the yard, and after I came, I ſaw three or four taken out, they were all put together in the yard, a ſmall diſtance from the door that goes into the hay loft, or barn; there were ten, I ſuppoſed them to be gin, I did not taſte them, they had ſlings about them, they had the appearance of ſmuggled caſks; I am ſure moſt of them had ſlings about them, and I believe they all had.

Court. What is the purpoſe of the ſlings?——It is to tie them together, to hang them on a horſe.

Is that the uſual method of carrying geneva and ſpirits?——Yes, Sir, it is very cuſtomary ſo to do; they travel ſometimes twenty, thirty, or forty horſes together.

Do fair dealers carry them ſo?—They call themſelves fair dealers, we call them ſmugglers

No, but how do the fair dealers generally convey their liquors?——They generally convey them on horſes, there are very few waggons in the county.

What did you do after this?——It was agreed that I ſhould ſtay by theſe caſks that were ſaved, and that Mr. Valentine and Toy ſhould go into a field adjoining and ſearch for more, they went and I ſtaid in the yard about a quarter of an hour or twenty minutes; Valentine found a caſk before the priſoner came, and a little time after came three men, which were the priſoner, May, and Rundell, into the yard to me, they had ſticks with them.

Deſcribe the ſtick the priſoner had.——The priſoner had one with a very large head, larger than the ſticks that the others had.

How long might it be?——It might be as long as this (a common walking ſtick.)

Deſcribe the thickneſs of it?——The thickneſs, it might be thicker than this, there might be three or four prongs, it was the natural growth of the ſtick, and ſo cut off, I do not think thoſe prongs were put in, he had no more than one ſtick, Rundell had two, a ſhort one, a kind of bludgeon, and a long one besides, one of them was the same sort of stick as the prisoner's, Rundell's walking stick was with a round head, the other was much shorter, and I apprehend it had no head, I believe not; May had only one stick, it was a kind of a walking stick with a great head to it, the other had a kind of a round head, it was different to this gentleman's stick, it was a common walking stick with a round head.

Court. Do you look upon that as an improper stick for yourself or any other person to walk with?——Any person might use it as a walking stick, such as a country farmer might walk with.

Court to Mr. Attorney General, What do you say to this?

Mr. Attorney General. I do apprehend, that this act of parliament certainly does require not only the act to be done, but that the persons doing it should be assembled to the number of three, and that they should be armed with offensive weapons; the question is whether the offensive weapons must be of such a nature as cannot be applicable to any other use but that of offence? now if that is not the construction, there is no weapon but what may be used as an offensive weapon; or whether the legislature meant by this that the weapon which they carried out must be upon the face of it, an offensive weapon: but I should apprehend it might be left to the Jury, whether these men did carry these sticks offensively: to be sure if they had not attempted to have made use of them offensively, it might be too much to say, they were armed with offensive weapons; and though in a case of life, I wish a mild interpretation, yet a stick thicker than this, is a weapon that in my opinion may be made use of to great offence: I contend the construction of this act of parliament is, that they must be so armed, with fire arms or any other offensive weapons, which being used offensively would endanger the life of the man.

Court. Hand up the act of the 19th of Geo. II.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, it cannot be necessary for me to trouble the Court at all on this point; because I am perfectly convinced, that on reading the act of parliament, the Court will hardly hold what never entered into the brain of any mortal man, which is, that a common walking stick, far inferior to that which the countrymen of Devon walk with, far inferior to the sticks which the macaronies of this town used constantly to walk and to ride with, should be deemed an offensive weapon.

Court to Jury. When we look at the preamble of this act of parliament, it makes it perfectly clear, and recites, that whereas divers resolute persons have appeared in great gangs, in different parts of this kingdom, carrying fire arms, or other offensive weapons; then it says, in the conclusion, to the great terror of his Majesty's peaceable subjects, in defiance of the law; now I do not conceive myself, it can come within the common idea, that persons with common walking sticks can infuse all that terror into his Majesty's peaceable subjects, it should be such as the law calls dangerous weapons, for you have that epithet annexed; besides all the people must be active, and armed according to the true intent and meaning of this statute; therefore I think the indictment is not supported as to the two first counts, and with respect to the third count the law is not in force, for the act on which that count is founded, is verbally repealed, and it is made a misdemeanor; therefore myself and my brothers think the prisoner ought to be acquitted.

NOT GUILTY.

Court to Prisoner. William Inch, I hope it will make an impression on you, that you have been tried with the utmost care and impartiality, though you have been removed from the county where the offence was committed, and brought to trial in a different county, yet you have been treated with the utmost lenity: I am in great hopes this will make an impression on you, and that you will yourself, and impart it to those unfortunate persons, May and Rundel, that assisted you, to leave off those pernicious practices:

practices: you was very near being met with upon this indictment; and as it is not possible for any man to act with more honor than Mr. Woodhouse has done, and though it is said, that you have thrown out threats and menaces of doing him an injury, I hope you are now sensible how extremely well that gentleman has behaved here.

Prisoner. I never did threaten him, nor never will.

Mr. Garrow. He would be a very ungrateful wretch if he did. Are you, Mr. Woodhouse, under any serious apprehensions?

Woodhouse. I hope he will not behave improperly, the prosecution was directed against him by the commissioners of excise, it is not an act of my doing; I have no objection to his being discharged.

Court to Prisoner. Will you promise never to molest him?—Yes, Sir, I never will.

Mr. Attorney General. If ever you do, you shall certainly be prosecuted with the utmost rigour for any thing of this sort.

Mr. Serjeant Walker. Or May, or Rundell, or the rest of them.

Court. I will take the opportunity of saying to this prisoner, that leaving this and all acts of parliament out of the case, when the crown is entitled to a revenue, and a particular mode of collecting it is established, though there was no act of parliament that provided a particular penalty for the obstruction of it, yet (and I am in the hearing of two very learned Judges, who will instruct me, or let me right, if I am mistaken) there cannot be a possible doubt, but any obstruction of officers doing their duty is punishable, and a very great misdemeanor: therefore remember, Inch, to what you have been exposed now for what you have done, and what you still remain exposed to, and let it be an additional reason for the regulation of your future conduct.——Let him be discharged.

Prisoner. My Lords and Gentlemen of the Jury, I humbly thank you.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice GOULD.

321. JANE BONE was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 19th day of February, one copper stewpan, value 5s. the property of John Ward.

GUILTY.

To be confined to hard labour six months in the House of Correction.

---

322. KENITH MACKENZIE was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 28th day of December last, two phaeton wheels, value 10s. and one iron axle-tree, value 10s. the property of John Charlton.

The prosecutor not appearing, the prisoner was

ACQUITTED.

---

323. MARGARET FLINN was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 15th of January last, one silk purse, value 2d. and fourteen guineas, value 14l. 14s. and one half guinea, value 10s. 6d. the property of Joseph Morgan, privily from his person.

The prosecutor not appearing, the prisoner was

ACQUITTED.

---

324. JOHN MORRIS was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 15th day of January last, one printed cotton gown, value 15s. and one check apron, value 1s. the property of Elizabeth Curtis.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

---

325. THOMAS JONES was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 5th day of February, one pair of linen sheets, value 7s. the property of Joseph Dixon, being in-

in a certain lodging room let to him, againſt the ſtatute.

NOT GUILTY.

The preceding five were tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

326. TIMOTHY LEE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 11th of February, four pair of coloured ſilk ſtockings, value 30s. the property of George Payne.

(The witneſſes examined apart.)

GEORGE PAYNE ſworn.

I live in Newgate-ſtreet, I am a hoſier; on Friday, the 11th of February, I loſt ſome ſtockings, I came home about half after eight, and found ſome ſtockings on the counter dirty, I ſaw a window broke.

THOMAS GILES ſworn.

I heard the cry of ſtop thief! the priſoner ran down Ivey-lane, I caught hold of the tail of his coat, and he ran into a court, and ſomebody knocked him down, and I immediately caught hold of his arm, and found three ſilk ſtockings under his arm, and a young man picked up ſome others and gave to me; I took the priſoner and theſe three ſtockings to Mr. Payne's ſhop.

WILLIAM JONES ſworn.

I am a conſtable, I produce ſome ſtockings, I had them in Mr. Payne's ſhop, the witneſs Giles was preſent.

(The ſtockings depoſed to.)

Proſecutor. I have no particular mark on them, I know them to be my property, I had them in my hands, and put them in the window myſelf.

Is there any thing particular in the pattern; the pattern is not uncommon?——I cannot ſay how I know them to be mine, having had them in my hands ſeveral times I know them to be mine, as I do the other goods.

THOMAS WHITTALL ſworn.

Going down Newgate-ſtreet, between ſeven and eight o'clock, on Friday the 11th of February, I paſſed two men oppoſite to Mr. Payne's ſhop, juſt after I paſſed them, they turned ſhort about, and looked in at the window, upon which I turned and looked at them, juſt after I ſaw one of them ſtrike his hand through a pane of glaſs, and take ſome ſtockings out, I purſued them as faſt as I could, after he got into the middle of the ſtreet, he threw ſome ſtockings down, I purſued the priſoner, crying ſtop thief! I followed him into Ivey-lane, then I loſt ſight of him, he turned into a court that goes into Newgate-market, I followed him into the place, but did not ſee him taken; I cannot ſwear to his perſon, I ſhould not know the ſtockings again.

RICHARD AUSTIN ſworn.

On Friday, the 11th of this month, going along Newgate-ſtreet, I heard the cry of ſtop thief! I ſaw a man go down Ivey-lane, I purſued him, a man ſhoved him down, and he threw the ſtockings down, I picked up three in the court, and gave to Giles, he took them in his hand to Mr. Payne's, and I afterwards picked up another pair, and carried them to Mr. Payne's.

Who was the man that had the ſtockings and was ſtopped?—The priſoner, I was cloſe to him, I was not three yards from him.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I work at the water ſide, I heard the cry of ſtop thief! I ſaw a man with a parcel of ſtockings, he threw them down, I picked them up, and run after the man, and they took me: I am an entire ſtranger to London.

GUILTY.

To be impriſoned ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

327. WIL-

327. WILLIAM KYBERD was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, 500 lb. weight of printed paper, value 20l. the property of John Harriſon, in his dwelling houſe.

The caſe opened by Mr. Silveſter.

(The witneſſes examined apart.)

WILLIAM PARSON ſworn.

I am a cheeſemonger, I know the priſoner; the latter end of December the priſoner came to me, and aſked me, if I wanted any waſte paper; we uſe a great deal of it, I told him that was an article we never refuſed; I aſked him how much he had; he ſaid it was very clean, he told me his father was a printer, near Black-friars-bridge, that he had got a good many numbers, which were incorrect, and he had prevailed on his father to diſpoſe of them; he brought me a ſample, about an hundred weight in a bag; when he took it out of the bag, I aſked him, what he muſt have for it; he told me twopence halfpenny a pound; I offered him two-pence, or elſe he might take it back again; he ſaid I ſhould have it, and I weighed it; he ſaid he had ſome more, and in the courſe of the next day he brought ſuch another parcel; I weighed it, and paid him for it: I ſaw no more of the priſoner till I ſaw him at Guildhall, he was at my houſe with ſome paper afterwards, but I was not at home.

Are you ſure that is the man you purchaſed the paper of?—Yes.

What did you do with the paper you purchaſed of him?—I put it on a ſhelf in my ſhop for uſe, and ſome time after that, Mr. Macdermot, a cheeſemonger, came into my ſhop, and aſked me to let him have a little waſte paper; and ſome I ſold to Mr. John Lowes, and ſome to Mr. Nathaniel Bell; I did not ſell any to any body elſe.

Have you any of it now?—Yes.

Mr. Garrow. Is this that you are going to produce, any of that which you bought yourſelf at either of thoſe two times?—That I cannot ſay.

HENRY BRATHWAIT ſworn.

I am apprentice to Mr. Parſons, the cheeſemonger, I purchaſed ſome paper from the priſoner in December.

What quantity did you purchaſe?—He came twice or thrice when my maſter was out of the way, and he bought about an hundred weight at a time of him.

Is that ſome of the paper?—This is ſome of the ſame ſort, I cannot ſay it is the ſame bundle I bought of him, and paid for.

Was you preſent when your maſter bought them?—Yes, it was the ſame ſort that I ſaw.

Mr. Garrow. There are a great many thouſand reams of the ſame ſort in this town, you do not mean to ſay that any part of that is the ſame?—No.

Where was it laſt night?—It was left with a perſon yeſterday.

Court. Are there any marks upon it by which you know it to be the ſame paper?—Here are ſome of the marks of the chalk.

Do you mean to ſwear, by thoſe marks, that that is the paper you bought?—No.

Mr. Silveſter. Where does it come from now?—From the Pitt's Head.

Mr. Silveſter to Parſons. Look at that paper?—I know it to be the ſort of paper.

Had you any of that kind or ſort from any body elſe but the priſoner at the bar?—No.

——— MACDERMOT ſworn.

I am a cheeſemonger, I purchaſed ſome waſte paper of Parſons, I cannot ſay what month it was in, I had it home, and uſed a part of it, the other part I have now by me, there is a bundle of it there.

Mr. Garrow. Before it is produced give me leave to aſk you in whoſe poſſeſſion it has been ever ſince?—I bought it of Mr. Parſons over night, it was late, and I ſent my cart for it next morning, and my man brought it.

Is your man here?—No.

Then you do not know where he brought it from.

Court. Did you ſee the paper you went to buy?—Yes.

What ſort of paper was it?—Such paper as that, I ſaw it then, and weighed it likewiſe, it was about three hundred and a quarter.

Mr. Garrow. Did you weigh the paper your man brought home?—No.

Then by the weight you do not know it was the ſame you ſaw at Parſons's; it had the Bible printed on it?——I really do not know that.

It was the ſame ſize paper?——I never looked at the inſide of it.

That bundle of paper which you produce in whoſe cuſtody has it been?——It lay in my houſe till laſt night, it was left at the Pitt's Head.

It may have been changed?——I cannot ſay.

How many people have you employed in your ſhop?—Three or four.

Any of whom may ſell it, or exchange it?—Yes.

Priſoner. My proſecutor is ſpeaking to one of the witneſſes againſt me.

JOHN ROSE ſworn.

I have ſome paper here which I bought of Mr. Parſons, this is the ſame.

Mr. Garrow. How do you know it is the ſame?——Becauſe I bought it of Mr. Parſons, and put it on the ſhelf, I took it out of the coach, and carried it into the Pitt's-head, my lad put it in, I took it down myſelf.

How long before had you bought it?—Some time, I believe the beginning of January, it had been upon the ſhelf near two months, a good deal of it had been uſed.

How many ſervants have you?——Two, ſometimes I ſell ſome, and ſometimes my ſervants, in my abſence.

Do you know it by any thing except its ſize?——I put my name upon it, I had no other paper in the houſe.

Court. I ſuppoſe you keep your paper in ſome particular part of the ſhop?—On the ſhelf.

Do you attend your ſhop yourſelf?——Yes.

Have you any other paper?——No, only a few leaves, the ſize of a common prayer book, ſo that I can be ſure it is the ſame.

JOHN HARRISON ſworn.

I live in Newgate-ſtreet, the priſoner was my ſervant and warehouſe man.

Look at this paper?——This is the old Bible that I printed two or three years ago, this is my property, part of it is Rapin's Hiſtory of England, part of it is the old Bible, and part of it an octavo prayer-book, and here is a ſample for the ſatisfaction of the Court to compare, if required.

EDWARD GOLDSPRING ſworn.

I keep the Pitt's-head, ſome parcels of paper were locked in the cellar laſt night I did not ſee them come in, but when I did go to the cellar they were there, and I delivered thoſe parcels out this morning.

Mr. Garrow to Proſecutor. How long had this young man been with you?—About ſix or ſeven months.

What was his character?—If you think proper, I will give you an account of all I know about his character, I would not have kept him in my ſervice ſo long, if I had not thought him honeſt, but I loſt upwards of five hundred weight.

You cannot aſcertain how long that might have been going?——He might have been ſtealing that paper for twelve months to come, and I never miſs it; I ſuppoſe there is five or ſix thouſand pounds worth there, it is impoſſible to aſcertain how much I loſt out of ſo great a quantity, ſome of it was printed two or three years ago, ſome of it is a new Bible that is juſt finiſhed about a fortnight or three weeks ago.

When was that part finiſhed that is produced?——About three or four years ago.

When was that part of Rapin's Hiſtory finiſhed that is in that bundle?——It is a hundred ſheets of one ſort of hiſtory, there is a hundred of another, and they are all different different parts, a latter part, a firſt part, and all.

How long ago was the latter part of that hiſtory printed by you?——A part of the Bible, and that part of the Hiſtory of England, I believe not above ſix months ago; all the new Bible has been printed in the courſe of two years, it was finiſhed about three weeks ago.

Did much of it remain unfiniſhed within two months paſt?——I can ſafely ſay, the Hiſtory of England, and the Bible were not finiſhed ſix months ago, this bundle conſiſts intirely of the old Bible.

Look at the other parcels?——This is chiefly the new Bible.

When was the lateſt of that Bible printed?—About thirty weeks ago.

When were theſe ſheets printed?—This is page 158, we are now printing about four hundred, I believe this was done about three or four months ago.

Mr. Garrow. Where were theſe works printed?——At my own Printing-office in town.

You always print a certain number over for waſte?——There is what they call over paper for proofs, only this is not proofs.

But after you had printed a certain number of ſheets for uſe, you print ſome over paper after?——I can ſay this in anſwer to that, that I never ſold a ſheet ſince I began buſineſs, and that there is no waſte paper mong the men, till I leave of printing.

Is not it your cuſtom to print over paper to ſupply defective ſheets?——We do print what they call over copies.

JOHN HILL ſworn.

I work with Mr. Harriſon, I went to ſee the priſoner, we were all ſurpriſed, I aſked him, ſays I, you have taken a large quantity of paper, I find, and he ſaid, he had taken it.

Had not you ſaid this to him, that it would be better for him to confeſs?—No, I never aſked him any ſuch thing; in the courſe of the converſation, I underſtood from Mr. Harriſon, that he had taken above a ton weight, but when I came to tell him, he ſaid, he had not taken above five hundred.

Priſoner. I did not tell him that; I told him, there was only five hundred laid to my charge by the proſecutor.

Court to Hill. You ſaid, that he told you, he had not taken about five hundred; he ſays, that all he told you was, that there was only five hundred laid to his charge?—He probably might ſay ſo, but I underſtood him, that he had not taken above five hundred.

ROBERT FARQUHAR ſworn.

I work for Mr. Harriſon, I paid a viſit with Hill, but it was of a different nature from aſking any queſtions about this matter; I heard ſome words paſs between them, but there were ſeveral people in the company, and the room was very cloſe, and I was not near enough to diſtinguiſh between them.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I can ſay this, that I never took the paper; I never went there to work in the morning till after eight, and left it at eight, during this time the ſhop was full of people, I had no opportunity of being alone, and it is impoſſible that I could take it.

ROBERT COLLINS ſworn.

I am a book-binder in Warwick-lane, I have known the priſoner this nine or ten years, he worked for me, and I have truſted him with a great deal of money, and my property; and I have always found him an honeſt man, and that is his general character.

HENRY CLARK ſworn.

I live in the Borough, I am a carpenter; I have known him between twelve and thirteen years, I have truſted him with property to a conſiderable amount; I always found him a truly honeſt man, that is his general character; I have gone out, and left my houſe with plate, money, and goods and him in it, and found it juſt as I left it, on my return.

ED-

EDWARD MUSGRAVE sworn.

I have known him about eight years, I knew him in the garrison of Gibraltar, he was a gunner under my inspection, I was bombardier; he always behaved like an honest young man, and bore a universal good character in the garrison, by all the officers and men; he was always an honest young fellow till this time.

DAVID COE sworn.

I live in the Borough, I keep an academy; I have known him seven or eight months, and his family a great many years, he had a general honest, good character, I would have trusted him with a hundredpounds, his father used to be steward to noblemen.

HENRY WESTLEY sworn.

I am a book-binder, in Prujean-square: I have known him ten or eleven years, I never hear a bad character, but always steady, sober, and honest.

ROBERT THOMAS sworn.

I have known him for a year and a half, a very sober, honest, and industrious young man, always assiduous in his business.

Mr. Garrow. I have more witnesses, but I have called enough.

GUILTY

Of stealing to the value of 39s.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Justice BULLER.

---

328. ELIZABETH BALDWIN was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 4th day of February, six silver tea spoons, value 10s. one silk cloak, value 20s. one handkerchief, value 3s. one muslin apron, value 8s. one pair of silver shoe buckles, value 10s. the property of James Paul, in his dwelling house.

Part of the things were taken upon the prisoner at the work-house, and some were produced which she had pawned. The prisoner was a weekly servant to the prosecutor.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

On the 4th of February, I believe it was, I went in to make the bed, and I took these things; I had not it in my head an hour before, and when I had taken them, I did not know what to do with them, and I went to a place where I was sure she would come for me, and I delivered the things into my mistress's hands.

GUILTY

Of stealing to the value of 25s.

To be privately whipped, and confined to hard labour six months in the House of Correction.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

329. JOHN ELLIS was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 14th day of February, three pounds weight of Spanish wool, value 9s. the property of a certain person unknown.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

330. THOMAS SAWYER was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 23d day of January last, one linen shirt, value 3s. one neck cloth, value 1s. and one handkerchief, value 1s. the property of William Stone.

William Stone deposed, that coming down St. Andrew's-hill, on Sunday the 23d of January, about half after five, in a whisky, the horse startled, and he heard the head of the the chaiſe cut, and ſaw the priſoner with a handkerchief run acroſs the ſtreet, and give it to another man; the proſecutor jumped out, and took him.

Henry Ewer ſaw the priſoner running and the proſecutor purſuing him.

Stephen Rawlinſon ſaw the priſoner behind the chaiſe and jump down, and the proſecutor purſued him.

Priſoner. I was walking down the ſtreet when Mr. Stone laid hold of me, and another man run paſt me.

The priſoner called ſeven witneſſes who all gave him a good character.

GUILTY.

To be confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

331. EDWARD ROBERTS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 3d day of January laſt, three gallons of lamp-oil, value 6s. the property of John Lewis.

And WILLIAM COLLEY was indicted for feloniouſly receiving the ſame, knowing it to be ſtolen.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

---

332. TIMOTHY SULLIVAN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 27th day of January laſt, one hundred and ten pounds weight of lead, value 5s. belonging to James Jones, then and there fixed to a certain building of his, againſt the ſtatute.

NOT GUILTY.

---

333. JOHN BABBITT was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 20th of January laſt, one cotton gown, value 8s. one ſilk petticoat, value 5s. four pair of ſheets, value 40s. a table cloth, value 2s. one ſilk handkerchief, value 5s. three linen ſhirts, value 2s. one cotton counterpane, value 5s. one pair of blankets, value 7s. one pillow, value 2s. one pillow-caſe, value 6d. the property of Mary Thomas, in her dwelling houſe.

Mary Thomas. I live at Stepney-green, on the 20th of January, I miſſed the things mentioned in the indictment; and a man jumped out of my room window upon my ſcreaming out; I found the ends of my things juſt hanging out of the window, and I ſaw a man go out of the yard, and I am ſure it was the priſoner's back, but I did not ſee his face till he was taken; he went off with the things, he made a bit of a run when he got out of the gate; I afterwards found my trunk and things.

(Depoſed to.)

John Porter and Edward Porter, Richard Seymour and John Macguire, apprehended the priſoner, having ſeen him in the yard.

PRISONER'S DEFENCE.

I was going to meet a friend at Stepney, and I ſtepped into a pair of gates to make water, and I heard the cry of ſtop thief! and I was looking to ſee where it was, and they took me.

The Priſoner called one witneſs who gave him a good character.

GUILTY,

Of ſtealing to the value of 39s.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

---

334. THOMAS JONES was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 28th day of January laſt, 113lb. weight of lead, belonging to John Langley, and affixed to his dwelling houſe, againſt the ſtatute.

JOHN LANGLEY ſworn.

I live in Gower's walk, Whitechapel;

I keep a houſe there, on the 28th of January laſt my property was ſafe, I was with the bricklayers, it was half paſt five, and day light; on Monday morning about a quarter paſt ſeven, I ſaw the tiles lay upon the parapet on the firſt houſe, and I found the whole length of the gutter was gone; I found the lead afterwards at the watch-houſe, which was mine.

JOHN ASTON ſworn.

I am a plumber, I put on this lead for the proſecutor, this piece I marked, 4014, I can ſwear to it.

WILLIAM COBB ſworn.

I am a patrol, in Whitechapel; on Saturday morning the 29th of January, about half paſt five, I ſaw the priſoner wheeling a barrow with lead, in Caſtle-alley, juſt about a quarter of a mile from the proſecutor's; I aſked him what he had got there, he ſaid, lead; there was a little boy with him, with a pig of lead in his apron, I put it into the barrow, he ſaid, he worked for Mr. Baſe, a bricklayer, in Vine-ſtreet, Spital-fields; he ſaid, the boy was an hod boy, I told him he muſt carry the lead to the watch-houſe, he made no reſiſtance, he ſaid, his maſter would be that way in half an hour; but juſt as we were going into the watch-houſe, the priſoner and the boy run away, the priſoner was purſued and brought to the watch-houſe: at the watch-houſe, he ſaid, he was a velvet weaver, and the boy with him, gave him a ſhilling to wheel the lead for him; the beadle deſired to ſee the ſhilling, and he pulled out one from his pocket.

Thomas Simpſon a watchman, and James Matthews a beadle, confirmed the above.

The priſoner called three witneſſes to his character.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

335. JOSEPH SHARP was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 27th day of January laſt, two iron bolts, value 3d. eight pounds weight of tire nails, value 2s. twenty pounds weight of iron, value 2od. the property of Hannah Uze; and two flannel jackets, value 1s. and one iron crow, value 1s. the property of James Walker.

John Shaw a watchman, took the priſoner with the property on him, which the ſhopman ſaw in the ſhop the night before.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

---

336. MARTHA COTTON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 27th day of January laſt, thirty yards of black ſilk mode, value 3l. thirty-three yards of black ſilk lace, value 20s. twenty yards of ſilk ribbon, value 10s. four pair of leather gloves, value 6s. ſix yards of gauze, value 6s. and eight paper fans, value 12s. the property of James Hartſhorn.

Mr. Peatt, Council for the Priſoner, obſerving that the indictment was erroneous, the name of Mr. Dyde, Mr. Hartſhorn's partner being omitted therein, the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

---

337. EDWARD ROBERTS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 3d day of February, one tin oil can, value 1s. and two gallons of lamp oil, value 4s. the property of John Lewis.

JOHN LEWIS ſworn.

On Thurſday evening the 3d of February, a little after ten, Henry Croker belonging to the Bow-ſtreet office, called upon me, and ſaid, he had ſtopped a man near Bagnigge Wells, with a pot of oil; in the morning I went to Bow-ſtreet, and there there I ſaw the priſoner, who was my old man, and had worked for me near four months, he was ſtopped as he was going from work: I ſaw an oil can there which I cannot ſwear to, but one of the witneſſes can; the keys were frequently left in the ſhop, ſo that the priſoner might get at it, it was what they call whale oil, for lamps, it was not mixed, it was plain.

HENRY CROKER ſworn.

I am one of Sir Sampſon's patrols, on the 3d of February, about half paſt nine at night, I ſtopped the priſoner near Bagnigge Wells, with this can of oil, he ſaid, it was oil, and he brought it from a perſon at Iſlington, from the White Swan, from a lamplighter that was lame, and had fell off the ladder; he ſaid, he was going to carry it into Drury-lane; he ſaid, he had been at work that day, but who he ſaid he worked for, I cannot ſay, but I know he did not ſay he worked for Mr. Lewis; he ſaid, the landlord of the Swan would have nothing to do with it, but that there was a boy in waiting at the door that he took it from: I found out the proſecutor, (The can and oil produced) the can has been in my poſſeſſion ever ſince, except when I came backwards and forwards here.

JOHN CLAYTON ſworn.

I know that can to be my maſter's property; we have uſed it a great while in the ſhop, as a watering pot.

FRANCIS COOLING ſworn.

I am an evidence; on the 3d of February laſt, I delivered this can of oil out of the warehouſe, in the evening about eight, I put it upon the green by the warehouſe, for this priſoner to take it; there was the ſame quantity of oil in it which is now, it was whale oil; the keys of the warehouſe were in the ſhop, and this oil was locked in the warehouſe.

Court. Did you take the keys out of the ſhop?——Yes.

Did the priſoner know it?——Yes.

Was this your maſter's oil?——Yes, I did not ſee the priſoner take it away, but he told me to leave it in one particular place on the green, in the duſthole, the corner of the green, between ſeven and nine; he ſaw me that evening before I did it, and aſked me about it.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

This day month as nigh as I can gueſs, I left work about eight, and went to the public houſe; and the laſt witneſs came in, and aſked me to carry a can of oil for him, as he had been out all day, and was tired; I found it on the green near the duſthole, and carried it a little way, and the patrol took me: Cooling aſked me to carry it, and ſaid, he had above ſeventeen gallons ſent him from the country, and he had a ſample with him.

WILLIAM AUSTIN ſworn.

I live at No. 28. in the Strand, Cooling ſaid, his couſin lived at Deptford, and I ſaid, I would not purchaſe it, unleſs it was come honeſtly by.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

The laſt ſeven were tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

338. GEORGE EDMUNDS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 23d day of February laſt, two linen aprons, value 2s. two towels, value 6d. the property of Blanch Evans, two linen aprons, value 6d. five rubbers, value 6d. and one deal box, value 1d. the property of Clayton Clecherow.

The parties not appearing, the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

---

339. EDWARD WALKER otherwiſe FINES was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, ſtealing, on the 9th day of October laſt, one metal candle-ſtick, value 3s. the property of John Hudſon.

The priſoner was taken inſtantly after the theft, with the property upon him.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

---

340. SARAH WHITWORTH was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 3d of January laſt, one cotton gown, value 10s. one ſilk handkerchief, value 3s. one pair of ſtockings, value 6d. the property of Benjamin Hart.

NOT GUILTY.

---

341. JAMES RILEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 14th day of January laſt, ten pounds weight of cheeſe, value 3s. the property of William Weeden.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Theſe laſt four were tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

342. SOLOMON GOLDSMITH was indicted for feloniouſly receiving on the 24th day of November laſt, one watch with the inſide caſe and outſide caſe made of ſilver, value 20s. one watch key, value 1d. the property of Solomon Greentree, for the ſtealing whereof, Charles Medley was tried and convicted, at the General Seſſions of our Lord the King, holden for the City of London, on Wedneſday the 8th day of December laſt, knowing the ſame to have been ſtolen.

Solomon Greentree called on his recognizance, and not appearing, the affidavit of notice of ſurrender was read.

The Record of the Conviction of Charles Medley, read by Thomas Shelton, Eſq; Clerk of the Arraigns, and examined by Mr. Peatt, the Priſoner's Council.

WILLIAM JONES ſworn.

On the 21ſt of November, I was ſent for by Solomon Greentree, to take charge of Medley, for ſtealing a watch out of his ſhop, in conſequence of an information, I went to the priſoner's houſe in Chick-lane, a chandler's ſhop, and pawnbroker's: I took Warren with me, Medley was aſked who he had ſold the watch to, and he ſhewed us the priſoner.

Court. Was the priſoner preſent?——He was.

What did the priſoner ſay?——He ſaid, he had got the watch, and he went up ſtairs to fetch it, and Warren followed, and I ſaw the priſoner take the watch out of a bureau facing; I did not go into the room, but it was facing the door, I could ſee him; he then turned round and came down ſtairs, and I followed him, then the priſoner came down ſtairs, and ſaid, it was pledged with him, and Warren, me, and Greentree, wrenched it out of his hands, he refuſed to deliver it without the money that was paid for it, but they got it away from him; after Medley was tried, the watch was delivered up to Greentree.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council. The priſoner was in a back-room?——Yes, there was a partition, but the door was open.

THOMAS WARREN ſworn.

On the 21ſt, it was a Sunday evening, I went with Jones to the priſoner's houſe, I took the boy (Medley) before me, I told him to ſhew me the perſon that bought this watch, and he pointed to the priſoner; I told the priſoner I came about a watch that was ſtolen, and muſt have it, he ſeemed a little confuſed: he ſaid to his wife, give me the keys, I followed him, he ſaid, you need not, I ſaid, I will, and he opened a bureau, and took out the watch; the boy declared in his preſence, that he gave him half a guinea for it, and he told him he would make it up another time; the boy asked him a guinea and an half.

What answer did this prisoner make to what the boy said?—He said, he lent him half a guinea on it, but the boy persisted that he gave him the half-guinea for it; he would not deliver the watch without the half guinea, I laid hold of the watch, and took him to the Compter with the boy.

Did any thing pass in your presence afterwards?——We preferred the bill of indictment against him after Medley was tried, and says the prisoner to Greentree, who was over the way, I am surprized you should go and prefer a bill of indictment, when I have paid forty pounds into the hands of your attorney, and you have signed a paper.

Did he say for what purpose he had paid it?——Not to prosecute him, and that the other had signed an agreement for it; and I said to the prosecutor, I thought there was some villainy work in this, says he, I know I have done wrong by signing the paper I did sign; this was said in the presence of Jones the constable, and in the room where he was, he must have heard it.

Court. Was the watch that was produced upon the trial of Medley, the same watch that you found at this man's house?——Yes, I produced it, it was the same I found on the prisoner.

Mr. Peatt. Will you take upon you to say that you heard the word prosecute, when this conversation passed?——Yes, upon my oath I will; they came to me very often and wanted me to be concerned in this business, but I did not chuse it.

Who was the prisoner's attorney in this business?—I do not know.

Court. If I knew who he was, I should direct him to be prosecuted for a misdemeanor, in compounding felony.

Court. Where does Greentree live?—He keeps the tap at the King's-head eating house, in Ivey-lane.

Mr. Peatt. The prisoner keeps a pawnbroker's shop?——Yes; there was no duplicate upon this watch.

Mr. Peatt. Does your Lordship call upon us for a defence?

Court. Certainly.

THOMAS FISHPOOL sworn.

Court to this witness. Be careful what you say, because if you are caught tripping, I shall certainly direct a prosecution against you; therefore take care to say nothing but the truth.

Fishpool. On the 21st of November there was a lad come into the shop, with a silver watch, and asked Mr. Goldsmith to lend him the sum of a guinea upon it; he refused to take it in several times, but upon pleading very hard, that it was his father's, and that he should take it very kind if he would let him have that money, as he was distressed; with a great deal of persuasion, he told him he would lend him the sum of half a guinea upon it; he said he should be very thankful if he did, and that he should certainly redeem it the next day, for his father was much distressed: upon this Mr. Goldsmith ordered me to enter it in the book, which I have done; I made the entry myself at the time the lad was in the shop.

Court. Produce the book.

(The book handed up.)

Jury. Has your master a licence to keep a pawnbroker's shop?——I do not know indeed.

Warren. He acknowledged he had not to me.

Court. It appears from this book, Gentlemen, that this article is plainly made in the usual course of business, at the time.

Court to Fishpool. How long have you lived with this man?——Above two years, he is a painter by trade.

Mr. Peatt. So you work with the prisoner sometimes?——Yes, but I am constantly in the house.

What character does the prisoner bear?——A very good character.

The prisoner called two other witnesses who gave him a good character.

Court to Jury. It appears that this watch was pledged by Medley to the prisoner, but whether pledged or bought, the receiving it knowing it to have been stolen, is the offence charged in the indictment.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

343. FRANCIS SCOTT was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 1st day of February, one shag waistcoat, value 6s. one cloth coat, value 10s. one cotton gown, value 5s. one linen shirt, value 6s. and one muslin shawl, value 3s. the property of John Richards.

The prisoner was stopt coming out of the prosecutor's house with the several things upon him.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

344. JOSEPH PAYNE and JOHN CLAYTON were indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 4th day of February, one cloth jacket, called a threshing jacket, value 8s. the property of James Brown.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

345. CHARLES ZACHARY was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 24th of January last, one coachman's box coat value 8s. and one pair of green plush breeches, value 8s. the property of ——— Bull, Esq; two pair of leather shoes, value 8s. one pair of leather pumps, value 4s. one silk handkerchief, value 6d. one linen handkerchief, value 3d. one pair of metal buckles, plated with silver, value 1s. one striped serge waistcoat, value 1s. and one man's hat, value 6d. the property of John Langston.

The prisoner was permitted to sleep in Mr. Bull's stables, and stole the things mentioned in the indictment, they were taken upon him.

GUILTY,

Whipped.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

346. RICHARD WALKER was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 9th day of January last, one copper pottage pot and cover, value 3s. the property of Edward Coleman.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

347. THOMAS DOUTY was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 13th day of January last, one linen handkerchief, value 6d. the property of William Stapleton.

The prosecutor was coming up Snow-hill, and felt a hand in his pocket, and turned round, and saw the prisoner with his handkerchief in his hand, which he saw him drop.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

348. ROBERT MOTT was indicted for feloniously returning from transportation, tion, and being found at large, on the 18th day of January laſt, without any lawful cauſe.

——— TWYFORD ſworn.

I am a man's mercer in the Strand, I have ſeen the priſoner before, I ſaw him when I took him in my ſhop, I proſecuted him for a burglary, he was convicted of ſtealing, I am ſure he is the man.

Priſoner. I am the man.

(The record of the priſoner's conviction in January ſeſſions laſt produced, and read by Thomas Shelton, Eſq; clerk of the arraigns.)

JOHN OWEN ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Akerman, in January 1784, the priſoner was tried and convicted, for ſtealing goods of Mr. Twyford, he was tried capitally, and they took off the capital part.

Court. Are you ſure he is the man, that was tried for that offence?——I am ſure of it, I knew him perſonally before.

JOHN SAYRE ſworn.

I attend at the Rotation Office, in Litchfield-ſtreet, on the 18th of laſt month, I was coming over Black Friars Bridge, and I met the priſoner, I knew him, I had known him a twelvemonth before, I laid hold of him, I aſked him if he had any piſtols, he ſaid no; I immediately called a coach and put him in, and took him to the Cock in Litchfield-ſtreet, and upon ſearching him, I found this box of bullets in his breeches pockets.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

349. JOSEPH PAYNE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 12th day of February, eight pair of worſted ſtockings, value 10s. the property of Hannah Edwards.

WILLIAM STEELE ſworn.

On the 12th of February, between twelve and one, I was ſitting in the proſecutrix's kitchen, and I ſaw a man juſt going out of the ſhop door, and I immediately ran after him, and I found theſe ſtockings under his jacket.

(Depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was very much in liquor, and a young fellow whom I met gave them to me to carry.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

350. GEORGE PATTERSON and JAMES DONOVAN were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 14th day of January laſt, one deal drawer called a till, value 1s. and ſeventy-two copper halfpence, value 3s. and one ſhilling and ſixpence in monies, the monies of John Oldham.

The priſoners were taken in company together in the ſtreet, with the till in the hand of Patterſon.

PRISONER, PATTERSON's DEFENCE.

I picked up the till in the ſtreet, with the money in it.

BOTH GUILTY.

Each to be tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

351. JOHN LEE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 20th of January laſt, fifty-ſix pounds weight of lead, value 8s. belonging to Peter Martin, and then and there affixed to a certain dwelling houſe of the ſaid Peter, againſt the ſtatute.

The

The prisoner was taken by the watchman, with two pieces of lead upon him, which were fitted to the gutter of Mr. Martin's house, and matched exactly.

GUILTY.

Whipped, and confined six months in the House of Correction.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

352. ELIZABETH HIPPESLEY was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 24th of February, one silver watch, value 3l. a steel chain, value 2d. a stone seal set in base metal, value 1d. a base metal key, value 1d. a pair of worsted garters, value 2d. one guinea, value 1l. 1s. and five shillings in monies numbered, the property of William Fincham, in the dwelling house of a certain person unknown.

WILLIAM FINCHAM sworn.

I am a master butcher, last Thursday night I met with the prisoner, just at the end of Fleet-market, and in the course of the evening, I agreed to go home with her, it was between eleven and twelve, I was sober, and sensible of every thing that was going on.

Where had you been that evening?——To an acquaintance in London, I went about seven.

What did you drink?—A little porter, I was in three or four different companies.

Did you drink in them all?——No.

Did you ask her to go with you, or did she ask you to go with her?—That I cannot resolve you.

Where did you go with her?——In the course of evening I went home to her lodgings, as nigh as I can recollect between eleven and twelve; I first met her about six, I maintain a house in Portpool Lane, I did not stay with her three minutes, I gave her a glass at the bar, but I drank nothing, I then went to a friend's on Air-street-hill, and left her there; I never saw her before then, I came home with her to her lodgings between eleven and twelve.

Where are her lodgings?——They are upon Saffron-hill, but I cannot tell you exactly what is the name of the person that keeps the house.

Did you make any enquiry whose house it was?——No.

Did you see any other people in the house?—No, the door was open, and we went up one pair of stairs, we went to bed together; between one and two I awoke, and missed the property that is in the indictment; I saw my watch before I went to bed, and wound it up, I have seen the watch and garters since; it is a very particular watch, it has a hare and hounds upon the face of it; I know the chain, I have had it two years, the seal was a blue seal, bought on London-bridge, it cost me three-pence, I do not know the impression of it, the key was quite a common key; I know the garters, I always put them in my pocket of a night; I put my watch into my fob, there was no other woman in the room with me; at two o'clock I missed my things and the girl was gone, I got the watchman and searched for the things about the bed; I was going to enquire for her the next morning, and I met her in Fleet-market, and charged her with the robbery, she said I rob you! you fool, what do you mean by that? I took her to the public house, and sent for a constable, and while I sent for the constable, she produced my watch out of her pocket.

Had you then told her it would be better for her?——I had, she said she had none of it; the constable said to the girl, let me look at your legs, and she took off one of my garters, which I will swear to.

The Remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be published in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commission of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middlesex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wednesday the 23d of FEBRUARY 1785, and the following Days;

Being the THIRD SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER III. PART VI.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noster Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of Elizabeth Hippeſley.

Priſoner. Did not you give me the watch, and tell me to keep it till you came the next morning and gave me a crown?—No, no ſuch thing, why ſhould I do that, when I had plenty of money in my pocket, I ſaw the money in her room.

Priſoner. Did not you tell me, you had loſt all your money at cocking, and gave me the watch till you brought me ſome money?—No.

Court. Did you win or loſe at cocking that night?—I cannot tell.

GEORGE MORRIS ſworn.

I am conſtable for the liberty of Saffron-hill, I never ſaw the priſoner before I was ſent for by the proſecutor, to take this woman into cuſtody on Monday morning; I firſt ſaw her at the end of Field-lane, the firſt houſe on Saffron-hill, the ſign of the Caſtle; the gentleman of the houſe gave me this watch, the proſecutor deſcribed the garters to me as mixed garters, I took one off, and he ſaid it was his garter, ſhe took the other off, (the garters depoſed to) ſhe did not deny they were his garters, only ſhe ſaid he gave them to her.

Proſecutor. She had three, if not four half crowns, beſides ſhillings and ſome halfpence.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I made no heſitation to give him his watch which he left with me, only I ſaid it was neceſſary he ſhould give me the preſent he promiſed me.

GUILTY.

Of ſtealing, but not in the dwelling houſe

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

353. MARY MORTON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 15th of January laſt, three pieces, containing ſeventeen handkerchiefs, value 18s. the property of Joſeph Capps, privily in his ſhop.

ROBERT HARDY ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Capps, on Saturday, the 15th of January, the priſoner came into our ur ſhop in the afternoon, I think it was tween four and five, ſhe aſked to look at me handkerchiefs, I believe I have ſeen er two or three times before; the witneſs ymonds ſhewed her ſome handkerchiefs, d I believe ſold her two or three, he had me ſuſpicion of her, and intimated it to e, for he was engaged with two or three ore cuſtomers, at the ſame time he kept herefore ſome handkerchiefs, and deſired e to take notice; ſhe ſtood by the ſide of he counter, and I thought the handkerchiefs ere all ſafe.

Were any handkerchiefs on that ſide the counter?—None that I know of, I did not ee her take them up, only by her confuſed manner of going from the counter, I thought he muſt have ſomething; ſhe took her change in a hurry; as ſhe was going out of the ſhop, he mentioned to me, that he ſuppoſed ſhe had got ſomething more than her own, I jumped over the counter, and followed her to the outſide of the door; I put my hand round her waiſt, and told her, I ſuppoſed ſhe had ſomething more than was her own, ſhe ſaid no, ſhe believed ſhe had not; I told her ſhe muſt go back along with me, and I kept my hands on ſomething under her cloak, that appeared like theſe handkerchiefs; I kept her by me, and in crowding her up to the door, in ſhoving her up the ſtep, my hands was from her, and theſe handkerchiefs fell from her; this one was that which I ſaw fall from her, and theſe were two parcels that fell from her, but I did not ſee them, theſe two parcels lay on the ſtep.

Were they done up in one paper, or were they ſeparate pieces of handkerchiefs?——There were three ſeparate quantities, I know this in my right hand, and by the mark C. M. I cannot ſpeak poſitively to that mark; that one that dropt from her, was the one I had in my hand; the value of it is 5s. 10d. the value of the other that is not marked, is 5s. 6d. I took her up ſtairs, and aſked her if ſhe had any thing more, but ſhe had not.

There is nothing particular in theſe handkerchiefs, are not they ſold in other ſhops in London?——Yes.

Do you know whether that man ſold her any ſuch?——No.

Priſoner. That piece of handkerchiefs is not the piece, that he ſhewed to the Juſtice, that he told the Juſtice he took from me.

Witneſs. I put a private mark upon it at Sir Sampſon's, I did not keep it ſeparate, becauſe there was only that one mark, and I knew the mark.

JOSEPH SYMONDS ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Capps, the priſoner came in, and deſired to ſee ſome handkerchiefs, he laid ſome handkerchiefs down upon the counter, and deſired me to ſerve them; ſhe aſked for ſome about one or two and twenty-pence, but ſhe ſaid ſhe was not fixed to price, and I ſhewed her ſome handkerchiefs; ſhe made choice of a couple, of different patterns, I think they were red and white, I cut them off, ſhe gave me two and twenty-pence a piece; I aſked her if there was any thing elſe wanting, and ſhe ſaid ſhe wanted ſome flannel; I cut her a quarter of a yard of flannel, ſhe deſired me to wrap them up, and I deſired her to go to my maſter for change, ſhe ſeemed in a very great hurry to get the change; and as ſhe was going out, I ſaw her holding her hands like under her apron, and I thought I miſſed the handkerchiefs, and I went to look, and I miſſed two parcels, and the other witneſs went after her, and I ſaw him bring her in, and I ſaw the handkerchiefs drop by the door, I cannot be ſure how many pieces I ſaw drop.

Did you take them up?——No, I ſaw them, and I marked them afterwards.

The priſoner called two witneſſes to her character.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing, but not privately.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

354. BENJAMIN MOORE and JOHN BROWN were indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 29th day of January laſt, one deal box, value 1s. two worſted curtains, value 2s. one worſted head-piece, value 1s. and three vallances, value 1d. the property of Peter Shellander.

JOHN ORANGE ſworn.

I was going to a fire, which had broke out at Sir William Warren's Square, in Wapping, and going down the lane, I met the two priſoners with theſe things.

(The things depoſed to.)

PRISONER BROWN's DEFENCE.

I found this box in the ſtreet, and I deſired this lad to aſſiſt me, I am a Ruſſian.

BENJAMIN MOORE, NOT GUILTY.

JOHN BROWN, GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Court to Brown. If you can get any means of returning to your own country, and any ſecurity that you will return, I will apply to his Majeſty for a pardon on thoſe terms.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

355. ANN AGUS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 15th day of January laſt, two linen ſhirts, value 2s. one linen ſhift, value 18d. two check aprons, value 2s. and one linen table cloth, value 4d. the property of John Kinſlow.

JOHN KINSLOW ſworn.

I met the priſoner coming out of my houſe, with ſome things, about five in the afternoon, I did not know her before; I left the door open, there are ſeveral lodgers beſides myſelf; I followed her, and ſaw her going down Hedge Lane, I came up to her, I ſaid nothing to her, but I let her walk on before me, her apron was covered over with her cloak, I aſked her what ſhe had, ſhe ſaid nothing belonging to me; ſhe ſaid ſhe would make a great noiſe, if I would not let her go, and ſhe tried to throw the things out of her apron, and I caught them before they came to the ground, all but a ſhift, the things are mine.

Priſoner. I know nothing of it.

GUILTY.

Fined 6d. and impriſoned ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice GOULD.

---

356. ELIZABETH wife of WILLIAM JOHNSON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 10th day of February, two linen ſhirts, value 4s. and one cotton gown, value 10s. the property of Mary Plunket, widow.

GUILTY.

Fined 6d. and impriſoned three months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

357. CHRISTOPHER WORLAND was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 1ſt day of February, one iron hammer with a wooden handle, value 12d. one iron rake with a wooden handle, value 12d. and one iron ſpike bit, with a wooden handle, value 2d. the property of the Governor and Company of the New River, brought from Chadwell and Hanwell to London; and one iron ſaw, with a wooden handle, value 2d. the property of William Stevenſon.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice GOULD.

358. THOMAS

358. THOMAS WEBB was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 17th of February, one cotton gown, value 3s. one table cloth, value 1s. and one ſilk handkerchief, value 1s. the property of John Harriſon.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice GOULD.

---

359. ELIZABETH LEE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 4th of January laſt, thirty gallons of wine, called red port, value 10l. twelve gallons of other wine, called Malmſey Madeira, value 12l. three gallons of white port, value 20s. three gallons of Malmſey Madeira, value 40s. three gallons of claret, value 40s. three gallons of raiſin wine, value 6s. three gallons of orange wine, value 6s. three gallons of brandy, value 36s. three gallons of rum, value 36s. three gallons of geneva, value 20s. one gallon of arrack, value 16s. four hundred and twenty-four glaſs bottles, value 3l. 10s. one hundred weight of tallow candles, value 50s. two linen ſtocks, value 4s. two pair of ſtockings, value 5s. one gold ring, with garnets ſet therein, value 10s. and two crown pieces, value 10s. the property of Thomas King, Eſq.

THOMAS KING, Eſq; ſworn.

I live at Cutlers Hall, in the city of London, I have a houſe in the country, the priſoner was my cook, I believe ſhe lived with me about ten months, my family were in the country almoſt all the time, my houſe was painting in town, therefore I generally ſlept in the country; but one night that I ſlept in town, a few days before Chriſtmas, and about three in the morning, an attempt was made at my chamber door, I called out to the priſoner at the bar, not knowing at that time, that I had any other perſon in the houſe, but the priſoner, the other maid ſervant, and a boy; no anſwer was given, but a ſecond attempt was made upon my door in about ten minutes, but the drop bolt was down, and therefore they could not come in; Mrs. King came to town a day or two after, I told her the caſe, and deſired her to ſend a nurſe, which we have in the family, to ſleep in town during the holidays; I went out of town the day before Chriſtmas day, and returned after the holidays, when I came to town again, the priſoner not being in the way, to fetch my clothes as uſual to dreſs, I went up to fetch my clothes, and I found ſuits of clothes that I had not worn above two or three times, very dirty, and ſummer waiſtcoats that were laid by clean, I found very dirty; I know they had been laid by; when I came down ſtairs, I ſpoke to the ſervant boy William Griffiths, who had lived with me four years, and told him that ſome perſon or other had worn my clothes; the boy gave me ſome information about this robbery, that two men had ſlept in my houſe almoſt every Saturday and Sunday night, from the time the houſe was painting, and that one of them wore my clothes of a Sunday, and that the name of one was George Bacon.

What time was the houſe painted?—The latter end of May; that the other of the name of Brand, ſlept there very often. I examined the priſoner, and the other maid, and the ſervant boy altogether; I examined the boy in the preſence of the priſoner and the other ſervant, the priſoner denied in the preſence of the boy, that ſhe ever had been down in my cellar, ſhe denied the whole of it, the other ſervant who is the accomplice, ſhe denied it; when William Griffiths the boy had informed me of the ſtealing my wine, and taking my clothes, the priſoner then confeſſed; I found bottles hid in the copper hole and about the kitchen.

Had you before this examination held out any offer of any ſort or kind to her?—No, neither then, nor at any time ſince; ſhe ſaid ſhe had taken none of my wine, only Mrs. King's, ſhe had been at her cellar, as ſhe had left the key in her door, I then ſent for a conſtable, but I did not ſearch her boxes, I believe it was three or four hours after, when the conſtable came and ſearched, but I was preſent, and we found a few bottles of Liſbon; in her room I found few piſtol balls, there were found in the drawers two pounds of beef ſtakes, and ſome veal, and a lump of butter, concealed in a gown.

When you examined your cellar, what quantity of wine did you find you had loſt?—Upon looking into the cellar, I found I had loſt a great quantity of wine; I ſent for this Bacon, who was told the family were out of town; and when he came, the priſoner was preſent part of the time, in the preſence of the priſoner, George Bacon acknowledged coming there of a Saturday and Sunday, from the time the houſe was painted, to the Saturday preceding; that they had drank large quantities of wine ſometimes, he ſaid, there were three bottles and a decanter on the table, and ſometimes more, according to the company they had; upon this examination, not knowing that I had loſt any thing but a few dozens of wine, I diſcharged her that night.

What quantity of wine had you loſt?—I cannot tell exactly, I believe I can ſwear to twenty dozen, and if I was to double that number, I ſhould not exceed the truth, they have acknowledged to twenty dozen; I kept the other ſervant in the houſe, thinking I ſhould get ſomething from her the next day; on the day before the Twelfth day, between the time of her being diſcharged, I loſt a gold ring, and the things mentioned in the indictment; they were found at the father's of the priſoner, in Flying Horſe-yard, Hackney; I never ſearched till three or four days, or five or ſix days.

Can you identify theſe candles at all?—It is impoſſible.

Whoſe houſe is this at hackney?—The father of the priſoners, I ſuppoſe there were about fifty pounds weight of candles hid in a cellar, they were office candles, and of different ſorts, they were in a box, in a little place adjoining to the houſe, with bricks over them, I found the garnet ring mentioned in the indictment; I was preſent I examined it, but I cannot ſwear to it, only they acknowledged it, and I believe it to be my property. I found this glove, that I cannot ſwear to, I believe it is mine, it was a ſilk glove, in a cloſet; and in a box up ſtairs I found about twenty or thirty pounds weight of the ſame kind of candles hid in a cloſet; I went up ſtairs with the officer, and in the cloſet, I found ſeveral bottles with my mark upon them with wine; the only thing I can ſwear to.

(The bottles produced.)

Is that your mark?——No, it was in my cellar, it was a preſent, and I can ſwear to this bottle, it has the mark of Mrs. King.

What liquors are there?——There is Hollands gin, and Malmſey Madeira.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. Firſt as to this little bottle, what is the mark?—The mark, is Smith, Leadenhall-ſtreet, No. 91, that is the mark on the ſeal; that very pint, ſhe acknowledged in my preſence before the Magiſtrate, ſhe took out of my cellar, and this pint was taken out of her father's houſe.

Did you ever hear from the priſoner that that was her father's houſe?——No.

Then you only know it from the information of others?——No.

Do you know what liquor this is?—No, I can ſwear to the cork.

Did you ever make her any promiſes or threats, before ſhe went before the Magiſtrate?——Never, I promiſed the other ſervant after this was diſcharged.

JOHN IMPEY ſworn.

In conſequence of an information that Mr. King received from the boy, we ſearched the houſe, at Cutler's-hall, that was the 5th of January; I believe we found ſome wine in the maid's kitchen in one of the cupboards; in the evening we took up George Bacon, and when we came to Cutlers-hall, we had the maids preſent, and he then confeſſed in the preſence of the maids; I examined the two maids where they had the wine from, and Sarah Pickford ſaid, that ſhe did not medle with it;

Mr.

Mr. King ſaid, it muſt have come out of his cellar, the priſoner ſaid, it did not, for that ſhe had taken the wine from her miſtreſs's cellar, that her miſtreſs had left the key either in the parlour or up ſtairs in her room, I forget which; then ſhe confeſſed afterwards to me, that ſhe had taken out of Mr. King's bureau, whilſt he was having his hair dreſſed, the key of his cellar; and that ſhe had at different times, taken wine out of that cellar, and I think ſhe ſaid, ſome brandy or rum, but I cannot tell which; when we came before the ſitting Alderman, he was aſked with reſpect to the pint of wine that was produced juſt now.

Mr. Garrow. Was this examination taken in writing?——It was not, Sir, ſhe acknowledged that ſhe had taken the pint of wine now produced, out of her miſtreſs's cellar.

The priſoner made no defence, and called no witneſſes.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Jury. Is the other ſervant in the ſervice of the proſecutor now?—No, they have been both in the country ever ſince.

---

360. JOSEPH PARTRIDGE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 15th day of January laſt, two pair of ſilk ſtockings, value 10s. the property of Walter Engliſh.

WALTER ENGLISH ſworn.

I am a hoſier, in the Strand, the corner of Catherine-ſtreet; on the 15th of January laſt, in the morning, I was in my parlour reading the newſpaper, about ten in the morning, my two ſons were in the ſhop, and no ſervant there; one of them came running in to call me, and I ſtept into the ſhop, and in the further end of the ſhop, I was aſtoniſhed when I found this young man the priſoner, where nobody ſhould have been; where ſome ſilk ſtockings were laying, he had come in as a purchaſer, it was in the middle part of the ſhop, on the out-ſide of the counter; he told me he wanted a ſilk waiſtcoat piece, which he pointed to, I ſaw by his confuſion that ſomething was not right; he had a great coat buttoned, and I ſaw him drop, from under his coat, theſe ſtockings, the ſhopman came in and took them up.

(Depoſed to.)

James Grant the ſhopman confirmed the above account.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I went into this ſhop to buy a waiſtcoat, and there were two children at play, and they told me to go forwards, which I did, and I was going towards Mr. Engliſh, and in returning, I ſtept my foot on two pair of ſtockings and inſtantly Mr. Engliſh accuſed me of taking them.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

361. MARY SKIDDLE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 10th day of February laſt, one linen ſheet, value 4s. 10d. the property of William James.

The conſtable took the ſheet from under her ſtays.

GUILTY.

To be fined 1s. and impriſoned fourteen days in Newgate.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

362. SARAH SPARKES was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 14th day of February, one cloth coat, value 3s. one cloth cloth waiſtcoat, value 2s. the property of Daniel Williams.

The priſoner was taken with the things upon her.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped, and confined twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

363. RACHAEL HUGHES was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 3d day of February, one flannel petticoat, value 1s. two towels, value 6d. one child's linen cloth, value 3d. one flannel petticoat, value 6d. two linen ſhirts, value 1s. one child's cap, value 2d. one pair of ſtockings, value 6d. one trunk, value 3d. one pair of metal buckles, value 1d. the property of Iſaac Hyam.

ISAAC HYAM ſworn.

I am a merchant, No. 6, Swan-yard, I deal in all ſorts; on the 8th of February, I loſt a great many things, and I found ſome of my property on my ſervant maid, and before the conſtable ſhe owned every thing; my child's ſhirts were found round her waiſt, the towels were ſewed under her petticoat; I was going to diſcharge her, I told her I ſhould take her up.

Priſoner. He never paid me any wages.

Proſecutor. When I took her up, I gave her twelve ſhillings before the conſtable, her wages were thirty ſhillings.

EDWARD HOLLS ſworn.

I am the conſtable, ſome of the things I produce were found on the priſoner, I have had them ever ſince: Mr. Hyams aſked her to acknowledge the things he had loſt, and ſaid, if ſhe would, he would not proſecute her, and would give her a reward; the other things were found in her box.

Priſoner. I bought the petticoat before I came to his ſervice, and alſo the ſhift I had before, which is made out of ſome pieces of old cloth, and the ſtockings are my huſband's, there is his name on it, the letter H. and a figure of 4.

The Priſoner called Mr. W. Willoughby junior, of Higbbury Aſſembly Houſe, and three other witneſſes who gave her a good character.

GUILTY. 10d

To be confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

364. JAMES MACDONALD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 24th of January laſt, two pewter pots, value 18d. the property of Samuel Coals.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

365. LUKE ROGERS was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of John Abſolom, about the hour of ſeven in the night, on the 19th day of January laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, two ſarcenet hats, value 10s. and one black mode mask, value 3s. 6d. his property.

JOHN ABSOLOM ſworn.

I live at No. 8, James-ſtreet, Covent-Garden; I was out of town when the robbery was committed, and can only ſwear to the property.

JANE HUNT ſworn.

I am ſhopwoman to Mr. Abſolom, on the 19th of January laſt, about ſeven in the evening, I was ſitting to work in his back parlour, and heard his ſhop door open, I ſaw the priſoner come in and thruſt his hand through a pane of glaſs in the ſhew-glaſs, glaſs, it was dark: the ſhew glaſs is between the counter and the door; the door was on the latch, I ſaw through the glaſs of the parlour door; the ſhop door ſticks in wet weather, it is difficult to get it open; the glaſs caſe was hung next the door; he put his hand through the glaſs, and took a white ſarſnet hat, a pink ditto, and a black mode muff, the property of the proſecutor; ſome perſons ran out of the door, and called out, ſtop thief! I loſt ſight of him for five minutes, till he was brought back; he was about a minute in the ſhop at firſt.

Court. Are you ſure he is the perſon that was in the ſhop?——I did not ſee his face, but I ſaw part of his back and his arm, I ſaw his clothes were dark blue, he took the things with him out of the houſe; when he was brought back, I ſaw the things taken from under his arm.

Priſoner. What time before this happened, had any cuſtomers been in the ſhop?—I really cannot tell, there had been ſeveral that afternoon, it might be more than half an hour.

Did you or the proſecutor's ſiſter ſerve in the ſhop?—The proſecutor's ſiſter in general ſerves, but I cannot tell which ſerved then.

Court. How do you know the latch was faſt?——I am ſure I heard the latch go.

(The things produced and depoſed to.)

THOMAS BURTON ſworn.

I am a ſawyer, on the 19th of January laſt, between ſix and ſeven, coming from my work paſt the proſecutor's houſe, I heard the glaſs break, I ſaid to my mate, did you hear that glaſs break, he ſaid, no; I had hardly ſaid the words, when out came the priſoner, he took into Covent Garden Market, he was dreſſed in a bluiſh coat, and a light ſhag waiſtcoat; he ran as hard as he could, I ſaid to my mate, let us follow him, we purſued him immediately, we never loſt ſight of him, we took him in the market, I aſked him what buſineſs he had in the ſhop, he ſaid, he knew the people in the ſhop; I did not ſee what he had under his arm till he was taken back to the ſhop; then I ſaw he had two hats, a large one, and a ſmall one, and a black muff.

JOHN HILL ſworn.

Was with the laſt witneſs, and confirmed his account; is ſure as to the priſoner.

Thomas Carpmeal took him into cuſtody, and took poſſeſſion of the things.

Priſoner. The witneſs cannot be certain as to the latch of the door, therefore, I hope the Gentlemen of the Jury will conſider that circumſtance, as my life is in danger.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing, but not of the burglary.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

366. CHARLES PEYTON was indicted for feloniouſly returning from tranſportation, and being found at large on the 8th day of February, without any lawful cauſe, before the expiration of his term.

WILLIAM HERNE ſworn.

I know the priſoner, I took him on ſuſpicion of being a thief, on the 9th of this month, I found the priſoner in my maſter, Captain Powney's room, he was ſhut in; and on ſearching him, I found a knife belonging to my maſter, and I miſſed my hat; we took him to the watch-houſe.

DANIEL BUSHNELL ſworn.

I know the priſoner, his name is Charles Peyton; I am gaoler of Reading, he was my priſoner, I ſaw him condemned laſt March aſſizes, I brought him to London, and he was taken to Woolwich, in order to be tranſported.

(A certificate from the Clerk of the Aſſize of the Priſoner's conviction read by Thomas Shelton, Eſq; Clerk of the Arraigns.)

ROBERT HUTCHINS ſworn.

I am conſtable of the pariſh of St.

James's, Weſtminſter, I took the priſoner before Sir Sampſon Wright.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I have only to ſay, I had very hard uſage on board the hulk; but I did not mean to remain in England, I had been at ſea ſeven years.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

367. JAMES LAPIER, otherwiſe CHURCH (aged thirteen) and JOHN FARMER (aged twelve) were indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of William James, about the hour of ſeven in the night, on the 22d day of January laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, one cloth coat, value 5s. one linen waiſtcoat, value 2s. three linen handkerchiefs, value 3s. one linen apron, value 1s. one pair of calimanco breeches, value 3s. two pieces of cloth, value 10s. two ſhirts, value 5s. one pair of ſheets, value 5s. three table cloths, value 6s. two handkerchiefs, value 2s. three caps, value 3s. three linen ſtocks, value 3s. two pieces of linen cloth, value 10s. and one flannel petticoat, value 1s. the property of the ſaid William James.

WILLIAM JAMES ſworn.

I live in Shoreditch, I am a plumber and glazier, my houſe was broke open on the 22d day of January, about ſeven in the evening, I was out; when I returned at half paſt ſeven, they were all buſy with the alarm, and the things were miſſed that are here; I never ſaw the two priſoners before I ſaw them at the office.

SARAH JAMES ſworn.

On the 22d of January laſt, a ſquare of glaſs was cut out of my window, and ſomebody had by that means taken out a pin, it was broke, and joined, and covered with putty, the window belonged to the bottom floor, I went to light a candle at the next neighbour's, I double locked the door, and put the key in my pocket, I was not gone more than fifteen minues, the youngeſt priſoner Lapier, was taken up in about a quarter of an hour, the other was taken on the Tueſday: ſome of my things were found in Bethnal-green; I never ſaw theſe two boys, the priſoners, till I ſaw them at the office.

WALTER WHITER ſworn.

On the 22d of January, coming out of my houſe, which is about a hundred and fifty yards from the proſecutor's; I ſaw two boys with two bundles, and I ſaid, theſe bundles do not belong to you, they made no anſwer but went on; I ſaid, you have ſtole thoſe things, one of them dropped the bundle at my feet, and ran away, I purſued him twenty yards, and cried ſtop thief, Mr. Cox, a neighbour, purſued the ſecond boy, Lapier, and brought him to my houſe; I had the other in my eye, I never ſaw Lapier before; in a quarter of an hour the proſecutor's wife came to my houſe, I untied one of the bundles, and ſhe owned the things, the priſoner was taken into cuſtody; on the Tueſday, at the office the other boy was brought in, I could not ſwear to him.

JOSEPH COX ſworn.

I took Lapier, near ſeven o'clock, on the 22d of laſt month, I heard the laſt witneſs cry ſtop thief, he has thrown one of the bundles at my feet, and I took him; I ſaw no other perſon running, and in about a quarter of an hour the proſecutor's wife came and deſcribed the major part of the things before ſhe ſaw them, only an apron which did not belong to her.

HENRY BANFORD ſworn.

I am a conſtable of St. Leonard's, Shoreditch, I was ſent for on the 22d of January, at paſt ſeven, to take Lapier and the bundle, Mrs. James ſaw the contents, I have have had them ever ſince; the other priſoner was taken on the Tueſday following.

(The things produced and depoſed to.)

Court to Mrs. James, Are theſe ſome of the things that were kept in your room?—Yes, they were in the drawers, and ſome on the lines, there were no locks on the drawers.

PRISONER LAPIER's DEFENCE.

I am as innocent as the child unborn.

JAMES LAPIER otherwiſe CHURCH, } GUILTY Death.

JOHN FARMER, NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice GOULD.

---

368. MICHAEL JOHNSON otherwiſe M'MAHON was indicted for falſly and feloniouſly uttering as true, on the 15th day of Auguſt laſt, a certain falſe will and teſtament, with a certain mark thereto ſubſcribed, purporting to be the mark of Alexander Black, and to be the laſt will and teſtament of Alexander Black, and to have been ſigned, ſealed, publiſhed and declared by the ſaid Alexander Black, as and for his laſt will and teſtament, well knowing the ſame to be falſe, forged, and counterfeited, with intention to defraud John Smith.

A ſecond count for uttering the ſame with intent to defraud divers perſons.

(Mr. Silveſter opened the Caſe.)

Mr. Peatt, Council for the Priſoner.

THOMAS FLETCHER ſworn.

I am clerk in the Prerogative-office, I have a will of Alexander Black's, dated the 3d of March, 1783, the probate is revoked, here is a decree of the Court that revokes it, it was revoked the third ſeſſion of Hillary term, the 7th of February, 1785.

Did you take it from the record yourſelf?—I had it from Mr. Watſon the record keeper.

Mr. Peatt, priſoner's council. I ſubmit Mr. Watſon ought to be here.

Court. Is that book in your immediate poſſeſſion?—Yes.

Is that the original decree?—Yes.

Who wrote it into that book?—The regiſter.

JOHN TORRIANO ſworn.

I am a proctor, the jurata is of my hand writing; it was ſworn before Dr. Ducarell.

Is that Dr. Ducarell's hand writing?—Yes, I have freqently ſeen him write.

Who applied to you to take out probate?—I was applied to by the executor of the will, his name is Michael Johnſon.

Do you know that man?—No, I cannot ſay I do, the application was made in Auguſt laſt.

Mr. Peatt. A perſon applied to you by that name, if I underſtand you right?—Yes, Sir.

WILLIAM WITHEY ſworn.

I am an attorney, one James Lacy left an adminiſtration with me, purporting to be the adminiſtration of one Alexander Black, a ſeaman of the Barwell Eaſt Indiaman, I ſent it to the India Houſe, and the anſwer was, that there were between twenty and thirty pounds due. Johnſon the priſoner came to me, and ſaid he came to execute a power of attorney; I think he ſaid he was executor; however, he came to me for that purpoſe, and I filled up a power of attorney. It occurred to me I had ſeen his name before, and I ſaid to him, Johnſon, I think I have ſeen your name as executor to another will; how came you by theſe wills? and he ſaid, I kept a publick houſe at Goſport, and was a waterman, and the ſeamen uſed to come to my houſe and get into debt, and left me their wills and powers. I thought this ſo reaſonable I filled up the will and power, and he ſigned it in my preſence, he ſigned his name William Johnſon; I am ſure the written part was read over to him, but I do not know that the printed part was. I went to the India-

Houſe

House to Mr. Burgeſs, and in coming back within the courſe of a very few minutes, Johnſon came to my houſe, I then told him there was ſome ſuſpicion that the will was not a fair one, and I took him backwards and then aſked him the queſtion again, how he came by the will? he repeated nearly the ſame words as before; I ſaid he muſt go with me to the India Houſe, he ſaid he was very willing, and in conſequence of that he went with me; the ſolicitor for the India Company came into the office and examined him as to the execution of the will and the witneſſes; he ſaid the will was executed at his houſe at Goſport, that the man had got into his debt and had given it to him, and I think he ſaid the witneſſes were watermen, I believe he ſaid one of them plied the ferry; the reſult was, there was nothing at that time that induced Mr. Sill to make any further charge, and the man was let go; I am ſure that was the man.

Mr. Peatt. You read the written part of that inſtrument to him?—Yes.

Did the priſoner read the printed part?—No, I believe he did not, I am ſure he did not, by the time.

He went very quietly with you all the way?—Not all the way; he went away from the houſe with me very ready.

Do you know the man from any thing but his general appearance?—I am ſure I am not miſtaken, I rather think I ſaw him once before; I ſaw him ſeveral times ſince.

Court. You ſay James Lacy left adminiſtration; what do you mean?——I ſhould have ſaid a probate, I believe this to be the probate, but I cannot poſitively ſwear to it.

Court. Why do you believe it?—From the indorſement, and from the probate itſelf.

Do you know whoſe hand that is upon the indorſement?—No, I do not; I ſent my clerk with the probate to the India Houſe; there is no diſtinguiſhing mark by which I can ſwear to it with certainty.

THOMAS SCAM ſworn.

I made a tender of the probate at the India Houſe, I left it in the care of Mr. Burgeſs.

YNYR BURGES ſworn.

I am pay-maſter at the India Houſe, this is the probate with the will annexed that was brought to me by Thomas Scam on the firſt of October, I put my initials on the back of the ſeal; Scam produced a power of attorney with the name of William Johnſon to me; I had ſome doubt about paying the money to Mr. Scam, and I deſired him to go and tell his maſter I would be glad to ſpeak to him; Mr. Withey came himſelf a ſhort time after, but I did not ſee the priſoner till he was examined before the Juſtice, and the queſtion that was put to him, how Black came to make his mark to the will; and he ſaid the will was executed at Portſmouth, I think at the New Dublin; and he ſaid Black had been in a quarrel ſome few days before and cut his thumb; and therefore he had made his mark; I had not ſeen, as I know of, the priſoner before that time; he ſaid that he lodged at that time at the ſign of the Princeſs Royal.

Mr. Peatt. Did Johnſon ſay any thing to you at the time about hurting his thumb?—He ſaid, that a few days before the executing that will, he cut his thumb.

I preſume you always put your initials in the ſame manner?——It has not been in my poſſeſſion ever ſince, but I have not the leaſt doubt of it; it was in my poſſeſſion till I parted with it to Mr. Chetham.

Court to Mr. Torriano. Did any body come with the perſon that came for that probate?——I cannot recollect, it is half a year ago.

(The power of attorney read.)

Mr. Peatt. I would not encroach upon the time of the Court; but I think it my duty, in a caſe of life, to ſubmit every objection that may occur in favour of the priſoner. My Lord, I doubt whether the entry in that book can be received in evidence as an authentic record of the court: it may be a copy, but in all events the regiſter ought to be here. He is the proper officer to prove his own act; and might have been here with as little inconvenience as the gentleman who produces it. Will your Lordſhip permit the regiſter's hand writing to be proved, when he himſelf might have been here? as to the will nothing can be more clear than this; it ought to be produced by the proper officer, whoſe province it is to take charge of ſuch inſtruments; and to exhibit them when legally called for. Your Lordſhip knows, that in all caſes of this kind, the beſt teſtimony ſhould be given which the nature of the thing is capable of. The proper officer might have been here as well as the parties that are. I ſubmit it is not the beſt evidence that might be given to this Court; and therefore it ought to be rejected.

Mr. Silveſter. I ſubmit it is written upon the will itſelf; it would be very inconvenient if the officers themſelves were to be obliged to attend.

Mr. Peatt. My objections are theſe? the officer in whoſe cuſtody the will was, might have been here with as much eaſe as the gentleman who produces it, and the decree ought certainly to be proved by the regiſter.

Court. As to the book, there is not a colour of objection to it, becauſe that is a record of the Court, and is proved as the original record of the Court, it is the beſt evidence; with reſpect to the other objection, if there was no evidence to authenticate that to be the preciſe inſtrument which Johnſon brought, it would give weight to your objection.

(The will read and the decree of the Court read.)

JOHN BUTLER ſworn.

I am chief clerk in the pay office in the India Houſe; on the 2d of October, I believe Mr. Withey brought the priſoner to the pay office, the pay maſter not being in the way, we went down to his houſe, and returned with the priſoner; I ſhewed the priſoner the letter of attorney, and aſked him if he was the executor, and if that was his hand writing.

Did you ſhew him the letter of attorney and the adminiſtration?——I did not ſhew him the adminiſtration, only the power of attorney; I then aſked him how long he had known the deceaſed, he ſaid about ſix years; then I aſked him if he had heard the deceaſed ſay, he had any family or relations; he ſaid, no; I then aſked him the age of the deceaſed; he ſaid 26; he ſaid the deceaſed was indebted to him about ten pounds; I aſked him where the will was made; he ſaid, at the Princeſs Royal at Goſport, which houſe he, the priſoner, kept; I then aſked him who the witneſſes were, and he told me they lived at Goſport; they were watermen; I ſent down to Portſmouth that night, but no ſuch perſons could be found; he ſaid the deceaſed had hurt his thumb, and that was the reaſon of his making his mark to the will.

JOHN GRAVER ſworn.

I am boatſwain's mate on board the Barwell, I knew the deceaſed very well; his name was Alexander Black, he came on board at Deptford; I cannot juſtly ſay when it was; I think it was in the month of November 1782; we proceeded after that down the river to Portſmouth; on the 11th of March in the year 1783, we ſailed on our voyage from Portſmouth; he made his will before he ſailed, I think it was in the month of December 1782; I filled up his will, and ſubſcribed my name as witneſs to it.

Now look at that? (The true will ſhewn him)——Yes, I can ſwear to Alexander Black's hand, and likewiſe my own; I ſaw him ſign and execute it; we ſailed the 11th of March 1783, on our voyage to Bengal; he never was on ſhore while the ſhip remained at Portſmouth; he never met with any accident till he was unfortunately drowned at Calcutta.

What do you call accident?—No hurt or bruiſes, he had not been quarrelling or fighting, he was not ſo given, he had the uſe of his hand all the time perfectly well, and particularly at Portſmouth, I was his meſſmate there, he kept a journal there; I am poſitive during the time he was at Portſmouth, he never was on ſhore, nor ever hurt his thumb there.

Mr. Pratt. Did you never ſee a man's hand ſprained, without any appearance of hurt?—He never mentioned it.

It was only from his outward appearance then? is it in the power of a man with a hurt in his thumb, to do his duty in many reſpects or not?—Yes.

Mr. Silveſter. What is his real name?——He ſaid his father's name was John Smith, and he changed his name on account of running away from a man of war.

(The real will of Alexander Black read, atteſted by Thomas Graver, in which he makes his father, John Smith, in the pariſh of Cutts, in North Britain, his executor.)

Was any other man of the name of Black on board?—No, not to my knowledge.

JOHN FORTUNE, ſworn.

Did you know his father?—Yes, before he went this laſt voyage, I was at his father's with him.

Where did the father live?—Within two miles of Cooper Fife, in Fifeſhire.

Do you know whether it was in the pariſh of Cutts?——I do not know the name of the pariſh, I was born within nine miles of the place myſelf.

Did Black treat him as his father?——Yes, he came home and went down and ſtaid there.

Do you know what his father's Chriſtian name was?——John, I believe it was.

Mr. Pratt. My Lord I ſubmit an objection to the indictment, I underſtand it is charged to be a forgery of the laſt will and teſtament of Alexander Black; your Lordſhip has it in evidence, that this man's real name was Smith, if that is the caſe, and the indictment ſtates it in the manner I have before recited, I ſubmit that is a defect, and that there ought to be a ſtating it to be a forgery of the will of Smith, by the name of Black; will your Lordſhip have the goodneſs to let the indictment be read.

(Part of the indictment read.)

Court. This man is known by the name of Alexander Black, and the word purporting deſcribes what the inſtrument imports to be; there was a queſtion ſome years ago, about the word purporting, and the Judges held it, that the word purporting deſcribes what the inſtrument imports to be.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

My Lord, Alexander Black made the will to me in Goſport, and the two witneſſes that were preſent, and ſigned the will at that time, are out of the way at preſent, I thought to have put off my trial till next ſeſſions, as they are not here, I can ſay nothing.

Mr. Pratt. I have ſome witneſſes to his character.

(The two wills, the probate, and the power of attorney, handed to the Jury.)

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

369. JOHN LUCAS, RICHARD SUMMERS otherwiſe SMITH, and JOHN WATERS were indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Thomas Knott, about the hour of three in the night, on the 10th day of January laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, three hundred yards of ſilk lace, value 30l. three hundred yards of other ſilk lace, value 30l. five hundred yards of thread lace, value 25l. one hundred yards of ſilk mode, value 5l. one hundred yards of ſilk ribbon, value 5l. forty-eight pair of ſtockings, value 9l. and ſixty pair of leather gloves, value 3l. his property:

And

And ANN GREEN, and ANN SILCOCK were indicted for that they, well knowing the ſaid John Lucas, and Richard Summers, otherwiſe Smith, had done and committed the ſaid robbery, afterwards with force and arms, feloniouſly did receive, harbour, comfort, and maintain the ſaid John Lucas, and Richard Summers, otherwiſe Smith, well knowing them to have done and committed the ſaid robbery.

DAVID WILLIAMS ſworn.

I am ſhopman to Mr. Knott, I ſecured the doors and windows of his houſe before I went to bed, I am ſure they were all faſt, when I got up in the morning, I came into the kitchen, which is upon the one pair of ſtairs, and I found the window wide open; I went into the ſhop, and I found one of the ſhutters was taken down; the doors into the yard were open, I had ſeen them faſt the night before, and the lace boxes were all on the counter, and emptied, and the modes were ſtripped from the ſhelves, and I found theſe two iron crows, and a ſmall gimblet; I cannot aſcertain the value of the property, they were worth ſix or ſeven hundred pounds; there was a boy and a maid in the houſe beſides me.

ELIZABETH HOWELL ſworn.

I was ſervant to Mr. Knott, I remember faſtening the kitchen windows, at three in the morning, for I ſat up for a gentleman.

MOSES EMANUEL ſworn.

I know the priſoners, Lucas and Waters, I ſaw them laſt Tueſday morning was ſix weeks; between the 10th and the 11th, I went from my houſe between eight and nine in the morning, I went paſt the houſe of Mr. Lucas, his wife was ſtanding at the door, ſhe ſaid Emanuel you muſt ſtay here, I aſked her for what, ſhe ſaid for a quantity of lace and ribbon, I went in, nobody was there but two women and two men, I aſked her to look at the goods, ſhe could not find the key, ſhe ſaid they have taken all the goods along with them, I aſked what was become of her huſband, ſhe ſaid he was gone to one Mr. Levy, with gauze, and ſtockings, and gloves, and mode; the priſoner Waters came afterwards, with Mr. Levy to Lucas's houſe; Mr. Waters aſked what buſineſs I had there, he ſaid here is nothing for you; I ſaid I ſhall not go, I ſhall ſee what goes forwards, then Mr. Waters ſaid you may have the goods if you will; and Mr. Waters begged me to go about my buſineſs, and I went away: Mr. and Mrs. Levy brought the goods to my houſe to be meaſured, and I took an account of them, there was five hundred and ſixty-eight yards of white lace, and three hundred and ſixty-three of black; they were brought to my houſe about an hour afterwards, the ſame day.

Court. Had you any part of thoſe goods for yourſelf?——No, Mr. Levy promiſed I ſhould have half the profit, but I gave no money.

SARAH EMANUEL ſworn.

I went in January laſt, by my huſband's directions, to Moſes Levy's houſe, he was at the ale-houſe; I went to Soho with Mr. Waters, with three bundles; at that time there was Moſes Levy, his wife, Mr. Waters, Mr. Lucas, and Dick, he went by the name of Dick; they had a quantity of ribbon in a pillow caſe, in Mr. Levy's houſe; there was a bundle with lace tied up on the round tea table, when the lace was untied, Waters aſked me if I would look at it, I did, I told Mr. Levy, as the goods is in your houſe, I will give the preference: when I had looked at them, Mr. Levy aſked Waters, what do you aſk a yard, ſays he, I will have three ſhillings and ſix-pence a yard; ſays Levy, it will not do at any ſuch price.

Jury. What is the value of them?—— I do not know, I cannot judge of the value of them; Levy ſaid he would not give above 1s. a yard; Summers, and Waters, and one Oſborne ſaid, we will not take any ſuch money; then they tied up the lace, and opened the pillow caſe with the ribbon, in order to bargain for the ribbon; when it was opened, it was laid on the table; when it it was there, they aſked three ſhillings and ſix-pence per dozen.

How many?—Lucas, Waters, and Dick, Levy ſaid I cannot give ſuch a price; ſays Waters, let him have them for two ſhillings and three-pence, then they were meaſured, Levy meaſured them by his drawers, and Levy paid ſix pounds nineteen ſhillings for the ribbon, he laid it on the table, and Waters took it up.

Court. Did he keep the money?—Yes, he kept it all, Waters went to the door, and ſaid there ſhall be no nabbing works going forwards here, for fear of giving information to Sir Sampſon; then they ſaid take the whole, and Waters aſked fifty guineas for the whole lump of lace; Moſes Levy ſaid I will give you thirty guineas, Oſborne ſaid, it ſhall never go for that, if you will not give forty guineas, you ſhall never have it; Lucas took it from the table and went to the ſtair-caſe with it, Waters ſaid you ſhall have it for forty guineas, it was all agreed upon, and you ſhall have it; Levy pulled out thirty-nine guineas, and his wife gave him one guinea; Waters took the money up, he ſaid it came from near Covent Garden.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. What are you?—A clothes dealer, I buy things in the ſtreets.

What are the Levy's?——I cannot tell, we are not intimate.

Court. How ſoon were the priſoners taken up after this?—About a day.

Mr. Garrow. At the ſecond examination, did you ſay any thing of this tranſaction?—Yes.

At the ſecond examination?—I cannot tell whether it was the ſecond or the third.

Were not you and your huſband to have half the profit?——Yes, but after we knew how the lace was got, I did not wiſh to have half the profit.

Court. Did not Mrs. Levy bilk you?—I do not underſtand that.

Mr. Garrow. Did not ſhe give you the bag?—I do not underſtand you.

You ſaid you were to have half the profits?——Yes.

Did not you or your huſband ſtipulate, that you ſhould have half the profits?——Yes, after they were bought.

Then after you knew that they were ſtolen goods, you agreed to take half profits?——Yes.

What was the value of the laces?—I do not know.

I aſk you whether you do not know that an hundred guineas was conſiderably ſhort of the value of them?—No, I do not know any thing of the value.

Mr. Keys, another of Priſoners Counſel. What did you ſwear before Sir Sampſon?—I ſaid what I ſay now.

Was not all you ſaid reſpecting Waters, that he received the forty guineas?—Yes.

But did not you ſay that you did not know for what?——I do not know that I did, or did not, I cannot ſwear.

MOSES LEVY ſworn.

On the 11th of January, in the morning, between eight and nine, the three priſoners at the bar, and another with them, called on me, they aſked me if I would buy ſome lace and ribbon, I ſaid yes, and Waters was to go with my wife to bring them; they ſaid if my wife would go to fetch them; ſhe went with him, and came back about eleven, and they brought a quantity of lace and ribbons, and the gentleman aſked me to buy them; the man that ſpoke moſt, is he that is not taken; one of them ſaid to another, you will go with Mrs. Levy, the key lays in ſuch a place, and you can get it.

Court. Did Summers ſay any thing?—I do not know that he ſpoke much; I bought the ribbons of them, they contained ſixty dozen and ſome odd yards, at I believe much about two ſhillings and three-pence a dozen.

Court. Who agreed with you?—Sometimes one, ſometimes the other; Summers aſked two ſhillings a dozen, and I agreed to give two ſhillings a dozen, the other two cried out they would not take two ſhillings, they would have three ſhillings, I ſaid I would give them no more than two and three.

three-pence, and they agreed to take it, and I paid them ſix pounds ſeventeen ſhillings, or ſix pounds nineteen ſhillings, I do not know which; then they opened the laces, and asked me one hundred and fifty guineas for them, I would not bid them any price for them, I ſaid I would give them a ſhilling a yard for them: at laſt they asked me to buy them in the lump, and then came down to fourſcore guineas, and then I bid them forty guineas, and they agreed to take the money.

Mr. Garrow. Where do you live?——In Bedford-ſtreet, Spital-fields.

What are you?——I am a dealer in tobacco, lace, and all things, nothing comes amiſs to me.

I ſuppoſe not; and it is my opinion, that you will deal in manufactured hemp, ſometime or other; when did you tell this to any body;——About a fortnight ago, or thereabouts.

When did you tell it to the Magiſtrate?—About three weeks after I had made the purchaſe.

How came you to go there?——I was advertiſed.

Did you leave Petticoat Lane upon it?—I did not abſcond, but I went into the country, I very often do.

What might be the value of theſe ſixty dozen, and odd yards?——Two ſhillings and three-pence a dozen, was the full value and a ſhilling a yard was more than the value of the lace, that I will ſwear.

What did you do with the things?——I ſold them to a man I owed ſome money to, a Mr. Wilſon, who lives near Baldock, he keeps markets and fairs, I ſold him thirty guineas worth of it, I loſt money by them.

JUDITH LEVY ſworn.

On the 11th of January laſt, between eight and nine, theſe three men came to our houſe, Lucas, Summers and Waters; I went with Waters, and brought it home, Mr. Emanuel and I looked at it, my huſband paid forty guineas for it.

Was it upon cards?—No, I did not ſee any, there were all ſorts of lace.

Mr. Garrow. Was any body to go partners in this?——Yes, Mr. Emanuel.

By ſome accident, in the hurry of buſineſs, you did not pay him half the profits?——No.

How ſoon did you come to town after this?——In a few days.

Where did you go?——Not a great way, I went to Richmond.

What took you there?——A party of pleaſure.

How ſoon did you know that you was advertiſed for a felony?——About a fortnight.

Was it not to ſave your own neck that that you went out of town?——I did not know I was in danger.

Did you ſay any thing about it to the Magiſtrate till you was advertiſed?—No.

THOMAS CARPMEAL ſworn.

I apprehended the priſoner on the 11th of laſt month, I apprehended Summers and Lucas in Hopkins's ſtreet, at Lucas's houſe; three of us went, when we firſt entered the fore parlour, there were two women there, and I obſerved ſomething burning, I took it off and obſerved it was cards, I have ſome of them here, there was a cutlaſs under the bed: in the back parlour there were ſome more cards burning, I have ſome of them; we waited till Lucas and Summers came in.

(The cards produced.)

Court to Proſecutor. Look at theſe cards?——This is the private mark of my ſhop, I look upon it there was lace on it.

Mr. Garrow. Do you know at what time that card was in your ſhop?—I cannot exactly ſay.

Court to Carpmeal. Have you any lace now in your poſſeſſion?——Yes, I received it from Mrs. Emanuel.

Proſecutor. It is mine, it was in my ſhop the night before the robbery, this I know, becauſe I turned away two ſhillings and ſixpence for it.

Mr. Garrow. You cannot tell how lately this card was in your ſhop?—No.

You ſometimes part with the card and lace together?——Yes, here is a ſeal upon this piece, which I put on when I took ſtock; I am ſure it is mine.

Mrs. Emanuel. I had this lace from Judith Levy.

Judith Levy. I had this lace from the bundle of lace belonging to Lucas.

PATRICK MACMANUS ſworn.

I apprehended the priſoners, here are three parcels, in one are fourteen guineas, which I found on Waters; here are eleven guineas which I found on Summers, and fourteen guineas which I found on Lucas; here are a cutlaſs, and dark lanthorn, and ſome picklock keys; here is a little bundle that Mr. Mott has ſeen, and a pick-lock key, two other keys and a dark lanthorn on Summers, and in a room up ſtairs theſe were found (a bundle of keys) we apprehended Waters about a week after, in a court in White Friars; he was at home, we found nothing but money upon him.

David Williams. I know theſe cards, this is my mark, it was when we took ſtock.

——— NEWTON ſworn.

I put this mark upon this card, ſometime between April and September.

The priſoners left their caſe to their Council, and called no witneſſes.

JOHN LUCAS, RICHARD SUMMERS otherwiſe SMITH, JOHN WATERS } GUILTY, Death.

ANN GREEN, ANN SILCOCK. } NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

370. WILLIAM PARROT was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 19th day of February, one paper bag, value a farthing, twelve linen bags, value 6d. four pounds weight of onion ſeed, value 16s. half a buſhell of French beans, value 5s. four quarts of raddiſh ſeed, value 1s. and an ounce of balſam ſeed, value 2s. the property of David Lewis.

DAVID LEWIS ſworn.

I am a ſeedſman, I live at No. 20, Cornhill, the priſoner was my porter, and had been ſo about four weeks, on the Friday evening, on examining the duſt-bin, I found one parcel was gone, which I had ſeen on the Friday afternoon about four o'clock; it contained near two pounds of onion ſeed, on the Saturday I looked again into the duſt-bin, and found another parcel of onion ſeed, in the place where the other was put, this was not ſo big a parcel as the other, by half a pound or rather more, it was folded up in a paper bag, which bags were not marked with any thing.

Can you ſay whether that was the ſame bag that you ſaw before?—No, I cannot; on Saturday morning between one and two, I ſent the priſoner to the Bull, in Leadenhall-ſtreet, with one parcel, and likewiſe to the Swan, Whitechapel, with another parcel of garden ſeeds; theſe two parcels were delivered very faithfully, and as he was going out of the ſhop, I obſerved his coat and hat very duſty, which made me ſuſpect he had been down at the dirt bin, and taken ſome of theſe things out.

Court. Had he any buſineſs at the duſt-bin, as a porter?——Yes, he was a weekly ſervant, and did every thing in the houſe.

Did he ever ſerve in the ſhop as ſervant? No, he uſed to ſift the ſeeds, and clear them or any thing of the kind, he went out of the door, and I obſerved his pockets were filled, I ſent a ſervant after him, who came back with him, and I ſaw the onion ſeed in his pocket, which I aſſiſted in taking out, and there were ſeveral things brought to me, in the preſence of the priſoner, which were ten bags, the priſoner brought them himſelf; there was ſome onion ſeeds, and ſome French beans, and ſome flower ſeeds.

Did

Did he bring back any raddish ſeed?—I cannot ſay, there was ſatkipurs and balſam ſeed, the priſoner ſaid, they were my property, I had neither offered nor threatned him, nor were any offers or threats made to my knowledge.

Can you ſay the things ſo brought back were yours?——I cannot.

DAVID FIELD ſworn.

I am a brazier, and beadle of the ward, I was deſired by Mr. Lewis to go with him to the priſoner's lodgings, and I went and there he produced ſeveral bags, and ſeveral bags, and ſeveral parcels of ſeed.

Had you any converſation with him before you went to his lodgings?—No.

Did you at any time make him any offers of favour or threaten him?——No, I came away with him, he brought ſeveral bags of ſeed, I aſked him whoſe they were, and he told me they were Mr. Lewis's, I cannot ſay how many bags there were.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

Theſe bags my wife had with peas, to pick the rotten out from the ſound ones, ſhe had ſixpence a buſhel, they were for my maſter, and theſe are the bags the peas were in; the ſeed is my property; till laſt Michaelmas, I was in the kitchen garden myſelf, and kept the market; but of late things run bad, and I was obliged to go to ſervice.

Court to Proſecutor. Did he ever give you this account, he has given now?——No, he had uſed to have peaſe to pick.

Did he ſay the property was his before?——Never before.

Court to Field. Did he ſay to you that the property was his own?——No, he confeſſed it was Mr. Lewis's.

The priſoner called two witneſſes who gave him an exceeding good character.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

371. WILLIAM BULL was indicted for feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Henry Sampſon, about the hour of eight in the night, on the 12th of February, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, one bank note for the payment of twenty pounds, the ſaid bank note being of the value of twenty pounds, the property of the ſaid Henry, and the ſaid ſum payable and ſecured therein, then being due and unſatisfied to the ſaid Henry, againſt the ſtatute, and three leather pocket books, value 2s. the property of the ſaid Henry.

(The Caſe opened by Mr. Silveſter.

(The witneſſes examined apart.)

GEORGE SAMPSON ſworn.

I live at No. 67, Wapping-wall, my father's name is Henry Sampſon, on Saturday evening, the 12th of February, between ſeven and eight ſome perſon rang at the door, the ſervant Mary Middleton went to the door, and ſhe bringing a meſſage to my father and me, we went to old Mr. Berkley's, but on going we called on his ſon, who is in partnerſhip with his father, we ſaid, we underſtood his father was ill, he ſaid he was not, and we came back again we ſtood at the door about ten minutes, I rang at the door, and the maid came to the door, ſeemingly in a great fright, and ſaid, oh! there are thieves in the houſe, and one of Mr. Dowding's boys is one; I immediately went down ſtairs and got a light, in order to ſearch the houſe, and coming up ſtairs I met ſeveral perſons, who ſaid they had been ſearching the houſe, and could not find any body; we loſt three pocket-books, containing a twenty pound bank-note, and a bill for twenty-four pounds, and other papers; we left Mary Middleton in the houſe, who had been frequently intruſted by us; we went out together.

Court. Who were the people that you ſaw in the houſe, that ſaid they could find no body?——Several people, ſtrangers but the clerk and the porter were with them.

Mr. Garrow, Priſonr's Council. You are are in partnership with your father?——No.

Is Mr. Berckley in partnership with him?——Yes.

Was this bank-note belonging to the partnership stock?——No, it belonged to my father.

Whose house is this?——It is my father's dwelling-house, but there are warehouses behind, belonging to the partnership.

MARY MIDDLETON sworn.

I am servant to the prosecutor.

What happened on the 12th of this month?—A bell rung between seven and eight, I went up, there was nobody in the house but myself, I asked who was there, and somebody said Mr. Berckley was very bad, and my young master and old master must go to him directly, for he wanted to speak to them, they went directly; in about two or three minutes after, somebody else rang at the door, I went up to the door, and a young man asked me for a letter that lay upon my master's desk in the parlour; I went to look for the letter and was returning out of the parlour, and the prisoner met me with a pistol, and says, not a word; they took me and put me into chair, and put a hat over my face, but it did not cover my face, and I saw the prisoner open my master's desk, and he strewed the papers about the floor, and him and another went up stairs and came down again; they came and asked me for the money; I told them I did not know there was a farthing in the house; then says the one that held me, come and hold her, and I will go and find the money; then the prisoner came and held me.

You do not know the other person that held you?——No, and presently the bell rang again, and then they came down stairs, and they all went out and locked me in the parlour; the bell rung again; I believe it was three times, and I opened the shutters of the parlour window and got out; then I went to open the street door and found it bolted top and bottom.

Which way had the persons that left you got out?—I cannot tell.

Are there more ways than one out of your house?—Yes, they might have gone backwards or forwards.

Where does the back way go to?—It goes down into the water; there was no other way for them to go out; I was going to wash myself, and my cap was off; I have no doubt of the prisoner, I am sure it was him, I have seen him frequently go backward and forward to work with Mr. Dowding, which was but a little way off; I told my master directly, and the person who it was.

Mr. Garrow. What fastenings are there to the back door?—A padlock on the inside.

Was you much frightened?——No, I said, do not hurt me, and they said they would not.

Was you or was you not?——I was frightened.

You happened by good luck to be going to wash yourself, and had your cap turned up?——Yes.

Or else you would not have been able to see them?——No.

Had you your apron on?——No, it was in the kitchen.

Had these people any disguise?——Yes, the prisoner had a handkerchief over his lips, which covered his mouth, he had a round hat, not pulled down over his face.

Remarkably cocked up perhaps?—I did not take notice, it was as he wore it usually; he had a sort of a red cross bar handkerchief.

When did they go to fasten the front door?—I did not hear them.

How far is the parlour from the front door?—Not very far, only through the shop.

The Remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be published in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commission of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middlesex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL, in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wednesday the 23d of FEBRUARY, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the THIRD SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER III. PART VII.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noster Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE PROCEEDINGS ON THE KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the City of LONDON; AND ALSO Juſtices of Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the County of MIDDLESEX; HELD AT JUSTICE-HALL in the Old-Bailey, UPON THE KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the City of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of William Ball.

How many came in?—Three other men.

How long were they going up ſtairs and rummaging the houſe?—Not above ten minutes altogether.

Did they force you into the parlour in a hurry?—Yes they did.

What did the priſoner do when he heard the ringing?—He ſtood ſtill and held the hat over my face; he ſaid nothing to me nor to the other man.

How ſoon afterwards did you ſee the priſoner; did you know his name?—When I heard it mentioned I knew it; I heard it among the other people that lived in the family, and for that reaſon I heard his name mentioned; Mr. Dowding married Captain Ball's daughter, and I heard his name before; I mentioned the name before he was taken up.

Did you tell his name to the runners before he was taken up?—The people in the ſhop, when I deſcribed him, told me Bull was his name, then I mentioned the name to the runners.

Did you know his name at the time the robbery was committed?—I had heard it many times, I mentioned his name to Cole.

Who told his name after the robbery was committed?—I deſcribed him, and then they ſaid that the perſon that I deſcribed was Bull; I did not know his name till they told me. He had thick lips and a full face, and his dreſs I deſcribed, a brown wide coat on, a great coat, and dirty leather breeches, very much like a working dreſs.

How long have you been in this family?—Eight or nine months, I came from Yorkſhire, I have been in London about three years.

How many families have you lived in ſince you came to London?—Three.

About twelve months in a place?—Thereabouts: they left the key of the parlour on the outſide in the door.

How high is the parlour window from the yard?—Only a bit of a rail which I caught hold of to get down.

Mr. Silveſter. As you have ſeen the priſoner come backwards and forwards, did you when you deſcribed him, ſay it was Dowding's boy?—Yes.

Mr. Sampſon. When they told me they could find nobody up ſtairs, I immediately ſaid they were gone out backwards, we broke broke open the ware-house door and found the key on the inside, then we went down to the lower door of the warehouse, and found the lower door next the water-side was standing open; the maid described him as she has done now—we got lights and went down to the water-side, it was then low-water, and I held the candle over the wharf, while a waterman and our porter went over the wharf into the mud.

When had you seen this bank note?—I never saw it.

Then you do not know there was a bank note?—No Sir, I know the pocket-book.

Court to Mary Maddison. Was there a letter on the parlour table?—No.

Court to Sampson. Had you sent for a letter?—No.

ROBERT BALL sworn.

On the 12th of February I rung at the bell between seven and eight, the servant came to the door in a great fright; she was some time before she came; when I came in I found the door had been bolted top and bottom; nobody was with me, I immediately run out and cried out thieves; we got lights and went to look for somebody, we searched all roundly, and then went into the warehouse, and the door next to the water was open; upon the wharf there laid a candlestick which we brought in; I saw the papers laying on the floor, then I went along the shore, and there appeared to be nobody.

ISAAC HODGSON sworn.

I went and rung at the bell of Mr. Sampson's, nobody answered the bell as usual, then the porter came, and we heard the maid come out, crying there was thieves in the house; she said there were three of them, and one of them I knew very well; we went to the foot of the stairs and went backwards and found nobody; the girl described him as having thick lips, and a handkerchief over his mouth, she said she knew him; I went to Bow-Street, and they brought the prisoner, and asked the girl, if that was the person? she said yes.

Mr. Garrow. She described him to have thick lips?—Yes.

Was your prisoner when this young man was searched?—Yes.

Prisoner. I leave it to my counsel.

ANN GROOM sworn.

I keep the Crown ale-house, I remember the evening this young man was apprehended, it was the Saturday evening; in the course of that evening I had seen him a great many times in the tap-room; he lives at my house; I cannot tell at what time he came to my house, because I was very thronged; it was between seven and eight, I believe, he came and asked me for a bit of paper, to make out a bill, to receive some money for a pair of lawyers that were at work; and he went to buy a sheet of paper, and in about two minutes he came back, and sat down in one of the boxes, and wrote the bill out, I saw him, his father is a lawyer; he continued at our house I cannot tell how long, I missed him very soon after.

A quarter of an hour?—I cannot fix any of the times.

Did you hear of an alarm of robbery at Mr. Sampson's?—Yes, Sir, I did, and he was in my house at that time.

How far do you live off?—Six houses; he was in the house writing when the alarm was made, he was writing that bill for which he bought the paper; I have known him about eight years, he is a very honest, sober, hard-working lad, as far as I know, that has been his general character.

Mr. Silvester. The house was very thronged—Yes, what time he came in, and went out, I cannot say; I saw Sampson, and his maid, they came to the tap-room, and opened the door, and asked if any of Mr. Dowding's men were there, I said yes; they said some of Mr. Dowding's men had robbed Mr. Sampson? I said there was one of them in the parlour.

HANNAH TEAL sworn.

I am servant to Mrs. Groom, I remember the night that Mr. Sampson's house was robbed, it was this night fortnight; I heard heard of the alarm two or three minutes before eight o'clock. Mr. Sampson's house I know the prisoner, I saw him that evening come to write a bill, he was writing at the time the alarm was brought to our house, he came into the house, and into the kitchen, where I was, then he went out for a sheet of paper, he was gone about five minutes, and he returned and drank tea, and staid in the kitchen; I think he was not gone above five minutes.

Mr. Silvester. What makes you so clear as to the time?——Because I was in and out of the tap-room; I cannot say how much it was before eight; I did not drink tea with him, he drank tea, because he said he could not drink beer; I heard him ask for a sheet of paper; I remember Mr. Sampson's coming to the door, he had not quite finished the bill when the people came in.

What makes you so particular to the hour?——I was afraid my master would not have had cash enough.

Mr. Justice Buller. Wherever there is a public-house that labourers are constantly paid at, I have recommended it to the magistrates to take away that licence, for it is a temptation to the people to spend half their money, they cannot resist it, and then they have not enough to live upon.

JOHN ARNOLD sworn.

I am a cooper by trade, I am apprentice to Mr. Groom, I remember the night in which Mr. Sampson's house was reported to be robbed perfectly well; I saw the prisoner that night in my mistress's kitchen, I came in about half an hour after seven, and found the prisoner drinking tea; I heard Shadwell clock strike seven before I went in, and I conclude it was about half an hour after, he continued there about half an hour; I was called out by a man whom I worked with, the prisoner followed me immediately into the tap-room, and afterwards went out to fetch a half-penny-worth of paper, he came in afterwards, and sat beside me, and wrote the bill, he might be a quarter of an hour in writing the bill; I am sure he had never been out of the house; I am sure five minutes was the outside he was out for the paper.

What enables you to recollect?——He came in again as the alarm was given, I asked him for a dish of tea, he said he could not spare any.

JAMES BLACK sworn.

I am a sawyer, about half an hour after seven he came and asked Mrs. Groom for sixpence, to get him some tea and sugar, he got some tea and sugar, and came in again at twenty minutes after, and asked Mrs. Grooms for a bit of paper, he went and bought a sheet, and returned again in five minutes after, and he came to the table where I was, and cut two slips off with a knife, and went to the next box, and sat down and wrote the bill out, a carman's ship came in, and said Mr. Sampson was robbed, the prisoner was then sitting in the box close by me; I was not out of the house, I did not observe the prisoner going at all, after he bought the paper.

If he had gone, should you have observed it?——I think I should, I sat opposite to him; I have known him about seven years, I never heard a dishonest character of him, his character was that of an honest young fellow.

Mr. Silvester. What was you about at that time?——There was about twelve of us sat in the box; sometimes I took a pint of beer; there were three men in the box, Arnold and another man, I believe Arnold went out first, afterwards a man named Jeremiah Hannagen went out, then the prisoner went out, I do not know where they went; the young man took the bills in his hand, and it was a quarter after eight when they went out; I did not see any body go out with him, I can be upon my oath.

Mr. Garrow. The time that this man went out was after the robbery was committed?——When the Captain came in I am sure he was in the house.

Court. Had either of those people been out of the room before you heard of the robbery?——They certainly were not.

of them out at the time, after his coming in with the paper.

Were they out at the time he went for the paper?——No, the apprentice was in the kitchen, he was not in the room with me; Hannagen was in the tap-room with me, he was in all the evening, I ſaw him there about half after five.

Can you ſay whether he went out, or whether he ſtaid in the room all the time?—I never obſerved him go out.

THOMAS STEELE ſworn.

I am a coal-heaver and ſoldier, I uſe Groom's houſe, I was there this day fortnight in the evening, I heard Mr. Sampſon's houſe was robbed, I came in at a quarter after ſeven, the priſoner was drinking tea in the back kitchen, he continued at tea about a quarter of an hour, then he came into the tap-room to get a ſheet of writing paper of Mrs. Groom, ſhe told him ſhe had none, and gave him a half-penny to go and fetch ſome; he went out, and was gone about five minutes, he brought the paper in with him, and went into the box oppoſite to me, to make his father's account out, in the tap room, there he ſat and wrote; it was about eight when I heard of the robbery, a gentleman came in with a gallon pot, I did not take particular notice of him; the priſoner ſat in the box with me, he continued nigh a quarter of an hour after, he did not go out till a quarter paſt eight; I cannot tell whether any body went out with him; Arnold and the priſoner went out after the alarm was given.

Was the priſoner abſent at all from the houſe, except when he went for the paper?—Five minutes was the outſide; I was getting my ſupper in the back kitchen, I was about two yards off, I was ſitting in the box eating a cow-heel.

How long was you eating?—I cannot tell juſtly, I might be a quarter of an hour or twenty minutes; I think the priſoner was not gone above that time; I ſat by the door, I cannot tell who came in, I went out, I ſaw Black go out, I cannot tell what time he went out, nor how long he ſtaid, I do not remember his going out before the alarm; I cannot tell who went out before the alarm.

What makes you recollect the priſoner particularly?——I cannot tell every one.

Mr. Garrow. I ſuppoſe you eat your cow-heel as my friend does his veniſon, very much at your leiſure?—Yes.

JEREMIAH HANNAGEN ſworn.

I am a coal-heaver ſometimes, if I can get it, I uſe Groom's houſe, I was there this day fortnight in the evening, I went there between ſeven and eight, and ſaw the priſoner at Mr. Groom's, ſitting in the tap-room firſt, then he was writing a bill in the box next to me, he wrote it on paper.

Where did he get that paper?—I do not know, I know he went for the paper, he was not gone five minutes, I heard him ſay he was going for ſome paper to make his father's bill; I think he was not gone above five minutes, when the alarm was of the houſe being robbed, a gentleman came in with a gallon pot in his hand, the priſoner ſtaid all the time he remained in the tap-room, till the alarm of the robbery.

Mr. Silveſter. What did the Captain ſay when he came in?—He gave the gallon pot, and ſaid his man had helped to take the thieves.

He did not ſay who they were?—No, I was drinking beer, and ſat in the ſame box with the priſoner all the time.

Was you ſober?——I was as ſober as I am now; I ſaw the priſoner facing the door before he came out.

Court. What was the priſoner about when you firſt came into Groom's houſe?——He was a good while in the houſe before he began to write the bill.

WILLIAM JOHNSON ſworn.

I am a chandler, on the 12th of this month, on the Saturday night, the houſe was beſet, the priſoner was in my ſhop, he came for a ſheet of common writing paper, and he went out, and in about ten minutes, or a quarter of an hour, or not ſo much, there was an alarm of a robbery; my houſe is oppoſite Mr. Sampſon's, and about thirty or forty yards from Groom's; he came for a ſheet of paper, I had none to ſerve him with, that was after ſeven, but I cannot recollect how much; it was impoſſible for that young fellow to be concerned in the robbery.

ANDREW DOWDING ſworn.

I am a cooper, the priſoner and his father worked for me, and did at the time of the robbery, they both worked for me theſe ſeven years; he had worked that week that the robbery was committed, he and his father earned two pounds eleven ſhillings and ſeven-pence, he was a very honeſt lad, not given to clubs or any thing; he has lived at Mrs. Groom's theſe ſix years.

Court. Would you take him again into you ſervice?——By all means, to morrow morning.

The priſoner called two more witneſſes, who gave him a very good character.

NOT GUILTY.

Court to Dowding. You will be ſo good to take him home with you.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

372. MATHEW MARKS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 27th of January laſt, two iron kitchen ranges, value 5l. two Bath ſtoves, value 40s. three iron grates, value 20s. the property of John Harcourt, Eſq.

JOHN CROSS ſworn.

I am a ſmith, I live in the pariſh of St. George, Hanover Square; about the latter end of December, the priſoner came to me, and told me his maſter had made him a preſent of an old Bath ſtove, and deſired me to look at it; accordingly I went into Hanover Square, to the proſecutor's houſe, and there was a ſtove without a back to it; he deſired me to carry it home, and he put it on my ſhoulder, he told me not to mind the money till he called; when I came about a hundred yards off the houſe, he followed me, and ſaid there is another ſtove, I forgot to tell you of, ſays I, if there is, I will ſend my man for it; I ſent my man, and he brought it, there were more things that my man knows of; I was at the ſhop when he brought it: on the 1ſt of January he came to me, to the King and Queen, in Oxford-ſtreet, and brought a memorandum of theſe things, which he read to me, it contained three Bath ſtoves and two grates, and four ſmall fixed grates, he had valued them at five pounds; he made an agreement with me, that I was to give him five pounds for them; I told him that I could not conveniently pay him for them then, but he did not aſk me for the money; and on the Tueſday following he came to me, and ſaid, I am going with my maſter to Eſſex, and I ſhall not be in town for two months, take no account of thoſe things till my return; he was then Mr. Harcourt's ſervant, I knew him to be ſuch, as I work for Mr. Harcourt.

When were theſe grates found at your houſe?—On the Tueſday following, I had a meſſage from Mr. Harcourt.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. Is it your uſual practice to purchaſe the property of maſters, when brought by the ſervants?——No Sir.

I hope not, it is not a practice this Court will approve.

JOHN SKINNER ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Croſs; my maſter ordered me to go to the proſecutor's houſe, and the priſoner was there, and he ſhewed me the things that I was to fetch, which were two Bath ſtoves, and two grates, and four little grates ſet in brick work; the priſoner helped me to unſet them, they were two kitchen grates.

Were they fixed?——Yes, they were all fixed, but the Bath ſtoves were not fixed.

Are you ſure of that?——Yes.

At

Are you clear in that?——I am clear in that, that they were never fixed.

——— HARCOURT, Esq; ſworn.

This was an empty houſe, that my Lord Townſend had gone out of, at the corner next to George-ſtreet, and the priſoner had the key to ſhew it to any body; that occaſioned the opportunity of diſpoſing of theſe things; and theſe things were gone.

Were theſe things there?——They certainly were.

Were the Bath ſtoves fixed or not fixed? They were ſlipped in nicely, but without any work, I believe they fitted ſo nicely they were put in; the kitchen ranges muſt have taken a great while to have got down, for I ſuppoſe they weigh one of them fifteen hundred weight.

Were theſe things yours?——Yes.

How long had this man lived with you?—About three years.

Mr. Garrow. I will take the liberty of aſking you, Sir, whether this is your freehold houſe or not?—It is not.

You have a leaſehold intereſt in it?——Yes.

Were theſe fixtures originally in the houſe, or did you put them in?—I bought the Bath ſtoves of the gentleman, when he went out of it, as fixtures.

It is uſual in theſe Bath ſtoves, which are fitted to the chimnies, to make them flush with the chimney by plaſter, ſo that the aſhes and coals ſhould not get under the grate?——I apprehend the maſons work, what they call the free ſtone, was fitted ſo nicely to it, as to prevent the neceſſity of it, but Skinner can tell you.

Mr. Garrow to Skinner. Was that back faſtened to the chimney?——Not faſtened at all.

Is not it fitted up with plaſter?—I am ſure it is not.

Was it a chimney in which there was free-ſtone on the ſides?—The back of the chimney was free-ſtone.

What were the ſides?—Stone blacked.

Jury. Was there not upon the back of the grate, a finiſh up with brick and plaſter?——No Sir.

Proſecutor. I can account for that; for the lady who had the houſe, and had theſe grates put up, was particularly nice in that reſpect, to have the backs made with free-ſtone, and the backs exactly to fit.

Jury. I ſhould preſume that the grate was firſt fixed before the free-ſtone.

Proſecutor. There was an uncommon large back made againſt the free-ſtone, ſo as to make it as neat as poſſible.

Mr. Garrow. Will you do me the honour to attend to me one minute; in the caſe of the particular ſtone that you ſpeak of, as having a large back; do not you apprehend that the ſtove was firſt put in?—Upon my word I do apprehend, that the ſtove was ſo contrived, as to fit as nice as poſſible, and puſhed in after the maſons work was all ſet.

Mr. Garrow to Skinner. In taking out theſe ſtoves, did you make any dirt or rubbiſh?——No farther than the ſoot that fell down the chimney.

Proſecutor. It ſometimes happens, that they fix the free-ſtone upon the hob, as it is called, which I apprehend was not the caſe here, becauſe they muſt have broke off the free-ſtone to take it away.

Priſoner. I leave it to my council.

Mr. Garrow to Proſecutor. I take the liberty of aſking you, what was this young man's character before?—For about three years before this, I thought him honeſt.

You thought him always honeſt, till this unfortunate temptation and your ſmith concurred to make him otherwiſe?—Yes.

The priſoner called three witneſſes who gave him a very good character.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Jury. My Lord we wiſh to recommend him to mercy on account of his character.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

373. JASPER

373. JASPER ROBINS was indicted for burglariously and feloniously breaking and entering the dwelling house of Ann Dixon, about the hour of eight in the night, on the 3d of February, and feloniously stealing therein, eighteen pieces of black silk, value 2s. one linen apron, value 6d. one muslin apron, value 1s. five linen handkerchiefs, value 1s. a pair of cotton stockings, value 6d. a pillow case, value 6d. and a towel, value 1d. her property.

ANN DIXON sworn.

I am a widow, I live at No. 11, in New Rents, St. Martin's le Grand, I have lived there thirteen years; a little after eight I heard a noise, and in a minute I heard it again, as if my one pair of stairs door shut to; I was in my kitchen, which is underground, I had lodgers, but none of them were at home; my windows were all shut up for the evening, I shut them; my street door was upon the single lock; my sister was with me, there was no other person in the house.

How do you know the street door was on a single lock?——When I was frightened with the noise, I was particular in turning the lock back, to let myself out.

Then you did not know any thing of the situation of the house at all, till you heard a noise?—One of my lodgers went out last between five and six.

Did you go to see the state of the door after that?——I heard it shut, I am sure it was shut; after I heard the noise in the kitchen, I came up to the passage, and I smelt fire or like tinder burning, or linen; then I opened the street door, and looked up at my windows, I saw no light, and all my windows were shut; I had not stood a minute, before I heard my two pair of stairs door breaking open, it is my bed room; my sister was in the two pair of stairs room last, she is not here, she locked it; I then went out and looked up at my windows, and I saw a light in the room where I sleep; and I begged of my sister to stand at the door, and I would go and get Mr. Mulcaster, and he went up and took the prisoner; first saw the prisoner in the parlour, with the things mentioned in the indictment; one window of the dining room was fastened down, and the other was shut; Mr. Mulcaster had in his hands, eighteen pieces of black silk, and five handkerchiefs, and an apron, the apron is marked with my own name, A. D. the handkerchiefs I have had for some years, they were not marked; the things were all taken out of my bed room.

Mr. Garrow. Mrs. Dixon, how many lodgers have you?——Five, all men, creditable tradesmen that go to their work.

Have they all keys to the street door?—No.

Who lodges in the first floor?——I had nobody then.

What time do you usually shut up your house at night?—As soon as it is dark, I had shut up my house for good, all but shutting up one window shutter, sometimes I shut both windows of the first floor; but I had been washing, and hung some clothes there; I always fasten the sash, I think it was fast then.

You did not find all the fastenings of the house broke?——No.

How was the window of that two pair of stairs room, which is your bed room?—It was a casement, it was shut, and none of the glass broke; there is a little sort of a slanting ledge, the house is a corner house.

So that with a good deal of help, and something to hold by, a man might by chance walk along as a cat does?——Yes, they must hold by the other ledges, or by the wall, or else they could not.

This is in a public street?——No.

You have neighbours on each side of you, and some in front; therefore if a man chose to play the cat there, he would be observed; he could not walk along without being seen, if he were to walk along there to throw up the window?—It was a very dark night.

JOHN

JOHN MULCASTER ſworn.

Between eight and nine the 3d of February the proſecutrix came to our ſhop door, and called as loud as ſhe could, for God's ſake Mr. Mulcaſter come to our houſe for there are thieves in the houſe; it was quite dark; ſhe ſaid the thieves were up ſtairs, I took a light immediately from the parlour and run up ſtairs; while I was on the ſtairs I heard a perſon running up before me without ſhoes ſeemingly; when I came up to the one pair of ſtairs; I juſt ſlightly looked there, and I turned my eyes and ſaw all the things that are mentioned in the indictment, on the ſecond pair of ſtairs; ſome upon one ſtair and ſome upon another; they were ſeparate; I heard a buſtle above ſtairs, and apprehending there might be more than one, I called to my ſon who came running after me, to go and call Mr. White, a gentleman who was in my houſe; my ſon ſtood on the outſide of the door; I went up ſtairs into the two pair of ſtairs, and there found both the doors open, it has originally been only one room, but there is a deal partition put up to make it two; the one is a very ſmall room, the firſt room is not the bed room.

Was that door open of the firſt room?—Yes.

Was there any thing broke about it?—The lock was broke, and the two front ſcrews were forced out, the door opened outwards towards the ſtairs, and by its being wrenched towards the ſtairs to open it, the ſcrews were forced up, ſo that it hung by the back ſcrew.

Did you ſee into that room?——I juſt looked into it; I ſaw men's wearing apparel looked up altogether, that was all I ſaw in that room; Mr. White came up, and I begged of him to liſten on the ſtairs, and let me know if any body came down, and I looked into the bed room, I looked ſlightly under the bed, I came out immediately finding nobody there, I went up the third pair of ſtairs, and I met the priſoner coming down with his ſhoes in his hand; the lock of the bed room was broke, and a piece of the iron was forced off, I found this on the ground; the drawers in the ſecond floor were cut in the upper part to let the lock out.

Were they cut in more places than one?—Only in one place, there were ſeveral articles of the proſecutrix's wearing apparel laying in the room; I examined the door the next day, and both the doors were forced open ſeemingly with this plaiſterers hammer which was found there; as I met the priſoner coming down with his ſhoes in his hand, I laid hold of him and aſked him if there were any more, he ſaid no; I begged Mr. White to take care of him while I ſearched the garret, but I found nobody in the garret, one garret window was open, but there were bars before it, ſo that nobody could get in or out; I took the priſoner down ſtairs in the parlour, and I ſearched him; upon him I found theſe two knives, this centre bit, and theſe matches.

Mr. Garrow. This centre bit in its preſent ſtate is utterly unfit for any uſe.—Undoubtedly it is; it is of no uſe without a ſtock.

If it had the beſt ſtock in the world, it would not be of any uſe; it is all notched; you do not find that the centre bit had been uſed?——No, when we came into the one pair of ſtairs, the ſaſh was a little open, about half a pane or a little more.

Not room enough for a man to come in?——Not in that ſtate.

And for any thing you know the ſiſter might have come in after the alarm and put put up the window?——I do not know.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

Coming down St. Martin's le Grand, a coachman aſked me to go and call one Penny Feather up three pair of ſtairs, and I went up, and coming down this gentleman came and took me.

Court to Proſecutrix. After the alarm of the noiſe, you ſay your ſiſter was with you, do you know whether your ſiſter left you?——I knew nothing after I went out.

You cannot tell then what became of her?—No.

The priſoner called ſeven witneſſes who gave him a good character.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

374. ELIZABETH CHAPMAN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 5th of February, fourteen yards of black lace, value 30s. the property of Thomas Hobbs, privily in his ſhop.

THOMAS HOBBS ſworn.

I live at No. 4, Lombard-ſtreet, Seven Dials; I keep a ſhop there: on the 5th of February laſt, between ſix and ſeven in the evening, the priſoner came in and ſaid ſhe wanted to match ſome black lace; I had ſeen her before, ſhe had a pattern of lace with her; I ſhewed her ſome lace, I had ſome that matched it as near as could be, ſhe aſked the price of it, I told her thirteen-pence a yard, ſhe ſaid that was too dear, for her's coſt but eight-pence; I told her I had no other, if that would ſuit her that was the price and the very loweſt; in the window I had nine cards of black lace laying; I can ſay with certainty there were nine pieces there, for I counted them not ten minutes before, I was juſt come in from the country.

How happened it that you coming from the country ſhould count theſe cards of lace?—I have loſt ſo much goods lately out of my ſhop, that I always deſired my wife and ſhop-woman to count them; I returned about ſix.

Had you any cuſtomers or any body that gave you occaſion to count the lace?—No, but I am ſure I counted it; I ſaw the priſoner's ſilk handkerchief in the window, and her hand was upon it, the priſoner ſtood againſt the window, and the lace was on the counter; then the priſoner wiſhed me a good night and went away; then the handkerchief was gone.

Did that handkerchief cover any thing?——I cannot tell whether it lay over any lace or not; the priſoner went out of the ſhop, and I immediately miſſed this card of lace, the card is marked with my ſhop mark at one corner, U. N. fourteen yards and a half; I ſold ten yards and a half off that very piece and laid it in the window; I immediately followed her out, and clapped my hands on her, and ſhe had it in her pocket, lapped up in this ſilk handkerchief.

Was that the ſame handkerchief you ſaw in the window?——It was the ſame handkerchief, it was plain, it had no marks at all upon it; that was the ſame handkerchief I ſaw in the ſhop, as far as I can judge; I immediately laid hold of the lace and the handkerchief, and ſhe ſaid ſhe did not know that ſhe had it, and begged for mercy.

Was the lace rough or ſmooth?—It was in this form putting it in her pocket, and ſhe had a large cloak on; it was upon the card that it is now, I have meaſured it ſince, it is the ſame piece.

What is the value of it?——It is valued at a great deal leſs than I gave for it; I have put it at ſix ſhillings and three-pence leſs than it coſt me; the conſtable came and took her away.

Mr. Knowles, Priſoner's Council. How long had you been in the country before you came home?——I went on the Wedneſday.

When did this happen?——On the Saturday.

Did you take an accurate account of all your ſtock when you went out of town on the Wedneſday?——The lace and ribbands I did, becauſe I loſe ſo much.

How long had you been in town before this accident happened?—I had not been at home half an hour.

Is your ſtock pretty extenſive?—No, it is not.

You were of courſe very ſuſpicious?—Yes.

Have you any partners?——No, Sir.

No

No perſon intereſted in the buſineſs but yourſelf?—None but my wife and myſelf.

Has your wife any part of the profits of that buſineſs ſettled on her by deed?—No.

Was this lace of any particular pattern? —I never had the pattern before.

It is not uncommon, I ſuppoſe?—Other people may have it.

Did you count it inſtantly as you came in?—I did.

Whereabouts did ſhe ſtand?—Cloſe by the window.

What length of time was ſhe in the ſhop? —About ten minutes.

Then of courſe ſhe, as any other perſon might, perfectly inoffenſively, lean againſt your counter? — Not inoffenſively, a perſon could not inoffenſively take away a card of lace.

Whether in the courſe of her wiping her face with her handkerchief, the handkerchief might not drop from her hand to that lace?——No.

When you ſaw it there, where you ſay it could not be without deſign, why did not you immediately communicate your ſuſpicions to her?—I did immediately after I loſt the lace; the handkerchief might be the length of this book from the lace.

Was it in ſuch a poſition that it might naturally fall from the hand of that woman?—I cannot anſwer that queſtion.

Was that handkerchief in ſuch a poſition as it might without deſign fall from the hand of that woman?—She muſt, by having that card of lace afterwards, do it with a deſign to take it away.

Now I aſk you, whether as it appeared in that poſition, why you did not immediately lay hold of her, and prevent her carrying it out of the ſhop?——I had no ſuſpicion of her taking the lace away, I did not ſee her take it.

Was this lace ſo doubled up in the handkerchief as indicated any deſign in her to take it; were there any folds in the handkerchief?—No.

Had ſhe not time enough to fold it up afterwards?—I followed her out immediately; I marked it myſelf.

JACOB FREEMAN ſworn.

I attend the Rotation office in Litchfield-ſtreet, on the 5th of February, between ſeven and eight, I do not ſpeak with certainty to the time, it was on Saturday, I was going through Lombard-ſtreet, Seven Dials, when I came to the corner of the ſtreet, I obſerved a great crowd, I came up directly and ſaw the proſecutor have hold of the priſoner, I am ſure it was her; I aſked what was the matter? I puſhed through the crowd, and laid hold of the proſecutor and the priſoner; and the proſecutor told me in the preſence of the priſoner, that ſhe had robbed his ſhop; I deſired him to let her go; which he did, and I took charge of her; the property was taken from her before I came up; the proſecutor had a card of lace in his hand when I came up.

Had he any thing elſe in the hand where he had the card of lace?——Not that I obſerved, I ſuppoſe there were fifty people at leaſt; the priſoner offered me ten guineas to let her go.

Mr. Knowles. Whoſe office do you attend?——The office in Litchfield-ſtreet.

Have you not been diſcharged from that office?——No.

Will you ſwear that?——Yes, I will, I loſt the uſe of my limbs, and ſince that I have been at my own houſe in the country.

What charge did the proſecutor give you of the priſoner.

She was very obſtropulous, he charged her with robbing him.

Did he ſay he had ſeen her rob him?—— He ſaid he did not ſee her.

Priſoner. Sir, I never touched it to the beſt of my knowledge.

The Priſoner called two witneſſes who gave her a very good character.

GUILTY, Death.

She was humbly recommended to mercy by the Proſecutor.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

375. HENRY

375. HENRY JACKSON was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling-houſe of Thomas Beaſley, about the hour of ſeven in the night, on the 18th of January laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein two crape gowns, value 5s. one cotton gown, value 5s. two muſlin aprons, value 2s. two muſlin handkerchiefs, value 5s. one linen handkerchief, value 12d. one black ſilk cloak, value 5s. one cloth coat, value 8s. one waiſtcoat, value 2s. and one pair of ſtockings, value 12d. the property of the ſaid Thomas.

THOMAS BEASLEY ſworn.

I live in the pariſh of St. George, Hanover-ſquare, in King-ſtreet, Groſvenor-ſquare, No. 18, I am a coachman; on the 18th of January laſt I went out about ſeven in the morning to my buſineſs, and did not return till half paſt ſix in the evening, when I came home I ſaw my window open.

Who lived in the houſe?——There was my wife, and two women, and one lodger beſides; I looked in at the window, and could not ſee any body at all; I knocked at the door, and before my wife came to the door the priſoner jumped out of the window; I purſued him about forty yards, crying ſtop thief; I never loſt ſight of him till I ſaw another man, one John Hutchins, run after him, he is a neighbour, and another man took him; there was nothing taken from the houſe, but the things were removed from one room to another; thoſe were the things mentioned in the indictment, (deſcribes them) they were laying on the floor in the front parlour, when he jumped out of the window, they are my property.

ELIZABETH BEASLEY ſworn.

Court. The window being thrown up and no pane of glaſs broke, I conclude it was not ſcrewed?——I am wife of the laſt witneſs, I ſhut the window down as uſual, but undoubtedly I muſt have neglected to ſcrew it; there is a ſhallow area under that window; I am confident it was not thrown open in any part of that day; I did not make frequent obſervations upon it; this window opened into a fore parlour; I was the beſt part of that day in a fore kitchen, but at the time this happened I was at work in my back kitchen; I loſt nothing, but two muſlin aprons were taken out of the drawers, of the value of five ſhillings, a handkerchief, value ſix-pence, a window-curtain, value three-pence, a black ſilk cloak and a pair of cotton ſtockings.

JOHN HUTCHINS ſworn.

I ſaw a man jump out of the window, but I cannot ſwear it was the priſoner; Mr. Beaſley cried ſtop thief, and I followed him as cloſe as I could, he was never out of my ſight, after he came by my ſtall till he was taken; the priſoner is the man that ran paſt me, and that I followed: I was not out of the ſtall when he ran by.

Jury. Is that the man that ran by the ſtall?——To the beſt of my knowledge it is.

JOHN LEADBETER ſworn.

I apprehended the priſoner on the 18th of January, there was a cry of ſtop thief, and I was coming up South Audley-ſtreet, and this man was firſt, and I took him the further corner of Groſvenor Square; it might be about half paſt ſix, there were a great many people behind me; I took him into cuſtody, when I took him he was running very hard: I took him about two or three hundred yards from the proſecutor's houſe.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was in the country that afternoon, and coming into London I heard the outcry, and I ran down Upper Groſvenor-place, and a man on horſeback and this gentleman came and laid hold on me, and ſaid I was the perſon.

Court. Was there any one elſe running away beſides that man?——Nobody, he was the firſt man.

Court

Court to Mrs. Beasley. At the time the profecutor knocked at the door, was any body in your houſe?——Two women and a man, in the back kitchen, and a man in the two pair of ſtairs floor.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

376. BENJAMIN STOKES was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 3d of February, two bullocks, price 16l. the property of Peter Lefevere, Eſq.

The Caſe opened by Mr. Peatt, Council for the Proſecution.

NEWBERT ABBOTT ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Clarke, of Shadwell, butcher; I had a converſation with the priſoner at the White Swan, where I lodge, in New Gravel-lane, I have lodged there near two years, ſometimes I kill beaſts or ſheep, and ſometimes I fetch ſheep home from market; the priſoner and another man deſired me to go and aſk my maſter, whether he could kill a heifer for him at his ſlaughter-houſe, I aſked my maſter, and he ſaid I might; I informed the priſoner of my maſter's aſſent, and the priſoner ſaid he would go and fetch the heifer as ſoon as he could.

What time did the converſation between you and the priſoner happen?——About one on the 3d of February.

What time did he return?—He returned between ſix and ſeven.

What did he bring with him?——Two bullocks.

Dead or alive?——Alive, on Wedneſday between ſix and ſeven in the evening, I think it was the 3d of February, I put them into my maſter's pound.

Was Mr. Clarke within?——I do not think he was; the priſoner and another man, whom I do not know, had been with me, to put the beaſts into the pound; the priſoner was one of the perſons that put the bullocks into the pound; I have known him for years at different times.

What kind of bullocks were theſe, that were in the pound?—They were brownith, they had no mark upon them to my knowledge, but a little was cut off the end of the tail of both of them.

Was there any thing particular in their horns?——Nothing, the man that came with the priſoner, came to help me to kill it the next day; I began about nine o'clock; they might weigh about three-ſcore ſtone apiece.

Did you kill one or both of them?——Only one.

Was the beaſt you killed on that morning, one of theſe bullocks that was put into the pound, the preceding evening?—Yes.

Was there any other beaſt in the pound?—Only them two, the door of the pound is only bolted, the priſoner came to Mr. Clarke's about two in the afternoon, on the Thurſday.

Was the priſoner preſent at any converſation between you and Clarke?——Yes; the other man came to kill the bullock, the bullock was hung up, and left in the ſlaughter-houſe, I had no orders to carry it any where; the offal was left in the ſlaughter-houſe till a diſcovery was made whoſe bullock it was, and that it was ſtolen.

THOMAS CLARK ſworn.

I am a butcher, I keep a houſe at Shadwell, and have a ſlaughter-houſe; I have lived there a twelvemonth laſt Midſummer, I am a cutting butcher, I ſell ſometimes alive, and ſometimes dead.

Did your man Abbott ever come to you and aſk you to give permiſſion to kill a heifer in your ſlaughter-houſe?——Yes, for two perſons, he ſaid, it was to kill a heifer.

What day of the month or week was it?—On Wedneſday about twelve, the 2d day in February, in lieu of that they brought ſomething the over night about ſeven o'clock.

Is the priſoner one of the perſons that came with the bullcks?——Yes.

Did you ever know the prisoner before? ——I saw him once before.

What did he bring to you? ——I did not see it till Thursday morning, then I went up to the market, to buy some meat at Leadenhall, and Whitechapel, and in consequence of my permission, one of them was killed, the weight was about sixty stone apiece; when I went down and saw what they were, I did not expect to see anything of that kind, for I thought it was a thing of no extraordinary value; I says to the man, ask the prisoner who these bullocks belong to, and the prisoner replied, they belong to us both; I said, I should be glad to know where you bought them, and he did not give me any answer at all to the purpose.

Court. What answer did he give? ——He said, he had fetched them a great way, and for that reason he desired, I would let him take his property away; I said, I shall not unless you give me a particular account how you came by them, from some sufficient house-keeper, in the parish of Whitechapel, or Mile End; he would not give me any answer about them; after this I gave information to the Magistrates, and then he desired to take the hide away.

Court. Did you see any marks anywhere on any part of these bullocks? ——There was no marks, nor no scissars had been upon them, as though they had been bought or sold; that made me suspicious, I thought the property was rather too good to be their own; I had no other reason as there was no mark on their hips; the prisoner returned afterwards, and desired to take away the hide, I went to Justice Green's office, and two of his men came down to us, and when they saw the men, they made their escape.

FRANCIS CUTLER sworn.

Between four and five in the afternoon, the 2d of February, I was feeding my master's bullocks in a field, there were some brown ones among them, they are what they call Welch-runts or steers; I fastened the gate in the usual manner, they were folding gates, there was a large wooden bar with a padlock; I saw one of those beasts afterwards at Mr. Clarke's, on Thursday morning between seven and eight, the padlock was undone and hung on; the bullock was a darkish brindle on the head and sides, more so than on the back; part of the hair and tip of the tail was gone, some white on the legs within the legs, I know him by his marks, he was very tame, and used to feed out of my hand, I saw a hide at Mr. Clarke's, I examined it and thought it was the hide of the other; the cattle of my master were left to me to feed and take care of.

JOHN ROGERS sworn.

I am footman to Mr. Lefextre, I often saw these beasts of his, I do not recollect seeing them on the 2d day of February, I believe the bullock I saw at Mr. Clarke's is one of them.

WILLIAM ELBY sworn.

Me and Orange, and Fletcher apprehended the prisoner; the prisoner and another man came and took a candle, and went down below into the slaughter-house, and when we went down into the slaughter-house soon after, we found the nails out of the back gate, and the men had made their escape that way; I saw nobody in the shop where Clarke was, besides the two drovers.

Clarke. I had removed the hide under the stairs, that gave them the first alarm.

THOMAS RICHARDS sworn.

I apprehended the prisoner at the sign of the Three Jolly Butchers, in Spitalfields Market, on the 18th of February, on a Friday.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

On the first of February, I went down to Laytonstone, and I went to a gentleman's house, I heard he had a heifer to sell, and I bid him money; on the 3d of February, I went to Ratcliff-highway, and had a pint of beer, and I spoke to this man, and he said, he could get the liberty to kill a; I did not go to Laytonstone again, and on night night I heard ſomething coming, and it was two beaſts, and the man that drove them, deſired me to go with him, he ſaid, it was to Clarke's houſe, he ſaid, he brought them out of Eſſex, he gave me a couple of ſhillings, whether they were bullocks or cows I do not know.

JAMES DALLENGER ſworn.

I live in Weſt Smithfield, I am a receiver of money for cattle ſold in that market; I can only ſay of the priſoner, that I have known him about ten years, he has been employed by different ſaleſmen who tranſact money matters, and I have had to pay him.

Can you collect from his conduct that he is an honeſt man?——He was much addicted to drinking, but with reſpect to honeſty, I never heard him accuſed.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

377. THOMAS COUSINS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 10th day of February, one watch, with the inſide caſe made of gold, and the outſide caſe made of ſhagreen, value 8l. one ſteel chain, value 1s. one cornelian ſeal ſet in gold, value 5s. one gold acorn, value 1s. one ſilver watch, value 20s. one ſtone ſeal ſet in baſe metal, value 6d. and one baſe metal key, value 3d. the property of Charles Wertherley, in his dwelling houſe.

CHARLES WERTHELEY ſworn.

I live in Bearbinder-lane, the priſoner was my porter, and carried out things; he kept in the houſe, he robbed me of two watches, he had lived with me three months and a fortnight: on the 10th of February laſt, about eleven at night I miſſed theſe two watches, one was gold and the other ſilver; the priſoner quitted my ſervice that day: I miſſed alſo the chain and ſeals mentioned in the indictment; the watches hung in the dining room, I ſaw them about eight that morning.

FRETWELL BOWMAN ſworn.

I am a pawnbroker, in Drury-lane, on the 11th of February, about ſix in the evening, the priſoner brought a ſilver watch and a metal ſeal and key to me to pledge; he ſaid it was his own, and he had it about three months, and it coſt him nothing; then I aſked him again how long he had had it, he then ſaid a fortnight: I thought the watch was not his own, and I ſent for a conſtable; this is the watch he offered me; he was examined, and on him was found this gold watch in a ſhagreen caſe, and gold ſeal and acorn, and a ſteel chain; he did not refuſe to be ſearched.

(The two watches produced and depoſed to.)

MOSES MORANT ſworn.

I apprehended the priſoner, and took this gold watch from him.

GUILTY.

Of ſtealing to the value of 39s.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

378. JAMES JONES was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 19th of February laſt, one linen handkerchief, value 1s. the property of William Guy.

The Proſecutor loſt his handkerchief, and immediately ſaw the priſoner drop it on the ground.

The priſoner called two witneſſes who gave him a very good character.

GUILTY.

Privately whipped.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

379. THO-

379. THOMAS SMITH was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 4th day of February, twenty-ſeven yards of blue linſey, value 25s. ſeven yards and three-quarters of kerſey, value 7s. and four yards of ſerge, value 4s. the property of Birkhead Hitchcock, BIRKHEAD HITCHCOCK ſworn.

On the 4th of February, I was in a room at the further end of my ſhop, I ſaw the priſoner paſs and repaſs the ſhop two or three times, and I ſaw him come by the bulk of my window, ſlip off a bundle, put it under his arm, and walk away; mine is an open window, I ran after him immediately, and ſeized him.

THOMAS ROGERS ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner take the cloth.

—— REYNOLDS ſworn.

I ſaw the proſecutor follow a perſon and collar him juſt by my door, I ſaw the bundle taken from him and given to another man; I ſent my young man home with him, to aſſiſt him.

(The things depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I had been to Tower-wharf to know when the Ramſgate hoy was going; I ſaw this property lay at a little diſtance from the door, and the proſecutor came and ſaid it was his.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

380. JAMES THOMAS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 17th day of February, one wooden box, value 1s. fifty-ſix pounds weight of ſeed called anniſeed, the property of James Fowler and others.

JOHN MANSFIELD ſworn.

I am a watchman on the keys, on the 17th day of February, I came to Bear-key gateway, and I ſaw the priſoner coming up with the box on his ſhoulder, it wanted twenty minutes of two, he came up from the water ſide, I ſtopped him and took him, and he came with me as tame as a lamb; it has been in the care of the conſtable ever ſince.

—— HOWARD ſworn.

I aſſiſted the laſt witneſs to ſecure the priſoner; and ſaw the property upon him.

JOSEPH FILEE ſworn.

I packed the box, and delivered it to the porter of Bear key, to the Porters-key porters, and I conceive they are anſwerable for it after delivery; this is the box.

JOHN LAKE ſworn.

I am one of the gangſmen, we receive goods from the merchants, and deliver them to the merchants to carry on board ſhip.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I am a poor man, and was out of employment, I went to try to get a day's work where I could, and a man on the keys aſked me to carry this box to Cheapſide, I aſked him two ſhillings, and he offered me one ſhilling and ſixpence, and he walked up the gateway, and this man came and ſeized me.

Jury to Mansfield. Did you ſee anybody near him when he was firſt ſtopped?—No, nobody was nigh him.

GUILTY.

Whipped at Bear Key.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

381. RICHARD CLARIDGE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 26th day of January laſt, one wooden tub, value 3d.

3d. and fifty pounds weight of butter, value 30s. the property of William Bird.

WILLIAM BIRD ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner crawl into my ſhop, and run away with a tub of butter; I purſued him and took him, he threw away the tub.

RALPH YOUNG ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner come out of the ſhop with the butter in his hand, I purſued and took him, he was never out of my ſight, I ſaw him drop the butter.

NATHAN LYONS ſworn.

I took charge of the priſoner and the butter.

(Depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was coming up the lane, and this tub of butter lay in the middle of the road, and they took me.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

382. WILLIAM MOSELEY and JOHN MALY were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 13th day of January laſt, one linen handkerchief, value 6d. the property of a certain perſon unknown.

WILLIAM MOSELEY, GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

JOHN MALY, GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

383. JOHN HIAM was indicted for feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling-houſe of John Hawkins, the ſaid John and one Thomas Hawkins being therein, about the hour of four in the afternoon, on the 14th day of January laſt, and feloniouſly ſtealing therein five ſilk handkerchiefs, value 15s. and twelve ſilk and cotton handkerchiefs, value 25s. the property of the ſaid John Hawkins.

JOHN HAWKINS ſworn.

I live in Alderſgate-ſtreet, my ſhop window was broke between four and five in the afternoon, on the 14th of January laſt, and the things in the indictment taken; the handkerchiefs were found upon the priſoner immediately after.

CHARLES HAMILTON ſworn.

I live directly oppoſite to the proſecutor; on the 14th of February I heard the cry of ſtop thief, one of the other witneſſes had hold of him; I took a piece of handkerchiefs from him.

Proſecutor. I cannot ſwear to them, I loſt ſuch ſort, and they are the ſame number.

Priſoner. That witneſs was not there at the time it was done.

JAMES SERLE ſworn.

I live in the neighbourhood of the proſecutor; I had been down in my cellar for ſome coals, and my boy ſays to me, take care daddy, there is a bull coming; there were a number of people, and I ſaw the priſoner paſs this window, and turn back again; I ſtepped towards that ſide of the way, I ſtaid there till the glaſs broke; I was determined to take the firſt man that came away; the priſoner was not dreſſed as he is now; he came a yard off the pavement; and I ſaid, you ſhall not have that property; I immediately took him to my own ſide of the way, and this man took ſomething out of his breaſt, which were handkerchiefs; theſe are the handkerchiefs.

JOHN PRITCHARD ſworn.

There was a body of people coming along, I ſaw them ſtop, and heard the proſecutor's window ſmaſh in; I ſaw Serle take hold of the priſoner, and I ſaw the priſoner drop theſe three handkerchiefs from him, and I ſaw Serle take the other two handkerchiefs from the priſoner's coat.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

He ſaid, when his wife lay-in, he loſt a quantity of wet linen; and he ſaid, if my life would pay for it, he would ſwear it away; I was coming along, there were forty or fifty people, I thought there was a houſe on fire; I kicked theſe handkerchiefs before me, and a gentleman knocked me down; I did not think that any pane of glaſs was broke. I have no witneſſes.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing to the value of 4s. 10d.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

383. PHILIP INWOOD and WILLIAM CLARK were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 11th day of January laſt, twenty pounds weight of beef, value 6s. and ſixty-three pounds weight of fat, value 5s. the property of Thomas Clayton.

RICHARD SCARGILL ſworn.

About half after eight on Wedneſday morning the 11th of January, I found the proſecutor's ſlaughter-houſe door broke open, and the padlock within ſide, I found the beef cut, and the fat gone, which had been there the night before; about twenty pounds of beef was gone.

THOMAS CARPMEAL ſworn.

We went to the houſe of Lucas who has been convicted here the other day, and the two priſoners came in, we ſearched them, and found a picklock key on them, it was tried I underſtand; the fat and meat were in Lucas's houſe.

THOMAS GREEN ſworn.

Was with Carpmeal, and depoſed to the ſame effect.

PRISONERS DEFENCE.

We went to enquire for an acquaintance.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Court to Priſoners. I give you both a caution, to be very careful of your conduct, you appear in a very ſuſpicious light, the officers of juſtice will keep an eye upon you.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

384. THOMAS PROSSER and WILLIAM WRAY were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 29th day of January laſt, four iron rails, value 5s. belonging to John Spence and Morgan Hugh Kennedy, then and there fixed to their dwelling houſes, againſt the form of the ſtatute.

A ſecond Count, For that they, on the ſaid day, one iron bar, value 3s. and three iron rails, value 7s. belonging to the ſaid John and Morgan Hugh, did feloniouſly break with intent to ſteal.

The priſoners were taken near the premiſes, and had been ſeen walking backwards and forwards by the watchmen, and the rails were taken down ready to be carried away.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

385. THOMAS HAMILTON and SIMON GORING were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 19th day of January laſt, two live hogs, price 4l. the property of John Thompſon.

JOHN

JOHN THOMPSON ſworn.

I keep the Pied Bull, Iſlington, on the 19th of January I loſt two hogs, black and white; they were ſtopped at Greenwich, I knew them directly.

THOMAS OWEN ſworn.

I work with the proſecutor, I know the hogs, the ſow I knew by the white on her back, and the barrow pig by the white on each ſide the ſhoulders; I remember their being loſt, I ſaw them at Greenwich.

WILLIAM HARRISON ſworn.

On the 20th of January laſt, between ſeven and eight, the priſoner Hamilton came to our houſe alone, and aſked me to go down and buy two pigs; and the other priſoner was at the public houſe with the pigs; Hamilton aſked me forty-five ſhillings for the two; I told him I would have them, and Hamilton drove them about three parts of the way home; the other priſoner was there, but he did not make any bargain about them; Hamilton ſaid, it did not ſignify where he got them, I ſhould not come into any trouble; they both ſaid they were their own property; I put them into my fore yard, and ſent for a conſtable.

RICHARD JAMES ſworn.

I took the priſoners into cuſtody, they both ſaid they were their own property; before the magiſtrate Hamilton ſaid they were the property of the proſecutor; there was no promiſe or threat, but it was a fair open confeſſion.

The priſoner Hamilton called four witneſſes to his character.

The priſoner Goring called five witneſſes to his character.

BOTH GUILTY.

Each to be tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

386. WILLIAM GRINDLEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 28th day of January laſt, one carcaſe of a pig, price 15s. the property of Elizabeth King, privily in her ſhop.

The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoner.

ROBERT PREVOST ſworn.

I live at No. 21, Warwick-lane; I ſell the goods of Mrs. King, as clerk and ſaleſman; ſhe is a wholeſale carcaſe butcher, ſhe deals in country meat. On Friday the 28th of January, I ſold this pig which the priſoner is indicted for, to a perſon that keeps a cook's ſhop in Fetter-lane; it was a particularly poor pig.

Court. Was it paid for?——No; I do not ſuppoſe there was ſuch another pig to be found in the market; I do not know how many pigs Mrs. King had in her ſhop; I obſerved it as ſoon as the man who bought it aſked the price of it; it was what they call a beat out pig, it was brown and very thin; the bones were ſlit very even; I ſuſpected the priſoner, having ſeen him walk by the ſhop that morning, and when I loſt the pig, I ſaid, I remember that red-headed man went by; I went to the priſoner's houſe, I afterwards ſaw the pig at Clerkenwell; I was ſure it was the ſame by the cleaving of the bones and the ſkin; the priſoner ſeemed very much agitated, and begged of me to let him go, and he would never do ſo again; I told him we had loſt ſeveral; he ſaid, he would not mind paying for all the pigs we had loſt; and before the Juſtice, he owned the fact; he ſaid it was the firſt thing that ever he did; he was taken up on the Friday; but at a further examination on the Monday, he did not own it; but ſaid he bought it of a countryman.

Court. What words did he uſe the firſt time?——He ſaid, pleaſe your worſhip, I did take this pig, but I never did any thing before.

Priſoner. I told them the pig they took from me, was a caſualty pig; I did not know they they took me for thieving; I thought they took me for a caſualty.

Court. Are you very ſure he ſaid he took the pig?—I am very ſure.

What is the value of the pig?——It was ſold for fifteen ſhillings and two-pence, that is the worth of it.

JOHN HAYWARD ſworn.

The morning this pig was ſtolen, I took it out of a cloth, and hung it up at the door; it was a remarkable brown ſkin pig, dark in fleſh; it was not cleaved down as it ſhould be, and the bones of it were yellow; it was a very remarkable pig, I never ſaw one like it, though I have ſeen many thouſands; I went out and left nobody in the ſhop; and while I was gone the pig was gone; I went with Prevoſt to the priſoner's houſe, in Pear-tree Court, Clerkenwell, and he was cutting up the pig; I looked through the window, and ſaw him cutting up the pig, and I made an expreſſion that was not fit to be heard, and I ſaid this is the pig; and he ſaid, Lord have mercy upon me, what have I done! he then offered me a guinea to let him off; he would give me any thing; I told him it was not in my power; I left my fellow ſervant with him, and went home; I examined the pig, I am ſure it is the ſame, though one ſide was cut, the other ſide was quartered, and I took a quarter of it from behind the bedſtead; I was preſent when he went before the Juſtice, and he there owned he took the pig from the ſhop of the widow King, and begged for mercy; on the Monday, he ſaid he bought the pig for nine ſhillings.

—— SIMONS ſworn.

I am a butcher, my fellow ſervant and I went out with a ſide of beef, we firſt put the pig into the ſhop, and laid it on a hamper, this was about half paſt eight in the morning; while we were gone, the pig was gone, and we looked for it; it was a pig very dark in the fleſh, and rough ſkinned, and poor; I could diſtinguiſh it; I went after it was loſt, with my fellow ſervant to the priſoner's houſe, and found him cutting it up, he had the chopper in his hand; he was left in my cuſtody, and before the Juſtice, on the Friday he owned to it, and on the Monday he ſaid he bought it of a man at the Bell Inn.

Priſoner. Aſk that witneſs my character?——He worked with me two or three winters in the Victualling Office, and behaved very well.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

My Lord, I had been to the Bell, in Newgate-market, to get part of a pint of purl, with an acquaintance of my brother's; and coming through the paſſage, I perceived a man, ſeemingly a country farmer, with this pig on a bit of ſtraw; I perceived it was not a clear killed pig; I aſked him if he had been buying that pig, thinking he had been wronged in it, he ſaid it was a caſualty, and was returned on his hands, I aſked him what he would ſell it for, he ſaid ſixteen ſhillings, I bid him fourteen ſhillings, and bought it for fourteen ſhillings and ſix-pence; the perſon that drank with me, was by when I paid for it, I gave him half a guinea in gold, and four ſhillings in ſilver, his name is James Whier; I dare ſay he is at hand, and others to give me a character.

The Remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 23d of FEBRUARY 1785, and the following Days;

Being the THIRD SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER III. PART VIII.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of William Grindley.

JAMES WHIER ſworn.

I live in Alderſgate-ſtreet, I am a bricklayer by trade.

Court. Do you keep a houſe?——No, I only keep a room.

Who do you work with now?—I did work for Mr. Gray laſt, in Wilderneſs-row: on Friday laſt was a month, the 28th of January, I believe it was; I was at Cheapſide looking for a job, coming back from there, in Newgate-ſtreet, between ſeven and eight, I ſaw the priſoner talking to a bricklayer's labourer; I aſked him after his brother, who worked with me, I told him I was going to Warwick Lane, he ſaid he was going to Newgate-market; I went along with him, we went into the Bell, and had a pint of purl, coming out of the Bell he and I together, and I was going away, we ſaw a country-man with ſome pork, and a baſket; he ſays to me, ſays he, that is caſualty pork, which I never knew what caſualty pork was before.

What do you mean by caſualty pork?—I do not know, it was very poor pork, and the rind on the outſide of it was quite red, it ſeemed as if it died; he aſked the man if he had bought it, the man made anſwer no, he had brought it to town for ſale; he aſked him what he would have for it, and he would buy it, accordingly he aſked him ſixteen ſhillings for it, he offered him fourteen ſhillings; after ſome words, he bought the pig for fourteen ſhillings and ſix-pence, and paid the money, half a guinea, and the remainder in ſilver; the pork he and the man took out of the baſket, and put on his ſhoulder, it was in four quarters, and he took it away; I ſaw no more of him till his brother found me out.

Deſcribe the pork that he bought particularly?—The rind of it, the outſide ſkin of it, was red as blood.

Was it rather a fattiſh pig?—No, a very poor pig, it was in four quarters.

Do you know where he lives?——I do now, I did not then; I did not ſee it weighed.

Court to Simons. When you ſaw the pork at this man's houſe, deſcribe in what condition it was?——There was one ſide in two quarters, and he was cutting up the other in different joints.

Court to Haywood. In what condition did you find this pig?——One ſide was cut up more like mutton, the other ſide was in quarters, quarters, and one quarter I took from behind the bed.

The priſoner called another witneſs who gave him a good character.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing to the value of 4s. 10d.

To be whipped round Newgate Market.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

387. ALEXANDER FISHER and WILLIAM MOUNTAIN were indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of John Thomas, about the hour of ſeven in the night, on the 23d day of February, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, one cloth coat, value 7s. one cloth waiſtcoat, value 2s. two woollen blankets, value 7s. two pillows, value 2s. three pillow caſes, value 1s. 6d. one linen ſhift, value 1s. two ſheets, value 1s. one mahogany tea cheſt, value 4s. three canniſters, value 3s. one linen and woollen quilt, value 2s. three linen caps, value 1s. one cotton handkerchief, value 4d. fourteen ſilk thrums, value 4s. two pair of ſleeves, value 6d. one pair of gloves, value 1d. four clouts, value 10d. one linen towel, value 2d. one paper ſnuff box, value 2d. one pair of ſilver ſleeve buttons, value 18d. one ſilver breaſt buckle, value 6d. one box, value 2s. and a piece of ſilk, value 3s. his property.

JOHN THOMAS ſworn.

I live in St. John-ſtreet, Bethnall Green, I rent half a houſe, and live in it; on the 23d of February laſt, I was robbed; I went out at two, and left my wife and family at home; about ſeven o'clock my wife ſent to me, and I came home, and found the lock was broke off the kitchen door, and the ſtreet door was forced open; I live in the lower apartments, a family has the other two ſtories: the priſoner Mountain was brought to my houſe about eight the ſame evening.

MARY THOMAS ſworn.

I am wife of the laſt witneſs; on the 23d of February, I went out about ſeven minutes after five.

Was it then dark?—No; I left the door on the latch; I came home a little before ſeven, and found the ſtreet door wide open, and the kitchen door wide open, and my property gone; the lock of the ſtreet door was forced open from without, my property was brought back to me.

JAMES MATTHEWS ſworn.

I am a beadle of St. Mary, Whitechapel, on the 23d of February, I was going about to deliver my precepts, for our headboroughs to go to Hicks's-hall, and in Three-tun-alley, Whitechapel, juſt after ſeven, I ſaw the two priſoners and another boy; I never ſaw the priſoners before, one had a box and the other a bag, I think it was Mountain, and Fiſher I think to the beſt of my knowledge, had a large bundle upon his head; this was half a mile from the proſecutor's: they both ſaid a man employed them to take thoſe things to Mrs. Cook's, and was to give them ſix-pence a piece; they could not tell me where they brought them from, but ſaid they would ſhew me, I took them to the watch-houſe, and Mountain took me to the proſecutor's houſe, and they were in great confuſion; I left the other boy locked up at the watch-houſe; the proſecutor came and ſwore to the property, I have had it ever ſince; they ſaid two men employed them to carry the things, but they ſhould not know them.

(The things depoſed to.)

CHARLES EARLE ſworn.

I am another beadle; Mathews brought in the priſoners, and I went with him to the proſecutor's houſe, and found it as he has told you.

PRI-

PRISONER FISHER's DEFENCE.

To tell you the plain truth, I was going to my grandfather's, and two men offered us ſix-pence to carry theſe things, I did not know them but by their dreſs.

BOTH GUILTY

Of ſtealing, but not of breaking and entering the dwelling houſe.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

388. ROBERT FRANKLIN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 19th day of February, one ſaddle, value 10s. and three bridles, value 10s. the property of John Gretton, Eſq.

And JAMES BUSHNELL and WILLIAM JACKNELL were indicted for feloniouſly receiving, on the ſame day, the aforeſaid goods, knowing them to have been ſtolen.

JOHN GRETTON, Eſq; ſworn.

I live at Whitehall, but my ſtables are in the pariſh of St. James's; the priſoner Franklin had the care of my horſes, my ſervant was gone, and he had offered himſelf; and on Monday the 21ſt of February, the priſoner Franklin came to my houſe, and told me that he had taken the liberty of lending my beſt ſaddle, and my beſt ſilver bridle: he ſaid bridle in the ſingular number; he ſaid he had lent it to a friend, and that they had been ſtopped by the officers of the city; that his friend was in the Poultry Compter, and that if I would write a letter to my Lord Mayor, or go to him and claim my bridle and my ſaddle, ſaying that I permitted him to lend it, they would be reſtored to me: he had the care of the ſtables, and the key, I told him he had taken a very great liberty indeed: upon enquiring I found three bridles were gone; the next day I went before the ſitting Alderman, and he came there to ſay he had lent the bridle, and he was examined and committed, and the other two priſoners as receivers.

THOMAS BOND ſworn.

I am a watchman of Duke's Place, a gentleman informed me, he ſuſpected three men, and I went with him, and met the priſoner Jacknell with a bag on his ſhoulder; I took him to the watch-houſe, he ſaid he came from Mr. Clarke's, at Shoreditch; there were three bridles and one ſaddle in the bag, Levy had the care of them.

DAVID LEVY ſworn.

The priſoner was brought in with a bag, I aſked him what was in it, he ſaid a ſaddle and three bridles, that came from Mr. Clarke's, at Shoreditch Church, but he would not give me a direction where, though I offered to ſend; I took him to the Compter, and going along, the priſoner Buſhnell came running up, ſays he, I have a key of the ſtable in my pocket, and he ſhewed me a key, and ſaid I gave him the things.

WILLIAM LOVE ſworn.

I am a weaver, No. 15, Addle-ſtreet; on Saturday the 19th of February, about a quarter paſt ten at night, I was coming down Houndſditch, and the corner of the ſtreet leading to Duke's-Place, I ſaw three men, two of them are at the bar now, Buſhell and Jacknell; Jacknell had a ſack on his ſhoulder, with a ſaddle and bridle; they both made a ſtop, as if they were not determined which way to go; they ſpoke together, but I was not nigh enough to hear; the ſack was not changed from one to the other while I ſaw them; Buſhnell, I believe, went to Duke's-Place, I ſaw no more of him; I went and told the watchman; and we went and took Jacknell and the ſack to the watch-houſe; the other was twenty yards before, when I firſt ſaw them; but whether it was Buſhnell or no, I cannot ſay; Jacknell ſaid at the watch-houſe, he had the the things from Mr. Clarke, at Shoreditch Church; I told him it would be very hard he ſhould be detained till Monday; I would give a man a ſhilling to go to Mr. Clarke's, and if they were his, he ſhould be diſcharged; he ſaid, no, I ſhould not, he would ſtay there; about ten minutes after Buſhnell came in, and ſaid, he was come to releaſe him; he took a key out of his pocket, and ſaid it was the key of the ſtable; and he was detained.

PRISONER JACKNELL'S DEFENCE.

I had been at Mr. Clarke's, but not with that bridle and ſaddle; and I was going home, and I met Buſhnell, he ſaid he was going to the Turk's-Head in Whitechapel, with ſome things; he aſked me to go home with him, and we would go home together; we live facing one another, in Rupert-ſtreet; and I turned round, and walked with him, and he aſked me to carry them a little for him, ſo I took them on my back, and I ſtopped to make water in Butcher-row, and he walked on before me about twenty yards, and the watchman came and ſtopped me, I called to him; I ſaid, if they choſe to ſend to Rupert-ſtreet, they might find where we lived.

Court to Bond. Did he ſay any thing about Rupert-ſtreet, do you remember?—He mentioned ſomething about Rupert-ſtreet in the watch-houſe, but I did not ſtop to hear it; I am ſure he ſaid he came from one Mr. Clarke's at Shoreditch.

Levy. He told me he came from Shoreditch, from one Mr. Clarke's; I aſked him where he was going; he ſaid to Rupert-ſtreet; I told him, it was a very comical way to go.

PRISONER BUSHNELL'S DEFENCE.

Franklin lives in the ſame yard I do, he looks after Mr. Gretton's ſtables; I aſked him to lend me three ſaddles and three bridles; he ſaid he could not, but he would lend me one ſaddle, and as many bridles as he could ſpare; I wanted them for a friend going to Windſor; I met Jacknell at Shoreditch, and aſked him to go with me; I have often lent Counſellor Gretton things, both ſtraw and hay, and every thing elſe.

PRISONER FRANKLIN'S DEFENCE.

Mr. Gretton hired me to look after his horſes, and bid his ſervant deliver me the key; and Buſhnell aſked me to lend him three ſaddles and three bridles, I lent him one ſaddle and three bridles.

Court to Proſecutor. Had you given him any orders about this ſaddle and bridles?——None at all, it is a ſaddle on which I generally ride.

ROBERT FRANKLIN,
JAMES BUSHNELL,
WILLIAM JACKNELL, } GUILTY.

To be each confined to hard labour two years in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

389. ELIZABETH STACEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 18th of January laſt, ten yards of worked muſlin, value 6l. a linen jacket, value 2s. a linen petticoat, value 2s. a linen apron, value 1s. a pair of cotton ſtockings, value 10d. the property of Leonard Sharp, in the dwelling houſe of John Maddocks.

JUDITH SHARP ſworn.

I lodge in the houſe of John Maddocks; I employed the priſoner to waſh for me a piece of worked muſlin; ſhe lived five weeks with me, and I was very ill, and my huſband took her to nurſe me; and I told the priſoner to ſeek for a place; I loſt this piece of muſlin, the value is ſix pounds, the linen draper told me I muſt pay for it if I loſt any thing; I work in tambour, and open work; I gave the priſoner leave to ſleep with one of my girls; I had the muſlin and the jacket on Monday night; the linen jacket is worth five ſhillings, that is the loweſt; the linen petticoat was waſhed the ſame night, I left her in the work room, I did not ſee the things again; I got up at ſix o'clock, and found the room open, and the things gone; I ſaw a pair of my ſtockings on the priſoner's legs when ſhe was taken into cuſtody; I had put ſoles to them, I can ſwear to the ſtockings, from their marks; I ſaw the things eight days afterwards; ſhe never came back to the hour; I never found any more of my property.

CORNELIA HOPE EDWARDS ſworn.

I am fourteen; the priſoner was in our houſe on Monday evening, and this muſlin was wet, and ſhe put it in a pan, to iron it; I laſt ſaw her at five o'clock on Tueſday morning, I did not ſee her afterwards; I went to bed, ſhe never came near the bed, any farther than to help me to make it; ſhe was to ſleep with me at night; my miſtreſs gave her leave to ſleep with me; ſhe ſat up to iron, I went to bed directly, ſhe ſaid ſhe would come at leaſt in an hour after me, but ſhe did not come.

Did you miſs your things in the morning?——Yes.

Did you ever ſee her afterwards in the houſe?——No, Sir, not till ſhe was taken up; ſhe went away on the 18th, and was taken up on the 26th; I ſaw her before the magiſtrate, and there was a pair of my miſtreſs's ſtockings upon her; the ſtockings were ſoled with a ſort of thick cloth, called Ruſſia.

—— LEE ſworn.

I apprehended the priſoner, to the beſt of my knowledge it was on the 26th of January at night; I took her from the Blue Poſts; I did not ſee her before; I did not examine her till I brought her to the Rotation-office; I took her ſtockings off by the Magiſtrate's order; which Mrs. Sharp ſaid were hers; ſhe never was out of my ſight all the way, till we came to the office, and there Mrs. Sharp deſired to look at her ſtockings; nothing elſe was found upon her; Mrs. Sharp has forgot to tell you, ſhe went through the back room into the girls room, and took the jacket off the bed.

Mrs. Sharp. I ſaw her in the bed room that evening.

Did you owe her any wages?——Only three ſhillings.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was with the proſecutrix when ſhe was ill, and I ſtaid with her five weeks; they owed me ſeven ſhillings and ſix pence, and he gave me three ſhillings and ſix pence; he ſaid I muſt go away, he had too many to keep already; I went away and ſhe ſent for me to waſh; I did not know what to do, I was very much diſtreſſed, and was obliged to ſtay all night; there are many girls work for her, and they are girls of the town.

Court to Proſecutrix. Did ſhe apply for her wages that night?——Yes; ſhe ſaid ſhe would lay in bed till I came from the linen-draper's, and got the money.

The priſoner called one witneſs to her character.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing to the value of 10*d.*

To be confined to hard labour twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

390. ANN MOTT was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 15th of February, one piece of linen cloth, value 15s. the property of Joſeph Capps, privily in his ſhop.

JOHN

JOHN HARDY ſworn.

I am a ſervant to Mr. Capps of Mary-le-bon; on the 15th of February, in the afternoon, the priſoner came to our ſhop, before candles were lighted, between three and five; ſhe aſked for ſomething, I do not know what; and I ſaw her at the counter, looking at ſome articles; I thought there was ſomething ſuſpicious in her manner, ſhe ſeemed as if ſhe did not want to buy, and pulling the cloths about; I ſaw her looking at a piece of linen cloth, I was waiting on other cuſtomers; as ſoon as ſhe went out of the ſhop, I looked at the pieces of cloth that had been laying there, and found one of them miſſing; I immediately jumped over the counter, ſhe had got a few paces from the ſhop, and I took hold of her, and lifted up her arm, and took this piece of cloth from under her cloak; I have had the piece of cloth ever ſince, it is marked C. E.

Did you ſee the piece under her arm before ſhe got out of the ſhop?——No; as ſhe was going out of the ſhop, I got over with intent to ſtop her; I am perfectly ſure ſhe took the piece of cloth at that time; I am not perfectly ſure how many pieces there were, but there were either four or five; I meaſured the cloth, it meaſured ſeventeen yards and an half; the value is fifteen ſhillings; it is the property of Mr. Capps.

JOSEPH SIMMONDS ſworn.

The priſoner came into the ſhop, and was in it about two hours; ſhe aſked for ſome Iriſh cloth; I never ſaw her before.

How happened it that in two hours time ſhe was not ſerved?——We were ſo buſy we could not ſerve her; ſhe ſtood near that counter where the things were miſſing; I ſhewed her ſome cloth, ſhe made a great many words before ſhe bought; and I ſhewed her five or ſix different pieces of Iriſh cloth; at laſt ſhe bought ſeven yards at fourteen-pence a yard, it came to eight ſhillings and two-pence, I remember perfectly well; ſhe paid for it in my ſight, to my maſter; I put all off the counter, except two pieces, the one ſhe had the cloth off and another; I went to ſpeak to another cuſtomer, and then ſhe was gone out, and the other piece was miſſing: I know I left two pieces when I went to ſerve the other cuſtomers; I came back in a minute, and one piece was miſſing; I could not tell the mark then, I knew it afterwards; I told my fellow ſervant, and ſome ladies who ſtood at the counter moved to ſee if it was dropped down, but we could not find it; then my fellow ſervant jumped over the counter and went after the priſoner; and I ran out, and ſaw a piece of cloth taken from under her cloak; it was marked C. E. I can ſwear to the mark; I had ſhewn her that piece, with that mark before in the ſhop, and the piece I cut for her is marked C. M. it makes juſt two-pence a yard difference; we did not examine her any farther.

What became of the cloth ſhe bought and paid for?——She took it out with her, and when ſhe was brought back, I ſaw her lay it on the counter in a paper; I cannot tell the meaſure of the piece ſhe took, it has been cut; I do not know the value of it.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I did not know I had any other than what I bought and paid for; I was only one ſtep down at the door, and they laid hold of me, and I told them I did not know I had any more than I bought and paid for.

Court to Hardy. Which way was ſhe going?——She was turning I believe to the right, that was from the ſhop.

Was the cloth looſe under her arm?——Yes; I enquired about her neighbourhood, and they gave her an exceeding good character.

The priſoner called five witneſſes who gave her a very good character.

GUILTY, Death.

She was humbly recommended to mercy by the proſecutor.

N. B.

N. B. When ſentence was paſſed on the capital convicts, this priſoner pleaded in ſtay of execution that ſhe was with child, upon which a jury of matrons was impannelled, who returned with a verdict, that ſhe was not quick with child.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

391. THOMAS GRAY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 24th day of February, twenty-ſeven pair of worſted ſtockings, value 30s. ſeven pair of cotton ſtockings, value 7s. one pair of thread ſtockings, value 12d. one pair of ſilk and worſted, value 12d. two pair of mitts, value 12d. four ſhawls, value 8s. three ſilk handkerchiefs, value 12s. one pair of buckles, value 12d. four pair of other buckles, value 2s. ſix pair of children's baſe metal ſhoe buckles, value 2s. three pair of garter's value 6d. the property of Janet Atkinſon.

ROBERT ASKEW ſworn.

I am a conſtable; on Thurſday the 24th of February, between ſix and ſeven in the evening, oppoſite my houſe, I obſerved the priſoner and two girls watching the window of a hoſier and hatter's; and the priſoner ſtooped down under the ſaſh, and put one foot into the ſhop, and reached with his right arm round the half door on the hoſiery ſide, and took up a bundle and ran out, I jumped acroſs the way, and ſeized him with this bundle in his hand; I told him he had robbed my neighbour, his anſwer to me was, you lie, you thief, I did not mean to rob the ſhop, this is the bundle.

(Produced and depoſed to by the Proſecutor.)

JOHN PASSON ſworn.

I live in Tothill-ſtreet, I am a hoſier and haberdaſher; I was not at home at the firſt of this affair, when I returned the priſoner was in the ſhop and the proſecutrix, ſhe had a bundle with her.

GEORGE WAGGRIDGE ſworn.

I am a broker, on the 24th of February laſt, I was going up Tothill-ſtreet, between ſix and ſeven, I ſaw the priſoner and two girls ſtanding near this ſhop, and I ſaw the priſoner ſtoop down with his head lower than the glaſs of the door, and put his hand round the door and reach ſomething, but I could not tell what it was; and I ſaw Mr. Aſkew croſs the way to take the priſoner, I went to aſſiſt him, and I ſaw theſe garters in the priſoner's hand, and Mr. Aſkew puſhed him headforemoſt into the ſhop, I ſaw this bundle dropped on the ſill of the door; the priſoner was committed.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

Sir, I have a couple of people that are ſtrangers to me, that are witneſſes in my favour; and my ſiſter was at a public houſe, at the Horſe-ferry, and theſe two people happened to be by, and ſaw the whole affair.

ROBERT ARMSTRONG ſworn.

I am a ſawyer, a journeyman, I am a houſe-keeper in the Horſe-ferry, Weſtminſter; I was coming home after I left work about ſeven in the evening, there I ſaw the priſoner looking in at the window of a hoſier and hatter's; and my mate ſaid, look at Gray, he is looking in there, what is he doing? he ſtaid there about a minute and an half, or two minutes, and there came a man right facing me, it was the ſame ſide of the way facing me, but at a diſtance from me; I was of the ſame ſide of the way with the priſoner, a man puſhed the priſoner in, he was very nigh the door, and ſaid, you villain or ſomething to that purpoſe, you was going to take the woman's bundle; but I never ſaw him offer to take or touch anything at all.

Was you in ſuch a ſituation that you could ſee him touch any thing or not?—Yes.

Could you ſee him when he was in the houſe?——I could.

Was he ſtooping at all?——No, he never ſtooped at all, not to my ſight.

Was the whole door open?——Yes.

Are both ſides of the ſhop alike?—I believe they are, I did not go into the houſe.

Where-

Whereabouts did you ſtand?—Rather on one ſide, and the man that beckoned to me was on the other ſide.

How far is the door from the window?—It joins in the middle; I ſaw him through the door way.

Do you ſwear he took nothing?—Upon my oath, when he was puſhed in, I ſaw nothing about him.

After he was puſhed in did you?—No, I did not, I muſt have ſeen it if there had been any ſuch thing.

Who brought you here?——The priſoner's ſiſter; ſhe happened to come into the houſe where I lodged laſt Sunday.

Who do you work for?——For Mr. Luward at Pimlico, a cooper.

Did you know the priſoner before?——Yes.

Were there any other people about the door, but this gentleman that puſhed him in?——Not juſt at that time, but directly after.

How happens it you did not ſtop then?——My curioſity never leads me into ſuch affairs as thoſe; his ſiſter came to the public houſe accidentally, the ſign of the White Hart in the Horſe-Ferry, and ſhe was talking to the landlord about her brother being detained for a ſuppoſed robbery; and he ſaid there were two men that lodged in his houſe that ſaw it; and ſhe deſired we would come down.

What brought her to the public houſe?——I cannot tell.

Court to Aſkew. Did you ſee this man there?——I did, but not till more than four minutes after I had the priſoner in the ſhop; I only obſerved two girls and the priſoner about; but after this man, and ſeveral more ſtood at the door, and the people declared they would reſcue this man from the ſhop; I do not recollect his ſaying any thing; the priſoner was not quite without the ſhop, but he had the bundle in his arms, and I forced him into the ſhop, and held him there: at the time he was before the Juſtice, he aſked me why I did not permit him to come out of the ſhop with the property, that that muſt have done him, and he ſhould not then have returned from whence he came, for he would rather be hanged than return from whence he came.

Court to Armſtrong. How long have you known the priſoner?——Only ſeen him come into a public houſe, no acquaintance at all.

JAMES MILLS ſworn.

I am a journeyman ſawyer, I work with Robert Armſtrong as a mate.

Does he know any thing of the coopering buſineſs?——Yes.

Has he ever worked in that way?—Yes, Sir, with me, in ſawing ſtaves: coming from work on Wedneſday evening—

How do you know it was Wedneſday?——I think it was.

Can you be ſure of that?—Yes.

For whom had you worked in the coopering way?——Mr. Luwar, Pimlico.

Do you work for him now;——Yes; as we were coming from work, about a quarter to ſeven, coming down this ſtreet, I ſaid to my mate, there is Thomas Gray, he is drunk enough, he is ſtanding; I ſaid, let us ſtop and ſee what he is doing of; he was a ſtranger to me, but I have ſeen him come in and out of the public houſe where I live; I never ſpoke to him.

How came you to think he was drunk?——Becauſe he looked as if he was drunk.

Whereabouts did you ſee him firſt?——In Tothill-ſtreet; and he ſtopped and looked, and there was a young man that ſtood and beckoned with his hand, we were at the next door almoſt, and he ſtood cloſe to the door; we ſtood a little while, and a man ruſhed in upon him, and puſhed him into the houſe.

You ſtood on the other ſide of the window?——Yes.

Then you could not ſee what was done in the houſe?——No, the priſoner was not in the houſe, I ſaw him ſtand at the door, and a man ſhoved him in, and ſaid, you raſcal, are you going to ſteal the woman's bundle.

Was any part of his body in the houſe before he was ſhoved in?——There might be one foot in, he was rather leaning a little.

Court to Askew. Did you see this Mills there?——No.

——GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

392. WALTER GROVES and ROBERT WELCH were indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 29th day of January last, three hempen sacks, value 6s. and twelve bushels of oats, value 30s. the property of James Brown and John Bovill.

And WILLIAM PARIS and THOMAS WILD were indicted for feloniously receiving the same, on the said 29th of January last, knowing them to have been stolen.

(Mr. Garrow opened the Case.)

Mr. Silvester Council for Groves.
Mr. James Council for Welch.
Mr. Chetwood Council for Wild.
Mr. Silvester and Mr. Peatt Council for Paris.

The witnesses examined apart, at the request of the Prisoner's Council.

JOHN FAREY sworn.

I am clerk to Mr. Brown and Bovill, in Milford Lane; I remember on the 29th of January, landing out fifteen quarters of oats, for the second troop of horse-guards, by Aaron Jones the carman, who is one of the parties indicted, though he is not in custody; it was to go to a stable near Portman Square: there were fifteen quarters in Jones's cart, William Lofton likewise had fifteen quarters, ten for the troop, and five for Squire Fellows's in Grosvenor Street.

Who was Groves?——I do not perfectly recollect him, he was the person that went with the cart as a trouncer, I did not know him nor Welch before.

Court. What is a trouncer?—A person that goes with the cart to help to unload, we have nothing to do with him, the man employs him.

Mr. Garrow. Have you at any time, seen any sacks that you have heard were found any where?——Yes, at the sign of the Cock, in Litchfield-street; they were Brown and Bovill's sacks, marked at full length; one of the sacks is marked Lofton.

Mr. Silvester. All that you know of this business, is that you sent thirty quarters of corn that day by these two carman?——Yes.

What they did with it you do not know? That I cannot say.

They were the persons intrusted by you, or your master, to convey it to the proper places?——Yes.

Your master is a very great dealer?——Yes.

He may have an hundred sacks abroad?——We never lend any sacks, we have no sacks but what we cannot do without.

You look entirely to the carmen to take the corn, and bring back the sacks?—Yes.

Have you known instances of their not bringing back the sacks?——Yes.

Mr. Garrow. On this occasion did either of the carmen pretend they had left them?——No.

Mr. Silvester. They are not here you know.

RICHARD GEARING sworn.

Where do you live?—In Newport-market; I know Wild and Paris, Paris lodges at the Boar's Head, in Newport market, and Wild lives at the chandler's shop next door; they are what we call offalmen, to take care of the fat, and wipe the beasts clean, they take care of my beasts: I do not recollect the day of the month, but on a Saturday, I cannot tell the hour; I had been drinking all the afternoon with some friends; I did not observe any thing of those two prisoners, I did not see either of them.

Did

Did you obſerve any thing appear at the Boar's Head, or at the chandler's ſhop?—No, nothing till I came out of the Boar's Head.

Court. You had been drinking there for two or three hours?——Yes, I had, as I came out of the houſe; I ſaw three men, with three ſacks on their backs, and I came away about my buſineſs.

Do you know who the three men were, or either of them?——No, Sir, neither of them.

Mr. Garrow. What ſort of ſacks were they?——I did not take any particular notice.

But you can tell me whether they were coal ſacks, or corn ſacks?——They were not black ſacks.

I believe you gave an information to Mr. Roberts?—No Sir, I did not.

Court. What was done with thoſe three ſacks?——I do not know, they were carrying them as I ſuppoſe, they were about ten yards off. when I ſaw them, going towards the ſhop.

Had not you the curioſity to look and ſee where they went?—No, I was ſent for over in a hurry to a cuſtomer, I cannot be ſure whether they went into the houſe or not.

Mr. Garrow. You know Mr. Roberts?——I have ſerved him with meat.

Do you remember any converſation with him that night, about theſe ſacks being carried to the Boar's Head?——I told him I ſaw three men with three ſacks on their backs.

Where did you ſee them?—In the Boar's Head, half an hour after I ſaw the men with the ſacks.

Can carts come up to this Boar's Head?——Yes.

Were there any carts there at the time?——No.

Was you preſent when the apartments of either of the priſoners, Wild or Paris, were ſearched?—No.

Mr. Silveſter. You ſaw three men with three ſacks?—Yes.

Mr. Peatt. If I underſtand you right, you ſay that you ſuppoſe only that they went into the Boar's Head, and that you ſaw them about forty yards from the door?——Yes.

ELLIS ROBERTS ſworn.

I live in Archer-ſtreet, St. James's; I belong to the Rotation Office, in Litchfield-ſtreet, I apprehended all the priſoners, on the 29th of January; I took Wild firſt, about eight in the evening, at the Boar's Head, in Newport-market, and I found in the one pair of ſtairs of the Boar's Head, three ſacks of oats.

Are the ſacks here?——Yes.

Court. Did you find thoſe ſacks before you took Wild?——I ſaw them before I took Wild, and then I took him in the tap room, and took him to the Cock Alehouſe; when I took him, I aſked him if he knew any thing about the corn, and he ſaid there were ſome men there, that came in and brought it on their backs, and went up ſtairs with it; I aſked him if he knew the men, and he ſaid he did not, but he deſcribed one man particularly by having a high heeled ſhoe, and he ſaid he came from Milford-lane.

Do you know any body that anſwers that deſcription?—Groves the priſoner has a high heeled ſhoe; Wild offered to go with me, but I ſaid there was no occaſion for him to go, if he would give me a direction; when I took Groves, I took him to the watch-houſe, he denied knowing any thing of it; it was about twelve o'clock: when he was before the Juſtice, he ſaid he was employed by Lofton and Aaron Jones, to aſſiſt them in delivering ſome corn at the Life-guard ſtable, one part, and the other part of it to Juſtice Fellows, in Upper Groſvenor-ſtreet; he ſaid that Lofton was concerned with him in taking and delivering this corn.

What do you ſay, taking?—At laſt he did own he carried up a ſack.

Court. Did he ſay he delivered any corn any where elſe?—He ſaid he carried one ſack to the Boar's Head, and Welch another, and Jones the third.

How

How many more did he ſay were carried by any body elſe?——Two more he ſaid were carried there, one by Aaron Jones and the other by Robert Welch.

Mr. Garrow. When did you take the other priſoners?——The Sunday morning following, at twelve o'clock, I took Paris and Groves; I took Paris at the Boar's Head, the Sunday morning following.

What did he ſay?—I told him to come to a public houſe, and he came, I told him he muſt come with me.

Did Paris ſay any thing about the corn?—Neither then nor any time ſince, (The ſacks produced.) Theſe are the ſacks that we found at the Boar's Head, there were oats in them: the ſame night I went to Wild's lodgings, I found a ſack of oats up one pair of ſtairs.

How is it marked?—E. Burnell.

Court to Farey. What do you ſay to that mark?——We cannot ſay any thing to it.

Look at the other ſacks, and tell us whether theſe are your maſter's?—The other two are, and that with the L, which is marked for Lofton; we had ſacks for the carmen, and thoſe were for Lofton, but it is a good while ago, and moſt of the ſacks are loſt.

Was there that one remaining on the 29th of January?—No.

Where was the corn emptied out of thoſe ſacks?——When firſt I ſaw the ſacks, the corn was in them, up one pair of ſtairs.

As near as you are able to identify, was it the ſame corn?—Yes.

Mr. Silveſter. It was the ſame kind of grain I fancy; horſes eat oats do not they?—Yes.

Court. Had you a ſample with you when you went?—Mr. Bovill had I believe.

Mr. Silveſter. Does Mr. Bovill grow his own corn?—No.

Mr. Peatt to Roberts. You did not ſee any thing of Paris, on the Saturday evening when you ſaw the corn up ſtairs?——No Sir, I do not know him.

Mr. Silveſter. You would have known nothing of Lofton, if Groves had not told you?—No.

Was the room at the Boar's Head locked?—No.

MARY SELBY ſworn.

I keep the Boar's Head, in Newport-market, I know Wild and Paris.

Did either of them lodge at your houſe, on the 29th of January?——William Paris did.

In what part of the houſe?——In the firſt floor; I was not below when they took the corn, it was taken out of Mr. Paris's room; Wild lives at the next door in the firſt floor.

What buſineſs are they?——They are people that bring home meat from market; and are called butchers.

Mr. Peatt. Was Paris at home on Saturday evening?—I heard a diſpute between him and his wife, about his ſtaying out ſo late, it was ten minutes after twelve; there was a very thin wainſcot.

JOHN BOVILL ſworn.

I am partner with James Brown, I can ſwear to three of theſe ſacks, that with the diamond and the L is one of them, the reaſon of its being marked with an L, is that we formerly loſt ſo many ſacks, that we made our carmen maſters of the ſacks, and therefore we had them marked with the initial of each carman's name, I believe we had a great many more L's, I dare ſay we have a good many more on the premiſes; I ſaw the corn in the ſack, at the Cock, up one pair of ſtairs; I afterwards compared it with a ſample: I ſaw three ſacks full of oats at the Cock, which I knew to be the ſame oats that we had ſent the preceding night, to the ſecond troop, and to Squire Fellows's; to the beſt of my knowledge they are Eſſex oats, and had a ſprinkling of wheat amongſt them; I afterwards took a ſample out of the bag and compared them, and they were exactly the ſame, if it was poſſible to ſwear to grain I would ſwear to them: Groves formerly lived a carman with with us, he was diſcharged ſix or ſeven years ago: Paris and Wild I never ſaw till this circumſtance.

Mr. Silveſter. Theſe were Eſſex oats? —Yes.

A great many oats grow in Eſſex?—Yes.

Theſe were not bought at the Corn-market?——Yes, I believe I buy four fifths from Eſſex.

The others are bought by other perſons? —No doubt of it.

The ſame farmer may ſend them to market, and ſome may come to my hands?—That may be the caſe.

You have a great many of theſe ſacks not only at home, but about this great town? —Moſt clearly.

Mr. Garrow. My learned friend has aſked you a good deal about Eſſex oats, becauſe he is an Eſſex farmer; if they ſell him oats from Eſſex, they do not ſend them in your ſacks?—No.

Mr. James. My Lord, I am Council for Welch only, and I ſubmit there is no evidence of his being preſent.

Mr. Silveſter. My Lord, I beg leave to take an objection before the accomplice is admitted to give his evidence: In all felonies two propoſitions muſt be clearly eſtabliſhed; firſt, whether the felony is compleatly made out, and ſecondly, if ſo made out, whether ſuch felony was committed by the priſoner; now I ſubmit the firſt of theſe propoſitions is incomplete, becauſe they have not called the perſons to whom this corn was to have been delivered, in order to prove that it was not actually delivered, for what evidence have the Jury to ſay, that the whole of this corn put into the cart, was not delivered at the Horſe Guards, and to Mr. Fellows; and if it was all delivered, there could be no felony of the corn.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, Mr. Silveſter is now arguing upon the effect of the evidence, but I beg leave to ſay, that at preſent there is ſufficient ground to let in the evidence of the accomplice to go to a Jury: on the evening of the 29th of January, a certain quantity of a ſpecific quality of corn, was put into the carts of the proſecutors, that ſpecific corn in thoſe very ſacks, is afterwards found in a place, to which it was not ſent by the owners, and to which it could not be carried but wrongfully; I ſay that would be evidence to go to a Jury, and I ſubmit I am entitled to call the accomplice; the Jury will conſider by and by, the weight of all this; but you will ſee that I could not in the nature of things, call witneſſes to prove this delivery, for thoſe whoſe duty it was to ſee it delivered, do not know that it was not delivered; for they were impoſed on by the tale of ſacks correſponding, and believed that the whole quantity was actually delivered.

Mr. Juſtice Gould. I do not conceive that Mr. Silveſter is irregular in obſerving on the evidence now; if there is a felony committed, there is evidence to let in the accomplice; but it would be extremely material to ſhew, that inſtead of the whole being delivered, only ſo many ſacks were delivered: ought not a Jury who are trying people for felony, attended with prodigious conſequences, to ſay that you ſhall furniſh us with ſuch evidence, that they are ſure when they come to pronounce their verdict, that nothing ſhall remain on their conſciences?

Mr. Garrow. Without judging of the effect of the evidence, which is the peculiar province of the Jury; I ſubmit there is a probable ground for the Jury to ſay, a felony has been committed by ſome of the priſoners at the bar; if that is ſo, that is enough to let in the weight of the accomplice, and there are Judges your Lordſhip knows, that would call in the accomplice firſt.

Mr. Silveſter. I always underſtood that there muſt be poſitive evidence of the felony committed, before the accomplice's evidence can be received, and then the Jury will judge of the circumſtances; but there muſt be a felony proved, for how can the Jury firſt preſume a felony, and then preſume a man guilty of that felony.

Mr. Juſtice Gould. My notion of the law concerning an accomplice is, that a man who is not indicted, although a partaker in the guilt, may be a competent witneſs; but it is not fit for the Jury to convict upon ſuch teſtimony, therefore to be ſure the ſtrictneſs of the law is to bring proof of the felony being committed; to be ſure as he is a competent witneſs, you may ſet out with him, but then what will a Judge ſay to the Jury? therefore it is my conſtant courſe of practice, and I know many other Judges that do the ſame, not to call the accomplice firſt; it is a vain thing: and therefore, before you call the accomplice, you are to lay a foundation. In this caſe, the ground of your charge is this, that out of the ſpecific quantity of oats, ſent on Saturday night to the ſecond troop of Horſe Guards, and to Mr. Fellows, three or four ſacks were ſtolen; then does it not preſent itſelf to every man's mind, that the beſt evidence to inform the Court and the Jury upon that occaſion, is to call ſome of thoſe people from the Horſe Guards, and from Mr. Fellows's, to ſhew that there was not in reality the whole of that quantity delivered, but only a certain part of it, and ſome empty ſacks thrown in to make out a tale of ſacks, for ſo it was opened, and I take it for granted, it ſhould be proved; but that is left behind, he does not chuſe to call a witneſs that he has upon that ſubject, becauſe he does not conceive it will anſwer his purpoſe; therefore I ſay, you have not laid that evidence before the Court and Jury, which would have proved a felony to have been committed, for as it now ſtands, theſe men might have had theſe three buſhels, and ſacks of oats by other means: Mr. Roſe is of the ſame opinion with me, therefore, I think for want of that evidence which is neceſſary to make the felony complete, the accomplice cannot be received, and the priſoners muſt be acquitted.

ALL FOUR NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice GOULD.

393. WILLIAM PRICE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 7th of January laſt, four hundred iron hoops, weight 1300lb. value 10l. the property of Jukes Coulſon, William Harriman, and Benjamin Bates.

WILLIAM HARRIMAN ſworn.

I am one of the partners in the houſe of Coulſon and Bates; on the 7th of January, we ſent a parcel of iron hoops, they were landed into our open barge, the wharf is three yards from the houſe belonging to the partnerſhip, there were five ton landed that day; the next day a perſon came and gave us ſome hints; we knew there was a deficiency by weighing the hoops, we weighed them about two or three days afterwards; they were a particular kind of hoops, we never ſaw them after; I cannot ſwear there was any mark on them.

WILLIAM LIGHT ſworn.

I am clerk to the proſecutors; I ſaw theſe hoops landed, they were called but hoops; they weighed 5 tons 11 cwt. and 10lb; the priſoner told me the weight, he and another man weighed them, and they were placed in the warehouſe; on the information of an embezzlement, they were re-weighed; on the 13th of January at noon, the priſoner went from his buſineſs, but till then he came to work as uſual.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. Did you ſee them re-weighed?——No.

As to their firſt weight, you only knew from the information of the priſoner?——No.

He might have ſet it down at a leſs weight than it actually bore?——Yes.

He might likewiſe have made a miſtake?——It is poſſible.

Is the other man here that weighed them?——No.

The priſoner might alſo have made a miſtake in weighing out?——Yes.

He might have ſent more than the order intended he ſhould ſend?——Yes.

Court. Did the priſoner demand his wages wages before he went away?—No, I only owed him from Saturday the 8th to the 13th.

JOSEPH FOSTER ſworn.

On Friday the 7th of January laſt, I was at Mr. Parke's warehouſe, and I ſaw the priſoner and another man move ſome hoops from Mr. Parke's warehouſe, I knew the priſoner before; a little while after I ſaw William Dale, a waterman, come up with a boat, take them into his boat, and go away with them; they were new ſtrait pieces of iron, not made into hoops, they were but hoops; he deſired me to take them, I told him I could not, and a little while after I ſaw Mr. Parke and another man, move the hoops from Mr. Coulſon's warehouſe to the oppoſite ſide of the way, after that I ſaw William Dale, a waterman, come and take him into his boat, there might be ſeventeen, eighteen, or twenty, as nigh as I could gueſs, I cannot tell; I ſaw him go down the river.

Mr. Garrow. So this paſſed at noon day?—Yes.

He ſpoke to you in the warehouſe?—Yes.

What carried you there?—I very often do jobs for Mr. Coulſon; I have frequently ſeen the priſoner ſhip his goods.

THOMAS BUTTON ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Coulſon, at one we came out of the yard, on the 7th of January, which was Friday, and there were forty-five bundles of hoops weighed to an order, which were putting into a cart, to go to Norton Falgate, to a cooper's; and I helped him to load the forty-five bundles in the cart: then after we had loaded the cart, there were a few bundles of hoops, I do not know how many, were pitched cloſe down to the waterſide; I aſked this priſoner whether thoſe hoops belonged to the ſame order or not, to go in the ſame cart; and he ſaid, no, they were landed out of a Weſt country boat, and were hoops that did not belong to us; this parcel that were thrown down by the waterſide, were what they call but hoops, they were the ſame kind as the forty-five bundles; afterwards the priſoner and another man moved them from that ſide of the way to another; he told me, ſays he, theſe hoops do not belong to us, and I will move them out of the way, or elſe by and by my maſter will come and ſay they are his property; I ſaw him remove part of them, the man's name that was with him was Dick Thomas, he is a man that goes jobbing about any where; I ſaw Dale, the waterman, take them down, and put them into his boat.

Mr. Garrow. Whoſe wharf do you call this?—Part of it belongs to Mr. Coulſon, and the other part is upon free ſtairs.

This moving of the things, was not only done very publickly, but he explained to you the reaſon?—Yes.

He always ſhips hoops?—I have known him to be there ſeven or eight years.

You do not think they were laying hid?—No, they ſtood open.

Thoſe which had been landed from your manufactory, had been ſtowed in the warehouſe?—Yes, I cannot pretend to ſwear they were my maſter's property.

WILLIAM DALE ſworn.

I am a waterman, Mr. Parke came to the Old Swan to me, and hired me as a waterman, to carry them down to Limehouſe; he ſaid, he had got two ſhillings to Limehouſe, he told me there were twenty bundles of hoops on Alhallows ſtairs, and to take and put them into my boat, he told me to carry them to Limehouſe, to Mr, Lacorn, a maſter cooper, in Narrow-ſtreet; I carried them and was paid, Parke told me I was to be paid there, the ſervant paid me for them; I ſaw the miſtreſs, who ſent out the maid with two ſhillings.

Mr. Garrow. You are a waterman?—Yes.

Have you worked often at Mr. Coulſon's yard?—Yes, for Mr. Parke.

Alhallows ſtairs is what you call a free ſtairs?—Yes.

What time of the day was this?—I think it was between twelve and two.

Did the man tell you to take care that nobody ſhould ſee you?—No.

All

All done publickly in the face of day? ——Yes.

You carry two at a time?—I carried one down the ſtairs at a time.

Court to Proſecuter. I am to underſtand you, that your own ſtairs are private ſtairs? ——Yes.

Court to Harriman. Did you give any orders to take any hoops to Lacorn?——I did not, we had not ſold any to him.

Court to Knight. You are clerk to Mr. Harriman, perhaps you may ſometimes give orders?—I gave no ſuch orders on the 7th of January.

Have you any dealings with him?—He has bought a few bundles, two or three, but it is many months ſince; he had no account at the houſe, for two or three years; it might be three or four months ago.

Mr. Garrow. Is there no other perſon who receives orders?—Mr. Coulſon, and Mr. Bates, neither of whom are here.

Mr. Garrow. I ſubmit there is no ground to ſet the priſoner on his defence; for I take the liberty to ſay, that there is no charge againſt this man; the witneſs ſaid, it was the account made out by the priſoner; and as againſt the priſoner, that is certainly very good evidence; but on the croſs examination, that witneſs could not ſwear that account was made out by the priſoner.

Court. There is clearly ground enough to go to the Jury.

Mr. Garrow. I ſhall not trouble the Court with witneſſes in ſuch a caſe as this.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

394. THOMAS WARD was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Walter Powell, about the hour of eight in the night, on the 28th day of January laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein one copper boiler, value 15s. four copper bars, value 1s. one iron bar, value 1s. one pewter plate, value 2d. eight iron keys, value 4d. one braſs lock, value 6d. one pair of leather breeches, value 5s. one cotton bedgown, value 1s. one callico bedgown, value 4s. one linen ſhirt, value 3s. one muſlin apron, value 3s. one pair of cotton ſtockings, value 9d. one pewter tea-ſpoon, value 1d. one cloak, value 4s. one feather bed, value 30s. one iron grate, value 6s. and one china teapot, value 2d. his property.

WALTER POWELL ſworn.

I went out between five and ſix in the evening, and left all ſafe; it was not very light when I went out; the window of the kitchen was ſhut, and I have often tried to open it, and never could; the ſaſhes were faſt, and I believe the ſhutters were not ſhut; between eight and nine I was informed the houſe was broken open; I went as faſt as I could towards home; the priſoner was in cuſtody, the lock was on the ſtreet door as I left it; the top ſaſh of the window was almoſt down, nothing more was done to the window; and the area door open, the window was broke before I went out; there was the impreſſion of a man's foot upon the window, with dirt, within-ſide the dreſſer; ſome marks appeared to be ſhorter than others; the area door was open, it opens into the houſe, fronting the ſtairs, between the two kitchens; there is a paſſage between the two kitchens; the ſmall-beer barrel was taken out of the kitchen, and put in the area, juſt the ſide of the ſtreet door, where it appeared they had had the goods up that way, there was a good deal of dirt at top of it; I left the barrel in the kitchen, under the dreſſer; I went up ſtairs to my apartments; there was one bar that was under the copper laid down the outſide of my door, on the landing place one pair of ſtairs; the bolt of the lock of the bed room door was bent, and the ſtaple on the floor; the bed and bolſter were rolled up, ready to carry off; a cloak, value 4s.

4s. and my buck-skin breeches, value 15s. the copper which is fixed in the kitchen was taken away, and is not found.

Court. That is a fixture?——The prisoner confessed at the Rotation-office.

Mr. James, Prisoner's Council. Was there any promise given to the prisoner, that in case he confessed it should be better for him?——Not that I know of; I never asked him to confess, nor said any thing to him, nor I never heard any.

Must you have heard it, if there were such words used?——I was there all the time he was examined, but I never heard any such thing.

Was he threatened at all?——No.

Court. Then tell us what he said?——At the Rotation-office in Litchfield-street, the Gentlemen asked him what time he entered the house? he said that he and one May entered the house about eight at night.

Court. Can you speak with a certain recollection, that he mentioned the time?——Yes; and the Gentlemen asked him whether he carried the goods? and he said it was May that carried the goods away, but where he could not tell.

Mr. James. Was this the first question the Justice asked?——I did not hear any before.

You say it was rather late when you went out?——Yes.

Did not it appear to you that there had been great force and violence used?—Yes.

How long had you been in possession of the key of this house?——From last Midsummer, I received it from one Mr. Brooks.

Where is Mr. Brooks gone?——Mr. Brooks intended to return.

Was this house furnished?——No, only some fixtures.

In short, what fixtures there were, and some other furniture in different parts of the house which you did not occupy, belonged to Mr. Brooks?—Yes.

And he intended to return to the house?—Yes.

Mr. Brooks, when you had the key, was about coming to live in the house?——Yes, me and my wife had the liberty of living in this house for Mr. Brooks, whose house it was; we used one room up stairs, we had the liberty of going all over the house, but two rooms.

Court. Was you paid any thing for keeping this house?—I do not know.

Mr. James. You paid no rent for this house yourself?—I do not know; I do not rent the house.

Mrs. POWELL sworn.

Court. Have you been paid any thing for keeping this house?—No.

Was there any furniture of Brooks's in it, or only fixtures?——Nothing but fixtures.

Did you take this house?—No, my Lord, we have not taken the house, we had warning about six weeks before Midsummer to quit the house; it was full of lodgers, it was let in tenements.

Was you a lodger formerly?—Yes.

When you was a lodger you paid rent?——Yes, seven pounds a year.

Have you paid any thing for the time you have been in it since?—I had liberty to stay in the house from Mr. Brooks, he said he wanted the apartment that I had, to bring his own furniture in; I asked him to let me go up into the garret; and he said, if I would not damage it I might; a pewter spoon was found on the prisoner in the watch-house, but nothing else; all the things that were described by my husband, were missing, and more; I attended at the Rotation-office the next day, and the prisoner was examined at the Rotation, and the Justice asked him what time he came into the house; and he said about eight, and one Robert May carried the goods away, he did not know where.

Was he threatened at all, or any offer made him?—No.

THOMAS LEWIS sworn.

I saw the prisoner on the wall of this house between eight and nine at night, I took him immediately.

The Watchman and Beadle deposed that they took the prisoner to the watch-house, and found in his pocket a pewter tea-spoon without a mark.

Prisoner. I have nothing to say.

GUILTY

Of stealing, but not of the burglary.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

395. WILLIAM LICHFIELD and JAMES PENNY were indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 26th day of January last, one iron frame window-guard, value 15s. the property of John Mackell.

(The Case opened by Mr. Keys.)

JOHN MACKELL sworn.

I live in Park-lane, I am a smith; the iron frame in the indictment had been left by me in the yard, the night before, with other frames of the same kind; the next day I saw one of my window-guards at the watch house.

JOHN MORRIS sworn.

I am a watchman; I saw the two prisoners and another in Brick-street, on the 26th of January, a little after two in the morning; it was a very moon-light morning; these men were putting this window-guard into a cellar, and ran away, and a woman said, you are catched, you are catched; they said, no, it was only the watchman; they should make it up with the watchman: it was a little distance from the prosecutor's house; they ran away from the iron, seeing me, and they came back again; they were all together, near this woman's house; I did not see them put the iron down; I saw an iron window-guard after they ran away; I think there were half a dozen bars in it; I took it up, and put it against the side of a house; and they all three came back, and asked me what I was going to do with it; and the two prisoners took it from the side of the house, whilst I had one part in my hand, and they threw it on the dunghill, and said it was theirs; they then asked me to have some beer; and he that is not present, laid hold of my hand, and told me, if I made any noise, they should fall out with me; and Lichfield gave 6d. to that person to give to me, and I would not have it; Penny followed me, and I laid hold of him; and he swore he would run his knife into my guts; I then saw Lichfield coming towards me, and I let him go, and took the iron and ran on, and they followed me; I sprang my rattle, and they ran away; I knew the prisoners before.

Mr. Chetwood, Prisoner's Counsel. You did not see them near the prosecutor's house?—No.

You do not know who put the iron in that cellar?—No.

You saw three boys together?—Yes.

THOMAS MAYCOCK sworn.

I am a smith, I work for the prosecutor; I remember bringing home some iron grates for windows, from my Lord Westmoreland's, just before Christmas, this is one of them.

PRISONER PENNY's DEFENCE.

I was going to fetch fifty-two sheep, and nine beasts from Shepherd's-Bush, and I met this watchman; says he, Jemmy go along; says I, I am going to work; says the watchman, go along, go along, do.

PRISONER LICHFIELD's DEFENCE.

I was going to fetch a midwife for a woman that was in labour.

The

The prisoner Lichfield called three witnesses, who gave him a good character.

BOTH GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

396. JOHN BRETT was indicted for feloniously assaulting Mary Taylor, spinster, on the King's highway, on the 10th day of February last, and putting her in corporal fear and danger of her life, and feloniously taking from her person, and against her will, one box made of past-board, value 1d. one dark coloured cotton gown, value 14s. one cloth cloak, value 8s. four caps, value 4s. two pair of stockings, value 2s. three pair of worsted stockings, value 1s. one black silk handkerchief, value 1s. one muslin handkerchief, value 1s. one linen handkerchief, value 6d. one pair of shoes, value 6d. her property.

MARY TAYLOR sworn.

I am a servant to a milk-woman, I live in Kingsland-road; on the 10th of February, about six in the evening, the prisoner met me in Bishopsgate-street, and asked me what it was o'clock; I said, I do not know; I never saw the boy before; it was dark, but I was near some lamps; the shops were not shut up; we were nigh a bow window, but there was no light in it that I saw; there were people walking backwards and forwards; the prisoner asked me again if I thought it was seven, and I told him no; he asked me, if I could direct him to Holloway-mount; I told him I knew Holloway-lane; we walked together till we came to the corner of Angel-alley, then he pulled the box from me, and another man knocked me into the road; I had hold of each end of the box, I was carrying it before me, it was a caravan box; he first made a snatch at the box, then I received the blow, and then he took away the box; it was some time before I got up, I was quite stunned; I am sure the prisoner is the boy, he was in my company about five minutes.

Prisoner. She gave me a half-penny to carry the box. When they took me, Mr. Wilmot's men said, if I would get four guineas, they would let me go; then the woman said, I will not let him go clear without he gives me a guinea and an half.

Prosecutrix. I never offered to let him go for any money.

GUILTY

Of stealing, but not violently from the person.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

397. PETER HOLTON was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 20th day of December last, 11s. in monies numbered, the monies of Thomas Cunningham.

Mrs. CUNNINGHAM sworn.

I live in Ratcliff-highway, I am a market-woman, I have a room, I have several times seen the prisoner drawing the liquors when I went to the public house; I went there on the 20th of December, and my husband would not speak to me, I was sober; I called for a pint of beer, and this man drew it for me, and my husband got up and went out of doors; I drank the beer and I said to the prisoner, do you think my husband will come in again? and he said yes; and just as I had the second pint my husband came in again, and he said, are you coming home? and the people went out, and it got late, and the house was shut up, and I warmed myself, and said to the man, will you take for this beer? and I pulled out a little box, there was nobody left but that man, and I gave him six-pence, and he took for two pints of beer, and he gave me two-pence halfpenny; I put the two-pence halfpenny, with eleven shillings.

ſhillings, into my boſom again, and as I was ſitting warming myſelf, he came and put his arm round my neck, and his other arm down my boſom, and I ſaw him take out a bag, and I caught hold of his hand, and ſaid, Maſter you have my money; he denied it a great while, I caught hold of him by the ſkirt of his coat, and I cried and made a ſad noiſe, and he ſaid he would throw me out of doors if I cried; and I told him, I brought the money into the houſe; he ſaid, you have dropped your money down your boſom; and I ſaid, no I have not, and I undid my gown, and I opened my ſtays, and ſhewed him; I pulled off my ſtays, and I ſaid to him, you may ſee; he ſaid he would put me out; I ſaid I would not go out: and at laſt he put me out of the door, he threw me out upon my face, my face was all grazed; the priſoner ſaid, I ſhould awake the people if I made ſuch a noiſe; I never got a farthing again; I was crying at the door, and a young fellow came up, and ſaid, what is the matter? and I ſaid, I have loſt my money.

Court. Do you wiſh to call that man? —No, I do not want to call him, I do not know any of their names; I had been at the public houſe ſeveral times before, it it the ſign of the Star, in Wells-ſtreet, Roſemary Lane; I did not take him for three weeks afterwards, he made out of the way, I live at the bottom of that ſtreet myſelf; when I took the priſoner, I went to the public-houſe, and there were five or ſix perſons ſitting round the fire, and I knew him; I did not ſee the young man there the next morning, which I ſaw the night before, and the priſoner fell a laughing, and ſaid you do not know what you are talking of, you was drunk.

What time of night was it when you went in?—About nine, I was there about two hours, I had two pints; I believe I had a dram in the morning, which we generally have when we go to market, I was very ſober indeed, I borrowed this money of my mother.

Mr. Knowles, Priſoner's Council. Have you never been in that place where that man is now?——I never was inſide this place in my life, nor never in the yard.

Was you never tried for any offence?—No, never, neither here nor any where elſe.

You ſay you were quite ſober when you came into this houſe?—Yes, my huſband went out directly.

Then you thought proper to lay two hours after your huſband went out?——Yes.

Pray, how many quarterns of gin had you at this alehouſe?—I had none, no other liquors than the two pints of beer.

You had better ſpeak the truth; was not Davis in the houſe during all the time you was in the houſe?——I do not know ſuch a name.

Was not there a man beſides the priſoner in the houſe during all the time you was there?—There was nobody in the tap-room but me and him when he robbed me, nobody went out with me, I went to another public houſe, I thought my huſband was there, I came in again.

Did not you ſay, you would make it up? —I ſaid, give me five or ſix ſhillings, and I will not hurt you; but I never ſaw him in priſon, nor never ſent to him.

Did not you go with another man from that place to Salt-petre Bank, and there aſk for a lodging to ſleep with that man that night?——No, Sir.

Do you remember one Mr. Patrick being there?—No.

How much money had you when you went into the houſe? — Eleven ſhillings and ſix-pence.

The Remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 23d of FEBRUARY 1785, and the following Days;

Being the THIRD SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER III. PART IX.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol-Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of Peter Holton.

Priſoner. I never ſaw a half-penny with the woman, only what ſhe paid for the liquor, and ſhe had ſeveral quarterns of gin and ſeveral pints of purl and gin; ſhe wanted Mr. Patrick to go with her, and he would not, and ſhe took up with Bob Davis.

Court to Proſecutrix. You ſay, your mother lent you the money?—Yes, I went to market, but I could not buy any thing that day, they were too dear; I did not go with any man to Salt-petre Bank.

PHILIP RILEY ſworn.

I am a houſekeeper at Ratcliffe-Croſs; I work at the rigging houſe; I am a married man; I have lived there about two years; I remember the proſecutrix coming to the Star when the priſoner was there, I cannot ſay the day.

ROBERT DAVIS ſworn.

I work on the river, I am a lodger, I am a lumper; I remember coming in when the proſecutrix was at the Star, about ſeven in the middle of December; I cannot tell the day; it was a matter of five weeks after that he was taken up.

Was the proſecutrix's huſband there?—They had had ſome words; ſhe was very much intoxicated with liquor, during my time ſhe had two pots of beer and three quarterns of gin; when I came in ſhe called me the father of her children, and took me by the neck; the huſband had not come in at that time.

Did this woman aſk you to go with her?—She did ſeveral and ſeveral times, and moreover than that, ſhe gave me five ſhillings and ſix-pence to procure her a bed, and I went out and could not get one at any houſe on Salt-petre Bank, but at the houſe of one Brunk; I came back and met her at the door, and ſhe ſaid ſhe was robbed; ſhe calls me Bob.

Mr. Knowles. Where did ſhe take this money from?——From a little white purſe out of her boſom.

Was Riley in the houſe the time you was there?——Yes.

Riley. The proſecutrix was rather the worſe for liquor when ſhe came in; ſhe drank till ſhe fell off the ſeat; ſhe was along with Mr. Patrick, and ſhe offered him a ſhilling to go to bed with her, and he refuſed it, and ſaid he had a wife of his own.

Court.

Court. Did you go away before her?—No, Sir, I did not; I did not go out of the houſe till the houſe was ſhut up; I ſlept there that night; I never heard her mention that ſhe was robbed in the houſe.

Muſt you have ſeen it if ſhe had been robbed in the houſe?——Undoubtedly, Sir, it could not be otherwiſe, becauſe I attended the tap-room all the time, the priſoner never took any liberties with her; ſhe paid for what ſhe had to me; I took the money from her and delivered it at the bar.

Did ſhe never pay any thing to the priſoner?—No, ſhe gave me one ſhilling one time, and I gave her four-pence.

JOHN PARKER ſworn.

I know the evidence; he ſerved between three and four years on board the ſhip, that is all I know, and had a good character.

——— KEARNAN ſworn.

I keep the Star in Well's-ſtreet; the priſoner lodges with me; the proſecutrix applied to me ſeveral times to make the matter up, ſhe ſaid ſhe would forgive him for half a crown; and I told her I would have the man puniſhed, the man ſaid, he would not give her ſix-pence, and would undergo any proſecution ſooner than give her a farthing; I never heard any thing but what was juſt by him; I found him a very honeſt ſober man while he was with me; the proſecutrix came to my houſe the day following, and brought a conſtable, and was going to give charge of another man; I believe he was not taken from my houſe; he was at my houſe continually until he was taken up, which was above three weeks after; I do not know whether ſhe was drunk or not.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

398. HUGH WILLIAMS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 20th of January laſt, one linen ſheet, value 5s. one pillow caſe, value 6d. one linen ſhirt, value 5s. two cotton bed-gowns, value 6d. five diaper clouts, value 2s. four linen clouts, value 6d. ſix check aprons, value 6s. one pair of ſtockings, value 4d. a flannel coat, value 1s. a child's coat, value 2d. two dimity ſtomachers, value 4d. one printed callico gown, value 10s. the property of Charles Curtis.

CHARLES CURTIS ſworn.

I live at Aſhford, I went out and left my journeyman at home; there are two tenements in the houſe, I live in one of them; I left my room door open; I left the priſoner, who was one of my journeymen, and one William Penny, at work; I came home the next morning the 21ſt.

Did you miſs any thing?—As ſoon as I came home I found the ſhop locked up, and nobody at home in either houſe; I looked in through the key hole, and I ſaw the things taken off one of the ſeats, and I was afraid the things were gone; I found the priſoner at the public-houſe, the ſign of the King's head; the priſoner was in cuſtody at the public-houſe, when I aſked him how he came to do it, he told me he was drunk.

WILLIAM PENNY ſworn.

I continued at work till four in the afternoon; then I went out and came home and went to bed; and the priſoner brought in the things; he lodged in the ſame room with me, I was afraid to ſay any thing to him.

JOSEPH BUNCE ſworn.

I lodge in this houſe; about an hour after I went to bed, I heard ſomebody in Mr. Curtis's room, and I got out of bed, I found nobody there; then I went into their room, and found them both in bed.

Court to Proſecutor. How came you to ſuſpect Williams rather than Penny?——I did not ſuſpect him any otherwiſe than as Penny ſays.

What did Williams ſay?——He did not ſay any thing of the matter any more.

Priſoner.

Priſoner. Did you ſee any of theſe things when you came into the room with the light?——No Sir, not till afterwards.

Were they both in bed?——Yes.

Were they both undreſſed?——No, one was, that was Penny, the priſoner had ſome cloaths on and ſome off.

——— PIGENO ſworn.

I took the priſoner at Staines; the priſoner was coming to Aſhford where Curtis lives.

Court to Bunce. How come you to let this man go away when you had found the things?——I did not find the things, I did not ſee them.

ELIZABETH CURTIS ſworn.

Theſe are the things which lay on the bed where this man lay; I ſaw them found; they are my property.

Priſoner. I ſtopped there till about four in the afternoon, after Mr. Curtis went away, and Penny and I went to the public-houſe to have ſome beer, he left me and went away, I went home after to go to bed; Penny was in bed, and had locked himſelf in; Bunce wanted to awake him, and he could not; I went into the ſhop to work, at laſt Bunce broke the door open, but he could not make him ſenſible; when I went to work again, I found half a gallon of wine in the ſhop, and Bunce thought he heard ſome foot in the room, which was me coming along the paſſage; Bunce ſaid, what is the matter? I ſaid nothing is the matter, come with me, and I will ſhew you what is the matter; I took him into the ſhop and ſhewed him where Penny had been vomiting all round, and I ſhewed him the half gallon of wine; Bunce was in a great paſſion, and told me to pack up my tools and go away out of the houſe that night, for he was afraid Penny and I ſhould have words, accordingly I packed up my things and went and came back in the morning, and I was ſecured.

Court to Bunce. Is this true?—Yes.

What did Penny ſay to it at the time?—He did not ſay any thing.

Then at firſt, that night Williams ſaid Penny had been in Curtis's room, and went and ſhewed you the room?——He ſhewed me where he had been vomiting, and were the wine was, that was juſt by the chamber door.

Where had you heard the foot before?—It was in the chamber, I thought I heard the foot.

Did you go into the chamber that night?—I did not.

Then it was in the ſhop room he took you to?—Yes, Penny ſaid nothing that I know of.

Which of them was moſt in liquor?—I do not know, Penny was in bed, and Williams was very much in liquor; I do not know when Williams went to bed, he ſaid he ſhould go to work, I did not ſee him go to work.

Did you bid him take his tools and go, to prevent their quarrelling?—Yes.

Priſoner. I pulled off my coat and waiſtcoat and ſhoes, I thought I would lay in the ſame manner Penny did, he had not all his clothes off.

Court to Curtis. How did this man behave before? I never heard any thing amiſs about him, Penny had worked with me a few months.

What was the circumſtance that induced you to charge Williams rather than Penny?—Becauſe Penny ſwore to him, and Williams owned it all before the Juſtice; the Juſtice aſked him how he came to do this thing, and he ſaid he was drunk; I had ſix quarts of elder wine, and they had drawn that out and got drunk with it.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

399. THOMAS BREEZE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 12th of February, fifty pounds weight of lead, value 10s. belonging to Elizabeth Howard, ſpinſter, then and there affixed to a certain empty houſe of her's, againſt the ſtatute.

A ſecond

A second count. That he, feloniously did steal one fixture, called an iron lock, value 1s. belonging to the said Elizabeth, affixed to a street door of the empty house of the said Elizabeth.

THOMAS GOODEVE sworn.

About half after six, on the 12th of February, I was doing some little repairs, in a house belonging to Mrs. Elizabeth Howard, and I went down and found the lock was off; I opened the door, and stood in the passage about ten minutes, and I heard somebody down below; I stepped out and got assistance, and the prisoner and another man came up; the prisoner catched me by the collar, and asked me if I did not see a man, I told him no, and I immediately caught at him, they came out of the kitchen: the other pushed me out in the street, and the prisoner slipped out, and I followed him, and caught him the corner of St. Martin's Court, the other escaped; I found the lead sink below was all turned up, but not taken out of the room; the lock was found within the shop door, removed from the street door altogether, with the screws in it; the lead was not taken out of the frame.

Court to Mr. Shelton. Is there any count for ripping and cutting?——No, only the count for stealing.

Do you know what situation the house was left in before?—I was down there before, and it was locked; the lock appeared to be taken off with a screw driver, he dropped a screw driver out of his hands.

Did the lock appear to be forced off, for the purpose of getting into the house, or did it appear to be taken off afterwards?—It appeared to me, to have been taken off withinside.

Prisoner. Ask him whether it was an iron lock, or a wooden lock?——It was what we call a stock lock, iron work in a wooden frame.

Court. Should you understand then, from the description of an iron lock, should you understand it was a lock of this kind, or a lock in an iron box?——No, I should not, it is called a stock lock, an iron lock, or a brass lock, according to the case of it.

FRANCIS CLEWLEY sworn.

I took charge of the prisoner, and took him to the Justices; and went and searched the house, I have not the lock here, I did not conceive it to be necessary; I asked the the Justice whether I should bring the lock, and he said no; I found the lock on the side of an inner door, and in the kitchen I found this screw; I turned on one side, and I observed the lead raised all round from the frame, but not carried away; I found this sack likewise.

What sort of lock was it?——A stock lock, a lock in an iron frame, I do not conceive it to be called an iron lock.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was at St. James's-market, to carry some lead, I stopped and had a pennyworth of beer, and came along Leicester-fields, and up Castle-street, meaning to go home to my lodgings; I heard the cry of stop thief! I ran, I suppose there were twenty people, or more, and the gentleman took me.

Court to Jury. Gentlemen, here is no taking away to constitute a complete stealing, any the least removal is sufficient, but here there was none; and though the same act of parliament, which makes it felony to steal, makes it felony to rip with intent to steal, yet there is no such charge in the indictment: and then in the count for the lock, they have called it an iron lock, which it certainly is not, therefore in point of law, the prisoner is entitled to his acquittal.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

400. JONATHAN MESSENGER was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 30th day of January last, one wooden trunk covered with leather, value 1s. seven linen shirts, ſhirts, value 40s. ſix linen ſtocks, value 6s. four pair of ſtockings, value 20s. one pair of thread ſtockings, value 2s. a pair of ſilver ſhoe buckles, value 10s. two pair of nankeen breeches, value 6s. three cotton waiſtcoats, value 3s. one ſattin waiſtcoat, value 3s. and eleven printed books, value 11s. the property of Henry Foſter Mills.

HENRY FOSTER MILLS ſworn.

I ſaw my trunk in George-ſtreet, and I miſſed it at the Horſe-guards, about ſix o'clock, the trunk contained the things mentioned in the indictment; I ſtepped to the chaiſe to give ſome directions, and the poſt boy ſaid it was gone, and I found the priſoner and the trunk at Bow-ſtreet, brought by ſome ſoldiers, the trunk is here, and the things in it.

(Produced, and depoſed to.)

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council. Were the things your property?—Yes.

JAMES DYSON ſworn.

On the 30th of January, I was ſentry in St. James's Square; about two minutes after ſix, I ſaw four men running before me, with this trunk on their ſhoulders, and one of them, which I believe is Jonathan Meſſenger.

——— BROWN ſworn.

On the 30th of January, about two minutes after ſix, I was going to take the relief out, and I had got about half way to the place, to relieve the firſt ſentry in Scotland Yard, and I met the priſoner with the trunk; two men paſſed me in a great hurry, and the priſoner was behind them with the trunk; I ſtopped the priſoner, he never got from me, I took him to the Guard-room, and down to the Savoy Barracks, to the ſerjeant who belonged to the regiment, to know how we ſhould act with him; and I took him to Sir Sampſon's, with the ſame trunk; this is the trunk.

Mr. Peatt. It was ſix in the evening you ſay?—Yes.

How many went by before you ſaw the priſoner?——I ſaw two paſs me in a very great hurry, the priſoner had it in his hand, I took it out of his hand, he had got it upon the ground on the end; he ſaid he met ſome men, and he aſked them what they were going to do with that trunk, and he ſaid ſome of them knocked him down directly, he did not make any reſiſtance, he did not ſay that he hoped to have any of the reward, if the rogues were taken.

Did you aſk him to leave the trunk in your hands?——No.

Did your fellow ſoldiers, in your hearing?—No.

Did not he ſay, that he recovered it from the perſons that were running on before?—Yes.

Recollect if he did not ſay he hoped for ſome of the reward?—I never did hear him ſay ſo.

Court to Dixon. Did you deſire the priſoner to go away and leave the trunk in your hands, and he refuſed?—No.

Court to the Corporal. In what poſture was the priſoner when you firſt ſaw him?——The trunk was an end, and he had the handle in his hand, and I took it from him, he juſt ſtood ſtill; I met him at the corner of a narrow paſſage.

Then at the time you firſt ſaw him, he was ſtanding ſtill?—Yes.

JAMES FORD ſworn.

I am the poſt boy, I did not ſee anything of the people who took the trunk, till after they were taken, I know the trunk was on the chaiſe.

Mr. Peatt. What time did you ſee it?—I cannot tell, it was miſſed near upon ſix o'clock.

The priſoner called three witneſſes who gave him a very good character.

Mr. Peatt. I have at leaſt twenty more.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, under the circumſtances in which this man is deſcribed, and immediately ſaying he had ſtopped ſomebody with the trunk; a man of bad character could hardly be convicted on that evidence: but where a man appears to to have a good character, there can be no doubt.

NOT GUILTY.

Court. It is but justice to that man, to say, that I do not believe he was the man that took the trunk, and I think there is no imputation upon him, from this charge.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

401. GRACE GYNNE was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 18th day of January last, three live pigs, value 15s. the property of Jonathan Rayner.

JONATHAN RAYNER sworn.

I live at Marybone, I lost three pigs the 18th of January at night, I missed them in the morning; I put them in a place locked up, at the back side of Marybone, in a shed that I fenced in all round, and the yard door was locked; I never found them any more.

ELIZABETH HARRIS sworn.

I lived with the prisoner, she came in on the Queen's birth day about eleven, she went out again, and she brought in two pigs in her apron, and she pulled a paper box from under the bed, and put the two pigs in; and I got up and pulled the box from under the bed, and there were the pigs; and I followed her out, and she went towards the prosecutor's pig-sty, she lives about ten yards from the pig-sty; I saw her drop a pig, when she returned she picked it up again; she took and beat me, and swore damnation, that if I did tell, she would kill me stone dead, and I was forced to down on my knees to pray of her, else she would have killed me.

What was she?—She used to go to work at gentlemen's houses, I was hired to live with her at a shilling a week, we never had any quarrel before she took the pigs.

How long was it after, before you told of her?——A week, I was affraid, she got me down in the middle of the house, and beat me with a candlestick, and I was forced to down on my knees and pray her, else she would have killed me; her next door neighbour lost some fowls, and she said I could give an account of them, and the gentlewoman came to me, and I said, I supposed they were gone as Mr. Rayner's pigs were gone; so then Mr. Rayner came to me, that was the cause of our quarrel.

You did not see her get over the pales?——No.

Whereabouts did she go to the pales?—She went through her own gate, and strait to the pales.

Court to Rayner. What sort of a yard is your's?—Fenced in all round, paling seven feet high, and a door that was locked; this woman lives about seven or eight yards from me, I did not hear of it for a week or ten days after; I saw Harris every day, she never said anything to me till then, then she told me, says she, Mr. Rayner, I believe I can tell you who had your pigs, she came to me to the public house.

Court. Do you think she could get over your pales?——I should think not.

Prisoner. I beg leave to send for my friends.

Court. Here is no evidence but of this servant, who seems to swear against her from spleen and resentment, and who said nothing for ten days.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

402. CHRISTOPHER WEBB was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 14th of January last, seven pair of leather shoes, value 16s. one linen shirt, value 4s. a linen shift, value 18d. a safe guard, value 18d. a cotton handkerchief, value 6d. three frocks, value 9d. the property of John Barker.

JOHN BARKER sworn.

I live at Islington, I deal in old shoes, I mend mend them up for ſale; on the 14th of January laſt, about half paſt ſeven, I got up, and I went to unlock my ſhop door; and found it unlocked; the houſe belonged to one Ann Smith, I lodged at that time in the houſe, I looked round the ſhop, and found it had been robbed of the things mentioned in the indictment, they were all my property; when I went to bed I double locked the door, I am quite ſure they were all ſafe when I went to bed; I went the ſame morning to Juſtice Blackborough's, and informed him, and he granted me a warrant; and Dinmore and me went and took a man that we ſuſpected, who lodged in the ſame houſe, we found him in Gold-lane, and he was committed to priſon; afterwards, when the priſoner was taken up, which was in his own room, I ſaw my ſhirt upon his back.

Did he make any oppoſition to your looking at the ſhirt?——No.

Did you examine the ſhirt?——Yes, when it was taken off my wife ſwore to it; I ſaw it taken off him, and there was a woman whom he ſaid was his wife, and we deſired her to pull off her ſhift, and we retired while ſhe ſtripped, for decency, but ſhe pulled it off, and opened the door, and gave the ſhift into my hand; when we got to the Juſtices, the priſoner before me owned the whole.

Did you offer him favour?——No.

Did you threaten him?——No, he ſaid, before the Juſtice, that he robbed me, and that it was through a woman that lodges in the houſe that he robbed me; he ſaid, he had ſold the reſt of the things to a Jew, and the woman ſaid you have not ſold them all, for you have a pair of ſhoes on belonging to the man; and his ſhoes were then taken off, and I ſwore to them, having been at work on them the night before for a cuſtomer.

Priſoner. Did not you ſay you would make it up for two guineas?——I never ſpoke to him in my life, only the time he was taken.

Did you ever make any offer to him?—Nothing in the world.

Priſoner. I have witneſſes that he offered to make it up.

MARY BARKER ſworn.

I know the ſhirt, it is my own making, but the frill is taken off, I can ſafely ſwear to my own work.

Is there anything ſingular about it?——I know my own work from anybody's elſe, every ſtitch about it; it had a frill, and the frill was marked, and that is taken off; I miſſed a ſhirt at that time out of my room, and a ſhift which I alſo miſſed that day, which was in the room; my huſband gave it me on the night he had been at the priſoner's lodgings, I have had it in my poſſeſſion ever ſince; it has a very particular mark upon it, here is a piece put on to the ſhift, before it was made up.

JOHN DINMORE ſworn.

I am conſtable of Clerkenwell, I went with the proſecutor to the priſoner's lodging, in Red Bull-yard; the woman ſaid, he was not at home, I then told her, I came about a felony, and ſhe muſt open the door; ſhe came down and opened the door, I then went up ſtairs, and found the priſoner hid in a cloſet, and I ſtood by while he pulled off his ſhirt, which is the ſhirt now produced, I have had it ever ſince; then the woman pulled off a ſhift, which ſhe had on, and we withdrew, and ſhe put it out through the door to the proſecutor, and gave it into his hand, and theſe ſhoes I took off his feet, and ſent for a pair of others for him to put on; the reſt of the things they ſaid they had ſold to a Jew; I have had them ever ſince.

(The ſhoes depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

On Friday I was at work down at Wapping, in coal heaving, and coming through Roſemary-lane, I bought this ſhirt, and ſhoes, and ſhift, and gave half a guinea for them.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

403. GEORGE

403. GEORGE FOSTER was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 3d day of February laſt, three penny weights of gold, value 12s. one ounce weight of ſilver, value 5s. two brilliant diamonds, value 18s. and twenty four roſe diamonds, value 24s. the property of James Morriſon, Robert Lukin, and Charles Lukin.

ROBERT LUKIN ſworn.

The priſoner was my journeyman, he worked with me about a twelvemonth, he had been with me before; on the 2d of February I received information, and in conſequence of that, I went to Mr. Blank's the refiner; I there ſaw an ingot of gold and ſilver melted together, and upon the firſt ſight of it, it occurred to me that it had been thrown into an ingot, which I knew to be mine; an ingot is an iron mould: I then deſired them to let me take it home, and I did ſo, and it fitted very exactly, except that a piece had been cut out of the middle, theſe moulds are of different ſizes; I called the priſoner down from work, and aſked him if he knew the ingot, the firſt anſwer that he made was, that he did not; I then aſked him, if he had not carried ſomething of that ſort to ſell to Mr. Blank, and he acknowledged he had.

Court. What did you ſay to him to induce him to acknowledge that, did you give him any promiſe, or hint that it would be better for him to confeſs, or anything of that kind?——No, my Lord; I told him, that as we were ſenſible from the ſtate of our account which we kept of our gold, that we loſt ſome of it in an unfair manner, that it was exceedingly neceſſary that he ſhould give us an unequivocal account how he came by it; he heſitated for ſome time giving any anſwer, I told him upon that, that he had better give a direct anſwer, that that would be more likely to ſatisfy us, that nothing ſhort of that would ſatisfy us.

Court. I cannot hear anything that he ſaid after that, after you told him that he ſhould not be proſecuted?——I did not tell him any ſuch thing.

But you told him the ſame thing in ſubſtance, you conveyed that idea to him, do you know any thing independent of what he himſelf ſaid, after this?—Some things were found upon him, before he acknowledged them, they were two brilliant diamonds, they were in a paper in the lining of his breeches, not in the pocket.

Did he tell you he had them about him?——No.

Can you diſtinguiſh them to be your's?——No, it is impoſſible to ſwear to them.

Had you loſt ſuch?——I cannot ſay we had, we are conſtantly loſing one, which drops on the floor, and it is impoſſible ſometimes to find it, though ſometimes we do; the roſe diamonds were found at his lodgings, I can ſay nothing to them.

Court. It is only by his confeſſion that you know they are your property?—Yes.

Court to Jury. Gentlemen of the Jury, as this caſe ſtands, it will be impoſſible to reach the priſoner: with reſpect to the ingot of gold, the whole of that reſts upon the admiſſion of the priſoner, after the proſecutor told him it would be better for him to ſpeak the truth, and nothing ſhort of that would ſatisfy him. It is the law of this country, and a very proper one too in my opinion, that no evidence of confeſſion can be received, that is procured on promiſe of indemnity.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice GOULD.

---

404. JOSEPH LEE and JOHN COX were indicted for that they, on the 16th day of February, certain lead, value 5s. being part of a certain leaden gutter then and there fixed to a certain houſe of Ralph Jackſon and John Everard the younger, feloniouſly did rip, cut, and break, with intent to ſteal.

A ſecond Count. For that they, certain other lead, price 5s. being part of a certain other gutter, the property of a perſon unknown, feloniouſly did rip, cut, and break, with intent to ſteal.

(The case opened by Mr. Silveſter.)

JOHN KETCHER ſworn.

I am a watchman, I was coming from the watch-houſe in Moorfields, on the 16th, on Wedneſday, and coming by this old houſe there is a hole in the corner of the wall, there is a gutter that hung over the edge; on looking at the two pair of ſtairs I ſaw ſomebody on the roof of the houſe, through the cieling; I called out loud, and they both came running down ſtairs, and came out of this hole in the wall: we aſked them what they had been about, and they rubbed their eyes, and ſaid they had been belated, and had been there for ſleep; we put them in the watch-houſe, and in about two minutes I went up ſtairs, and Mr. Meſſer followed me; I went and got through the hole of the ceiling, and I ſaw the lead cut, it was freſh cut, and looks ſo now, one part of it is gone, it was cut almoſt off.

Priſoner. Did not you find another man in the houſe?——Yes, he was a poor fellow that only laid down to ſleep; the priſoners ſaid he did not belong to them; he was in the corner next the chimney.

——— MESSER ſworn.

I ſaw this watchman calling to his brother watchmen at the hole of this houſe, and I ſaw the two priſoners come from the roof of the houſe, it was day-light; the glaſs and wood-work and all was entirely gone; I aſked the priſoners what they were doing there? and Lee ſaid, we were locked out of our lodgings, and went there to ſleep; they were taken to the watch-houſe; I ſaw them come out of the hole of the houſe.

JOHN EVERARD ſworn.

Theſe houſes belong to a young lady, when ſhe is twenty-one: I am a truſtee for her, and Ralph Jackſon is the other truſtee.

The legal eſtate is in you then as truſtee for her benefit?——Yes.

PRISONERS DEFENCE.

We were belated, and we ſaw this houſe open, and we went in to ſleep, there were more men up one pair of ſtairs; we came down at break of day, and they took us to the watch-houſe; they let another man go.

Jury. Did you find any implements on the premiſes?—We did not ſearch the premiſes nor the perſon.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

405. ELEANOR FENN was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling-houſe of Julius Forreſter, Eſquire, about the hour of eight in the night, on the 17th day of February, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein four cotton gowns, value 20s. two linen gowns, value 5s. one linen bed-gown, value 2s. one dimity petticoat, value 5s. one ſtuff petticoat, value 5s. two flannel petticoats, value 2s. one pair of woman's ſtays, value 5s. five pair of cotton ſtockings, value 5s. one pair of worſted ſtockings, value 12d. one cloth cloak, value 5s. one pair of pockets, value 6d. and four ſhifts, value 4s. the property of Margaret Chronicle.

MARGARET CHRONICLE ſworn.

I live with my Maſter Julius Forreſter, on the 17th of February I loſt my clothes, it was near twelve at night, I miſſed my box; I have not recovered all my things; I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment; I miſſed them when I went to bed; I faſtened up the houſe ſafe; there is a narrow gutter facing this garret window; and a parapet wall as high as a perſon's knee; any body might get over by the chimney; and my box was left in an empty houſe the next door but one: I firſt ſaw ſome of my things at Mr. Proſſer's houſe, on the Monday following; the box was brought to me the ſame night, by our watchman.

THOMAS

THOMAS LITTLE sworn.

I am a watchman of Biſhopſgate-ſtreet Ward without, about half an hour paſt nine I heard a coach ſtop in New-ſtreet, Biſhopſgate-ſtreet, I did not ſee any body come out, it was on Thurſday evening the 17th, I ſaw the priſoner at the bar coming paſt with this bag, and theſe clothes; I never ſaw her before, I aſked her where ſhe was going; ſhe ſaid to a place; I ſaid, to a freſh ſervice; I do not know ſaid ſhe; I aſked her what ſhe had in her bag; ſhe ſaid I do not know, you may look in it if you will; I told her I would not look at it, but I took her and the bag to the watch-houſe; I gave the things to Mr. Proſſer.

Priſoner. This witneſs ſaw me call a young man out of a public houſe. ——As I was driving the priſoner before me, a young man came out of the Magpye, and they ſpoke together, and he came along with her part of the way.

Walter Proſſer, conſtable, confirmed the account of the priſoner being brought in, and produced the things, which the priſoner ſaid ſhe brought from the other end of the town, from Oxford-ſtreet, in a coach, with a young man, but ſhe ſaid ſhe did not know who he was.

(The things depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

As I was coming along Great Ruſſel-ſtreet, Bloomſbury, a young man came up, and aſked me to walk with him, he had a bag under his arm, and we came to Holborn and drank; and then he asked me to take a ride with him; and I ſaid I did not care; and he called a coach, and bid the man drive to Cock-hill, in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet, and I ſtepped out of the coach firſt, oppoſite that gentleman's box; and he deſired me to guard the bag, while he went in to pay the coachman; I told the watchman I was waiting for a young man, and I went to the public houſe, and called him out; and he ſaid, I need not be afraid, and he walked with me to the watch-houſe.

Court to Priſoner. Who was the young man?——I do not know.

Court to Proſecutor. Was yours a large heavy box?——Yes, it was heavy when the things were in it.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

406. THOMAS JONES was indicted for that he, on the 17th day of January laſt, on the King's highway, upon one John Chard, in the peace of God, and our Lord the King, then and there being, feloniouſly did make an aſſault, and did then and there, in a forcible and violent manner, unlawfully, maliciouſly, and feloniouſly demanded his money, with intent to rob him.

The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoner.

JOHN CHARD sworn.

I belong to Mr. Lucas, inſpector of the lamps, I was out in Vigo-lane, looking after the lamps, to ſee how they burned, and to give an account; and the priſoner and two more apparently to me, but the priſoner was behind the other two; he turned about to me, and ſaid what is it o'clock; he looked hard at me, I walked on and never ſaid a word; before I got to the pitching-place, the priſoner came up by my ſide and he told me to ſtop.

Court. Was this in a violent way, or how?——No, my Lord, he came up to me, and told me to ſtop, ſays he deliver your money; with the ſame I turned about my head, and he was inſide, he was towards the wall, I was rather towards the horſe-road: I ſaw ſomething ſhine in his hand, I cannot tell what it was: then I began to halloo out as hard as ever I could, watch, and ſtop thief; the priſoner turned himſelf round, and I turned myſelf round to purſue him; I ran, and he ran, before he came to the end of Glaſs-houſe-ſtreet the watchman was coming, and he turned back again again further on to the end of the ſtreet; then there were four or five watchmen came into the middle of the ſtreet, and he was taken; I did not loſe ſight of him; he was very ſtubborn, and ſaid I ſtruck him over the head; when we came to the watch-houſe, the priſoner ſaid, I charge this gentleman with ſtriking me over the arm: he was committed to the next day; I am ſure he is the man that bid me ſtop, and he ſaid deliver your money.

Court. Was he abuſive at all when he told you to ſtop?—No, he was not.

JOHN PEARCE ſworn.

I apprehended the priſoner at half an hour after three; I heard the cry of ſtop thief, and I met the priſoner running, with ſomething in his hand, I do not know what it was; he turned ſhort, and I heard ſomething drop, but I cannot tell what it was; I purſued him; I told the watchman ſomething was dropped.

Priſoner. He ſaid he ſaw another man putting ſomething under the rails.——No, I ſaid this man.

ROBERT MITTON ſworn.

I am patrol of St. James's, I found a knife on Thurſday morning the 17th.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I am a hatter, I ſerved part of my time in Spital-fields, and a young man, an acquaintance of mine was going to Reading, and he aſked me to ſee him off: I live in Beak-ſtreet, and going along I met the proſecutor, and aſked him what it was o'clock, I believe I had got about one hundred yards from him, and I heard the cry of ſtop thief; and I ran and ſaw this gentleman cloſe to me, and he came and took me; there was another man ſtanding on the curb ſtone; there was nothing found upon me; this watchman ſaid he ſaw the other man putting ſomething under the rails; then they took me to the watch-houſe.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

407. JOSEPH MITTON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 31ſt of January laſt, one hempen ſack, value 10d. the property of William Marratt; and three coal ſacks, value 3s. the property of Matthew Windle.

The ſacks were found at the priſoner's houſe, but no previous felony was proved.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

408. JANE BEACH was indicted for that ſhe on the 14th of December laſt, unlawfully and feloniouſly did take away, with intent to ſteal, fourteen bed-curtains, value 20s. one linen covering to a bed, value 5s. one pair of window curtains, value 20s. two cotton ſopha caſes, value 20s. four cotton pillow caſes, value 3s. two woollen blankets, value 5s. two pillows, value 4s. two pair of candleſticks, value 4s. a looking-glaſs, value 12d. a pair of tongs, value 6d. the property of William Cooper, being in a certain hired lodging, in the dwelling houſe of the ſaid William.

(The witneſſes examined apart.)

WILLIAM COOPER ſworn.

I am a hair-dreſſer, and houſe-keeper, the priſoner lived in my apartments about ten weeks; my wife uſually lets the lodgings; ſhe received the money from the priſoner; I knew of the contract with this woman, and I approved of it.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Counſel. This was a houſe let to the priſoner for a conſideration?——Yes.

Had the priſoner the whole houſe?—No, I kept a coal cellar and a garden.

Was the houſe ready furniſhed?—Yes.

Mr. Peatt. My Lord, if this coal cellar was not in the poſſeſſion of the man, I ſubmit to your Lordſhip that the priſoner had the dominion over the whole houſe.

MARY

MARY COOPER ſworn.

I am wife of the laſt witneſs, I live in John-ſtreet, Oxford-Market, I know the priſoner, my huſband has a houſe in Union-ſtreet, No. 6. the priſoner took the apartment of me, not by agreement in writing, ſhe was to have it for two guineas a week; there was a parlour, a firſt floor, a ſecond floor; it is a ſingle houſe, all in front; ſhe had every apartment, except a cellar: I miſſed the things mentioned in the indictment: I ſaw them at Juſtice Hyde's, three weeks after.

Mr. Peatt. Where is this cellar?—— There are three cellars, and this is the further one, a part of a cellar: ſhe had all the houſe, and the cellars, but a cellar in the area, and that has no communication with the houſe, the communication is from the ſtreet, and from the houſe.

Mr. Peatt. My Lord, I beg to obſerve on the part of the priſoner, that it is plain from this woman's evidence, let the way to the cellar be where it will, or from whence it will, that the priſoner had compleat controul over the houſe; ſhe had the key, ſhe took the houſe for the avowed purpoſe of letting lodgings; and the poſſeſſion of that cellar cannot any way be conſidered as the poſſeſſion of the landlord of that houſe.

Jury to Proſecutor. Have you a key of the great door.—Yes, I always had.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

409. CHARLOTTE VEACH was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 15th of January laſt, one linen ſhirt, value 5s. one linen frock, value 1s. two linen handkerchiefs, value 1s. the property of William Finſham.

SARAH MILLS ſworn.

I take in waſhing, I am a laundreſs; on the 15th of January I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment; I was out when they were taken; they hung in my room when I went out, I ſaw them at the pawnbroker's; I knew the priſoner, I have given her many a diſh of tea becauſe ſhe was ſo diſtreſſed.

MARY FINSHAM ſworn.

I am wife of William Finſham, I ſent theſe things to waſh.

(The Pawnbroker produced the things which were depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

On Saturday morning ſhe ſent me out with a frock, and two handkerchiefs for eighteen pence; and ſhe ſent me with a ſhirt, and when I came back ſhe was in liquor verymuch, and I could not make her underſtand.

Court to Proſecutrix Did ſhe come back again?—No, ſhe did not.

GUILTY.

To be confined to hard labour two years in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

410. ROBERT SIMPSON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 22d of February one ſhoulder of mutton, value 2s. the property of John Wright:

And GEORGE RIDLEY was indicted for feloniouſly receiving the ſame goods, on the ſame day, knowing them to have been ſtolen.

JOHN WRIGHT ſworn.

I am a butcher, my ſhop is in St. James's Market, my dwelling houſe in Jermyn-ſtreet, I have lived there thirty years; on the 22d of February, when I returned from market between eight and nine, from the information I had, I went and got a ſearch warrant, and took one Price Rounds a conſtable with me, I took him into Ridley's houſe, and I gave him the warrant; Ridley keeps the Red Lion, in Jermyn-ſtreet, he has kept that houſe I believe about four years; I called for Ridley, and he came to the bar door, I told him I came for a ſhoulder of mutton he had of mine; he ſeemed a good deal confounded.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner Ridley's Council. Do not tell us what he ſeemed?—I will venture to ſwear that he ſeemed ſurprized, I will venture to ſay he was frightened when I came in.

Mr. Garrow. I ſubmit to the Court, whether ſuch evidence ever was given or endured in a Court of Juſtice, the witneſs comes here and attempts to deſcribe the operations of a man's mind; it is perfectly competent for him to give an account of what the priſoner did, as for inſtance, if the priſoner ſaid you ſhall not look into ſuch a place.

Wright. I ſaid to Ridley, no heſitating, come along with me, I will ſhew you where the mutton is; when I aſked him for the mutton he made no anſwer at all, I then took the conſtable along with me.

Court. Did he follow you, or attempt to run away?——He followed me, he did not attempt to run away.

Did he make any oppoſition to your going into the room?——No, he did not, I went into a little room which is the middle part of the houſe next the parlour, he followed me into the parlour, there was not any body in the little room but the conſtable and myſelf, there I found a ſhoulder of mutton, the conſtable took it to his own houſe.

Had that ſhoulder of mutton any thing remarkable about it?——Yes, Sir, in a ſhoulder of mutton we have always one particular ſcore.

What do you mean your ſheep?—Yes, Sir, the man always marks them all.

Are they all marked with one ſcore?—There may be one ſcore more or leſs, when the ſheep is hot they take and ſcore them three or four, more or leſs.

Are not all the ſhoulders of mutton that you have in your ſhop, ſcored much in the ſame way?——Yes.

Is not mutton in other ſhops ſcored much in the ſame way?——Never, they differ, moſt people differ in the ſcore.

Can you venture to ſwear from the marks of this mutton, that this was ſcored by your people?——Yes, I believe I can venture to ſwear that it was ſcored by the man that ſtole it.

Can you ſwear that you know this to be the ſcore of your ſhop?——Yes, Sir, I can bring you three or four or half a dozen now that are the ſame, they are Dorſetſhire ſheep, and they are moſt remarkable from any other ſheep.

Had you any other ſheep but Dorſetſhire ſheep in your ſhop?——No, none except a few Wiltſhire.

Did this appear to you, to be a ſhoulder of a Dorſet?——Yes.

Would you venture to ſwear that?——I will ſwear it, Sir; I took my man the priſoner Simpſon, to Sir Sampſon Wright's, and the conſtable brought Ridley; the conſtable is here that took him up, and here is a confeſſion of Robert Simpſon; Simpſon went with me to the Juſtice's the day following; I did not ſay a word to him, I told him I wanted him to go with me a little way, Simpſon was my ſervant, he has lived with me thrice, and this laſt time, about ſix or ſeven months.

Did not you give him a hint, which way you were going?——None at all, we went to Bow-ſtreet.

Did he make any objection to going there?——None.

Did not he aſk you any queſtions, all the way going to the office?——Not a word paſſed the whole way.

Who was the Magiſtrate?—Mr. Juſtice Addington.

Was that confeſſion taken in writing?—Yes.

Did you ſee it ſigned by the Magiſtrate, and the priſoner?——Yes.

Was it read over to him?—Yes.

Mr. Chetwood, Priſoner Simpſon's Council. When you was at the office, Sir, was there nothing paſſed between your man and you? No, Sir, I cannot recollect that there was.

It is impoſſible but ſomething muſt be ſaid to him?—All I ſaid to him is this, I aſked him how much gin and beer he had for a ſhoulder of mutton, and he ſaid he could not tell me.

D

Did not you ſay to him, that if he would make a confeſſion, it would be better for him?—No.

I ſuppoſe Ridley was the man you levelled at, not Simpſon?——No, Sir, not one more than the other.

This man had ſome wages in your hand at the time?—How much do you think?

May be eight or ten pounds?——No, Sir, I believe there may be five pounds, or more.

(The confeſſion read.)

"The examination of Robert Simpſon "charged with felony by John Wright, "taken before William Addington, on "the 23d of February:——who confeſſes "that between ſix and ſeven yeſterday morn- "ing, he, this examinant, feloniouſly ſtole "the ſhoulder of mutton now produced, "which he immediately carried to the houſe "of the ſaid George Ridley, and left it in "the parlour telling the ſaid Ridley, he "had left it there; and that he had car- "ried ſeveral ſhoulders of mutton there, "and always received a gratuity in gin and "beer.

Mr. Garrow. Your Lordſhip knows that confeſſion does not at all affect Ridley.

Mr. Garrow to Proſecutor. This priſoner, Mr. Ridley, has kept a publick houſe in your neighbourhood about four or five years?—Yes, this and another before.

Upon your going in and aſking Ridley, whether he had not a ſhoulder of mutton, upon the oath you have taken, did not he immediately ſay, I have a ſhoulder of mutton: was not the conſtable by?——Yes, he was.

Be a little attentive, whether in the hearing of the conſtable, he did not immediately ſay, I have a ſhoulder of mutton and I will ſhew it you?—No, he did not.

Then I am to take it, he did not ſhew you nor tell you ſo; you will ſwear that poſitively?—Yes, I will.

Now as to the mark of this mutton, had you ever ſeen that ſhoulder of mutton, before you ſaw it at his houſe?—Yes, as ſure as your name is Garrow.

What were the marks?—Upon my word I cannot exactly tell you how many marks there were, there might be four or five.

Then there is no particular number of ſtrokes univerſally uſed through your ſhop?—No, not that I know of, juſt as it pleaſes the man who dreſſes them.

You are a killing butcher?—We kill our own meat; the man has always one method of marking, he hardly ever alters it.]

Court. When this examination was taken it was read to the priſoner, was Ridley preſent?—He was not.

Mr. Garrow. Explain to us, who are not fortunate enough to know, the reaſon of your marks?—No, you know the taſte better.

Explain to us the reaſon of thoſe marks? It is only for ornament.

Juſt ſo?—They never hardly vary.

Now Mr. Wright, pray how many ſhoulders of mutton do you think there were in Newport-market that day, that could not be diſtinguiſhed from that by the ſcoring?——I ſuppoſe there might be five hundred for what I know.

So I thought, therefore I need not travel into all the markets in town?—It was Dorſetſhire mutton.

And there were ſo many ſhoulders of Dorſetſhire mutton, that no man can gueſs? No, I ſuppoſe not.

Some hundred ſhoulders?—Yes.

Then for any thing we have been able to learn yet, theſe ſcores might be made on them too?——No! no! no! you miſtake yourſelf, I know my own mutton as well as you know your brief.

Do you ſo, now we will try that a little, I know that by my fee, and by the name of the party, and of the attorney, now have you any ſuch reaſon for knowing your mutton?—I know my own mutton when I ſee it.

Why, how?—I have ſwore it.

That will not do?—I hope the Jury will be ſatisfied.

How do you know your mutton from any other Dorſetſhire mutton?——I know it was my ſhoulder of mutton.

But

But you muſt give us ſome reaſon?——Becauſe I am ſure of it, the ſhoulder of mutton is in being, and we will ſend for it, I will ſwear to it, becauſe I know it.

You muſt anſwer me Mr. Wright?——I ſhall give you may be ſuch an anſwer, that you ſhall not like.

I ſhall take care not to deſerve any ſuch anſwer; but I muſt have a plain anſwer from you: by what is it that you are able to ſwear that is your ſhoulder of mutton?—I know it to be my ſhoulder of mutton, by having it in my ſhop, and in my houſe ſeveral days before.

By what marks?—By the common ſcore that is uſed in my yard, when the man is killing, and by the very ſort of mutton.

Why you have ſaid there was mutton of that ſcore, and that mark, to the amount of five hundred?—No, not as I know.

Yes, but you have?——Then you have extorted the queſtion from me, the ſhoulder of mutton is here, and I will ſend for it.

That is no anſwer?—Firſt I know it by the ſcore and by the cut of it.

That ſcore is common to other mutton?—It may for what I know.

PRICE ROUNDS ſworn.

I am conſtable of St. James's, on the 23d of February, about twenty minutes before twelve, Mr. Wright came to me, and told me he wanted me to go a little way along with him; I went with him to the houſe of Mr. Ridley, of the Red Lion, in Jermyn-ſtreet; upon my entrance at the door, he gave me a warrant; I followed Mr. Wright into the kitchen, and when we went into the kitchen, Mr. Wright looked into the ſcullery, where the girl waſhes her diſhes, then he looked into the cupboard; I did not know what he was looking for, but he ſaid, where is Mr. Ridley; there were three men in the kitchen by the fire, and one of the men ſaid, I hear him coughing in the tap room; I turned my head in this manner, and I ſaw him through the bar, I called Ridley, and he came immediately; upon his entrance, Mr. Wright ſaid, Mr. Ridley, I underſtand you have a ſhoulder of mutton of mine here; Mr. Ridley and Mr. Wright both went, Mr. Ridley took hold of a braſs nob, that there is to open the door of the kitchen, I cannot ſay which turned it, but they both had it in their hands together; Mr. Ridley ſaid, there is a ſhoulder of mutton has been left here theſe two days, I do not know who it belongs to, and he ſaid he had no charge of it, nor did not know how it came there, but it had been gnawed by the cats, by being laid about; I ſaw it, and it was gnawed: Mr. Wright took it in his hand, and turned it about, and ſaid Mr. Rounds, this is my property, I deliver it into your cuſtody, and he gave it to me, as conſtable; I took it into my own houſe, Mr. Wright deſired me to take care of it, and he would meet me at one o'clock, I ſaw him about one, and he ſaid I will go and get Bob and the boy to the office, and do you bring Ridley and the mutton; by Bob and the boy I underſtood that this man's name was Robert.

How ſoon after was it that you took Ridley, to carry him to Bow-ſtreet?——About an hour and half.

When you came to take Ridley, did you find him at home?——Yes, I went in and ſaid, Mr. Ridley can you boil me this bone of mutton, it is two raw for me, his wife ſaid there is ſome veal and bacon and peaſe for dinner, if you will wait you are welcome; I did not tell him then, I told him after he muſt go along with me, about the ſhoulder of mutton, and he ſaid he would, he went very agreeably.

Was you before the Magiſtrate?—Yes, all the time all the evidences were examined; the ſhoulder of mutton was openly expoſed, it lay on the top of a bureau bedſtead, without any paper, or cloth, or anything.

What room do you call it?——As that may be the tap room, and this the kitchen, it is a middle room, there is a window that looks into the tap-room and the kitchen, there is a bureau bedſtead in it.

Mr. Garrow. I believe Ridley remained in his houſe doing his buſineſs, ſometime before he went with the man?—Yes.

I ſup-

I ſuppoſe this is the boy's bed room, is not it?——Yes, I live the very next door to Mr. Ridley, he has kept the houſe about four years.

Is it an orderly well governed houſe?—I do not know one ſo well governed in the neighbourhood, I believe I am the only perſon that has a complaint againſt him, and on Saturday night he has a pay-table, and the men ſtay till eleven at night, and the men come and piſs againſt my door, which is a private houſe; he bears a very good character, he had a very comfortable dinner to ſet down to that day.

He is not a ſort of man that uſually puts his own mutton, and things that he has to eat on the boy's bed?—No.

CHARLES GOSLING ſworn.

Court. How old are you?—Turned of thirteen.

Do you know the nature of an oath?—I ſhould not ſay any thing falſe.

What will become of you, if you do not tell the truth? (No anſwer.)

Do you know your catechiſm?——Yes Sir.

What will become of you, if you tell ſtories? (No anſwer.)

What becomes of bad boys that tell ſtories?—I do not know, I cannot read.

Court. Then I certainly ſhall not receive his evidence.

JOHN WRIGHT, Jun. ſworn.

I am ſon to Mr. Wright the butcher, in St. James's Market; in conſequence of a ſlight ſuſpicion, on the 21ſt of this month, and a poſitive information, I examined the ſhoulders of mutton in my father's ſhop, on Monday morning about nine, and there were nine in number; the firſt thing that particularly ſtruck me, was that one of the ſhoulders of mutton was very near tumbling down, which ſhoulder was the firſt that I examined, on the back of which was ſix ſcores; it had been pretty much ſtrained in the cutting up, and on the upper part, which is called the point of the ſhoulder, the piece of marked fat was not cut off by me, as uſual; this ſhoulder of mutton was the largeſt in the ſhop, it was cut on the Saturday before, and owing to the ſharpneſs of the weather, was very dry; I examined the other ſhoulders of mutton particularly, and there was not a ſhoulder of mutton in the ſhop, with ſo many ſcores upon it, as this one which I am now mentioning to you; there was one which was particularly ſmall, that I did not take much notice of, it was a Welch one, about three pound, I did not examine the remaining ſix ſo much as I had done them two, and this was the reaſon why I did not examine the others, becauſe I expected one to be taken that night, and then I ſhould have had the fellow to it, theſe were my general obſervations that night, upon which I ſhut the ſhop door, and locked it, and took the key home, and laid it on a ſhelf in the kitchen; Simpſon ſleeps in our houſe, I ſpoke to him that night, juſt before I took the keys, the next morning when I got up, one of the ſhoulders of mutton was miſſing, that was the one I looked at the night before.

Is it uſual in the trade, for people to leave half a foot?——It is, or it is not, the mark in the foot was done accidentally, not by way of diſtinction; I am poſitive it is the ſame mutton, I undertake to ſwear to it; I beg leave to obſerve in behalf of the priſoner, Robert Simpſon, that I have truſted him with ſeventy pounds at a time, and he has carried it very ſafe for me; I ought to ſtate to you, that General St. John was here this morning in his behalf.

Mr. Chetwood. There were times when you and your father were abſent from the ſhop?—Yes.

Had not he a liberty of ſelling?—Yes, to ſell and ſend to the cuſtomers, if we were not in the way.

Mr. Chetwood. My Lord, I humbly apprehend, that notwithſtanding the manner in which this paper is obtained, it will not at all affect the priſoner Simpſon; it is proved by Mr. Wright himſelf, that he had a liberty of ſelling the meat, and your Lordſhip remembers, in the caſe of Smith, he having a liberty to diſpoſe of the corn of his his master, the Court determined that he could commit no felony upon it; the manner of drawing up these confessions at the office we all know, and I apprehend that in this case, he having a liberty to sell the meat of his master, could not commit a felony upon it.

Mr. Garrow, on the part of Ridley, also argued on the same side.

The Court over-ruled the objection.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, though I do not call any witnesses to Ridley's character on this transaction, yet for the sake of his character in future, and to shew the nature of this prosecution, I will trouble the Court with a few witnesses, out of a great many.

THOMAS PRESTON sworn.

I am a brewer in Oxford-street, Ridley has dealt with me for six years, a very honest man, I lent him three hundred pounds at one time, to go into the Red Lion, which he paid me again.

WILLIAM HANSON sworn.

I am a grocer, the corner of Chancery Lane, and a distiller in Stanhope-street, I have known him about four years, an exceeding good regular steady man.

ROBERT SANGSTER sworn.

I am clerk to Mr. Whitebread the brewer, I have known him four years, his character was so good, I would have intrusted him myself.

He was not a man likely to have been the receiver of a stolen shoulder of mutton? ——One of the last men I should have thought on.

The prisoner Ridley called seven more witnesses who all gave him an exceeding good character.

Court. It is needless to call any more witnesses for Ridley.

GEORGE RIDLEY, NOT GUILTY.

ROBERT SIMPSON GUILTY.

To be whipped and discharged.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

411. WILLIAM SMITH was indicted for feloniously assaulting Eleanor, wife of Edward Hatton, on the King's highway, on the 10th of January last, and putting her in corporal fear and danger of her life, and feloniously taking from her person, and against her will, one pair of silver shoe-buckles, value 30s. the property of the said Edward.

ELEANOR HATTON sworn.

I live in Hanway-street, in the parish of St. Pancras; I am wife of Edward Hatton; on Friday the 14th of January I was robbed, between eight and nine, in Hanway-street, there were several people in the streets, two of whom are in the Court, I had been for a pair of silver buckles, they were very large, six inches and a half long; my husband is a silver buckle maker, and I had them to finish; I was standing at the corner of the street cheapening some sprats, and I was tapped on my right shoulder, and I thought it was some acquaintance; I turned about immediately, and the buckles were forced out of my right hand.

Court. Were they snatched out?—Yes.

Was any body else near you?—The two witnesses that are here were close behind me; the man then ran across the road, and I cried out, I have lost my buckles.

Was the person pursued?——No, not then, I was so frightened I knew not what I did; I went home first, I live just by there, and one of the witnesses lives just by me; I described the person and clothes of the prisoner, and I went with my husband and the constable in pursuit of him, but he was not taken till Sunday the 16th, between three and four; I went with the constable to the watch-house, to see if I should know him, and I went with the witness to the watch-house to see the person; and I believe he was laid down, and they made him get up; and I think, to the best of my knowledge, that he certainly is the lad that robbed me.

Can you venture to swear to him?—I cannot say I saw his face, but by his stat-true and all appearances he certainly is the perſon.

Court. How long was he before he was out of your ſight?——It is a very broad croſſing where he croſſed, and he did not run very faſt; I did not ſee his face; my property was not found.

JOHN LANE, a little Boy.

Court. How old are you?——Going on eleven.

Do you know the nature of an oath?——Yes.

Have you ever been taught your catechiſm?——Yes, and if I take a falſe oath I ſhall go to the devil.

JOHN LANE ſworn.

Court, Now tell the truth——I ſaw the priſoner running down Bambridge-ſtreet; my mammy ſent me out for ſome ſprats for her ſupper, about the hour of eight, and I ſaw the priſoner and another in company, the corner of Hanway-yard.

Did you ever ſpeak to William Smith before, do you know the boy?——No, Sir, I only know the boy by carrying an old man victuals; I uſed to carry an old man victuals, and I have ſeen him walking up and down the ſtreet; I have ſeen him five or ſix times.

Did you ever ſpeak to the boy?——No.

How did he uſe to be dreſſed?——In a blue jacket and a brown pair of breeches.

Court. See what breeches the priſoner has on?——Mr. Newman. Dirty leather breeches.

Court. What ſort of breeches do you mean, leather breeches?——Yes.

How many days was this before the affair?——About three days before.

What part of the town was it that you ſaw him in theſe five or ſix times?——About Bambridge-ſtreet.

Was Bambridge-ſtreet near Hanway-ſtreet?——Yes.

What diſtance is there between Bambridge-ſtreet and Hanway-ſtreet?——It is about fifty yards apart.

Did you ſee the boy do any thing in Hanway-ſtreet?——I ſaw him look over Mrs. Hatton's ſhoulder, and I ſaw him tap her over the right arm, and ſhe turned round to look, and he ſnatched a parcel out of her right hand.

Did you know Mrs. Hatton before?——I knew her before, becauſe ſhe kept a pork ſhop on one ſide of Oxford-road, and my mother uſed to buy pork of her.

Which way did the priſoner run?——Across to Bambridge-ſtreet.

Could you ſee what it was he ſnatched?——It was a parcel in a light blue paper.

Was it dark?——Yes.

How came you to ſee him?——There were two link boys ſtood each ſide the baſket.

Did you ever ſee the boy afterwards?——No, not till he was taken.

Where did you ſee him when he was taken?——On a Sunday night, at the watch-houſe.

Did you know him?——Yes.

Did you ſay ſo immediately?——Yes, I knew him immediately when I ſaw him.

Can you, upon the oath you have taken, ſafely ſwear that he is the boy?——Yes.

How far was you from him?——I was ſtanding at the end of the baſket, the priſoner was behind Mrs. Hatton, and ſhe was cloſe to the baſket.

Do you live with your friends at home?——Yes.

Do you go to ſchool now?——No.

What are your friends?——My mother is a mantua-maker.

What is your father?——He is not living.

Where does your mother live?——Near Bedford-ſquare.

One of the Jury. His mother is a very honeſt woman, my Lord, I know her and the boy very well.

——— JONES ſworn.

I am a lamp-lighter, coming by with the lamps, I have ſeen him with other boys, I have known him almoſt two years about St. Giles's pound, I was going by with two lamps of my maſter's; I had no light in my hand, but I am ſure this is the ſame boy, boy, I have seen him frequently before, he lives at an oil-shop in our lane.

Did you know Mrs. Hatton before?——Yes.

How could you see this?——There were two link-boys standing on each side of the basket, and there was the light of a candle that was about a yard off in the passage, I saw the prisoner pat her on the shoulder, and force them out of her hand; I followed the boy immediately, he walked across the way when he snatched them out of her hand, there was another boy on the other side of the way; he was not taken till Sunday, between three and four; he got away, he said he would break her arm if she did not loose him.

Do you mean the prisoner at the bar?——Yes.

How was the boy dressed whom she had by the arm.——He had a blue jacket, and a round hat.

Was it Smith that tapped her on the shoulder, and took the bundle?——Yes, it was.

And the same person that she laid hold of by the arm?——Yes.

Are you sure of that?——Yes.

How was the other boy dressed?——I did not see the other boy, he was the farther side of the road; I could not tell what clothes he had on.

Did you see Smith's face at the time he tapped this woman on the shoulder?——Yes.

Now did you see Smith's face at the time that Mrs. Hatton laid hold of him?——Yes, it was the same night.

Mrs. Hatton followed him immediately?——She went to her husband first, and came back again.

How long after was it that you saw Mrs. Hatton in St. Giles's?—About half an hour, she took hold of him as he came out of the door where the two thieves went into.

In what street was this door?—It is a new street just as you get into St. Giles's, she said, I want my buckles.

That person that you saw her have hold of his arm, coming out of the door, was that Smith the prisoner?——Yes.

You have seen his face now and you saw it then?—Yes.

As you followed the prisoner Smith, you can tell us into which street he took?——I cannot tell the name of the street, it is about a hundred yards to the passage.

Court to Prosecutrix. If I understand you right, after the boy had robbed you, he went across the street, you did not pursue him, but went home?——Yes.

Then you never saw the boy till Sunday?——No.

What do you say to this part of the evidence, that this boy says, that you saw him at the door, and took hold of him by the arm?—I went in pursuit of him with my husband, I went down into a street by the Flying Horse, and the boy laid hold of my arm as I held it across the door, and he swore he would break it.

How was that boy dressed?——I absolutely cannot tell, for there was a very little light in the passage, it was between the passage and the door.

Now you told me just now that that was not the prisoner at the bar?—I said, I cannot swear that that was the prisoner, that said, he would break my arm, because it was not very light.

How came you to tell us upon your first examination that you never saw any thing of the boy till Sunday?—I did not know it was material, or else I would have mentioned it before.

That boy that you saw in this street, do you believe it was the same boy?——I cannot tell, for there was hardly any light, it was between the dark passage and the door.

The Remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be published in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 23d of FEBRUARY 1785, and the following Days;

Being the THIRD SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER III. PART X.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of William Smith.

Did you ever entertain a notion, that it was the ſame boy?—I rather imagined that it was, becauſe I heard a paper rattle in the paſſage, which I imagined had the buckles in it.

Court to Jones. It was dark in this paſſage?—One of the link boys came along with the woman, and ſhe ſaid ſhe would give him three halfpence if he would ſhew her a light, and he ſhewed her a light.

The link boy did not come, till after they had made the eſcape?—No.

Was the link boy with her?—Yes, Sir, he followed her away from where the ſprats were, the boy went down the paſſage, and ſhe took the link out of his hand, and held it at the door; I went into this ſtreet with Mrs. Hatton and the link boy, and Jones was there, the link was always alight, and he kept poking it to make it give a good light, ſhe run up to the door with the link in her hand, and ſtood acroſs it, and there were two boys hid up the ſtairs, I ſaw them by the light of the ſtairs, and they ſaid, let us go down, and ſee what is the matter, for I will not ſtay here; and they came down, and Mrs. Hatton held her arm acroſs the door, and ſhe ſaid they ſhould not come out, and ſhe inſiſted on their ſtopping there, and they ſaid if ſhe did not let them paſs they would break her arm.

Did either of them lay hold of her arm?—They took hold of her arm in this manner, and puſhed it.

Which was that?—The one in the blue jacket.

Was Smith either of theſe boys?—I do not think it was.

Had they both blue jackets?—No, one had a light coloured coat, and one of them run up againſt me, as I ſtood right oppoſite the door, and puſhed me down, one walked away, and the other run, and then they both walked together, till they both got out of ſight.

JOHN TAYLOR ſworn.

I only went with Mrs. Hatton to ſhew her the priſoner, when ſhe ſaw the boy, ſhe ſaid I am not quite ſure, whether that is the boy, ſays I, ſtand up and let the woman ſee you, ſays ſhe, I am almoſt ſure it is the boy.

GEORGE MECHAM ſworn.

On Saturday I had information that Mrs. Hatton

Hatton had been robbed, as the prisoner was described to me, I thought I knew him, on Sunday the 16th, I apprehended him at the King's Arms alehouse, he wanted to make his escape over a wall.

Prisoner. I know nothing of the transaction.

GUILTY

Of stealing, but not privately from the person.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr ROSE.

---

412. WILLIAM CHANNING was indicted for feloniously assaulting Hans Christian Arrhenius in the King's highway on the 8th day of January last, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniously taking from his person and against his will, one watch with the inside case made of base metal, and the outside case made of tortoiseshell, and gilt with gold, value 40s. a hair watch string, with gold set therein, value 10s. a gold watch hook, value 8s. one base metal watch key, value 1d. and one silk handkerchief, value 12d. his property.

HANS CHRISTIAN ARRHENIUS sworn.

I live in Mincing-lane.

Are you a house keeper?——No, I live at Knightsbridge, my counting house is in Mincing-lane, I am a merchant; on Saturday the 8th of January, I was robbed between ten and eleven at night or thereabouts, I cannot exactly say.

Court. I should be glad if you will fix with as much precision as you can, the time that you was robbed?—When I came out of the play-house.

Did you happen to look at your watch at that time?—In the play-house to the best of my recollection I did.

Can you say with certainty, upon your oath, that you did look at your watch while you was in the play-house?——I cannot.

What were the play and the entertainment?——I do not recollect.

I wish to ascertain the time by that, did you come out at the time when other people came out?——The play was over, and I came away with the rest of the company, I was crouded and jostled by a number of people, I came away to the end of the Piazza, which goes to Russel-street, I ordered my carriage to that end in order not to be crouded; as it rained, I stepped back again under the shelter, till it came up, then this croud gathered round me, and my pocket was picked.

Describe in what manner a croud came round you, you know pretty well coming out of the house, there are a vast number of all sorts of people, girls of the town, and all sorts, what sort of a croud was this?—Such as generally are assembled at the coming out of the house; I can say no more than that I lost my watch and pocket handkerchief; I felt the watch taken out of my pocket, I caught hold of an arm, but the croud forced my hand from that arm.

At the time that you felt your watch go, and caught hold of an arm, you did not perceive any thing more done to you, and the person slipped away?——Yes.

Did you ever find your watch afterwards?——It has been produced to me.

Who produced it to you?——One Mr. Jones, a pawnbroker, in Fleet-street.

Describe the watch you lost at that time?—It was a metal watch, with a moco tortoiseshell outside case, and inside case made of base metal.

In that croud you can swear with certainty, that you felt your watch fall from you?——I did.

Can you tell when last you had your watch in your hand that day?——I cannot tell.

Had you had it about you that day?——That I am confident of.

When did you last see your handkerchief?—Occasionally at the play-house.

When you saw your watch again, did you you ſee it with the key and trinkets mentioned in the indictment?—No, my Lord, the ſeal and hook are gone, and the key was there then.

Can you identify the watch?——Only by the wearing it now and then, when I went to dangerous places, I kept it for that purpoſe juſt to ſee the hour.

How long might you have had it?——I fancy about a year, or a year and a half, or two years, I cannot exactly ſay.

Was there any paper on the inſide, that you can ſwear to?——I can ſwear to the watch by ſight.

I underſtand you did not diſtinguiſh any perſon at all?—No.

Jury. Did your ſee the face of the perſon whoſe arm you took hold of?—No, if I did, I cannot recollect who he is.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. Had you your glaſſes on, Sir, at that time?—I cannot ſay.

I think I obſerve by the make of your glaſſes, that your ſight is very ſhort?——Yes.

This was in the uſual croud that comes out of the play-houſe?—Yes.

You felt your watch go, and immediately ſeized an arm, which you concluded was the arm that took your watch?——I thought ſo.

You have no reaſon to believe that you ſaw the priſoner at the bar at all in that crowd?—No.

Now, as to the watch itſelf, my Lord has aſked you, whether either by the maker's name, or the number, or any lady's work, or any thing elſe, you can identify it?——No; I have the name and the number.

Court. Can you deſcribe the hair ſtring?—There is a ſwivel and top made of gold, I know the ſtring, I can ſwear to the ſtring.

Mr. Garrow. There are many hundred ſuch ſtrings as theſe in London?—Poſſibly there may.

You have, I have no doubt, a very firm perſuaſion that that is your watch?——I have.

But there are no particular marks by which you can diſtinguiſh that from another tortoiſeſhell watch, and that ſtring from another hair ſtring?—No, there are not.

Do you think it was nearer ten than eleven, or eleven than ten?—I ſhould rather gueſs it was nearer eleven.

What houſe was it at?—Covent-Garden.

You cannot recollect the performance?—No.

There was no perſonal violence addreſſed to you, only the ſhoving of the crowd, as I underſtand it?—No.

You felt your watch go?—Yes.

JOSEPH LITTLER ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Jones, pawnbroker, in Fleet-ſtreet; that watch was brought to our ſhop to pledge, I have had it ever ſince it was brought; I ſpeak with certainty to the watch; it was brought and put into the witneſs Walker's hands, but I cannot ſwear by whom it was brought; I believe the other witneſs will ſwear to him.

Was you preſent when it was brought?—I was preſent, the other witneſs took it from the hands of the perſon that brought it.

Was you attending to other people at the time?—I was.

Have you any notion of the perſon at all?—I did not take any notice, the witneſs Walker took the watch out of the hand that brought it, and aſked him how much he wanted upon it; the anſwer was a guinea and a half; the other witneſs firſt looked at the watch, and then put it into my hand, to know if a guinea and a half would be lent upon it; I examined it, and thinking the mounting of the ſtring to be gold, I went and aſked the perſon whether the mounting was gold; his anſwer was yes; then I ordered the witneſs to lend the perſon a guinea and an half; the money was given, and the perſon went away.

Court. What may the value of this watch be?—The firſt coſt might be about three guineas and an half.

What day was this?—On Monday the 10th of January, in the afternoon, the hour I cannot poſitively ſay.

Can you at all say what time in the afternoon?—I looked at it by the light of a candle, it was rather a dark day, the candle might have been lighted since three o'clock, but as far as I can say, it was from three to six.

Look at the watch, will you swear that was the watch?—Yes, this is the watch.

When it was brought to you, was it in the condition it is now?—No, it was excepting the glass, which is broke by accident, waiting here on Monday last.

There is a hair string to it?—Yes, there is a common metal watch key upon the string.

Is it one of those keys that hang down loose, or is it a strait stiff key?—It is a stiff key.

Mr. Garrow. Where is your shop?—The corner of Wine-office-court, Fleet-street.

Have you no windows but the windows in Fleet-street?—No.

That is not a large window?—Not very large.

And pretty full of goods?—Yes.

Can you ascertain the time this happened?—From three to six.

That is taking a large scope?—It was between dinner time and that time, I am sure of that.

Is your shop divided into little boxes?—Yes.

The purpose of which is, that persons who are distressed may not be exposed, but may come into rather a darker place than ordinary; in the box it is dark, so that a person standing in the box is not very conspicuous; my observation is that the object who is in the dark, is not so visible to persons in the shop, as the person in the shop is to them in the boxes?—He was well dressed, I had not the least suspicion of him.

Did you know the prisoner before this?—I do not know that ever I saw him.

The person that did bring it took a duplicate?—Yes.

Now is not it the constant course of the trade, for persons pledging things to take duplicates?—No, it is the common rule, he was asked if he would have a duplicate.

Why they commonly ask them, whether they chuse to have a duplicate?—Some people do not wish to have the care of a duplicate.

Those who decline having a duplicate, come under very suspicious circumstances, for they do not chuse to have a duplicate found upon them?—I do not see that, because a person might take a duplicate, and tear it at the door going out, some that know the shop never do take duplicates, but strangers usually do.

Was you one of the persons that went to the prisoner's lodgings?—I was not.

WILLIAM WALKER sworn.

The prisoner came to our house on Monday the 10th of January, the corner of Wine-office-court in Fleet-street.

Was it Mr. Jones's?—Yes.

What time was it?—I really cannot swear to the time.

Can you give any sort of description of the time?—It was after dinner, I cannot swear to the time.

Will you swear it was after dinner?—I will swear that.

What time do you usually dine?—About three; the prisoner asked me a guinea and an half upon his watch.

Did you ever see the person of the prisoner before?—I cannot say, I may have seen him.

Then he was a stranger to you at that time?—Yes, Sir.

Upon what did you lend him a guinea and an half?—Upon that watch with the gold hair string; he told me the string was gold; I carried the watch to my partner Joseph Littler, and asked him if that would do for a guinea and an half; I told him the string was gold mounted; my partner took the watch, and examined it, and took it opposite to the box where the prisoner was, and he asked him if the string was gold mounted, and he told him yes; and my partner bid me give him a guinea and an half; which I did, and he bid me give him a duplicate; I gave him one, and I asked him him where he lived; he told me No. 20, Jewin-ſtreet.

What part of the town is that in?—I really do not know, I gave him the duplicate, and he went away.

Court. How many boxes may there be in your ſhop?——Three.

Can a perſon at any part of the ſhop, ſee into all the three boxes at one time?——No, not without they go nearly oppoſite.

How many candles had you in the ſhop?—I do not know, I believe there was but one, night was not come on, candles had not been lighted.

Can you tell me from your recollection, whether that candle was near the box where the man ſtood, or the other part of the ſhop?——It was near the box.

Was it oppoſite the box?—It was not exactly oppoſite, it was oppoſite the next box to it.

How long might the man be in the ſhop altogether?—Not above five minutes.

Had you any ſuſpicion of that man?—None in the leaſt.

Then you made I ſuppoſe the common obſervations upon him, juſt as uſual?——Yes.

Now will you venture to ſwear from the ſight you had of him, that the priſoner at the bar was the man?—I have ſworn it, he was the man.

Jury. Was there a counter between you and him?—Yes.

How broad?—About a yard broad.

Mr. Garrow. And what is the depth of the ſtall, from the edge of the counter to the door where they come in?—About the ſame width, or a little more, it is ſufficient juſt to take one perſon, it has a ſlide to come over one of the counters, but that is drawn up when we pleaſe.

Was that ſlide drawn up?——But very little.

Look at the watch?—This is the watch.

Court. How was the man dreſſed?—In a lightiſh coloured coat and a red waiſtcoat, with a round hat.

Was his hat on?—Yes.

Mr. Garrow. Mr. Walker, now raiſe your voice, and attend to me, is yours a ſhop of conſiderable buſineſs?—Yes.

Watches are as common pledges as any thing?—Yes.

How many watches do you think you might have taken in pledge, in the courſe of the ten days preceding the day you have been ſpeaking of?—I cannot tell how many, ſometimes one or two in a day, ſometimes ſeven or eight.

Do you remember the name of the man, that pledged a watch at ſix the day before?—I do not recollect that I took in one.

Do you recollect the one the day after?—It is impoſſible.

If you took in one, do you recollect the perſon of that man?—It is impoſſible.

Do you recollect the name of the perſon that brought in the laſt pledge before the watch?——I cannot recollect any thing of the kind.

But you know upon this, there is ſomething depends, for a highway robbery there is a reward?—I did not know that at the time.

No! Mr. Walker?—As to that, I did not go to ſwear for that.

Oh! God forbid that I ſhould ſuſpect you of that! you had no ſuſpicion of the man that brought you this?—No, but we look at every perſon that pledges any thing for a high ſum.

Yes, and you look at them ſo well, that you forget every one but this man, and this is a high ſum?—Yes, it is.

You had one candle, you had not lighted up the decoys at that time?—No.

The ſlide was pulled over upon the counter?—Yes, but I went oppoſite to him.

Had the man a round hat?—Yes.

That did not aſſiſt you to recollect him much?—No.

Cannot you ſwear that he had a bald head?—No.

(N. B. The Priſoner had a bald head.)

I thought you might have ſeen that through his hat; cannot you recollect no what time a little more particularly?——I cannot.

I believe you was the young gentleman that went to the prisoner's lodgings?——Yes, Sir, I was.

Did you find any of Mr. Arrbenius's seals there?——I was not searching, I staid in the passage.

Did not you go in before the search warrant was executed, and hold some conversation with the prisoner?——Jealous went in.

How long were you and Jealous consulting in the passage?——We were not consulting.

Do you mean to swear, that after Jealous and you had been into this room, that you did not go out together before you came in, and ask for the keys of the box. Do you mean to swear that you immediately knew this man, and that you told Jealous so?——Yes.

Upon your oath, did not you want to change his clothes?——No.

Do you mean to swear that in your presence he was not ordered to put on his other clothes?——He was not, nor I did not see him change his clothes.

Did not you tell Jealous that that man was not in the clothes, that the man was in that pawned the watch?——He was in the same dress when I went in, he had a light coloured coat, and a red waistcoat on; that I did not tell Jealous that was not the man nor the dress.

For what purpose was he to change his clothes?——I did not know he did change his clothes.

Did Jealous carry you to the prisoner's house?—Yes.

Who directed you to the house?——Jealous, by the description that me and my partner gave at Bow-street, he said he had suspicion who the person was, and I should go with him.

The first person that you saw you plumped upon?—There was nobody in the room but himself.

That will not do, did he shew you any body else, before he shewed you the prisoner?—He did not.

And the moment he shewed him to you, you plumped upon him?—Certainly.

Where is his house?—No. 4, in New-street, Gough Square.

Jury. When you take in a pledge you register it?—Certainly, the name and place of abode.

Court. About what time did you see him there at his house?——About ten in the morning, the Thursday after.

Mr. Garrow. Who first discovered this watch at your shop?——My partner and I looked over the hand bill that came in on the Wednesday, and in particular we observed this watch.

Have not you a hue and cry every Monday?——Yes, but it did not come on the Monday, it came on the Wednesday, we have a paper from Bow-street every week.

That paper ought to come on Monday?——Yes, but it did not come till Wednesday.

Jury. Does it usually come regularly?—Yes.

Court. Will you swear that that paper did not come in till the Wednesday?——I will.

Do you ever recollect this paper, which is stated to come out of a Monday, coming out of a Tuesday or Wednesday?——I do.

Mr. Garrow. Are you sure it was Thursday, and not Friday, that this man was apprehended?——It was Thursday, I am sure of it.

You know it would have been very gross conduct in you, to have taken in a watch that was in the hue and cry paper?—Certainly it would.

But of course, if the paper came in on the Wednesday, you took it in very harmlessly on the Monday?——We were both reading it on the Wednesday.

Jury to Littler. What time did the paper come in, do you recollect?—It came in on the Wednesday.

What

What time in the morning?—At twelve within a few minutes as I recollect.

Whose duty is it to deliver it?—One of the officers of Bow-ſtreet, his name is Maynard.

Did you read it together?—Yes.

What did you do in conſequence of that reading?—I went to Bow-ſtreet, and deſcribed a tall thin man.

Priſoner. I would only obſerve one or two things; the witneſs declares I was taken on the Thurſday, I was taken on the Friday; he ſolemnly declares my coat was not ſtained, the coat I had on was a pea green coat; the officer ſearched my drawers particularly over; I aſked him ſeveral times with what view he ſearched, he ſaid you will know preſently; he then ſaid have you any other place where you put your property, I ſaid I have a cheſt up ſtairs, he went up there and looked about, he then immediately came into the parlour with me, and ſaid take off that coat you have on, and put on this drab coloured coat, which I did.

EDWARD LUCAS ſworn.

I am an officer, I know the priſoner.

Do you remember ſeeing him at any time in January, on a Saturday?—I do, it was on Saturday, the 8th of January, I had been at the public office, in Hyde-ſtreet, Bloomſbury, I had been there moſt of the afternoon, and between eight and nine at night, I went to the corner public houſe, when I went in, I ſaw Mr. Haywood the landlord, Mr. Humpage, the priſoner, and ſomebody elſe; they were drinking a large bowl of punch in the tap-room; I was aſked to drink by Mr. Humpage, which I refuſed, and the priſoner got up and handed me a glaſs of punch.

Was the priſoner a ſtranger to you?—I have met him ſeveral times before at that houſe, I drank it, and ſat down at the next box on the other ſide, and called for a pint of beer, and ſmoaked my pipe till half paſt twelve at night; here is a memorandum I made as ſoon as I heard he was taken up, he was there till paſt twelve, when I came away went; I went up ſtairs, for I lodged in the houſe at that time.

—Now from the time when you firſt went in, till twelve o'clock, was the priſoner at all abſent?—He never was out of the houſe, he was holding a converſation about ſomething, I forget what, I am ſure as to the night; I heard it a few days after, that he was taken up, and I began to recollect, and made this memorandum as ſoon as I heard it.

Did you make that a few days afterwards?—I did, I believe the very day he was taken, I am poſitive of the day, I have no doubt in the caſe.

FRANCIS HUMPAGE ſworn.

I am an officer belonging to Juſtice Walker's; I was at the Yorkſhire Ale-houſe, juſt by Juſtice Walker's, on this Saturday, I am ſure to the day, I remember being there in the evening, and ſeeing the priſoner there, I ſaw him from between ſeven and eight, till paſt twelve in the morning, he was drinking, we had a ſix ſhilling bowl of punch in the tap-room, and I remember Lucas coming in, and ſitting next the priſoner; I aſked Lucas to have a glaſs of punch, and I remember the priſoner handing it to him; we continued drinking the punch till almoſt ten o'clock, then we had ſome beer, he continued till paſt twelve o'clock, when we all got up to go home, I am ſure the priſoner was never out of the houſe two minutes.

You are ſure he never was out of the houſe for ten minutes together?—I am ſure he was not, he had a fowl with him, which he aſked Harwood for when he was going home; Harwood drank ſome of the punch; I remember ſeeing Channing after that, on Monday the 10th of January, I ſaw him then at the ſame houſe, he was there between two and three in the afternoon, he was drinking a pint of beer, and ſmoaking his pipe after dinner; he ſaid there there till about three, and somebody said here is your brother coming for you, he said, he did not want to see him; I believe they had had some words, and he came to the door, and gave him a letter, and he sat by the fire, and he read it by the light of the fire, and when he saw it, he said what a fool I was to turn my brother away, here is a letter, that was about four o'clock.

Court. Who was in your company that evening?—Lucas, Channing, and one Lewis a dealer in colours, and two or three more.

Lucas. My Lord, I remember particularly, on the Saturday about twelve, I was very cold, and wanted a drop of purl, and the prisoner said, Mr. Lucas, if you will have a pint, I will join with you.

RICHARD HARWOOD sworn.

I keep the Yorkshire Alehouse, in Hyde-street, I remember seeing the prisoner at my house, on the 8th of January.

At what time did he come?—At about seven, or between seven and eight, he staid there till the watch was going past twelve; he was drinking punch, and smoaking his pipe; there was Humpage, Lucas, and Lewis, I made them a six shilling bowl myself, and drank some of it myself.

Are you able to say, from eight o'clock till twelve, the prisoner was never out of the house?—He never was out till nine, and about nine I sat down and smoaked my pipe till he went away; from nine till twelve I am sure he never was absent for two minutes together; I am positive to the day, because he begged me to buy him a fowl for the next day, I accordingly bought him one in the forenoon of the Saturday, and hung it up in the bar, and about twelve at night he took his fowl and went home.

Court. Where does he live?—I cannot say, all that I know of him is his coming to my house.

Mr. Garrow. Your house is famous for Yorkshire ale?—Yes.

Court. Can you speak with precision as to this being Saturday night?—Yes, I am sure it was Saturday night, because of the fowl, for I only buy them of a Saturday.

Jury. What might the salesman's name be?—Kirby, he lives in Red Lion-street, and keeps a shop there.

CHARLES LEWIS sworn.

I live in Oxford-street, I am a miniature painter, in enamel and water colours, I am a married man and have a family, I rent the best apartment in the house, which is a first floor, I remember the prisoner from a child, and I remember seeing him on this Monday, the first time to my knowledge since I have seen him for these two years and an half.

Where did you see him that day?—At a house, which I believe they call the Yorkshire alehouse, in Bloomsbury Market, I believe it is a corner house, it goes by the name of the Yorkshire alehouse; I never in my life frequented it, but I went there that day from a certain circumstance; having known the prisoner from a child, and consequently knowing his parents, I knew a younger brother of his, and he having had some dispute or quarrel with his elder brother, the prisoner, he solicited me to endeavour to make friends between the two brothers; willing to lend every aid and assistance to a youth in distress, and not having seen the prisoner, nor spoke to him for two years and an half; I took my pen and addressed myself to him, this was on the Monday, desiring the prisoner would be so obliging as to appoint me to see him, at any house that was most agreeable to him; the bearer of that letter returned to me, who is brother to the prisoner, and told me that the wrath of his brother was such that he had not opened the letter in his presence.

Did the brother tell you where he carried that billett to?——Yes, to the Yorkshire alehouse, near Bloomsbury Square, and as far as I can remember at Mr. Harwood's; upon which I thought it was rather unpolite not to answer the billet in any gentleman;

I went to the alehouse between two and three, and found the prisoner there; I continued with him in the back parlour, conversing with him about his brother, from a quarter past four till a quarter past five, or rather more.

What business is the prisoner?—He is an engraver, I have employed him in his profession.

THOMAS SHERBON sworn.

I am an engraver in Craven-street, in the Strand, the prisoner served the last five years of his time to me and my partner, who is now out of business.

Have you known him lately?—I have employed him since his time has been out; during the time he was apprentice, he was intrusted with property to the amount of many thousands; he was very honest and diligent.

WILLIAM MERCHANT sworn.

I am a linen draper, No. 16, King-street, St. Ann's; I have known the prisoner about two years, I never heard any thing dishonest by him.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

MISDEMEANORS.

413. THOMAS PRITCHARD was indicted for unlawfully suborning one John Langridge to commit wilful and corrupt perjury, in his Majesty's Court of Exchequer.

Mr. Garrow. Gentlemen, the prosecutor gives no evidence, the principal having been already acquitted.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

414. ELIZABETH DAVIS was indicted for obtaining on the 11th of January last, thirty-six yards of silk ribbon, value 16s. by false pretences, the property of Robert Wilson and John Wilson, with intent to cheat and defraud them of the same.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

N. B. Francis Froome and Robert Halet served on the ninth day of this Session on the First Middlesex Jury.

On

On the FIRST DAY of this SESSION,

THE OPINION

OF THE

TWELVE JUDGES

Was delivered by Mr. Juſtice GOULD, on the reſerved caſe of HOLLAND PALMER otherwiſe FARMER, and ANN JONES who had been capitally convicted at a former SESSION: and Holland Palmer otherwiſe Farmer being ſet to the bar, Mr. Juſtice GOULD delivered the Opinion of the Twelve Judges, in the following words.

Holland Palmer, otherwiſe Farmer, you were found guilty at the laſt Seſſions, of an indictment founded on the ſtatute of the 23d of his preſent Majeſty, concerning receipts for payment of money: the indictment charged, that a certain ſtamp was provided, and uſed, for ſtamping and marking every ſheet and piece of paper, upon which any receipt or other diſcharge given for payment of money, amounting to two pounds, and not amounting to the ſum of twenty pounds, ſhould be written or printed, with a ſtamp duty of two pence, and that you, intending to defraud his Majeſty of ſuch right and duty, on the 10th of October laſt, unlawfully, fraudulently and feloniouſly did utter and expoſe to ſale, to one Hannah Gabriel, one thouſand pieces of paper, liable to the ſaid duty of two pence, reſembling the impreſſion of the ſaid ſtamp, then and there uſed, in purſuance of the ſtatute in ſuch caſe made and provided; You, the priſoner, at the time of uttering, and diſpoſing of the ſame pieces of paper, then and there well knowing the ſaid impreſſions on the ſaid piece of paper ſo by you offered, to be counterfeited, againſt the form of the ſtatute: on which indictment you was tried and found guilty; and a queſtion aroſe upon certain words, in the 10th ſection of the ſtatute, of the 23d of his preſent Majeſty, Chap. 49. on which this indictment was founded, which were ſaid to be ſo void of any plain meaning, ſo indefinite, that it was impoſſible to form any judgment on the true ſenſe and meaning of them; thoſe words were ſhall utter, vend, ſell, or expoſe to ſale, any piece of paper, &c. liable to the ſaid duties, knowing the ſame to be counterfeit: the objection was to thoſe words "piece of paper liable to the ſaid duties." what are the pieces of paper? whether it was paper made throughout all Europe, paper at China; that it was ſo void of a preciſe ſenſe and meaning, that no ſolid and certain judgment could be formed upon it: that I conceive to have have been the objection on this occaſion, and was reſerved by the Recorder, for the opinion of all the Judges.

On the firſt day of laſt Hillary term, all the Judges, excepting the Chief Baron, and Mr. Baron Hotham, who were abſent through illneſs, aſſembled at Lord Mansfield's chambers, and they fully diſcuſſed and conſidered this caſe; the difficulty aroſe from the words of the act of Parliament that I have ſtated; the indictment ſeems to be properly drawn, that it purſued the material ingredients that are required by the act of Parliament; the ſtatute of the 23d of his preſent Majeſty, having granted ſuch a duty to the King of twopence upon every receipt, for a ſum amounting to forty ſhillings and not exceeding twenty pounds; the indictment alledges that ſuch a ſtamp was provided, and that the ſtamp on theſe papers that were ſo expoſed to ſale and ſold by you, had a mark upon them reſembling that ſtamp ſo provided, purſuant to the act of Parliament; the objection therefore is founded, as I have already obſerved, on the ſuppoſed inaccuracy of the words in the ſtatute "papers liable to the ſaid duties," which in this caſe is in the plural number, but in this caſe the indictment is properly and neceſſarily applied to the words in queſtion; it was objected, and aſked what is meant by "papers liable to duties," and how can one piece of paper be ſaid to be liable to any of the duties more than another? if not, then it will follow that all the writing paper in the world, may be ſaid to be "paper liable to duties:" but the anſwer is, that upon due attention to the act of Parliament, and likewiſe to another act that paſſed in the ſucceeding ſeſſion of Parliament, the 24th of his preſent Majeſty, Chap. 7. all the Judges ſo aſſembled, were of opinion that thoſe words "papers liable to the ſaid duties," are capable of a clear unequivocal meaning. There are two rules for the conſtruction of acts of Parliament; one is, that if any part is obſcure, and other paſſages in the ſame act will explain that obſcurity, recourſe ought to be had for that purpoſe to ſuch other paſſages: the ſecond rule is, that if there are ſeveral acts on the ſame ſubject, they are to be conſidered together as one ſyſtem interpreting or inforcing each other: according to thoſe rules it will appear from a collection of the words of theſe ſtatutes that the words "paper liable to the ſaid duties" are not to be taken in the large and abſurd ſenſe that was attempted to be impoſed upon them, but ſuch pieces of paper as are deſtined or prepared for thoſe uſes, if genuine, they are ſuch as by the 14th ſection of the 23d of George the Third, are ordered to be brought to the office to be ſtampt, and if falſe, then they are ſuch pieces of paper as having counterfeit ſtamps reſembling true ones, purport to be paper duly ſtamped, and as ſuch liable to the ſaid duties: it is to be obſerved that the 14th ſection of the 23d of George the Third, expreſsly requires that the papers on which they are to be written, ſhall be duly ſtamped; and the 14th of George the Third, Chap. 48 makes it penal in ten pounds, if it be not ſo, or unleſs a ſtamp or impreſſion, reſembling the true one does appear upon it, which is a moſt equitable exaction: when that exaction appears appears on the face of the paper the party taking it, being innocent or perſuaded of its being duly ſtamped, and if afterwards the fraud is detected, every one muſt ſee that that paper being prepared, and deſtined for thoſe uſes, and was liable to the counterfeit mark, and ought to have been duly ſtamped accordingly: it appeared to all the Judges then preſent, that thoſe general words in the ſtatute, were to be applied according to the ſubject matter, to ſuch papers, upon which the counterfeit mark appeared to be uſed for a receipt, as if the mark was genuine, and conſequently liable to the duties, and all of them were therefore unanimouſly of opinion that you the priſoner were well convicted.

Mr. Juſtice Gould. There was Ann Jones, that ſtood on the ſame footing exactly, and the ſame opinion will apply to her.

The Seſſions being ended, the Court proceeded to paſs Judgment as follows.

Received ſentence of Death 33, viz.

Michael Johnſon otherwiſe M'Mahon, Robert Mott, Holland Palmer otherwiſe Farmer, Ann Jones, Peter Newberry, William Iverſon, Joſeph Hitchcock otherwiſe Church, John Miles, James Gray, Joſeph Mead, Charles Peyton, James Lapier, John Lucas, Richard Summers otherwiſe Smith, John Waters, Henry Jackſon, William Weſton, James Coyle, Thomas Weſt, Roſe Fitzpatrick, James Wiggans, James Ruſſel, James Cowan, John Oliver, John Johnſon otherwiſe Bandy, Henry Murphy, Thomas Ives, Robert Roberts, William Bland, Jaſper Robbins, Elizabeth Chapman, Benjamin Stokes, Ann Mott.

To be tranſported for ſeven years, 39.

David Jones, William Bradley, William Price, Luke Rogers, James Oakes, William Kybard, Elizabeth Lee otherwiſe Lees, Thomas Curzon, Thomas Smith, Richard Claridge, William Moſeley, John Hyam, Matthew Marks, Francis Scott, Thomas Douty, Joſeph Payne, George Patterſon, James Donovan, John Brown, Thomas Hamilton, Simon Goring, Chriſtopher Webb, Joſeph Partridge, Alexander Fiſher, William Mountain, Thomas Ward, William Litchfield, James Penny, John Brett, William Smith, Thomas Jones, John Babbit, Thomas Jones, Joſeph Sharp, Edward Roberts, Elizabeth Hippeſly, Mary Morton, Thomas Gray, and Edward Walker otherwiſe Fines.

To be confined to hard labour two years in the Houſe of Correction, 4.

Robert Franklin, James Buſhnell, William Jacknell, Charlotte Beach.

To be confined to hard labour twelve months in the Houſe of Correction, 2.

Sarah Sparkes, Elizabeth Stacey.

To be confined to hard labour ſix months in the Houſe of Correction, 19.

Solomon Spencer, Timothy Lee, Elizabeth Baldwin, Thomas Sawyer, George Vanderbeck, Joſeph Rawlins, John White, Abel Drudge, Joſeph Lee, Ann Agus, Rachel Hughes, Catherine Brown, and Jane Bone.

To be impriſoned one month, 1.

Elizabeth Johnſon.

To be impriſoned fourteen days, 1.

Mary Skiddle.

To be publickly whipped, 19.

Solomon Spencer, James Thomas, John Malin, George Vanderbeck, Joſeph Raw-

Jins, John White, Abel Drudge, Charles Zachary, Richard Walker, William Grindley, Joſeph Lee, Charles Worland, Thomas Webb, James Macdonald, Robert Simpſon, Samuel Lavender, William Bird, John Morris, and James Riley.

Fined, 1s.

Mary Skiddle.

Fined, 6d.

Ann Agus, Elizabeth Johnſon.

The Trial of Meſſ. Goodridges and Evans is poſtponed till next Seſſions.

The Court adjourned to Saturday the 19th of March, at Eleven o'clock.

On Saturday the 19th of March, the following Convicts were put to the bar, who had been tried and convicted at ſeveral former Seſſions, and received the ſeveral ſentences following, viz.

To be tranſported for life to Africa, 12.

John Ruglaſs, Samuel Woodham, Thomas Freeman, John Harris, James Shiers, Joſeph Tuſo, John Pontie, John Matthew Cox, John Ruffler, Mary Marſhall, Ann Read, John Moſeley.

To be tranſported to Africa for ſeven years, 18.

John Boyle, Samuel Thompſon, George otherwiſe John Campbell, Samuel Hall, Sarah Slater, Richard Middleton, Elizabeth Leonard, James otherwiſe William Balding, Thomas Till, Simon Young, Thomas Cale, Edward Garth, James Smith, Ferdinand Dowland, Robert Arts, Thomas Gore, John Davifon, Charles Hughes.

The following perſons who were ſentenced to be tranſported to America were ordered to be tranſported to Africa.

John Hall, Aquilla Beck, John Moren, George Banniſter, Henry Griffiths, Ann Wright, Samuel Peyton, Mary Laurence, Richard Percival, William Hinton, James Burleigh, Thomas Orford, William Lee, John Duffley, William Wright, William Morgan, Peter Bond, Daniel Clark, Ann More, Sarah Partridge alias Roberts, John Parker for ſeven years, and Charles Peat for life.

The following perſons were alſo ſentenced to be tranſported to Africa for the undermentioned terms, viz.

Edward Smith, Henry Smith, Thomas Griffiths, Philip Farrell, William Walſh for ſeven years; John Dennis otherwiſe Hammond for fourteen years; John Walker, James Holloway for ſeven years; Richard Small for fourteen years; David Jacobs, John Young, William Pariſh, George Wood for ſeven years; John Stogdell for fourteen years; Benjamin Major, James Davis, Benjamin Ingraham, Catherine Hart, Nicholas Engliſh, Charles Stone, John Jepp, Mary Branham, Robert Jones for ſeven years; Elizabeth Colley for fourteen years; Robert Able, William Moore otherwiſe Ranſmore, Thomas Howard, George Thorp, William Elliott otherwiſe Ellard, John Maſſias, Jacob Bellat, George Raymond, John Hart, and John Weſtwood for ſeven years.

The Seſſion was then adjourned to the 6th day of April.

HODGSON,

PROFESSOR of SHORT-HAND, and

SHORT-HAND WRITER to the OLD-BAILEY,

At No. 35, CHANCERY-LANE,

Reſpectfully thanks the Gentlemen of the learned Profeſſions, and others, for their flattering Partiality to his Compendious SYSTEM of SHORT-HAND, which is Taught, as uſual, in FOUR LESSONS ONLY, at 10s. 6d. each.

Trials, Arguments, &c. taken with Preciſion and Care, and expeditiouſly tranſcribed, on reaſonable Terms.

A new Impreſſion of his Second Edition of Short-hand, Price 2s. 6d. to be had as above; alſo of BLADON, Paternoſter-row, and CLARKE, Portugal-ſtreet.

In the Preſs, and ſpeedily will be publiſhed, Price only 2s. 6d. A Collection of CHARACTERS, Arbitrary and Symbolical, for the Benefit of SHORT-HAND WRITERS and adapted to every Syſtem; with a comparative Table of Short-hand Alphabets, by E. HODGSON.

N. B. The Table may then be had ſeparate, Price 6d.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 6th of APRIL 1785, and the following Days;

Being the FOURTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER IV. PART I.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

THE WHOLE PROCEEDINGS UPON THE KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

BEFORE the Right Honourable RICHARD CLARK, LORD MAYOR of the City of London; the Honourable SIR GEORGE NARES, Knt. one of the Juſtices of his Majeſty's Court of Common Pleas; the Honourable Sir JAMES EYRE, Knt. one of the Barons of his Majeſty's Court of Exchequer; the Honourable JAMES ADAIR, Serjeant at Law, Recorder of the ſaid City; JOHN WILLIAM ROSE, Eſq; and others his Majeſty's Juſtices of Oyer and Terminer of the City of London, and Juſtices of Gaol Delivery of Newgate, holden for the ſaid City and County of Middleſex.

First London Jury.	Second London Jury.	First Middleſex Jury.	Second Middleſex Jury.
Robert Underwood	Thomas Williams	John Bond	James Keene
Samuel Conder	Thomas Pallett	Thomas Boys‡	William Green
Thomas Conder	John Brooks	Richard Ambroſe	John Day
Edward Snelſon	Gale Middleton	William Richardſon	Thomas Hollis
*Henry Serjeant	James Roberts	William Mercer	Edward Cabe
*J. Stamper Meſſenger	Stephen Newman	John Harris	Thomas Stead
George Skelton	Thomas Finmore	Ralph Mitchelſon	Henry Nix
Richard Bennett	Edward Percival	Thomas Lightfoot	Abell Chapman
Peter Milne	Samuel Badcock	Samuel Morris	Hugh Lawrance
William Renwick	Chriſtopher Wright	Richard Clewin	Rees Lloyd
Joſeph Neſbitt	J. Stamper Meſſenger	Walter With	John James
John Simpſon	Ebenezer Clarke †	Robert Nicoll	John Groome

* John Bowman and John Penny ſerved ſome time in the room of Henry Sergeant and James Stamper Meſſenger.

† William Wilſon ſerved the 6th day in the room of Ebenezer Clarke.

‡ Tuffin Hobbs ſerved ſome time in the room of Thomas Boys.

---

415. WILLIAM HIGSON was indicted for that he, not having the fear of God before his eyes, but being moved and ſeduced by the inſtigation of the devil, on the 5th day of February laſt, feloniouſly, wilfully, and of his malice aforethought, did make an aſſault on Joſeph Higſon, and with both his hands and feet at and againſt a certain iron ſtove-grate in the dwelling-houſe of the ſaid William, did violently ſtrike, kick, caſt, and throw, giving him by the ſtriking, kicking, caſting and throwing, at and againſt the ſaid iron ſtove-grate, as aforeſaid, in and upon the right right ſide of the head of the ſaid Joſeph, near the temple, one mortal fracture of the ſkull, of which ſaid mortal fracture of the ſkull, he, the ſaid Joſeph, from the ſaid 5th of February to the 13th of the ſame month did languiſh, and languiſhing did live, on which ſaid 13th day of February he did die, and ſo the jurors aforeſaid, upon their oaths ſay, that the ſaid William Higſon, him, the ſaid Joſeph Higſon, in manner aforeſaid, did kill and murder.

He was alſo charged with the ſame murder on the coroner's inquiſition.

ANN DICKENSON ſworn.

Court. What do you know of this affair?—What I am going to ſpeak upon is a month before the child's deceaſe, within three or four days.

Go on, and tell your ſtory?—I was at my own door, oppoſite the priſoner's——

What is the priſoner?—A taylor; I ſaw the child come out firſt.

Did you know the child?—Yes.

Was it one of his children?—I believe it to be ſo, according to the mother's diſcourſe.

Was it a boy, or a girl?—A boy.

What age was he?—Not quite nine, till next June I think; the father came after the boy out of the houſe.

Was he running out?—No, walking; his father had a poker in his right hand, and he hit him over the left ſide of his head with the poker; he bled a good deal, and I ſaw the blood run to the collar of his ſhirt.

Do attend to me particularly; did the boy come out firſt?—Yes.

Did the father get before him at all?—No, the door ſtands up in an alley, and the child came out ſide-ways to ſhun him, and met his father with the poker in his hand, and he hit him on the left ſide of the head; and the child came over to me, and held up his two hands, and begged me to ſave him; I put him on my own ſtairs; about a quarter of an hour after the father came to me, and ſaid, damn him, where is he? I begged of him to qualify his paſſion; the father went to his own habitation, he came again, and brought a little diſh, what we call a penny diſh, with about a pound of meat in it hot; he ſaid the boy had eaten four pounds all but that bit, while he had been to the mother to the hoſpital; he aſked me where he was; I told I would not tell him, without he would promiſe not to beat him again; he did not ſay whether he would or not, but he went away to his own apartment again; and in about half an hour he came to me again, and aſked me where he was; I told him, I would tell him if he would not beat him; otherwiſe I would not; he ſaid he would not; I went up to the child and ſaid, Joey, your daddy wants you; and he ſaid, has he got ever a ſtick in his hand? I ſaid no my dear; I took him by his right arm, and carried him in doors to his father; and he ſaid nothing to him that night, nor I did not ſee him beat him, or hear him that night; but the next morning about five, he cried out ſadly.

What did you hear?—I heard him cry out, dear daddy, dear daddy.

In what manner?—Crying out in a very loud manner, O, O, O, and then he cried, dear daddy, dear daddy.

Jury. How far off do you live?—About eight or nine yards off.

Court. Could you ſee what he ſtruck him with?—It was a poker, upon my honour; but to ſwear to the poker I cannot.

Did you examine the wound, or any thing?—I cannot ſay I did, for I was rather flurried; but there had been a ſcab on his head, on that place ever ſince.

Had his head ſtopped bleeding before you carried him home?—No, it had not, but it did not bleed ſo fierce as it did at firſt.

Did not you offer to wipe off the blood, or any thing of that ſort?—I did not upon my word, I was ſo much flurried, I really did not.

Did you ſee him the next day?—Yes.

Was there a ſcab there then?—Yes, and to the day of his death.

The bleeding was ſtopped?——Yes.

Whereabouts was it particularly?—On the back part of his head, among the hair.

There

There was only a ſcab the next day?—No.

The head was not ſwelled, or any thing?——No, not that I perceived.

It was not upon the temples?—No.

SUSANNAH HOBBS ſworn.

I lived next door to the laſt witneſs, and keep a chandler's ſhop: on the 12th of February, on a Saturday in the afternoon, the mother of the child came over to me for a peck of coals; I aſked her how her little baby did, which was ſucking at her breaſt, ſhe ſaid it was better, but her little boy Joey was very ill, and ſhe had juſt been up to the Diſpenſary for three papers of powders for him; then you ſee, Sir, ſhe ſaid that her child had been very ill for ſome time; with that I ſaid, it is a very good thing, it is very well you are come home, for your child has been uſed very ill; then ſhe went over to her own houſe.

Why did you ſay ſo, did you know the child had been uſed ill?—Yes, by ſcreaming out, the neighbours were always calling to the priſoner, and ſaying he was a ſecond Brownrig, uſing his child ill.

Have you ever heard the child ſcream out?——Yes, ſeveral times.

Had you ever ſeen the priſoner beat the child?—Never in my life; about dark I went over to ſee the child, not knowing he was in that condition; when I went in his mother was ſtanding by the fire ſide, and I ſaid Mrs. Thing-a-me, where is your little boy? and ſhe ſaid here, in the cradle.

Court. Why he was eight or nine years old?—Yes, but he lay in a cradle when I ſaw him; ſhe took a candle and ſhewed me the child, and when I ſaw him I was ſo ſhocked, I thought I ſhould have dropped into the cradle.

What appearance had he?—By his head, he moaned moſt bitterly.

What was the appearance that ſhocked you?—I ſaid to her, dear me, Mrs. Thing-a-me, what have you done to your child, have you poiſoned him? ſhe ſaid no.

Did ſhe ſay any thing about her huſband?——No, his head was ſwelled terribly, then I went into my own place again; I went over again preſently, and aſked her how he did, ſhe ſaid, he was very bad indeed; I ſaid, Mrs. Thing-a-me, is he in his ſenſes, and ſhe ſaid, O yes! Madam, ſays ſhe, you ſhall hear him ſpeak, I have juſt been talking to him; ſays ſhe, Joey Higſon, my dear, tell who has hurted you, has mammy ever hurted you? no, he ſaid; who has? dad, ſays he.

Court. Where was the father at that time?——I never ſaw any thing of the father the Saturday at all, that was the laſt word I heard the child ſpeak.

Court to Priſoner. Do you wiſh to aſk theſe two witneſſes any queſtions?——No, I do not want to have any converſation with them at all; they are people not worth ſpeaking to at all.

MARY SIMES ſworn.

I live in the ſame houſe where this barbarous taylor lives.

What do you mean, the priſoner?—Yes, I have heard the boy cry out late and early, of being ſadly uſed.

In what manner?—He has cried out, O daddy! O daddy! when he has been beating him.

How can you tell he was beating him?——Becauſe I have heard the blows up two pair of ſtairs, I have heard the blows in the morning by five o'clock, and ſometimes late at night; and the laſt time he was down ſtairs, I was coming down, and I looked through, and I ſaw the child coming out of the door, and the priſoner was going to kick him, and he lifted up his foot to kick him, and the child cried out, O daddy.

Did he kick him?——He did not kick him, but he pulled him by the hand, and hit him over the face.

What with?—With his flat hand, then he was running out of doors, and he caught him, and the child cried out, and he put his hand and ſtopped his breath, and he pulled him in by his arm, and the neighbours cried out ſhame; I ſaid afterwards to to the child, has your daddy been beating you? he ſaid, yes, my daddy has a new way of beating me, becauſe the neighbours ſhould not cry out ſhame.

Court. Then he was running about?—Yes, he came out and was going of an errand.

Court. That is no evidence at all what the child ſaid, at that time.

Did you ſee the child after that?—No.

ELIZABETH DARBY ſworn.

I lived oppoſite, I frequently uſed to hear the child cry out in a moſt ſhocking manner, my huſband and I have perfectly heard the blows; the child uſed to come into my ſhop, I keep a chandler's ſhop, and he ſaid, his daddy was always beating and kicking him.

Was that at the time you have heard the blows?——No, not then, but he was frequently beating the child, every day two or three times a day, he was hardly free from crying out.

Court. I think you are not to tell us what the boy ſaid, I would not have you tell us what the child ſaid, eſpecially at that time, that he was running from his father's houſe to you, becauſe you ſee, gentlemen of the Jury, that declaration was not upon oath, nor was there any thing that would bind the child, nor was he in that ſort of ſtate, to inforce what he ſaid to be true; as for inſtance, the declarations of dying people not expecting to recover, have that influence on their minds and conſciences at that time, which makes them equal to an oath; and that deſire that they muſt then have in point of conſcience not to ſpeak a falſhood, is equal to evidence upon oath; but there was no influence on this child's mind at that time: and another thing, in conſequence of his provocation, and perhaps being ill uſed by his father, he might exaggerate what his father had done, being angry with his father, and his father with him; therefore, I think theſe declarations are not to be received in evidence, for if that was the caſe, you ſee what dangerous conſequences might enſue.

Mr. Baron Eyre. I agree intirely with my brother, I think this evidence ought not to be received: all evidence againſt priſoners is to be on oath, with one exception, which is a declaration without oath, by a perſon who conceives himſelf to be in a dying condition, as to the author of the injury he has received; and that is upon this ground, that the ſituation of ſuch a party creates an obligation upon his mind to ſpeak the truth, equal to the ſanction of an oath; that of neceſſity applies only to the particular ſituation of the party then upon a death bed, and cannot poſſibly extend to all the general declarations that perſons make, who may have received injuries: the rule is a general one, and this priſoner, and all priſoners muſt be entitled to it; it is a rule founded on public juſtice.

E. Darby. When he came into my ſhop about a week before he died, I ſaw his face was all black.

Jury. Was there any advice called in, in this ſeries of time?

Mr. Gorſuch, the Surgeon. My Lord, the wife applied to the diſpenſary for powders, but not for the contuſion on his head?—A quaker doctor came from the diſpenſary, I ſaw the Gentleman myſelf, and he told me all ſhe told him was, that the child had got a violent cold.

Court. Who was that gentleman.

Mr. Gorſuch. I ſuppoſe it was Doctor Whitehead, he is a phyſician, and a quaker.

What day was this that his face was black?——To the beſt of my knowledge, it was the week before the Sunday that he died, and I think to the beſt of my remembrance, I ſaw the child at the father's houſe, on the Sunday night before his death; I went over, hearing he was very bad, and aſked to ſee the child, his mother ſaid, yes, to be ſure, he then laid upon two chairs upon his right ſide, there was a handkerchief over his face and his head, and ſhe pulled the handkerchief off, and one ſide of his face ſeemed to be all bloody, and I turned my head, he looked ſo ſhocking, I was ready to drop.

Did the blood on the handkerchief seem like fresh blood?——It looked like fresh blood running on the handkerchief.

That was the night before he died?——Yes; I asked the mother why she did not put him into bed.

Court. The conversation of the mother does not signify.

Who lives in the house with the prisoner?——Mary Simes and another woman besides lived up one pair of stairs, and this woman up two pair; Tracey Bell lived next door, the woman's name is Jane Thomas, who lived up one pair of stairs, she was not examined at Hicks's Hall.

Court. Is she here?——No.

Where is she?—About two miles off.

Court to Simes. Do you know this Jane Thomas?——Yes.

Had she any thing to do with the family?——No, she said, she did not see but little of it.

Where is the place where she is?—The other side of Moorfields; Jane Thomas No. 18, Lamb's-buildings, Spitalfields.

Court. Send for her.

(The beadle of the parish, the witness Simes, and an officer of the Court, were sent for Mrs. Thomas.)

ELIZABETH TRACY BELL sworn.

I lived the corner of the alley, I keep a chandler's and oil shop, which is now pulled down; on Saturday evening, I heard a great noise about the door, I went out of my door, and there was a constable, I do not know the man, but he was talking to the neighbours; and he went and asked at the prisoner's wife's door, where her husband was, she said he was out at work; he said, tell him not to touch the child, for if any thing should happen, he might depend upon suffering.

The man was not at home at that time?——No.

Then that is nothing?—I must speak the beginning, for I cannot begin on either side of the story; and he said, he should speak to the constable of the night, and the watchmen, to watch that house particularly; this was on the Saturday night, I went in and knocked at the door.

Did you see the child?—She asked who it was, I said, it was nobody to hurt her; I asked her how the little boy did, she said, he was very bad; he was laying across two chairs, she shewed me the child, and his two eyes were as big as a great turkey's egg cut in half; he had just been cleaned, I saw on the left side of his head, a long mark of blood, longer than my finger, and a little water; and I says to her, Lord Jesus! there is blood, and she said, no, there is not; and she wanted to turn it over, to conceal it: after that, my mother and I went in, and there was more blood, his head kept gushing out blood and water all night, I spoke to the child, and asked him if he knew me, and he said, yes; he said, he was very bad, I asked him if he was sore, he said, his head was sore all round, he was sore all over; after that I went in several times, and the child had some panado, and some stuff, and he eat it very hearty; both early and late, we have been disturbed with the child's screams, crying out O daddy! daddy!

Mr. Baron Eyre. Was it always O daddy?——Yes, daddy, daddy, dear daddy, daddy! the father was as hoarse then, as he is now, that he could not bear him; the mother has been in the hospital sometime, she had been at home a fortnight and two days when the child died.

You never heard of any complaint of any body else hurting him, but his daddy?——No, Sir; I never saw any blows, but have heard the report of blows several times; between the room that they lay in, and that I lay in, there was about a yard and an half; there were two partitions between, a bit of a wooden partition, I fancy it was originally all one house.

THOMAS TALBOT GORSUCH sworn.

I live in Shoreditch, I am a surgeon.

You was sent for?—I was requested by Mr. Philips, the coroner, to attend the Jury;

ſury; obſerving a contuſion on the right ſide of the head, a little above the temple, I removed the ſcalp, which was detatched from the ſkull, which was parted from the ſkull underneath; I obſerved a fiſſure upon the bone, the difference between a fiſſure and a fracture, is much the ſame as between a flaw and a crack in a pane of glaſs, the one is partial, and the other impartially through; the fracture goes quite through, but the fiſſure is only partially through, the ſame as a flaw in a pane of glaſs; I then took off the upper part of the ſcull, and the veſſels of the brain under the fiſſure were very turgid and inflamed, and the maladies of membrances of the brain adhered to the ſkull, which is common where there are very great inflammations from concuſſions, or from colds, or other cauſes: the contents of the thorax and the abdomen were perfectly ſound.

Go on and deſcribe where the mortal violence was received?——That was all I could perceive on the head, ſome of the witneſſes have mentioned the left ſide, but there was nothing on the left ſide any more than the ſcurf, which is common to children not taken care of; there were no marks of violence at all on the left ſide, the miſchief ſeemed to be entirely on the right.

Jury. Was there no ſcar on the left ſide?——None at all.

Court. Was there no ſcab, nor any appearance of any?—None at all.

Mr. Baron Eyre. No appearance of there having been one lately?——None at all.

Court. It would leave an appearance?—I ſhould imagine ſo, it was on what we call the os bregnitis.

Could you form any judgment what it was done by?—It muſt be by ſome obtuſe inſtrument, ſome blunt inſtrument.

Did you think, from the ſymptoms you obſerved, that it was the cauſe of the child's death?——There is every reaſon to conclude ſo, the child had that ſallow bloated countenance, and that emaciated appearance of body, which children in poor habitations that have been badly clothed, and ſcantily fed have; but I ſhould imagine from the wound that appeared on the head, that the death muſt be owing to that wound.

You think it was certainly?—I have not the leaſt doubt but it was.

Jury. You did not ſee the child till after it was dead?——No, the general ſtate of the child's health, I think had been in a very bad way, for ſome time before he died.

Court. As a fiſſure is in a leſs degree than a fracture, I ſuppoſe it may happen by leſs force than a fracture?——Yes, my Lord, by a fall, for inſtance, in this caſe as there was ſuch a violent contuſion on the right ſide, I have no doubt but the fiſſure muſt come from the contuſion on that ſide.

Mr. Baron Eyre. Was there any thing in your obſervation, that could determine your opinion, whether it was done by a blunt inſtrument, or by a fall?——There was no appearance of the ſkin being cut, no crack at all in the ſkin externally, a blunt inſtrument and a fall undoubtedly would have the ſame effect.

Suppoſe the child to have ſtaggered, and fallen againſt a ſtone in the wall, it would have been exactly the ſame, as if he had been hit with a blunt inſtrument, the concuſſion produces the fiſſure?—Undoubtedly my Lord.

Court. You have heard an account of the blow being ſtruck about a month before; ſuppoſe a blow had been given on that ſide of the head a month before, might it by degrees been growing for a month, ſo as to occaſion the death?—It may be from ſeven to fourteen days before the wound would have the appearance, before the child's death.

Court. It might be for ſome conſiderable time, then I ſuppoſe it might be longer?——Undoubtedly it will extend and inflame, according to the ſtate of the child's body, but I ſhould imagine, according to the ſtate of the contuſion, this had happened about ſeven or fourteen days before his death.

Mr. Baron Eyre. Might it have happened a month before?——It is very difficult to ſay, I cannot ſpeak to that with that degree of ſatisfaction to myſelf as I could wiſh.

Am I to judge it could not?——I do imagine it might be from ſeven to fourteen, or thereabouts.

Jury. I think the ſurgeon ſpeaks to the child's being in a very bad habit of body?——In a general bad habit of body, his body was very much emaciated, he appeared in a ſtate of poverty.

Jury. My queſtion is, whether he knew the child any time before the firſt blow was given?——No, I never ſaw the child before.

Court. Can you account for the blood appearing, according to that woman's evidence, the very night before the death?—It is very eaſy to account for that; after the contuſion I ſhould ſuppoſe on the ſide of the head, the extravaſated blood became putrid, and by that means the ſcalp was detached from the bone, and that occaſioned the appearance; I believe that is the caſe of all wounds, by the removal of the ſcalp, where it is in a ſtate of putrefaction, the blood may come down from that aperture; I ſhould imagine the extravaſation was from the veſſels on the bone not externally, and then it ſlipped down and dropped into the ſocket of the eye; the child's eye appeared very large, I attributed that to the extravaſated blood.

Have you met in your own practice many inſtances of this kind?—A good many.

How ſoon after the accident may the ſymptoms come on?——In general from ſeven to fourteen days? I have known a fiſſure to be upon a patient five or ſix months before ever they have made any appearance, and then afterwards they have had complaints in the head, and when the ſcalp has been taken off, the fiſſure has appeared: I only ſpeak in regard of the contuſion, not of the fiſſure, becauſe a very trifling blow will occaſion a fiſſure, without having a contuſion that would produce theſe effects upon the child, a contuſion will follow immediately, but will not ſhew themſelves immediately in that putrid ſtate.

Mr. Baron Eyre. Did you ever know an inſtance that a contuſion did not immediately follow a blow?——Undoubtedly, but the extravaſation is taken up by the abſorbent veſſels, and the fiſſure ſtill remains; in all probability the abſorbents could not take up the extravaſated blood, and then when it ſlipped it extended itſelf.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

(The priſoner was very hoarſe, and his defence was repeated by an officer of the Court.)

As to the gentlewoman that ſwore firſt, I was in the country at the ſame time, at Woolwich, at the time ſhe ſwore the blow was given; I worked there three days, and I came home, and ſtaid at home for a week; I ſent the child out for a ſix-penny loaf, that was the week following the time I came home, and during that week I was at home, the child came home and told me that a woman had thrown him down, with the loaf in his hand; Sir, at that time he fractured his ſcull on the right ſide; he broke his head at that time on the right ſide; in the courſe of the week I went and worked three days in Nortonfalgate, and the week after I ſtopped at home three days longer; on Tueſday night I ſent him out for a loaf again.

Court to Priſoner. How long was that before his death?——About four days before his death; I aſked him whether he could go or not, two or three times, and he ſaid yes.

Court. Did you doubt then whether he was able to go?——Yes, becauſe he had got very ſwelled legs; he went out and called at the White Swan public-houſe, he frequently called at different public houſes to beg beer; and ſo I ſent his mother after him, to ſee if he was coming home, and ſhe could not find him, ſo ſhe came home without him; and I deſired her to go to many other houſes beſides, and ſhe went to three or four houſes, and he had been there, and had had bread and cheeſe at theſe different houſes; when he came home he had fallen fallen down, and cut the right ſide of his temple with the fall; his mother was going as far as Drury-Lane, on an errand, and the child was gone to bed; and the left ſide of the boy's face was terribly ſwelled in the morning; and the next morning I told her to go to Doctor White, and get him into the Diſpenſary; ſhe went, and I went down to Woolwich to work; I worked there till Saturday night, I came home on Saturday night, and ſaw the boy very bad, and my wife ſaid ſhe had been at the Doctor's; and the Doctor ſaid he would come on Sunday; I ſtopped there on the Sunday till eight o'clock, and ſent to the Doctor's again: that is all I have to ſay about that; I have ſomething to ſay in reſpect to abuſing the child; I never ſtruck the child with the poker; when my wife was in the hoſpital, I uſed to take a rod and beat him with; and ſhe was in the hoſpital on the 2d of January, and ſhe came out when ſhe had been in three weeks; I do not know that ever I ill uſed the boy afterwards; and I ſuppoſe his death to be from a cold which flew out of his legs, being a diſordered child; he always had a breaking out in his head and ancles. I do not think that theſe people that have been examined are fit to go upon life and death.

ELIZABETH JACKSON ſworn.

I have known the priſoner about eight years, he lived neighbour to me about three years and a half, that is about four years ago; he was a very careful, honeſt, hard-working, induſtrious man, never letting his family want for common neceſſaries; I was his oppoſite neighbour, I never ſaw him beat his children or abuſe them any more than what any parent ought, when they are in fault; I live in Kingſland-road, and he lived in Long-alley, Moorfields.

How far is that off?——About three quarters of a mile.

JOHN HALL ſworn.

I am a taylor. I have known the priſoner four years; I always knew him to be a man that took care of his children, and was a man that loved his children very much.

How near did he live to you?—Within about a quarter of a mile; he lives now in Long-alley; I have worked with the priſoner, he has worked at my houſe, I never worked at his; I was at his houſe within a quarter of an hour of the child's death, we had all the aſſiſtance that could be got from a Doctor; there came a Doctor, and we got leeches, and ſet to the child's temples, but all to no purpoſe.

Who did you ſee there?——Nobody but his wife, the Doctor had been there about a quarter of an hour before, and had ordered leeches to be ſet to his forehead; his wife went and fetched them, and ſhe and I put them to; and it was by her huſband's deſire we went for aſſiſtance.

Did you go of your own accord, or was you ſent to by the priſoner?——I was deſired to go to ſee the boy by her huſband, and ſhe likewiſe, and to get aſſiſtance.

When was that?——It was the day before the child died, and the day he did die.

Who went to the Doctor?—His wife.

Did ſhe go while you was there?——Yes, and I ſtaid at her houſe while ſhe went.

When did ſhe go?——She went on Saturday, and likewiſe on Sunday.

WILLIAM HARDACRE ſworn.

I have known the priſoner ſeven years, a very hard working, induſtrious man, he worked for me at my houſe, for near a twelve-month, and uſed to uſe his family well, and provide for them; he uſed his family exceeding well; he paid his way always honeſtly, to the beſt of my knowledge, I never ſaw any thing amiſs in his behaviour in the time he worked for me, nor ſince.

JANE THOMAS (who was ſent for by the Court) ſworn.

Did you lodge in the houſe with the priſoner?——Yes, I did.

Do you know any thing of this affair?—I have heard him beat the child ſadly, I never ſaw him beat him, I have heard him beat him till he groaned, I never ſaw him that degree of ſatisfaction to myſelf as I could wiſh.

Am I to judge it could not?——I do imagine it might be from ſeven to fourteen, or thereabouts.

Jury. I think the ſurgeon ſpeaks to the child's being in a very bad habit of body?——In a general bad habit of body, his body was very much emaciated, he appeared in a ſtate of poverty.

Jury. My queſtion is, whether he knew the child any time before the firſt blow was given?——No, I never ſaw the child before.

Court. Can you account for the blood appearing, according to that woman's evidence, the very night before the death?—It is very eaſy to account for that; after the contuſion I ſhould ſuppoſe on the ſide of the head, the extravaſated blood became putrid, and by that means the ſcalp was detached from the bone, and that occaſioned the appearance; I believe that is the caſe of all wounds, by the removal of the ſcalp, where it is in a ſtate of putrefaction, the blood may come down from that aperture; I ſhould imagine the extravaſation was from the veſſels on the bone not externally, and then it ſlipped down and dropped into the ſocket of the eye; the child's eye appeared very large, I attributed that to the extravaſated blood.

Have you met in your own practice many inſtances of this kind?—A good many.

How ſoon after the accident may the ſymptoms come on?——In general from ſeven to fourteen days? I have known a fiſſure to be upon a patient five or ſix months before ever they have made any appearance, and then afterwards they have had complaints in the head, and when the ſcalp has been taken off, the fiſſure has appeared: I only ſpeak in regard of the contuſion, not of the fiſſure, becauſe a very trifling blow will occaſion a fiſſure, without having a contuſion that would produce theſe effects upon the child, a contuſion will follow immediately, but will not ſhew themſelves immediately in that putrid ſtate.

Mr. Baron Eyre. Did you ever know an inſtance that a contuſion did not immediately follow a blow?——Undoubtedly, but the extravaſation is taken up by the abſorbent veſſels, and the fiſſure ſtill remains, in all probability the abſorbents could not take up the extravaſated blood, and then when it ſlipped it extended itſelf.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

(The priſoner was very hoarſe, and his defence was repeated by an officer of the Court.)

As to the gentlewoman that ſwore firſt, I was in the country at the ſame time, at Woolwich, at the time ſhe ſwore the blow was given; I worked there three days, and I came home, and ſtaid at home for a week; I ſent the child out for a ſix-penny loaf, that was the week following the time I came home, and during that week I was at home, the child came home and told me that a woman had thrown him down, with the loaf in his hand; Sir, at that time he fractured his ſcull on the right ſide; he broke his head at that time on the right ſide; in the courſe of the week I went and worked three days in Nortonfalgate, and the week after I ſtopped at home three days longer; on Tueſday night I ſent him out for a loaf again.

Court to Priſoner. How long was that before his death?——About four days before his death; I aſked him whether he could go or not, two or three times, and he ſaid yes.

Court. Did you doubt then whether he was able to go?——Yes, becauſe he had got very ſwelled legs; he went out and called at the White Swan public-houſe, he frequently called at different public houſes to beg beer; and ſo I ſent his mother after him, to ſee if he was coming home, and ſhe could not find him, ſo ſhe came home without him; and I deſired her to go to many other houſes beſides, and ſhe went to three or four houſes, and he had been there and had had bread and cheeſe at theſe different houſes; when he came home he had fallen

fallen down, and cut the right ſide of his temple with the fall; his mother was going as far as Drury-Lane, on an errand, and the child was gone to bed; and the left ſide of the boy's face was terribly ſwelled in the morning; and the next morning I told her to go to Doctor White, and get him into the Diſpenſary; ſhe went, and I went down to Woolwich to work; I worked there till Saturday night, I came home on Saturday night, and ſaw the boy very bad, and my wife ſaid ſhe had been at the Doctor's; and the Doctor ſaid he would come on Sunday; I ſtopped there on the Sunday till eight o'clock, and ſent to the Doctor's again: that is all I have to ſay about that; I have ſomething to ſay in reſpect to abuſing the child; I never ſtruck the child with the poker; when my wife was in the hoſpital, I uſed to take a rod and beat him with; and ſhe was in the hoſpital on the 2d of January, and ſhe came out when ſhe had been in three weeks; I do not know that ever I ill uſed the boy afterwards; and I ſuppoſe his death to be from a cold which flew out of his legs, being a diſordered child; he always had a breaking out in his head and ancles. I do not think that theſe people that have been examined are fit to go upon life and death.

ELIZABETH JACKSON ſworn.

I have known the priſoner about eight years, he lived neighbour to me about three years and a half, that is about four years ago; he was a very careful, honeſt, hard-working, induſtrious man, never letting his family want for common neceſſaries; I was his oppoſite neighbour, I never ſaw him beat his children or abuſe them any more than what any parent ought, when they are in fault; I live in Kingſland-road, and he lived in Long-alley, Moorfields.

How far is that off?——About three quarters of a mile.

JOHN HALL ſworn.

I am a taylor, I have known the priſoner four years; I always knew him to be a man that took care of his children, and was a man that loved his children very much.

How near did he live to you?—Within about a quarter of a mile; he lives now in Long-alley; I have worked with the priſoner, he has worked at my houſe, I never worked at his; I was at his houſe within a quarter of an hour of the child's death, we had all the aſſiſtance that could be got from a Doctor; there came a Doctor, and we got leeches, and ſet to the child's temples, but all to no purpoſe.

Who did you ſee there?——Nobody but his wife, the Doctor had been there about a quarter of an hour before, and had ordered leeches to be ſet to his forehead; his wife went and fetched them, and ſhe and I put them to; and it was by her huſband's deſire we went for aſſiſtance.

Did you go of your own accord, or was you ſent to by the priſoner?——I was deſired to go to ſee the boy by her huſband, and ſhe likewiſe, and to get aſſiſtance.

When was that?——It was the day before the child died, and the day he did die.

Who went to the Doctor?—His wife.

Did ſhe go while you was there?——Yes, and I ſtaid at her houſe while ſhe went.

When did ſhe go?——She went on Saturday, and likewiſe on Sunday.

WILLIAM HARDACRE ſworn.

I have known the priſoner ſeven years, a very hard working, induſtrious man, he worked for me at my houſe, for near a twelve-month, and uſed to uſe his family well, and provide for them; he uſed his family exceeding well; he paid his way always honeſtly, to the beſt of my knowledge, I never ſaw any thing amiſs in his behaviour in the time he worked for me, nor ſince.

JANE THOMAS (who was ſent for by the Court) ſworn.

Did you lodge in the houſe with the priſoner?——Yes, I did.

Do you know any thing of this affair?—I have heard him beat the child ſadly, I never ſaw him beat him, I have heard him beat him till he groaned, I never ſaw him but I have heard the child cry; he has beat him when the wife has been in, and when the wife has been out, time after time.

Was there any body in the houſe that would do the child any harm?——No Sir, I never ſaw nor heard of any body elſe offering to beat him.

When you heard theſe blows, had you any thing that informed you, or could make you paſs any judgment who it was that beat him?——No farther than the child's ſaying, O, dear daddy! as long as he could cry, and then he would groan.

Are you ſure this is true?——I am ſure this is true.

How long did you live with him?——I lived in the one pair of ſtairs when he came; I live in Sun-ſtreet, I do not live there now, the houſes are going to be pulled down.

Did you live there as long as the child lived?——Yes, I was there when the child died.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, William Higſon ſtands indicted, &c. (Here the learned Judge ſummed up the evidence, and then added) This is the evidence on both ſides; the crime that the priſoner ſtands charged with is ſuch, as abſtracted from murder, which is one of the moſt heinous offences that can be committed, ſtands aggravated by being committed by a parent on a child; but when I have ſaid this, I will likewiſe ſay, that the more heinous, and the more unnatural the crime is, the ſtronger ought the evidence to be, and the moſt convincing, becauſe as it is unnatural, and thank God a thing we ſeldom hear of, the greater is the preſumption againſt a parent's being capable of committing ſuch an act: and now, Gentlemen, though I dare ſay you want no inſtructions, let me adviſe you not to ſuffer the nature of the offence to prejudice you againſt the priſoner; but to conſider this caſe coolly and calmly, as if you were trying a man that ſtands committed for the murder of an abſolute ſtranger. It does not appear that there were any people in the houſe, except the man and his wife, and theſe two lodgers; there is no body appears to you to have been there, or to have done any act towards the child, but the child had been all this time in the power and under the controul of the father and mother: you have then had evidence of his behaviour towards the child; the ſtriking the child with a poker has been proved by that woman; and though the priſoner has denied it, and ſaid that he was in another place at that time, and remained there three days; yet it would ſeem, if that was true as he aſſerts, he might have a power of proving it, however he has called no witneſſes to that purpoſe; therefore as to that fact, that woman ſtands totally uncontradicted; it is true, ſhe ſays the violence is on the left ſide of his head; however, ſhe might be miſtaken, for there does not appear by the evidence of this Gentleman, who ſeems to be extremely well ſkilled in his profeſſion, that any thing can be attributed to any thing that was done at that time with the poker; he cannot connect the appearance after a month, as ariſing from that ſtroke of the poker. Then, Gentlemen you are to conſider the general behaviour of this man towards the child; that this child has been treated in a cruel, and I am ſorry to ſay, in an inhuman manner, ſeems to be proved by every one of the witneſſes, and that the priſoner was the man that beat him, although to what degree does not ſtrictly appear, but by every one of the witneſſes the child exclaimed, O, dear daddy, daddy! it was his name, and his name only, that the child cried out upon, when he was beating; I am ſorry, but my duty calls upon me to make an obſervation on the evidence of the laſt witneſs, who ſpeaks in a very ſtrong manner indeed; ſhe ſays, the child cried out, O, daddy, daddy, as long as he could cry, and afterwards he would groan; this in the courſe of at leaſt a month, or more, prior to the death of the child. There is no particular evidence whatever that ſhews you how this violence was committed; but however, Gentlemen, in point of law, I think it is to be left to your conſideration; it is not neceſſary to prove the exact fact done, where the perſon who has received

received the injury has been totally in the power, and I may say in the poſſeſſion of the party; that has been proved, and it is certainly incumbent upon the priſoner to ſhew in ſome reſpect how this child came by the mortal wound; he has told you indeed, (but what he has ſaid is to have no more weight with you than as you are ſatisfied with the truth of it) that the child had a very conſiderable time before his death received a fracture in his ſkull, and a cut on the ſide of the head; ſorry I am to ſay, that if it had, we have never ſeen the leaſt aſſiſtance called for, till the very day before the child died: his own account is, that he doubted whether he could ſend him out a ſecond time, or whether he was able to go, yet till the Wedneſday before he died, there is no account whatever of any the leaſt aſſiſtance being called for; this child, by the account of every body, and all the neighbours, was heard from the oppoſite ſide of the way, morning and night continually and repeatedly crying out, and they continually hearing blows, though they did not ſee them; this is a circumſtance that is to be left to you; there is ſuch a thing as the law has called a ſort of violent preſumption; if a man comes out of a room with a drawn ſword bloody, and a man is left dead in that room, nobody ſaw the ſtroke, yet the preſumption is almoſt neceſſary; I do not ſay it is ſo ſtrong in this inſtance, but you ſee how much it was in the power of the man to have accounted for theſe acts of violence which the child has received; you hear what is actually proved, that he has done, and the dreadful conſequences when the child could cry no more, ending in a groan: if you are ſatisfied in your minds and conſciences from all that has been related by all theſe people, though the priſoner ſeems to tell you they ought not to be believed on their oaths in caſes of life and death, yet you are to judge how far their teſtimony deſerves credit, and you will give it that credit that you, as Gentlemen, think in point of conſcience they ought to have; you muſt, as I told you before, lay aſide all prejudice of every kind that would as it were inflame your paſſions, and think of this caſe coolly and indifferently, and then give that verdict which you in point of conſcience ought to do: and that muſt be, if you are fully ſatisfied that the priſoner has been the death of this child you will find him guilty: if any doubt whatever remains in your minds, I am ſure your own humanity will ſuggeſt to you, that you would not take away the life of a man if you was not fully juſtified and convinced in your conſciences, that he deſerves that puniſhment.

The Jury withdrew for a ſhort time, and returned with a verdict.

GUILTY, Death.

He was alſo found guilty on the Coroner's Inquiſition.

Thomas Shelton, Eſq; Clerk of the Arraigns, then addreſſed the priſoner, as follows:

William Higſon, you ſtand convicted of the wilful murder of Joſeph Higſon; what have you to ſay for yourſelf, why the Court ſhould not give you judgment to die, according to law.

Proclamation being made for ſilence, Mr. Recorder immediately addreſſed the priſoner in the following words:

William Higſon, you have been convicted, by a very merciful and attentive Jury, upon evidence which has left but little room for doubt of your being guilty of a crime the moſt aggravated that can diſgrace the character of man. The crime of murder in itſelf, of wilfully and maliciouſly depriving a fellow creature of life, is an act from which nature ſhrinks back with horror, and a crime which the laws of God and of man have thought it neceſſary to puniſh in the ſevereſt manner; but when we conſider that the unhappy object of your crime was your own child, that child too of tender years, living under your immediate protection, and that your guilt is not that of a ſingle violent act, ariſing from ſudden provocation,

provocation, or juſtified by any thing which could have vindicated even a moderate correction, your guilt is of too aggravated a nature to receive any palliation. Your duty to your child was to have brought him up with tenderneſs and care, to have been the guardian of his infant years, to have moderately corrected him for his faults, and have been indulgent to his failings; to have ſupplied his wants, protected him from the injury of others, rendered his exiſtence as comfortable as your circumſtances would permit, and done every thing in your power to make him a happy and uſeful member of ſociety. Your conduct has appeared to be directly the reverſe of this: Inſtead of that tenderneſs, care and indulgence, which we all hope for from our great Creator and Ruler, and which our children have a right to expect from us, the whole of your conduct towards this unhappy child appears to have been a ſeries of the moſt unexampled barbarity, terminating at length in a violent death, occaſioned by the author of his exiſtence. The affection of parents to their children is one of the ſtrongeſt and moſt deep-rooted in the human heart; it is wiſely planted there by our Creator, to render us the protectors of our children in their infant years, when they are too weak in body, and too inexperienced in mind, to take care of their conduct themſelves: theſe natural affections have been totally effaced from your mind, and in place of them the moſt unexampled and inhuman cruelty has induced you continually to wreak, from time to time, all your malignant paſſions upon that infant whom it was your duty to protect. Happy has the unfortunate child been, who has been releaſed from the cruelty of ſuch a parent: miſerable and wretched is your caſe, to have put an end, by a violent death, to that life, which you have before done in all in your power to render wretched!

Happy will it be for you in the end, if your own blood, together with the deepeſt remorſe and repentance which the heart of man can feel, will be ſufficient to relieve you from the load of that guilt which now hangs over your ſoul, and to procure you that pardon for your enormous and aggravated crimes, from your Creator and Judge hereafter, which the laws of your country muſt neceſſarily deny you here. It is therefore my duty to pronounce upon you that dreadful ſentence, which your crimes have ſo juſtly deſerved; which is, that you be taken from hence to the place from whence you came, and from thence to the place of execution, on Monday next; there to be hanged by the neck till you are dead, and your body to be afterwards diſſected and anatomiſed, according to the ſtatute; and the Lord have mercy upon your ſinful ſoul.

(The priſoner was executed on the Monday morning following.)

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

416. JONATHAN WIGLEY was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of James Tollingbuſh, about the hour of eight in the night, on the 10th of March laſt, with intent his goods and chattels, in the ſaid dwelling houſe then being, feloniouſly and burglariouſly to ſteal.

A ſecond count, For breaking the dwelling houſe of Thomas Faſſet, Mary Cox and Joſeph Ruſe, about the ſame hour, with the ſame intent.

The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoner.

THOMAS TEMPLEMAN ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Drummond, and I found a padlock hanging on the door, and the lock picked, and the priſoner up two pair of ſtairs, that was at the Yorkſhire Grey, in Eagle-ſtreet, Red Lion Square; I had the care of the houſe, I had locked it on the outſide with a padlock, I am ſure I locked it; I went out about eight, and returned within ten minutes; I went to get a pint of beer, nobody was in the houſe when I went out of it, and when I returned the padlock hung open, on the door, and the door open.

the

Did your key afterwards go in it freely?—Yes, I found the priſoner on the ſecond ſtep, of the ſecond floor, I ſeized him by the collar, and ſaid if you have any thing about you, drop it, and ſurrender yourſelf, or elſe I will cut your head open, with this pin of iron, which I have in my hand, and he dropped a ſaw knife; I heard him throw up a ſaſh in the front of the houſe, and endeavour to jump out of the window.

Court. Could you have got in that way?—No, it was ſo high he was affraid to jump out.

Had he taken any thing?——No.

Had he moved any thing out of its place?——Not to my knowledge.

Who actually lived in this houſe laſt?—One Tollingbuſh, I think the name was.

Did you ſleep in the houſe?——Yes, I took care of it for Mr. Drummond.

How long had it been empty?—I believe pretty nigh two months.

Who does the houſe belong to?——To Mr. Faſſett, the brewer.

Did he ever live in it?—No.

How long had you ſlept in the houſe, before it was broke open?—Three weeks.

What excuſe did the priſoner make for getting into the houſe?—None at all.

Did you find any keys upon him?——No, only a ſaw knife, and a tinder box, and matches, and a dark lanthorn were found upon him.

JONATHAN PROSDER ſworn.

About eight in the evening, I heard an alarm, I live next door but one; I came down, and run into the dining room, I heard a noiſe of a table clapping, and I immediately called out, and ſeized the priſoner, and brought him to the ſtair head, he had a large ſaw knife in his hand.

Court. Was the houſe furniſhed?—Yes, partly.

Who did the furniture belong to?—Mr. Faſſett.

What do you call partly?—It was very common furniture, the houſe had been robbed before, there were two flock beds.

CHARLES COLLETT ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner drop the ſaw knife.

GEORGE MECHAM ſworn.

I took the priſoner in cuſtody, and this dark lanthorn, and matches, and tinder-box, were given to me by Collet.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going along at that time in the evening, and heard the alarm of ſtop thieves, I went up ſtairs following theſe people, and I thought I ſaw ſomebody going up two pair of ſtairs, and I ſaid ſo, and they turned round and ſaid they ſuppoſed I was the thief, and they took me.

What are you?——I am a carpenter.

Have you any friends here to ſpeak for you?——I do not know if I have.

Have you worked in London?——Yes, my trial is come on ſo ſoon, that my friends are not here.

FRANCIS COLLINGTON ſworn.

Mr. Drummond employed Templeman to take care of the Yorkſhire Grey, he was put in poſſeſſion, in order to take care of the goods by Mr. Drummond and Mr. Faſſett together.

Were they joint owners of the houſe?—No, Sir, Mr. Faſſet was the owner, and Mr. Drummond did the buſineſs for him; and therefore he was put in care of the goods; he appraiſed the goods for him at the time the perſon left the houſe, Faſſett bought the goods.

Who was concerned with Faſſett in this houſe?——There was one Mr. Ruſe and Miſs Cox, but I cannot tell what their Chriſtian names are.

Mecham. I got the name from the houſe.

Do you of your own knowledge know that they are in partnerſhip?—I had their three names from the brewhouſe; they ſaid they were the partners.

Who ſaid ſo?——One of the clerks ſaid ſo.

Are any of the clerks here?—No.

Court to Jury. There is no regular evidence before you whom the houſe belonged to.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

417. JOHN FOSTER was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting William Tubb on the King's highway on the 23d of March laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon, and againſt his will, one watch, with the inſide caſe made of gold, out-ſide caſe made of ſhagreen, value 8l. one cornelian ſtone ſeal, value 6d. a baſe metal key, value 1d. and one hook, value 1d. his property.

The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council.

WILLIAM TUBB ſworn.

On the 23d of March between three and four in the afternoon, I loſt my watch in Pancraſs ſtreet, near Tottenham Court Road; I was going along that ſtreet, and juſt in the middle at the gateway, I ſaw ſeveral people there, I came acroſs the gate-way, and I was huſtled; I had my hand upon my watch pocket the moment I came up to the crowd, and in going to get paſt this gate-way my arm was flung up in the joſtling, and I miſſed my watch.

Was there any particular huſtling of you?——I was huſtled as the reſt of the people were in getting paſt the gate-way.

Were you any otherwiſe huſtled than in paſſing through that crowd?——My arms were thrown up upon other mens ſhoulders, I cleared myſelf from them and came back again; I did not paſs them; I miſſed my watch that moment, and the other witneſs jumped from the wall and ſaid, I will ſhew you the man that has picked your pocket; I went back with him, and there was one man with red hair, and the other witneſs told me that the priſoner had taken my watch and given it to the man with red hair; I followed the priſoner and caught him, and another man came up to me and ſeparated the priſoner and me; I got two cuts and a blow acroſs the ſhoulders; I then caught him and delivered him to the conſtable.

Have you got your watch again?——No. You know nothing of the priſoner only what the other man told you?—No, only by his huſtling.

Mr. Silveſter Priſoner's Council. This was the day when the balloon was going off with Count Zambeconi?——Yes.

The gate-way you talk of was the gate-way where the people were endeavouring to get in to ſee the balloon?——Yes.

Many hundreds and thouſands were there?——A great many.

They wanted to paſs through?——I did not ſee any perſon wanted to paſs through; I was paſſing the gate-way.

They puſhed you in the crowd, is that what you mean by huſtling?——Yes, Sir.

Then you to be ſure was huſtled, and you huſtled the next to you?—Yes.

How many hundred might be there about?—A great many.

Was you laid hold of by any body?—Not particularly.

Was you touched by any body?——It was a different huſtle to paſſing in a crowd.

Was you any more ſhoved than other people?—I believe there were ſix or ſeven that were ſhoved and loſt their watches in the ſame manner.

Did not you ſhove ſome body elſe?—No.

Were not there people before you and on each ſide of you?——Yes.

You could not get paſt the gate-way?—No.

Was not this man examined?——Yes.

Was not he ſearched?——Not till ſome time afterwards, and then only very ſlightly; he was juſt ſlightly ſtroked down.

Was

Was any thing found upon him?——Nothing at all.

Did not this man deſire to go with the conſtable?——Yes.

You do not mean to ſay this man ſtruck you?——No.

THOMAS GOODMAN ſworn.

This day fortnight, I and my ſhop-mate went to ſee the balloon go off; I got into a crowd, and they ſhoved ſo hard I was glad to get out again, and I got upon a wall that was in Pancraſs ſtreet, Tottenham-Court-Road; I turned my head, and I ſaw the priſoner at the bar and and ſeveral more; a tall man in a red coat who is at the door now, I ſaw him ſeveral times attempt to rob people of their watches; they ſerved ſeveral ſo; I had no ſuch thoughts, they looked like gentlemen, but ſeveral ſaid their watches were gone; this red headed man which is at the door came plump up againſt the proſecutor; and I underſtood the proſecutor had loſt his watch.

Court. Deſcribe in what manner they came up againſt him?——The ſame as I may come up againſt another willfully.

Were they ſtanding in the crowd?——Nobody could hardly ſtand there, but they certainly were in the crowd; the proſecutor came in and went in amongſt them; and I ſaw this priſoner at the bar and the other that is outſide the door come up from towards the fields, the lower part of Pancraſs ſtreet; there was not any body near them for a foot or two; people might have ſtood very well if they had only been eaſy; I could diſcern ſo plain, that I ſaw the priſoner ſhove againſt the proſecutor, and other people where there was no occaſion for it; I ſaw his hands round his waiſt; I did not ſee him take any thing; I jumped off the wall, and ſaid to the proſecutor, are not you the man that is robbed? and he ſaid yes; I ſaid, come along with me and I will ſhew you the man that has robbed you, and then a man gave me a punch on the ſide of the lug; the other man was on the outſide of the door when I came up I ſhewed him the red haired man firſt, and he was reſcued away; then I ſhewed him this man, and he ſaid, what me! and I ſaid, aye you, directly.

What time did you ſhew him the man that had taken the watch?—I ſhewed him firſt the red haired man, and then this man.

Then you did not know at that time which of theſe men had taken the watch?—I did not, nor I cannot ſay now.

You did not tell Mr. Tubb which had taken the watch?——I ſaid, I thought the red haired man had it.

Was any thing found upon him?——I was not preſent when he was ſearched.

Mr. Garrow another of the Priſoner's Council. Now, Maſter Goodman, pray who may you be?—I am a ſawyer.

How long have you been a balloon hunter?——I ſaw the other, Mr. Lunardi's.

It is not the temper of an Engliſh mob to ſtand very quiet, they like to huſtle, they wave to and fro, do not they, that is the way, is not it?—It is too much the way.

You was afraid?——I was not much afraid.

You did not feel yourſelf much at your eaſe?—No.

You was afraid they would take your watch perhaps?——No, I could not, I had no watch.

Then it was for the fun of the thing that they huſtled you?—It was fooliſh fun too.

Why this wall was ſeven or eight feet high?—I was lifted up, they laid hold of my legs.

That is a ſort of a horſe, you are more uſed to, I take it for granted, than a four-legged one?—No, I took notice of them I ſuppoſe for about half an hour.

I thought ſo?——You did not think any thing about it before.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was there looking about the ſame as other people; I was thirty or forty yards from where this gate-way is; there were a great crowd of people there, it was an open place

place where a number of people went; the rails were all pulled down by the mob; the witneſs came and laid hold of a man with a red head of hair; I ſtood ſtill, and he came then, and ſaid, that is one in boots, and laid faſt hold of me; ſays the proſecutor, Sir, I believe you have my watch? Sir, ſays I, I have not; ſays the other witneſs he is one of them.

The priſoner called five witneſſes who all gave him a very good character.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

418. MARY BROOKS, (aged fourteen) was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 19th of March laſt, ten yards of printed cotton, value 20s. the property of John Mackey, in his ſhop.

JOHN TUCKER ſworn.

I live with Mr. Mackey, a linen-draper in High Holborn, I loſt my cloth on the 9th of March, about two or a little after; the priſoner came into the ſhop and aſked for a gown; I ſhewed her two or three pieces; I ſearched for ſome more, and in the mean time I miſſed a piece of printed cotton off the counter; that was the third piece I ſhewed her; I went and acquainted my maſter, and he ſent me for a conſtable, and the goods were found upon her.

Did ſhe remain in the ſhop all the time? —Yes.

Voluntarily, or did you oblige her to ſtay?——My maſter amuſed her while I returned with the conſtable, and then the piece was found under her petticoats by the conſtable.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council. Was ſhe in the ſame attitude that you left her in?—She had got away from the counter, I miſſed it from the counter.

EDWARD LUCAS ſworn.

I am a conſtable of St. Giles's, I produce the cloth; Mr. Mackey ſent for me, and I went down with a young man to the ſhop, and the proſecutor ſaid he ſuſpected the priſoner had ſomething ſhe ſhould not have, ſo I rubbed her all down backwards, and down the ſide of her petticoats, and I found ſomething ſtick out rather behind, ſo I put my hand up her petticoats, and took this out from between her thighs.

Priſoner. I have ſeveral people for me.

The priſoner called three witneſſes to her character.

GUILTY.

Of ſtealing to the value of 4s. 10d.

Jury. We wiſh to recommend her to mercy on account of her age.

Privately whipped and diſcharged.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

419. SARAH DAVIS, was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 28th of March laſt, one pair of linen ſheets, value 2s. the property of Joſeph Furder, being in a certain lodging room let by him to her, to be uſed by her with the ſaid lodging room, againſt the ſtatute.

JOSEPH FURDER ſworn.

I live in Pye ſtreet, the priſoner lodged with me in the one pair of ſtairs; ſhe took the room to herſelf; ſhe hired it; I loſt my ſheets; I miſſed them a week after ſhe had been in the lodging; ſhe had not left the lodging; I aſked her for the rent, the week was up, and ſhe ſaid ſhe had no money; I went to look at the bed and the ſheets was gone; ſhe ſaid ſhe had pawned them; I bad her get them out; ſhe went to get them out and ran away; ſhe ſaid ſhe could not get them out without I would pay the money myſelf, I took her into cuſtody.

Did you give her leave to pawn them?—No.

Did

Did you know ſhe had pawned them before you miſſed them?—Yes, one of the other lodgers told me.

GEORGE TURNER ſworn.

I took theſe ſheets of the priſoner, I live in Stretton Ground, ſhe brought them as her own property, one the 22d and the other the 24th of March; ſhe pledged one for ſixpence the other for eighteen-pence; ſhe had uſed the ſhop about a month or ſix weeks; I never ſaw any thing amiſs by her.

(The ſheets depoſed to.)

Priſoner. I was very ill and very much diſtreſſed; it was my intention to get them again.

What are you?—Any thing.

Have you any friends?——Not in London.

Have you any body to give you a character?—Nobody here at all; the proſecutor had the money of me to redeem the ſheets, and then he kept it for his expences.

Proſecutor. I took it in part of rent, ſhe was then committed, and I was bound to proſecute her; and ſome man came and gave me two ſhillings in part of the rent, which was three ſhillings.

Did the man mean to pay it you as rent?——Yes, he ſaid he would pay it me for rent.

Priſoner. He took the money, and ſaid, let us ſee what I can do for you; and when he had got it, he ſaid, I will keep it for my expences.

Jury to Proſecutor. Did the man promiſe to pay you the reſt of the rent?—Yes.

Did not he give you that two ſhillings, in order to ſhew the woman mercy?—He did not ſay any thing about that.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing to the value of 10d.

To be privately whipped and impriſoned one month.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

420. JAMES PRICE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 30th day of March laſt, one hundred pounds weight of lead, value 10l. belonging to Abraham Adams, and then and there fixed to a certain building of the ſaid Abraham, againſt the form of the ſtatute.

JOHN ROBSON ſworn.

This lead was ſtripped off from Mr. Adams's houſe in the Circus, near Portman-ſquare, the back part of my houſe faces the back part of thoſe buildings; my wife ſaw a man go into the buildings, and in about ten minutes after, I went and ſecreted myſelf in the buildings, I ſtaid there an hour and better, when I heard them bring the lead from the outſide of the houſe, and put it into the inſide, I got up the chimney, and ſtaid three quarters of an hour, the priſoner came paſt me with a load of lead on his head; I let him go paſt me, and followed him, and caught ſight of him, and the witneſs Durham ſeeing a man with ſomething on his head, ſtopped him, and threw the lead off his head, in the mean time I came up to him, and he was ſecured, there was near an hundred weight.

Do you know where that lead came from?—The next day we went and matched it to the buildings; it came off the dormer part of the roof, the garret window is on the roof; I am ſure it fitted there.

What are you?——I am a carpenter, I have leave to work in the houſe.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I had been ſeeking for work; and coming by between ſeven and eight o'clock, I heard a great noiſe at the top of the houſe, I ſtopped to hear it, being ſo late in an empty houſe, I heard a man come and bring this lead down, and he put it at the door, and I took the lead upon my head, and I thought I would take it home and go to a conſtable, and have the men ſecured, and when this man took me, I told him there were the men upon the houſe, and he went himſelf to ſee, and he ſaid the men were there when he went, but they went away while he was there, and took more lead with them.

Have you any body to ſpeak for you?—Nobody but a woman.

What buſineſs are you?—I am a painter, I had my diſcharge out of the marines in the Chatham diviſion.

The priſoner called one witneſs to his character.

GUILTY.

Whipped, and confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

421. ANN FOWLES was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 11th day of March laſt, one ſilk and cotton gown, value 4s. one cotton gown, value 10s. one bed-gown, value 10s. one ſtuff petticoat, value 5s. one black ſilk cloak, value 20s. one lawn frock, value 5s. and one dimity ſkirt, value 2s. the property of Elizabeth Hughes.

ELIZABETH HUGHES ſworn.

I live in Old Gravel-lane; I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment on the 11th of March laſt, ſomebody broke into my room, I was out; I went out about half an hour paſt two, I did not return till half an hour paſt four; I locked my room, and when I came home the door was open, and a good many people in the room, and the thief was taken up.

RICE EVANS ſworn.

About four in the afternoon, on the 11th of March, I went into the yard, it looked into the proſecutor's room, and I ſaw a perſon taking ſome things off the drawers; I gave intelligence, and I purſued her, and caught her, and brought her back, with the things in her apron, quite home to the room; the priſoner dropped the things in the room when ſhe came back, and I gave the things to James Jones.

JAMES JONES ſworn.

(Produces the things, which were depoſed to.)

I was ſent for to take charge of the priſoner.

—— STODDART ſworn.

I was in my room, and Mr. Evans came into my paſſage, and had hold of the priſoner, bringing her back towards his own home; I went to ſee what was the matter, and theſe things were laying at the priſoner's feet; when I ſaw them, I ſaw ſomething in her lap, but I did not ſee them drop out of her apron.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I lodged along with the old woman that lives up ſtairs, and the proſecutor's door was open, and I went in and ſaw the things were gone; and I went to look for the proſecutrix, to tell her, and they came and took me.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

422. JOSEPH BROTHERHEAD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 8th day of March laſt, one wooden caſk, value 8s. the property of Robert Harriſon and Richard Munday, and one other wooden caſk, value 6s. the property of John Charrington and Harry Charrington.

HUGH HUGHES ſworn.

I am a cooper; the priſoner worked journey-work with me at the time that he offered theſe ſtaves to ſell; which was about the 8th of March, he offered twenty-nine ſtaves to me to ſell; he brought them in a bag at two or three times; at laſt he brought the heads, and on one there was a mark of Munday, and on the other the mark of Charrington; then I told him him I would not have any concern with them, becauſe I thought they were ſtolen; I deſired him to take them away; he ſaid he would, but he did not; I informed the proſecutors, and they came and claimed them.

Do you know whether the ſtaves belonged to theſe heads?—The priſoner told me they did; he told me there were fourteen or fifteen.

Is that about the quantity?—Generally, but ſometimes there are more and ſometimes leſs; he ſaid he bought them of a young man; he ſcratched the burnt marks out of the head of the caſks, after they were brought to our houſe, as he told me.

(The head depoſed to by Adam Hodgſon.)

There is a particular mark beſides the burnt mark, which was cut out; the mark of J. V. O. was left in plain.

Can you tell where this caſk was taken from?—I cannot be ſure; he told the Juſtice he found one in Little Britain, and the other in Cheapſide; and he told the cooper he bought them of a young fellow.

JOHN CHEVET ſworn.

I ſaw two heads belonging to a hogſhead of John and Harry Charrington, I know the mark; we cannot keep any account of where the caſks are.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

Coming from work one night, I found one of them in Cheapſide, and the other in Little Britain.

What in one night?—No, one about a week after the other; they lay in the kennel; between eight and nine.

Then how came you to ſay you had bought them of a young man?—I never ſaid any ſuch thing.

Have you any body to prove that you found them?—There were a great many people ſaw me pick them up.

Are any of them here?—Not that I know of.

Have you any friends here?—I expected a couple, I do not know whether they are come or not.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

423. ELIZABETH JONES was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 21ſt day of February, one ſilver table ſpoon, value 6s. one tea ſpoon, value 12d. one pair of linen ſheets, value 5s. and one table cloth, value 12d. the property of James Holland.

JAMES HOLLAND ſworn.

The priſoner lived with me a week, ſhe came to me the 14th of February, I miſſed the ſheets mentioned in the indictment, likewiſe a ſilver table ſpoon and a tea ſpoon, and a damaſk breakfaſt cloth; on the 25th, I took her in Penton-ſtreet, at the pawnbroker's, ſhe was ſearched, and the ſpoons were found upon her; I ſaw them taken from her, here is my own cypher upon them, they have been in the poſſeſſion of the conſtable ever ſince; the ſilver ſpoon had been broken and mended.

What did ſhe ſay for herſelf?—She ſaid the devil was in her, and ſhe could not help it.

RICHARD BRADLEY ſworn.

In the morning between ſeven and eight I miſſed the priſoner; I ſearched for the priſoner, and told my maſter; the conſtable found the things in her left hand pocket.

Priſoner. I put them in my pocket, I did not deſign to make them away; I hope you will have ſome pity upon me, as I am a ſtrange a ſtrange girl, I have not a friend within two hundred miles.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped, and confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

She was humbly recommended to mercy.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

424. JOHN JONES was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 2d day of April, one linen cloth, value 2d. one linen ſhirt, value 12d. one lawn ſtock, value 4d. two ſhifts, value 18d. two aprons, value 2s. one corded ſilk waiſtcoat, value 4s. and one child's cotton frock, value 2s. the property of Richard Hill.

ELIZABETH HILL ſworn.

The priſoner ſtopped me in the ſtreet on Saturday laſt, and took my bundle from me, in Church-ſtreet, St. Ann's, between eight and nine; I had it under my arm, the priſoner ſnatched it from me; he came on the other ſide of me, when I turned round he was five or ſix yards from me; I kept ſight of him ſome way till a mob of people came in purſuit; I cried ſtop thief, and he was taken in Compton-ſtreet.

Was he ever out of your ſight till he was taken?——Yes, when the mob of people came I could not ſee him for the throng of people.

Was the bundle found upon him?—Yes.

What became of the bundle afterwards?——It was brought to the watch-houſe.

——— PEARCE ſworn.

Between eight and nine I was going home on Saturday evening, and I ſaw the priſoner running; I juſt heard a cry of ſtop thief, I ſaw the priſoner turn the corner of Dean-ſtreet with this bundle under his arm; I purſued him immediately, and about the ſecond door, as I purſued him, I ſaw him drop the bundle; I was as near to him when he threw it away as I am to your Lordſhip; I took him, and a man delivered me the bundle, and the priſoner was committed.

JAMES CAIN ſworn.

On Saturday the 2d of April, about a quarter paſt eight, I heard the cry of ſtop thief, I looked back and ſaw the priſoner running; I purſued, I ſaw him drop the bundle, and in the very inſtant after he was ſeized and taken.

MARY HANINGTON ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner ſnatch the bundle out of the gentlewoman's hand, he run across the ſtreet, I cried out ſtop thief, he was immediately taken; I ſaw him taken, he never was out of my ſight, he did not run many yards.

(The things produced and depoſed to by Mrs. Hill.)

Court. Who do the things belong to?—To one Mr. Lefevre.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was coming along and a man ſtopped me, and charged me with ſtealing a bundle, which I never did; I had no bundle under my arm.

GUILTY.

To be whipped and confined twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

The next Part will contain, amongſt others, the remarkable Trial of GEORGE BARRINGTON, and will be publiſhed in a few days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 6th of APRIL 1785, and the following Days;

Being the FOURTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER IV. PART II.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

425. ALEXANDER WILKINSON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 4th of March laſt, four ſix-pences, value 2s. and ſixteen copper halfpence, value 8d. the monies of John Lowe.

JOHN LOWE ſworn.

On the 4th, about a quarter paſt eleven in the evening, I was collector of the toll at Pimlico gate, and at eleven o'clock I laid down, I put down four ſixpences, and ſixteen copper halfpence; the priſoner came in and aſked if his aſs was gone through, I told him no, he ſaid he would leave his baſket, and go back and look for his aſs; he went a few paces, and turned back for his aſs as I thought, and he turned back again and came in, I then thought of the money that lay there, I got up to look, and I miſſed it, and I detained the priſoner, I called the watchmen, and they came, I told them that I miſſed my money, and I ſuſpected the priſoner; he was ſearched and there was money found about him, which I thought looked very much like my money, but I cannot be ſworn to it; there was more money found about him than I had loſt.

Had any body elſe been into the toll houſe, after you had put down the money? ——Not to my knowledge.

Had you fallen aſleep?—I do not know, I believe I had not.

Can you ſay poſitively you had not?—No, I would not ſay poſitively.

Then you cannot ſwear that nobody elſe came in?—No, I cannot, as the door was open, I knew the priſoner before, by going through the gate moſt days.

Alderman Sanderſon. Were there ſixpences found upon him?——Yes.

How many?——Four.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Counſel. It is uſual for you to lay ſeveral hours on this couch?—It is for that purpoſe.

It is very uſual for you to lay dozing on this couch, half aſleep and half awake?——Yes.

In a total uncertainty of what paſſes?——Yes.

JOHN BIRDSEY ſworn.

I was crying the hour; I heard ſomebody call watch; I went to the turnpike at Pimlico, and the proſecutor had hold of the priſoner, and gave me charge of him, there there were ſixpences, and two groats in halfpence; he had it about him; I believe he had ſome in his ſhoes; he was not willing to be ſearched without a conſtable; he pulled his coat and his apron off: I pulled two ſixpences and a ſhilling out of his breeches pocket: Mr. Low ſaid he would ſwear to one of the ſixpences in his waiſtcoat pocket; I took out ninepence-halfpenny in halfpence, then I took two ſixpences and one ſhilling out of his right ſhoe; and the proſecutor ſaid he would ſwear to one of theſe ſixpences.

Proſecutor. I cannot ſwear to money; there is one with a hole in it, very much like one that I took; but I take more of that ſort.

Mr. Peatt. Sixpences with holes are very common?——I took two within the month.

EVAN WILLIAMS ſworn.

I was called to the aſſiſtance of the proſecutor, I ſaw the priſoner ſearched, and one of the ſixpences was a remarkable ſmall one, and the other with a hole.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I know nothing of the affair; I had been out with my goods that day, and coming home I got rather drunk, and I did not know what I was about; I came to the turnpike gate, and I aſked the man to let me leave theſe baſkets there; I knew nothing of the money being in my ſhoe; I was in liquor; I took ſeveral ſhillings that day, and ſixpences too.

The priſoner called five witneſſes who gave him a very good character.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

426. HENRY SNELLING was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 20th day of October laſt, one ſurtoot coat, value 12s. the property of Henry Cowley.

HENRY COWLEY ſworn.

I loſt a great coat about a year and a half ago, at one Mr. James Wetherby's houſe; I lodged in the ſame houſe; the priſoner and I lodged in the ſame room about eight weeks; he went away from his lodgings, and the people of the houſe did not know; the coat was never found; it was upon the bed when I went out; the priſoner was a day-labouring man; he was taken in Tottenham-court-road; he ſaid he had got nothing to pay me.

What did he ſay?—I ſaid I ſhould be glad to be ſatisfied for the great coat that he ſtole away; he ſaid he could not make me amends for it, for he had ſold the coat.

This is a very odd converſation you relate; had you lent him the great coat now upon your oath?——No, I did lend it him one day before.

Have not you lent it him at different times;——No, only one day or two.

Upon your oath would you have proſecuted him if he had paid you for the great coat, or returned it to you?—No.

EDWARD COWLEY ſworn.

I found the priſoner in Tottenham-court road: I took him to Paddington, to my brother; the priſoner ſaid, I know what you are come after, your brother's great coat; when we came to Paddington he was detained all night; and on the Monday morning he owned to me that he had ſold the coat in Roſemary-lane for nine ſhillings and ſixpence.

JOHN DOWDING ſworn.

I met the priſoner with the coat on his back, between eleven and twelve, between Paddington and Kilbourn, near a year and a half ago; I knew the great coat, I have often ſeen the proſecutor wear it.

Had you ever ſeen the priſoner wear it before?——No, I ſaw it on his back the day he went away with it.

Did you ſay anything to him then?—I only aſked him how he did.

Did he tell you where he was going to?——No.

Did

Did you ask him?——No.

JAMES WETHERBY sworn.

The prisoner and the prosecutor lodged in my house; the man always paid me very honestly for my lodgings; but he was taken bad, and in the day time he took this coat away.

Did he quit the lodgings with your knowledge?——No, I did not know he was going.

Had he paid you?——There was a trifle he owed me, about a week or so.

Did you hear the prosecutor make any complaint about this great coat immediately after he went away?——He made a great fuss, he said he would prosecute him, if he could find him.

How long after was that?——It might be a fortnight.

When did he first complain of the loss?—He complained of it immediately.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I worked for that man, in the parish of Welsden, and I was taken very bad with the ague and fever, and many people recommended me to get into the hospital; my master that stands there said I was very welcome to wear his coat till I got the better of my illness; I desired my landlord's daughter when I came down, to tell my master I was going to the hospital; and told another person to tell my master I was in the hospital; I was in the hospital a month and two days; after I was ordered out, I met my master, Henry Cowley, in the Hay-market; I asked him to employ me; he said he was afraid he could not; but says he, Harry, I hope you will return me the coat; I said I would; I was taken ill again, and was bad fifteen weeks, and being poverty struck, I was obliged to pawn the coat; my master gave me a glass of liquor, there he is to witness it.

Court to Henry Cowley. Is this true?—No.

Will you swear that you did not know he was gone to the hospital?—Yes.

Did you never see him after he left Wetherby's?——I did see him, with the coat upon his back, and I thought I could have got it again.

How long after?—I suppose in the course of a week or ten days; I told him I wanted my coat; and he said he could not spare it.

Court to Jury. Gentlemen, you must acquit the prisoner.

Court to Prosecutor. How did you dare, upon your oath, before to tell me, that from the time he went away from Wetherby's you never saw him till a fortnight ago?——I said a fortnight afterwards.

Court. Did not you apply to a magistrate for a warrant, and he refused it?——Yes.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

427. GEORGE BARRINGTON was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 26th of February last, in the parish of St. Martin in the Fields, one watch, with the case made of gold, value 5l. one watch chain, value 10s. two stone seals set in gold, value 20s. one base metal key, value 1d. the property of John Bagshaw, Esq.

(The prisoner objected on his first arraignment to Mr. Bond, the foreman of the first Middlesex Jury, and was therefore arraigned and tried by the second Middlesex Jury, to none of which he objected.)

JOHN BAGSHAW, Esq; sworn.

I lost my watch on the 26th of February last, about a quarter of an hour or twenty minues after five in the evening, in the passage that leads to the pit, going into Drury-lane Theatre, in that passage which you enter from Russel-Court, and some yards from that particular part of it where the money is received, which is some yards from the pit door.

Be

Be ſo good as to deſcribe what happened to you there?—On the 26th of January laſt I went to Drury-lane Theatre, in company with another young Gentleman, in order to ſee Mrs. Siddons, the play was Macbeth; we were under the neceſſity of ſtopping a few minutes till ſeveral perſons that were before us had gained admittance; at this time there might be perhaps ſix, ſeven, or eight perſons who each entered the pit paſſage, pretty near the ſame time that we did, or immediately after; I ſpeak of them that were behind us; while we were waiting for thoſe that were before us to gain admittance, I fancied I felt ſomebody at my breeches pocket, I immediately put my hand to my breeches pocket, and I found my watch was taken; on turning my head, the priſoner at the bar, whom the moment before I loſt my watch, I had particularly taken notice of, as ſtanding on the right ſide of me, rather a little behind me, not immediately in a line, was then ſtanding with his back to me, endeavouring to make his way out through the perſons that were collected together; I ſaid nothing, but immediately followed him; as ſoon as we had cleared the perſons who were behind us, excepting one perſon who ſtood by himſelf, and at about the diſtance of two or three yards from anybody elſe; I immediately laid hold of him, and ſaid, Sir, you have got my watch; his anſwer was, have I, Sir, got your watch? I replied that he had; he immediately endeavoured to get away from me, at the ſame time holding out his hand as with an intention of offering ſomething to that perſon who was at a very ſmall diſtance from him, cloſe by him almoſt at the time, but at the diſtance of two or three yards from any of the perſons who were going into the pit; at this moment I heard ſomething fall to the ground, and the breaking of glaſs; I immediately put my right hand to the ground, picked up my watch, and put it into my breeches pocket.

Court. From what part of the ground did you pick up your watch?——Pretty nearly in a line perpendicularly with his body; not quite, but rather perpendicular with his arm, as it appeared to me to be held out; as ſoon as I had recovered my watch, a ſcuffle immediately commenced between the priſoner, the perſon to whom he held out his hand, as if with intention to offer the watch, and myſelf.

What part did the other man take?——Barrington endeavoured to get from me, the other man pulled me back from him, the other man aſſiſted Barrington, and took a more active part than Barrington himſelf; in the ſcuffle they threw me down to the ground; he was diſengaged for a moment, I only fell on my ſide, and fortunately recovered myſelf inſtantaneouſly and followed him; he had not got above ſix or ſeven yards before the alarm was given, and ſome perſons coming up he made no further reſiſtance; I took him immediately to the public Office in Bow-ſtreet.

Mr. Silveſter, Priſoner's Council. I underſtand, Sir, you are very ſhort ſighted?—I have that misfortune.

There were many people crowding?—There was no great crowd, there might be ſix, ſeven, or eight.

You do not mean to be particular?—I am not.

Who firſt told you the watch was there?—I was not told of it.

No one perſon then ſaid to you here is a watch, and gave you the watch?—No.

You did not ſee it fall?—I did not ſee it fall, but I am poſitive it fell from the priſoner at the bar; and my reaſons are, becauſe the perſon who ſtood at three or four yards diſtance, whom I never ſaw before or ſince; the watch could not fall from him, becauſe he did not leave the crowd at the time I followed the priſoner, and I followed him inſtantaneouſly as I found the watch was gone.

FRANCIS LAVALL ſworn.

I heard the watch fall to the ground; I was with Mr. Bagſhaw, I was next to him when he loſt his watch; I obſerved a little before he miſſed his watch, a man puſhed me very much, I came cloſe to Mr. Bagſhaw, and told him I ſaw a man who was very very much in a hurry to get in; the prisoner might be at the distance of three or four yards off.

Do you recollect his posture at the time he seized him?—I do not.

Was there anybody besides you that was near to him?—I did not observe anybody.

—What became of the prisoner and Mr. Bagshaw after he had seized him?——Mr. Bagshaw accused the prisoner with having his watch, upon which I heard it fall; they might be removed from the place where he originally seized him before; I heard the watch fall, it fell upon the ground, Mr. Bagshaw picked it up and put it in his breeches pocket.

Can you tell who it fell from?———I cannot.

Did you observe where it fell?—I did not, but I heard the breaking of glass upon the ground.

Who were near you at the time that the watch fell?—I did not observe anybody near me at the time; I did not take notice.

—Where was Barrington at the time your watch fell?—With Mr. Bagshaw, he had him in his possession, the watch fell nearly under Barrington.

Was there any other person near enough for it to have fallen from them?—I did not observe any near enough.

How many yards from the place where you stood when Mr. Bagshaw missed his watch was it that the watch fell?—Three or four yards, I should imagine they had gone back so far.

Was there no noise or disturbance about the watch before it fell?—There was a scuffle between Mr. Bagshaw and the prisoner, when he accused him of having his watch, he said, have I your watch, upon which I immediately heard the watch fall.

Mr. Silvester. Did not this alarm the attention of every body about; there was one person accusing another of taking a watch, did not they flock to see what it was about?—I think there were one or two people who instead of helping Mr. Bagshaw assisted the prisoner.

What was you about?—I was rather confused.

Then there might, but you did not observe them?—I do not believe there were any near enough to hear it.

You know there were several people behind him?—I did not observe anybody at all; Mr. Bagshaw was thrown down somehow or other.

That was before the watch fell?—No, after.

Where the watch fell from, or how it fell, you do not know?—I know no more than what I have said.

Court. Did you see the watch upon the ground?——I did not.

Which way did Mr. Bagshaw stand to pick it up?——I did not see.

Did you see him stoop to take it?—Yes.

Did he stoop towards the place where the prisoner stood, or from him?—He stooped forwards, Barrington was close by his side at that time, he had hold of him.

Did he stoop directly before him, or to the side were Barrington was, or to the other side?—Straight before him.

How near was anybody to him at the time he stooped, besides Barrington?——I did not observe anybody at that time.

Court. George Barrington, you are now to make your defence; what have you to say to this charge?—Prisoner. My Lord, I humbly beg leave that Mr. Bagshaw may be asked one question.

Court. What is it, Mr. Barrington?—Prisoner. He says that he saw my hand extended as if I was giving something to some person; did he see anything in my hand, or did he see me give anything?—I certainly saw nothing in the hand of the prisoner at the bar.

Prisoner. I should be glad also to ask him whether he saw me give anything, or saw me drop any thing, or whether he had any reason to suppose either by speaking, talking, or confederating, in any other respect according to the idea which he has endeavoured to insinuate to the Court, that I had an accomplice, or that there were any grounds to suppose any such thing?

Court.

Court. He has given, you obſerve, the reaſon for that; which was, that one perſon who was the neareſt, but was at ſome diſtance, when you came to ſtruggle, aſſiſted you, and endeavoured to prevent him from taking you; he has given no other reaſons for ſuppoſing you had accomplices but that; does any other queſtion occur to you that may be material for your defence?

Priſoner. My Lord, I ſhould be glad Mr. Bagſhaw may be aſked, whether he recollects any perſon ſaying, here is the watch upon the ground.

Court. He has anſwered that already; he ſays, no, that he himſelf heard the craſh of glaſs, and ſtooped and picked it up, nobody ſaid ſo to him.

Mr. Bagſhaw. I did not hear a ſyllable of the kind.

Jury. What poſition was his hand in when he offered ſomething, was it ſhut or open?——I cannot particularly anſwer that queſtion, he had a great coat on, and held it in this kind of manner, at this diſtance, I cannot particularly ſay, but I think it ſeemed to be in this kind of manner, with the palm open downwards, I cannot poſitively anſwer that queſtion.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

May it pleaſe your Lordſhip and you Gentlemen of the Jury.

With humble ſubmiſſion I entreat your candid attention, and I truſt the ears and hearts of all in this Honourable Court will be as open and ready to receive impreſſions in my favour, as they may be to admit thoſe of a contrary nature. The evening in which this matter is ſtated to have happened I went to ſee the play, it was Macbeth, the houſe was filled early, and hearing it mentioned that there was no more room at that ſide, I was going to another part of the houſe, when I was accoſted by the proſecutor, who ſaid, Sir, you have got my watch. I told him I had not, and that he ſhould be ſatisfied of it in any manner he choſe. There were ſeveral perſons preſent at the time. An altercation took place, during which a by-ſtander cried out, There is a watch on the ground. This was at ſome yards diſtance from him. The proſecutor ran, but whether he ſtooped himſelf, or it was given him by a by-ſtander, I cannot ſay; but he took it, and declared it to be his. It has been ſtated, that when he accuſed me, I extended my hand, as if I was offering ſomething to ſome perſon; whether I did or not I cannot take upon me to ſay; but I truſt that it will not be conſidered as an unnatural poſition for any perſon ſo accuſed, to extend his arm or hand. Perhaps it will be more reaſonable to imagine, that an endeavour would be made to conceal them, if the accuſation had been juſt; and I truſt, Gentlemen of the Jury, that it will be worthy your moſt ſerious conſideration, that while this circumſtance is mentioned in order to criminate, the proſecutor has acknowledged, at the ſame time, that he ſaw nothing in my hand, ſaw me drop nothing, or give any thing to any perſon whatever. It has been ſtated, that during the altercation he received ſome violent treatment, and though he has acknowledged it did not proceed from me, yet an endeavour has been made to turn it to my diſadvantage. I moſt humbly beg leave to obſerve, that in conſequence of the alarm a croud came, and hearing ſuch a charge made, and ſeeing two people diſputing, both decently dreſſed, and much alike in heighth, and not immediately knowing which was the accuſed perſon, ſome, more violent than the reſt, might have laid hold of him, as the others did of me, until they were ſatisfied which was the accuſer. This I humbly conceive, and this alone, gave riſe to the violence complained of; and though it has been laboured to impreſs the Court, with an idea that it proceeded from accomplices, yet I humbly hope, that, where there are no ſolid proofs to eſtabliſh ſuch an idea, it will not be received; and therefore that in this, as well as in every other circumſtance of ſurmiſe or conjecture, it will be deemed as juſt and charitable to ſuppoſe for as to ſuppoſe againſt the priſoner; and I truſt too, that the juſtice and humanity humanity of this Honourable Court will not allow that a man, though he may be unfortunate enough to have a blemiſhed character, ſhall be made reſponſible for offences which others have committed, or that a ſurmiſe or ſuppoſition will be ſuffered to ſupply the place of clear convincing proofs. Whether thoſe that have appeared on this occaſion are of that kind or not, would be preſumption in me to ſay; I humbly hope they are not. But I muſt beg leave, Gentlemen of the Jury, with all humility, to call your attention for a moment to another ſubject, which, though it has not, and ought not to have, any connection with the evidence, may, without much care, have weight in deciding my fate. It has been my misfortune to have ſuffered much from ill-natured report, and from wanton invention, at a time too, when I can truly ſay, that I had been uſing my beſt endeavours to merit commendation inſtead of reproach; and I thought to have had it in my power to have given convincing proofs of this to the Court, from a gentleman in whoſe employment I have been for ſome time, but who is now abſent on his affairs in Ireland. Deſirous of having his teſtimony, which I knew muſt be favourable to me, I thought to have requeſted of the Court, to defer my trial till the following ſeſſions; but being told that the abſence of witneſſes which went to character, was not in general deemed ſufficiently material to defer a trial, I have omitted troubling them with the application. And although, under theſe circumſtances of impriſonment and an impending trial, yet they have not ſecured me from the effects of inconſiderate wantonneſs. Circumſtances have been related of me which never happened, and others have been cruelly exaggerated. I do not ſay this in order to excite your compaſſion, but to allay inflammation. Gentlemen, prejudice ſees through a glaſs, which makes things appear quite different from what they really are; you beſt know, Gentlemen, whether, in conſequence of any thing of that kind, your minds may have contracted a biaſs unfavourable to me. If, upon reflection, you think that they have, I am ſure you will carefully examine your breaſts; and if upon a cool and impartial conſideration of the evidence alone, you think or doubt, that it is not of that perfect and ſubſtantial nature, which ſhould induce you to find a verdict againſt any other perſon, I am ſure you will not againſt me, ſince you muſt be fully ſenſible, that in ſuch a caſe it would be a conviction from prejudice, and not from evidence. But, Gentlemen, I have an implicit confidence in your goodneſs; and I truſt you will not only lay aſide all paſſion and prejudice yourſelves, but that you will be pleaſed to make a candid allowance for the effects of it in others; and that you will proceed with that cautious and tender regard, which good men feel when the fate of a fellow-creature is depending, and which will inſure ſatisfaction to your minds, when words cannot be recalled, and when the power of prejudice is no more."

Mr. Baron Eyre ſummed up the evidence to the Jury, and then added:

Gentlemen, this is evidence in its nature circumſtantial; the circumſtances that go to impute the charge of ſtealing this watch to the priſoner are, that according to Mr. Bagſhaw, he was immediately next behind him, or rather at the moment he felt his watch, ſtanding on his right ſide; that the priſoner's poſition was ſhifted the moment he found his watch gone, and the priſoner was making his way out; that he followed him beyond five or ſix perſons that were neareſt behind, and when he got out from them, and there was only one perſon ſtanding near him, and he at two or three yards diſtance, after the priſoner had been ſeen holding out his hand, the watch did fall to the ground from ſomebody, nearly in a perpendicular line from the priſoner's arm, as it was ſtretched out: theſe are circumſtances that are of a nature firſt of all to render it probable, from the ſituation that the priſoner ſtood in at the time it was miſſed, that he might take the watch, and that render it ſomewhat more than probable from the ſituations, that the watch muſt have fallen from the priſoner, and could have fallen from nobody elſe; that is the name of

of the evidence, and if the circumſtances are ſufficient to ſatisfy you, that the watch could have fallen from nobody but the priſoner, then that is equal undoubtedly to direct proof that the watch did fall from the priſoner: the priſoner has made a defence, which nobody could hear without lamenting, that a man poſſeſſed of ſuch talents, ſhould have the misfortune to ſtand accuſed of a crime of this nature, or to have a character in any degree blemiſhed, that ſhould prevent ſuch talents from being exerted to his own advantage, and the advantage of the public; for certainly thoſe talents might have placed him in a very different ſituation indeed, from that in which he ſtands now, it might have intitled him to the reſpect and the regard of the public, inſtead of being a perſon accuſed of an offence of this nature: what impreſſion that defence will make is quite another conſideration; the ability is one thing, and the application of it, to anſwer this charge, another thing; the firſt point was to excuſe his retiring after the watch was miſſed, which as he alledges, was, becauſe he underſtood the pit was full, there is no evidence one way or the other about that; with reſpect to the reſt of the defence, it goes to contradict the evidence that the watch did fall to the ground; now from Mr. Bagſhaw's evidence, the watch did certainly fall to the ground immediately within his hearing, and almoſt cloſe to him, which is the very point of the caſe; becauſe if the watch had been found on the ground when they came out, and nobody could ſay that it had fallen from any body, it would ſtand quite an uncertain thing how it came there: and there would be nothing to impute to the priſoner reſpecting it; but if it did fall ſo as to make it moſt probable that it did fall from him, after he had been challenged with having the watch, and after he had held out his hand in that manner, which occaſioned the obſervation you have heard, of that you will judge: as to the reſt of the defence, it ſeems to be an application to your humanity; you will undoubtedly feel yourſelves diſpoſed to wiſh, that a man who could make ſuch a ſpeech to you, was innocent of this and every other crime; but with thoſe wiſhes about you, you will ſtill examine the evidence with a proper attention, and due inveſtigation of the circumſtances of this charge; the circumſtances againſt him are, that he was near the proſecutor when the watch was miſſed, that he ſhifted his poſture in a moment, that he was then retiring from the play-houſe, where his buſineſs was to have gone in, without eſtabliſhing the fact to you that the pit was full, and after that, at that moment the watch falls from ſomebody; you will be to ſay whether theſe circumſtances ſatisfy you that the watch fell from him, if they do, they certainly amount to a clear and convincing evidence that he is guilty of the fact; if, upon a due conſideration of the caſe, it appears to you that it is not ſufficiently authenticated that the watch was in his poſſeſſion by falling from him, and that the circumſtances of the caſe, though juſtifying a general ſuſpicion againſt him, are not ſufficient to convince you that he was the perſon concerned in ſtealing this watch, then you will acquit him; and if you do acquit him, I hope, that a man poſſeſſed of ſuch talents as he is poſſeſſed of, and having, as he ſays, friends which may aſſiſt him, and by which thoſe talents may be made of advantage; that he will turn them to that advantage, and will make a good uſe of them; and that this will be the laſt time that we ſhall ſee him in this place.

The Jury conferred a few minutes, and gave a verdict,

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

431. JAMES JONES was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of the Honourable William Harcourt, about the hour of three three in the night, on the 26th of March laſt, and burglatiouſly ſtealing therein two livery cloth great coats, value 10s. a cotton waiſtcoat, value 5s. a pair of leather breeches, value 10s. one pair of man's leather boots, value 10s. his property; and two ſhirts, value 5s. two neckcloths, value 2s. one linen night-cap, value 6d. two pair of worſted ſtockings, value 2s. one pair of gloves, value 1s. 6d. a hat, value 3s. one pair of ſhoes, value 2s. one handkerchief, value 6d. a pair of ſteel nut-crackers, value 3d. a leather whip with a whalebone handle, value 12d. one printed bound ſong book, entitled the Maſk, value 12d. the property of Jonathan Spence; and three linen ſhirts, value 6s. a pair of ſtockings, value 18d. one neckcloth, value 6d. and one handkerchief, value 3d. the property of William Brach.

JONATHAN SPENCE ſworn.

I am ſervant to General Harcourt, in Portland Place; the hay-loft door was broke open, and the door where the clothes were had the pannel cut out; I diſcovered it about half paſt three; I went up into the room, and the watchman with me; the hay-loft door was faſt with the bolts on the inſide, I imagine it had been broke open with a fork which I found broke in the hay-loft; the bolt was broke off by force, the clothes were in the bed chamber; the laundry is over the ſtable, and the bedchamber nearer the houſe, but on the ſame floor with the hay-loft, over the ſtables; we chiefly ſleep in doors, but when we are full of company we ſleep there: there was no bed there, nothing but clothes and cheſts. I loſt a family great coat, and new boots and buckſkin breeches belonging to the General; they were livery clothes; there were two new ſhirts, and a pair of new gloves; I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment; the hat is here: my fellow ſervant loſt three new ſhirts, he is here; my things were loſt out of my own cheſt, which was broke open, and is all to pieces; I ſecured the loſt over night, as ſecure as I could.

How came the priſoner to be there?——He had helped me a few days before, it happened he ſlept where the hay was, there was no clothes where he was, nor any thing there, and he could not get out of that without breaking all open.

How did he get to the place where the hay was?——I went up and faſtened him in about eleven at night; I faſtened him in with the bolts that were within ſide, it was an inſide door that he broke.

JOHN FACEY ſworn.

I am a watchman; I catched young Jones with the property upon him, between three and four in the morning, on the 26th of March, I found thoſe things mentioned in the indictment; he had a bundle and this whip; he was going towards Cavendiſh-ſtreet, I found him in Chandos-ſtreet, Mary-le-bon, that was about one hundred yards from Portland Place, I ſtopped him and the bundle, this is the bundle that he had, and he had coat and boots beſides this bundle; one coat he had on, the other under his arm, the boots were in the bundle, this is the coat he had on.

Spence. Here is my name on the coat, it is the General's family coat, given to me; I left it in my own room where all our linen and clothes lay; the other coat belongs to the poſtilion, William Brack; the boots belong to the General, they are my boots he gives them to me.

(The things in the bundle depoſed to by Spence.

And I know my fellow ſervants things as well as I know my own; we have been fellow ſervants theſe two years.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

The coachman told me the night before he was going to Bath, and I did not know what to do, I was out of place; I thought to go down in the country, I have neither father nor mother.

Court. How came you by all theſe goods——I was going to take them with me.

Court to Spence. How long had this fellow been about your ſtables?—He had been about about a fortnight in the Mews, he drew beer at a public houſe juſt by.

Priſoner. A gentleman in Gray's-Inn-lane, whom I lived with two years, promiſed to be here.

(Called, but nobody anſwered.)

Jury. We wiſh to know whether we can bring it under a capital crime.

Court. If you are of opinion the door was not bolted, it would only be larceny; if the door was bolted, it will be a burglary.

GUILTY, Death.

He was humbly recommended to mercy by the Jury.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

432. STEPHEN LANGDON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 19th day of March laſt ten guineas, value 10l. 10s. and one half guinea, value 10s. 6d. the property of Thomas Johnſon, in the dwelling houſe of Edward Roakley.

THOMAS JOHNSON ſworn.

I lodged in Queen-ſtreet, St. Ann's, in the houſe of Edward Roakley; I was deſired by an acquaintance to let the priſoner be with me in my lodgings, as he was out of place, till he could get a place: on the 14th of March he came to me to lodge; he went out very ſoon on Palm Sunday, between five and ſix; when I came home from my duty I went to church, and when I returned, I had occaſion to go to my box; I had not been there that morning, I found my box locked; I had my money on Saturday in the afternoon, and my money was tied up in a cloth, ten whole guineas, and an half guinea; the room was double locked and padlocked, as I left it; when I miſſed my money, I enquired after the priſoner, and found he lodged in Whitcomb-ſtreet, I had diligently made enquiry, and I found a handſome new trunk, with his name upon it; accordingly on Monday the 21ſt, about eleven o'clock in the forenoon, Atkins, where he lodged, ſtopped the priſoner, and ſent to me: the priſoner denied taking any property; he was ſearched all over, and in his ſhoes were found five guineas, two in one ſhoe and three in the other; one guinea was marked, and the half guinea was marked; the guinea was refuſed to be taken, for I went to have it changed becauſe it was lightiſh, and I marked it by taking it in my fingers and ſtriking it pretty quick on a rough whetſtone, on the milling edge of the guinea; I ſhould know it if ever it was offered to be changed; and the half guinea I marked with one prong of a fork for the ſame reaſon as the guinea; I told John Taylor the conſtable ſo, and another perſon at the office, before he was ſearched; when we found the marked money upon him, then he acknowledged he had taken it out of my box.

Court. Did you make him any promiſes before he would confeſs?—None at all, I am ſure of that; he ſaid he took it out of my box with a key: I went upon my duty at night upon the watch, and I locked him in every night.

What did he ſay?—He ſaid he had taken it, he made ſome kind of apology when before the Juſtice, he ſignified that he was in diſtreſs; he had bought new cloaths, a new coat, waiſtcoat, and breeches, and ſtockings and handkerchief; he ſaid he had laid out three pounds ſix ſhillings in theſe things, and had ſpent about two pounds four ſhillings and ſix-pence on Sunday in pleaſuring, or ſome other amuſement, and the remainder he had; he was committed.

JOHN TAYLOR ſworn.

Here are the clothes which he owned, and in his ſhoes I found five guineas, two in one ſhoe, and three in another, and one guinea the proſecutor ſaid he could ſwear to, which was found upon him; I have had it in my poſſeſſion ever ſince; he ſaid there was no more money, he had laid out the reſt.

(The guinea produced and depoſed to.)

Court

Court to Profecutor. What fort of mark did it make?——It made a little fort of a bulge over the milling; this is the guinea.

Are you ſure that is the guinea?—Yes.

Are you clear in that?—Yes.

Quite clear?——Yes.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I never ſaw any money belonging to him, it is all my own; I never ſaw his box, or had the handling of his money.

GUILTY, Death.

The priſoner was humbly recommended by the Jury to his Majeſty's mercy.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

433. MARY CLARK was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 13th day of March laſt, one ſilver watch, value 50s. one ſteel chain, value 6d. one compaſs ſeal ſet in baſe metal, value 2s. and one key, value 1d. the property of William Lunnagan, privily from his perſon.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

434. JOSEPH MANNING was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 14th day of March laſt, one pair of woollen blankets, value 5s. the property of Thomas Shaw, being in a certain lodging in the dwelling-houſe of the ſaid Thomas, let by contract by him to the ſaid Joſeph, and to be uſed by him with the ſaid lodging, againſt the ſtatute.

THOMAS SHAW ſworn.

The priſoner lodged in my houſe one night, and the next morning about eight o'clock, I was alarmed about a man coming out with a blanket, I immediately ran after him, I ſaw it under his arm; I cried out ſtop thief, and ran as hard as ever I could; he ran acroſs Drury-lane, and turned up a court, and dropped the blankets; I did not ſee him drop them: he was brought back.

SARAH HILL ſworn.

I live in the ſame court with Shaw, and between eight and nine I was looking out of my window, and I ſaw the priſoner come out of the profecutor's houſe, with one blanket with the corner of it hanging out of his coat; I ſaid, Maſter, you had better leave that blanket behind you: I have no doubt of its being the priſoner.

SARAH WALLIS ſworn.

The priſoner is the ſame man I lighted to bed the night before; the blankets were on the bed the night before; theſe are the ſame blankets.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I know nothing of the blankets; it is a houſe of ill fame, and they let lodgings at two-pence or three-pence a night; there were four more people in the ſame room; I came down in the morning about nine, and left another perſon in the room; I am a ſtranger, I came from Colcheſter.

GUILTY.

To be whipped and confined to hard labour ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

435. JOHN HILL was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 16th day of March laſt, two linen ſhirts, value 10s. and two aprons, value 3s. the property of Catherine Shayler.

The

The Priſoner was ſeen taking the things which were hung to dry, and was ſtopped directly with them under his arm.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

436. ELIZABETH STUBBS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 5th day of March laſt, one watch made of ſilver, with the outſide caſe covered with ſhagreen, value 42s. one ſteel chain, value 6d. one key, value 2d. one braſs ſeal, value 2d. the property of James Biggs, in his dwelling houſe.

The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoner.

SARAH BIGGS ſworn.

I am wife of James Biggs; I went out and left my door not locked, about five in the afternoon; nobody was at home but the lodgers; the priſoner lived in one of my rooms, and Elizabeth Evans in the other: the priſoner was at home when I went out; I left the watch hanging on the mantle piece; I returned in about ten minutes, and miſſed the watch; I left the other lodger in care of the door, I told her the watch hung up: the priſoner was not at home when I came in: the watch was found at the pawnbroker's, by Mary Dilnot.

ELIZABETH EVANS ſworn.

I was left in care of the watch by the proſecutor's wife, and I ſhut the ſtreet door, and I went into my own apartment; and preſently I found the outſide door had been opened on the inſide, it could not be opened but from the inſide; I heard or ſaw nobody; I ſtopped the watch afterwards in the Minories.

MARY DILNOT ſworn.

I was coming by, and the proſecutor's wife was crying out about her watch, and ſhe aſked me to go to ſee for it; and I went and found the priſoner at a pawnbroker's pawning the watch; I knew the watch, I had ſeveral times ſeen it: the priſoner ſaid nothing; and the pawnbroker in the priſoner's preſence ſaid, ſhe brought the watch there; ſhe ſaid nothing; and he gave her the watch, and ſhe took it, and gave it to Mrs. Biggs.

(The watch produced and depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

The proſecutor's wife gave me this watch to pledge: the pawnbroker I believe is here.

(William Windſor, the pawnbroker, was called on his ſubpœna, but did not appear.)

Priſoner. I ſubpœned him this morning.

Court to Mary Dilnot. Did any ſuch thing paſs at the pawnbroker's, as the priſoner has ſaid?—No it did not, I am ſure of that.

Court. Though the pawnbroker is not here, if any ſuch thing paſſed in his preſence, he can prove it hereafter?—No ſuch thing paſſed.

Court to Mrs. Biggs. Did you ever deſire her to pledge this watch?—No.

Did you ever tell the pawnbroker that you had deſired her to pledge it?——No, he aſked me if I knew that watch; I told him I could ſwear to it.

The priſoner called three witneſſes, who gave her a good character.

Priſoner. When Mr. Biggs came home, he ſaid they had done it very clever, and if they ſtuck to what they had done, they would get forty pounds, or a Tyburn ticket.

NOT GUILTY.

N B. Upon the proſecutor applying for his expences, the Court informed him, that if he brought the pawnbroker, and he diſproved the priſoner's aſſertions, he ſhould have his expences: but if what the priſoner ſoner ſaid was true, and the poor woman could afford to proſecute him, ſhe ſhould have a copy of her indictment granted by the Court.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

437. JEREMIAH LEONARD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 20th of February laſt, one wooden half hogſhead caſk, value 5s. the property of Charles Page.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing to the value of 10d.

Privately whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

438. JOHN COX was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 11th of March, 140lb. weight of lead, value 10s. belonging to John and Jacob James, and affixed to a certain building of theirs, called a warehouſe, againſt the ſtatute.

The priſoner was taken in the houſe, with the lead upon him.

GUILTY.

Whipped and confined twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury befor Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

439. RICHARD CLARKE was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of William Dermer, about the hour of eight in the night, on the 8th of March laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein one mahogany ring caſe, value 12d. ſix gold rings, value 30s. his property.

Mrs. DERMER ſworn.

I am wife of William Dermer, in the Strand, jeweller; I cannot ſay when we loſt our rings, it was of a Tueſday, on the 8th of laſt month, between ſeven and eight in the evening: I was called out, I found the window broke, and theſe rings about the door; they were in this caſe in the window.

CHARLES LANGSTON ſworn.

On Tueſday the 8th of March, I was called on, by a friend of mine, who informed me the proſecutor's window was in danger; I ſtepped over the way, and I had not been there above a minute or two, before I obſerved the priſoner ſtruck his arm through the glaſs of the ſhop window; I ſaw him take ſomething out of the window; I immediately collared him, and took him within three doors of the place; there was another man ſtanding near; I took the priſoner, and carried him to the proſecutor's ſhop; but before I took him, two others had joined him; I did not find the rings.

Court. Did it appear to you that he broke the window wilfully?——Yes, Sir, he placed himſelf there on purpoſe.

THOMAS ARNETT ſworn.

I was coming along the Strand, going into the city; I ſaw four men about the door, and I informed Mr. Langſton, and I deſired him to croſs the way, and I would go on the other ſide; as ſoon as he croſſed the way the window ſmaſhed; but I did not ſee that; I helped him to ſecure the priſoner.

Are you ſure you ſaw the priſoner at the window?—No, Sir, I am not ſure.

Priſoner. When I was examined at the Juſtice's, he ſaid I was round the window.

Court. Can you ſay he is not one of the four men?—I cannot.

Mrs. Dermer. I found the rings at the door, directly after the alarm; the caſe was found by a woman ſtranger, in a line juſt by; ſhe is not here; it was brought directly.

How

How many rings did you find looſe?—Thirteen.

Are they gold rings?——Yes; and one ſilver buckle.

Are you able to ſwear to any of theſe rings?—Yes, I can ſwear to them all.

Is there any mark upon them?—No.

If they had been found any where elſe could you have ſworn to them?—No.

Then you only judge from the circumſtances that they muſt have been yours?—Yes; the buckle I can ſwear to.

Mr. Langſton. I forgot to mention to the Court that the man's hand bled when I brought him into the ſhop.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going to my aunt's, in the Strand, and that gentleman came up, and there was a buſtle, and he ſaid I was one; I ſaid, I will go in with you.

How came your hand bleeding?—This button broke off my breeches, and there was a pin in it; but there was no cut in my hand, it was a ſcratch; here is my hand now.

What way of life have you been in?—I am a ſhoemaker.

How old are you?—Twenty three.

Have you been working lately in your buſineſs?—My maſter died before I was out of my time; I work for myſelf tranſlating; I have not a witneſs in the world; I have been a ſoldier in the Middleſex Militia three years.

If you had behaved well in that capacity I am ſure your officer would have appeared for you?—I did behave well indeed, Captain Taylor is my Captain, in the Weſtminſter Middleſex Militia.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

440. THOMAS SCOTT was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting William Thompſon, on the King's highway, on the 3d of April, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon, and againſt his will, one ſilver watch, value 30s. one ſeal, value 1s. one chain, value 3d. one key, value 1d. one ſhilling, value 12d. and two ſix-pences, value 12d. his property.

WILLIAM THOMPSON ſworn.

I was robbed laſt Sunday evening, between nine and ten, in the New-road, near St. George's turnpike, three men met me, one held me, while two others rifled my pockets; I ſaid, do not uſe me ill, I have not much money in my pocket, I will not make a noiſe; one of them ſaid, damn his eyes, give him a topper at once; they took my watch, one ſhilling, and two ſixpences, and a few halfpence, about three or four pennyworth; the one that held me gave me a ſhove, and ſaid, go along; they went about twenty or thirty yards, and ſome people were coming along, and I cried out, ſtop thief; they were followed, I kept about the diſtance of between fifty and ſixty yards, for fear they ſhould ſhoot me; and I heard John Nightingale ſay, damn him, I have got him faſt; I then went up, and ſaw the ſcuffle: the priſoner was one of the men, and Nightingale took the property from him.

JOHN NIGHTINGALE ſworn.

I was coming from Mile-End, between nine and ten, I heard the cry of ſtop thief, ſtop thief! two or three times, in about half a minute two men came in ſight of me; I let them paſs me, they gently paſſed me, I did not think they were the perſons; but I ſaid to the perſon that was with me, perhaps theſe are the men that have done the robbery, and I turned round to take them, and they ran as hard as they could, and I run after them, and caught one of the men in about twenty yards, that was the priſoner; I found no fire arms about him, but clenched in his hand was the watch and chain, one ſhilling and two ſixpences; I opened his hand, and out tumbled the watch; watch; I delivered the watch, and the money to the officer of the night.

NATHAN NATHANS ſworn.

I was with the laſt witneſs between nine and ten going down the new road, I heard the cry of ſtop thief! or ſtop them, I cannot tell which, I ſaw three men going gently, I had no ſuſpicion of them then, as ſoon as I turned round to them, ſays the priſoner, you dog, if you look at me, or offer to ſtop me, I will blow your brains out; I run after him, and hit him three or four times with a ſtick, and I knocked him down, I ſaw the watch drop from him.

JOHN THOMAS ſworn.

I produce theſe things, I have had them ever ſince. (The things depoſed to.) The ſeal is a ſhip in full ſail.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was coming up the road, and they came and took me.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

441. MARY BUTLER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 27th of February laſt, twenty yards of corderoy cloth, value 40s. ſeven yards of ſilk ſhag, value 3l. ſeven yards of hair ſhag, value 40s. four yards of velveret, value 20s. two worſted waiſtcoat pieces, value 10s. the property of Patrick Kenny in his dwelling houſe.

PATRICK KENNY ſworn.

I went out about three to a funeral, I left my wife at home, ſhe was going out; I came home about ten, and the next morning I found my ſhop had been robbed, the lock leading from the ſtairs to the ſhop appeared to be picked; I miſſed out of my ſhop the things mentioned in the indictment, ſome of the things were found again, here is what I found, here are gentlemen that found them, I found theſe things in St. Martin's-lane; I had three tickets from the priſoner, ſhe gave them to me, ſhe went down ſtairs for them, there were a great many more that were found under my ſtair head in the kitchen, but that ticket was delivered to me; I ſpoke to her in the ſhop, and ſaid, you have more tickets about you, be ſo kind as to let me have them, ſhe ſaid, it was not her that took them, ſhe had a confederate, whoſe name was Harry Coffee, and if I would give her a little indulgence ſhe would find him, ſhe then ſaid, ſhe would ſoon ſhew me where ſhe had pawned theſe things.

Did you make her any promiſes, if ſhe would confeſs the truth?——I told her ſo far, that if ſhe would find out this man, I would give her a little indulgence.

Priſoner. When you made it up with me, you told me you would not hurt me.

Court. Did you before ſhe produced the tickets, promiſe her forgiveneſs?——I did not, that was not till the tickets were brought.

SAMUEL RENSHAW ſworn.

I am a pawnbroker, here are four yards of velveret, Mr. Kenny calls honey-comb cotton, I call it corderoy, and Mr. Kenny has called it ſo in the indictment; the priſoner pledged it with me on the 3d of March, I did not know her before, I am ſure it was the priſoner, I am ſure it is the ſame, ſhe pledged it with me, I put a ticket on it directly. (The corderoy depoſed to.) This mark was found under her bed, which was taken from my ſhop the priſoner went with me, and I will ſwear to this mark, that is 159, this is the hair ſhag, ſhe went for theſe things.

RICHARD BROWN ſworn.

I produce two waiſtcoats, I cannot ſwear to the perſon that brought them.

JOHN WATTS ſworn.

I have ſome ſhag, I cannot tell who pawned it.

Wil-

WILLIAM ROBERTSON ſworn.

I have two waiſtcoat patterns, I had them of the priſoner, I am ſure of that, it was the 28th of February.

Proſecutor. I cannot depoſe to theſe, but I believe them to be mine, there are the ſame cut and ſort that I loſt.

Court to Renſhaw. In what name was the firſt piece pawned by the priſoner?——In the name of Sally Pearce.

Robertſon. She pawned the waiſtcoats in the name of Nancy Murphy.

THOMAS BROWN ſworn.

Here is ſome more c rd roy, I believe it was the priſoner, it was in the name of Margaret Carn.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I took lodgings in the proſecutor's houſe at ſix ſhillings a-week, and a man came to me and gave me theſe things to pawn, I did not know they were Mr. Kenny's, I came down to pay my rent, and the ticket fell from my pocket, and Mrs. Kenny picked it up, ſhe came to my room, and aſked me if I had not pawned ſome of that pattern, I told her I did, and more, and if the things belonged to her I was willing to give her the duplicates, accordingly the boy went with me, I had fourteen ſhillings and ſixpence in my pocket, I redeemed thoſe things upon promiſe that they would not hurt me, I had them from a young man in the ſtreet.

Who is that young man?——His name he told me was George Coffee.

Was not he an acquaintance?——A very ſlight acquaintance.

Do you know what is become of him?—I do not know indeed.

Have you any witneſſes?—Yes.

The priſoner called two witneſſes who gave her a good character.

Court to Proſecutor. What may the value of theſe things be?—I ſuppoſe about ſix or ſeven pounds.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing to the value of 39s.

To be privately whipped and confined to hard labour twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

428. JAMES HAYWARD was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of John Weale, about the hour of nine in the night, on the 17th of March laſt, and feloniouſly ſtealing therein, one ſilver pap ſpoon, value 4s. four ſilver table ſpoons, value 30s. two ſilver ſalts, value 10s. a ſilver punch ladle, value 5s. ſix ſilver tea ſpoons, value 6s. a pair of ſilver tea tongs, value 3s. one ſilver ſhoe buckle, value 3s. one man's cloth great coat, value 2s. three men's cloth coats, value 3l. three cloth waiſtcoats, value 8s. two dimity waiſtcoats, value 6s. one ſilk waiſtcoat, value 3s. three flannel waiſtcoats, value 3s. one pair of cloth breeches, value 8s. one pair of velveret breeches, value 4s. three women's ſilk gowns, value 3l. two cotton gowns, value 20s. a black bombazeen gown and petticoat, value 20s. a pair of ſtays, value 15s. a marcella petticoat, value 5s. a dimity petticoat, value 5s. ſix aprons, value 6s. four table cloths, value 4s. ſix handkerchiefs, value 3s. the property of the ſaid John.

(The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoner.)

HENRY NEALE ſworn.

On the 17th of March laſt, about nine in the evening, I was out and my wife and daughter, I went a little before eight; I left my apprentice at home, whoſe name is Henry Hill, I left nobody elſe at home, my wife was gone out before me; when I returned a little before ten, I found the apprentice at home, and ſeveral other people in the houſe, the houſe was all in an uproar, and I found the marks of ſomething by which the houſe had been broke open; when I went out I locked the parlour door and left the boy in the kitchen, there is no ſtreet door, we live in the inn-yard, the Red-Lion and Spread-Eagle.

What ſort of dwelling-houſe is your's then?——A dwelling in the middle of the yard, there is an outer door at the bottom of the ſtairs, in the yard, which we generally leave open, nobody elſe lives in the ſame ſtair caſe; I left the boy in the kitchen with the door open, the parlour is within the kitchen, I was ſent for home, and the priſoner was in cuſtody, and I miſſed four tea ſpoons, and a ſilver buckle, and ſome handkerchiefs, and a handle of a ſpoon which was taken on the priſoner, the clothes were all thrown about, we collected them together, and made an inventory of them.

Court. Had you no reaſon to ſuſpect that the boy was an accomplice?——I ſuſpected him at firſt, but he finding the people in the houſe, and giving the alarm, it cleared the boy.

HENRY HILL ſworn.

It was the 17th of laſt March, that my maſter went out, I went down to the public houſe as uſual, and ſtaid there about three quarters of an hour; I went out about a quarter of an hour after, and I locked the door as uſual, and hung the key upon the window in my little room where I lay, in the uſual place; my maſter knew where to find it; the bell was going eight when I went down ſtairs, I was out about a quarter of an hour, then I went up ſtairs to ſee if the fire was alight and put on ſome coals, then I came down ſtairs again and locked the door, all was ſafe, and about three quarters of an hour after, the hoſtler came into the houſe, and aſked me to lend him a pen and ink, I went up ſtairs for a pen and ink, and the key was in the place, but when I put it in the kitchen door, the door flew open, this was wanting a quarter to nine, I found the door was only ſhut too, when the door flew open, I catched it in my hand, and then I ſaw the priſoner and another man in the parlour which is directly fronting the kitchen, and they directly put out the light which they had, and I run down and called out thieves, the hoſtler was waiting at the bottom of the ſtairs for pen and ink, and ſtood there with a fork in his hand, till I went into the public houſe to give the alarm, the people came, and as we were coming up the yard again, one jumped out of the back window, the garden pots fell down and that made us hear him, when I went up again, I found nobody in the in the room, he that jumped out of the window got away, and then we ſhut the gates and this man came running crying ſtop thief! where are they, and one of the poſt-boys whoſe name is Job Lee, came running crying ſtop him; the priſoner was running up the yard towards the back way to get out, the hoſtler's name who ſtood at the foot of the ſtairs, was William Chandler, he was then up at the back gate along with me running after the other, and when the priſoner came up to the gate he wanted to go out, and we would not let him; the priſoner was ſtopped, and taken and as ſoon as ever we laid hold of him, he put his hands into his waiſtcoat pockets, and took out the bowl of a pap ſpoon and dropped it, I ſaw him drop it, and I took it up directly; nothing elſe was found upon him that I ſaw, the kitchen door appeared to have been broke open, the lock was bent almoſt double, it looked as if had been forced the parlour door was wide open, and the box that the ſcrews go into, one end of it the ſcrews forced off.

Priſoner. He ſaid before the Juſtice the firſt night, that he did not know who it was he ſaw in the room?——I am ſure it was him by the ſight of him, he had a brown coat on, and a pair of boots, and a cocked hat, he was as far off as I am from you you or rather farther, he had a light in his hand, and when he put out the light his face was towards me.

Priſoner. When I was firſt taken, he never offered to mention this.

Priſoner to witneſs. Which pocket did I take it out of?——You put both hands together and took it out.

JOB LEE ſworn.

I am poſt-boy at this inn, I was juſt come in with a carriage, and as I was taking the pole out, I ſaw the priſoner jump out of the window of the proſecutor's kitchen, into the yard.

Court. You are ſure you ſaw him jump out?——Yes.

Did you ever loſe ſight of him before he was taken?——No.

Are you clear of that?——Yes.

Did you ſee any thing found upon him?——No, I did not.

WILLIAM CHANDLER ſworn.

I am the hoſtler of this inn, I wanted to borrow a pen and ink of the apprentice, and at the ſame time the apprentice run up for the pen and ink, he told me there were thieves in the houſe, ſays I, I will ſtay here with the fork while you go and alarm the houſe, preſently I heard a great noiſe at the back window which were the flower pots rolling down off the window upon the ſtones; I preſently run round the corner, and there was one man getting on his legs, and he ran away, I ſhut the gates againſt the priſoner, and called ſtop thief! I ſhut the gate againſt him, and Job Lee was after him, there is a way round into the yard from the back window.

SUSANNAH LEES ſworn.

On the 17th of laſt March, between the hours of eight and nine in the evening this boy was ſitting in our houſe drinking ſome beer, and our hoſtler wanted a pen and ink, and the boy went to get it, and he made an alarm; I went up ſtairs, and the apprentice gave me theſe things in my lap, which were ſtanding on the kitchen hearth, I ſaw him take them from the hearth in the kitchen, I have had them in my poſſeſſion ever ſince.

Court to Hill. Are theſe the things that you found?——Yes.

Where did you find theſe things?——When I went up ſtairs with the men, I ſaw them laying on the kitchen hearth.

Where had they been uſually kept?—In the beaufet in the parlour.

(The things depoſed to by the proſecutor.)

Here is my wife's brother's name on the table ſpoons, and I believe the ſalts to be mine, but I never took any particular notice of the mark; I am clear they are mine, they were uſually kept in the beaufet in the room which we call the bedroom, it goes through the parlour into the kitchen.

(The pap-ſpoon produced and depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was running down George-yard, Whitechapel, I heard the cry of ſtop thief, and when I was coming out of the yard they took me; when they went to the public houſe, they began ſharing the forty pounds, and ſaying, one ſhould get ſo much, and another ſhould get ſo much; the boy did not ſwear to me then; I have reſpectable people to my character, but I did not expect my trial to come on ſo ſoon.

Court. If there are any that you expect, tell their names, and they ſhall be called.—There is one Mr. Clark, Mr. Taylor, and Mr. Jones.

(They were called but did not appear.)

Proſecutor. This piſtol was found in the yard, and the lanthorn was found in my apartment.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

429. WILLIAM YOUNG was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of of Elizabeth Twisden, about the hour of nine in the night, on the 11th of March last, and feloniously stealing therein five iron keys, value 5s. and one lead canister, value 6d. her property.

ELIZABETH TWISDEN sworn.

I live at No. 3, Great Titchfield-street, I am not in business, I have a house at No. 12, in Margaret-street, which was a corner house, was broke open, which adjoins this No. 3, that house did then belong to me.

Did you at that time live in Margaret-street?—I lived in Titchfield-street, but this house in Margaret-street was my house, and partly furnished, I had moved some of the furniture out.

How long had you left it?—I never had left it, I always had somebody to sleep in it; but I let it to Colonel Capper, as a furnished house; and afterwards my sister was in it, and always somebody slept in it, save two or three nights previous to the robbery; at the time this happened there was no one in the house; this robbery was committed early in the evening, on the 11th of March, I heard a noise, and then I heard another noise; I then said to a young man that was just come in, go and see; and he took the key of the street door and a light, his name is John Bengest; I observed him take a knife out of his pocket, and he went into the house; in a moment I went into the passage of No. 3, and I heard a great noise in that garden; I was informed a thief was taken.

JOHN BENGEST sworn.

I was sent to see what was the matter by the prosecutrix; I was setting in the parlour with the prosecutrix, we heard a noise in the adjoining house; I asked for a light and the key of the street door, which she gave me, and I went into the other house, and opened the door with the key, which was double locked; coming into the parlour I saw two or three men; as soon as I went in they jumped out of the window, one out of the back parlour window, and one out of the closet window, which they had broke open: I left the parlour, and caught the prisoner coming over the garden wall into the street.

Should you have known he was one of the men that was in the house?——No, my Lord, I cannot swear that he was in the house: I know he is the man that was coming over the wall; I gave him a blow and I cut him in the arm with a knife, he made a great resistance, and we had a very hard struggle, and he tumbled down in the street, I secured him.

Had he taken away any thing?——No, Sir, I secured him till the watchman came to my assistance, he was sent to the watch-house, and then I went into the house, and found several people in the house; and in the passage I found a closet window broke open; the plate of the shutter had been taken down, a pane of glass had been broke, which lets the hand into the screw; the screw was taken out, and the sash was thrown up, and so they got in; the lock of the closet door was forced open, which communicates to the parlour; we found the lock of the parlour door open, it was opened with an iron crow, I saw the marks after; we examined all the gardens; I said there is a neighbouring garden; and the watchman found the keys in the street and in the garden, and brought them to us, and the canister was found under the window in the garden, where they jumped out.

Where did the canister stand before they came into the house?—In the closet.

Was it an empty closet?—Yes.

What part of the closet?—Close to the window, close to the frame, which I took upon, by jumping out of the window they dragged that with them.

The remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be published in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commission of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the City of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middlesex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wednesday the 6th of APRIL 1785, and the following Days;

Being the FOURTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER IV. PART III.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLEY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noster Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of William Young.

What were the keys?——The keys belong to the doors of that houſe, to ſeveral parts of the houſe, they hung in a cloſet.

Whereabouts did they hang?—The left hand ſide coming in.

Could the keys have been drawn out in the ſame manner as the canniſter might?—No, it is impoſſible.

How long before this alarm had you been in the houſe?—Not that day, nor the day before.

Had any body that you know of been in the houſe?—I believe Mrs. Twiſden was laſt in the houſe.

Court to Proſecutrix. When was you in the houſe before?—I believe it was two days.

HENRY COLLINS ſworn.

I was going to the proſecutrix's with a pot of beer, and I ſaw the priſoner come over the wall, and the gentleman came out of the door, and told me to ſtand at the door, and he ran and caught the priſoner as he was coming over the door; he called to the watch, and he was taken to the watch-houſe.

SAMUEL BOVINDALE ſworn.

I am a watchman of Mary-le-bon, about nine watch was called, it might be about fifty yards off; I made the beſt of my way, Mr. Bengeſt gave me a charge of the priſoner, I took him to the watch-houſe, we afterwards ſearched the houſe, and found the doors and the windows broke open, and the plate of the window ſhutters broke off; then another perſon, who is not here, found this crow, a knife, and a key; I ſaw the perſon pick them up; ſome time afterwards I found three keys in the ſtreet, and another perſon found two, I ſaw him find them.

How far from the garden wall was it that the keys were found?—I believe about ſeven yards, that is as much as it was.

(The keys produced.)

Proſecutrix. Theſe are the keys of the cloſet on the ground floor of each ſide, this is the key of the drawing room; I know nothing of that key; this is the key of the garrets.

Mr. Bengeſt. I know all theſe five keys.

PRI-

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I and another had been drinking all that day, and happened to be in liquor, and going by that wall the other man was playing his fun as we went along, and he took my hat off and flung it over, and I went over for it, and getting back again this gentleman caught me.

What way of life have you been in?—I have been at sea eight years.

Have you any friends to speak for you?—I have two in the yard that have known me from my youth.

The prisoner called two witnesses who gave him a very good character.

GUILTY

Of stealing, but not of the burglary.

Transported for seven Years to Africa.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

430. WILLIAM HARDING was indicted for burglariously and feloniously breaking and entering the dwelling house of Robert Snow, Esq; about the hour of three in the night, on the 5th of March last, and burglariously stealing therein a silver tankard, value 15l. a silver milkpin, value 15s. a silver candlestick, value 40s. a pint mug, value 3l. four silver butter-boats, value 8l. a caudle-cup, value 30s. a pair of silver sugar tongs, value 8s. ten silver tea-spoons, value 30s. a silver tea strainer, value 3s. a silver desert spoon, value 8s. a castor, value 3s. his property.

(The case opened by Mr. Knowles.)

The witnesses examined apart at the request of Mr. Garrow, Prisoner's Council.

HANNAH CANNADY sworn.

I am a servant of Mr. Snows, No. 10. Saville-row.

Do you remember on Saturday, the 5th of March last, fastening any of the doors?—Yes, I fastened the door that goes out into the area.

What time of night was that?—About half an hour after eleven.

Mr. Garrow. You was not the last person up?—No, the butler was.

JOHN WADDINGTON sworn.

I am a servant to Mr. Snow; I remember on Saturday the 5th of March, I went to bed between twelve and one; I examined all the up-stair doors and windows, and they were fast; the next morning I was called up by the footman, William Barker, about seven; Benjamin Clarke was the man who first saw it.

When you got up at seven o'clock, what state did you find the house in?—I found a plate chest open, where the plate was, and the things taken out and gone, the chest was in the servant's hall, it was usually locked up, it was a strong chest; I am not particular whether it was locked the night before; it was empty in the morning.

What did you lose from there?—I lost the things mentioned in the indictment, (repeating them.) I have seen them at Sir Sampson's since.

BENJAMIN CLARKE sworn.

I am servant to Mr. Snow, on the Sunday morning I got up about seven, and I found the doors all open, quite into the area; when I came down into the kitchen it seemed quite light, which it was not at another time; and I found the lock of the area door was broke open, and the kitchen door was broke open; the lock was drawn quite off.

Was there any other door besides the area door before they got in?—No, only the area door.

Was there any bolt to that?—Yes, one bolt, the staples were drawn out; I saw the plate chest, and it was open, and quite in a litter.

With

With the appearance of having been rifled?—Yes.

MARY ROBINSON sworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Snow; on Sunday the 6th of March, I ſaw the china cloſet, and on the Saturday before; I ſaw there were next morning ten tea ſpoons miſſing, a ſtrainer, a little ſaucepan, a milk pin, and the other things mentioned in the indictment: the china cloſet was in the kitchen, it was locked on Saturday night; it was undone, I ſuppoſe by a chiſſel; and in the cloſet I found a dark lanthorn.

Mr. Garrow. Whoſe property was the plate that was in the china cloſet?——Mr. Snow's.

JACOB AARON ſworn.

Where did you live on Sunday, the 6th of March?—At Mr. Barrah's in Duke-ſtreet, Duke's-place.

Did you ſee any body there on Sunday?——I did, there was one called Bill Steward, Bill Harding was the other.

Who is he?——Another man.

Do you ſee that man in Court?——He looks much like him.

What time did you ſee him?——A little after ſeven on Sunday morning, the 6th of March.

How many of them in all?——Three.

Did they come to Barrah's houſe?——They did.

Where was you?—Below in the ſhop.

What ſhop does Barrah keep?——A butcher's ſhop; when the two men that came firſt came in, they went up ſtairs, and in about ten minutes, I ſaw a woman come in with a bundle under her coats as it ſeemed, and from her manner of walking and holding her hands, I thought ſhe had a bundle under her clothes, and ſhe went up ſtairs, when ſhe was about ten minutes up ſtairs, I was called up ſtairs to my miſtreſs in her bed chamber, ſhe was not up, that is on the ſecond floor, my miſtreſs ſaid to me——

Who was there when you was called up?—My miſtreſs, and Bill Steward, and the perſon which they call Bill Harding.

Do you mean by that Bill Harding, the man that you think the priſoner is like, or any other man?—I mean by Bill Harding the man that is like this priſoner; my miſtreſs ſaid to me, Jacob, you muſt get the ſhears, this pot cannot be weighed without it is cut; I went down ſtairs into the cellar to get the ſhears, and I met our little boy, Abraham Nathan, he wanted to go up ſtairs; I told him, you cannot go up ſtairs, there is company up ſtairs; I went up ſtairs with the ſhears, and I cut a large pot, and Bill Steward held it for me, while I cut it.

Court. In how many pieces did you cut it?——I cannot recollect in how many pieces.

Did you ſee any thing elſe there beſides that pot?—Yes, I ſaw more ſilver there, ſpoons, and butter boats, and one thing or other, a great deal of ſilver, which I did not take notice of; it was laying on a table; my miſtreſs weighed the pieces of the pot in my preſence, then ſhe went to her drawers, and took out a purſe of money and counted ſome guineas on the table there, I believe ſhe paid him thirty or thirty one guineas; I know there were ſome odd ſhillings to pay, and my miſtreſs ſaid to Bill Steward, you ſhall not have the odd ſhillings; and Bill Steward made anſwer, I will not abate a halfpenny of it; then I went down into the ſhop, and in about five or ſix minutes I was called up in the kitchen, which is one pair of ſtairs; ther I found Steward, and the man that is like the priſoner, and the woman; and Bill Steward ſaid to me, Jacob get change of a guinea, and I went and got change, and he gave me half a crown, and aſked for the boy to be ſent up ſtairs, which I did.

Where was the other perſon all the while?—He was ſtanding by, I ſent up Nathan; I went out for a quarter of an hour, to do ſome buſineſs in the butchering way for a neighbour; after I came back again, I ſaw the perſon they call Bill Harding, with the woman, they went down firſt, and Bill Steward went by himſelf.

Mr.

Mr. Garrow. I ſhall not aſk him any queſtions.

Mr. Knowles. Did you ſay before the Juſtice, that you knew the man?—Yes.

Have you had any reaſon ſince to doubt of him?

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, I ſubmit whether it is uſual for the proſecutor to croſs-examine his own witneſſes, and to remind him of what he has ſaid elſewhere.

Court. It is not uſual, it is not often neceſſary, but it is not illegal, but I do not over-rule you, however you diſcredit your own witneſs by it, you are aware of that; though he has not yet been aſked I think ſufficiently to that.

Court to Aaron. You have called theſe people very familiarly by their Chriſtian names, have you ever ſeen any of them before?——I have ſeen Bill Steward very often.

Had you ever ſeen Harding before?——Never before in my life.

How came you to know their Chriſtian names?——By hearing them called ſo in converſation, when they were there.

Did you ſpeak to him or he to you while you was in the room?—No, not a word.

How ſoon after this was you called upon to ſee him?—The ſame day, the Sunday.

Where was that?—Let me recollect.

By all means!——I cannot be poſitive whether I ſaw him the ſame day, but I know on the Wedneſday I ſaw him again at Bow-ſtreet, but I cannot be poſitive for the Sunday; I am ſure I ſaw him on Wedneſday, I will not ſay any thing without I am ſure of it.

When you firſt ſaw him on the Wedneſday, did you or did you not know the man?——Then he looked like the ſame man again.

Do you know whether he is the ſame man or not?—He had a long pig tail behind, and a drab coat on, on the Sunday morning.

How was this priſoner dreſſed when you ſaw him on the Wedneſday at the Juſtice's?——In the ſame dreſs again.

Did you take notice enough of his perſon, to be able to know the man again or not?——Yes, I think I ſhould know him again.

Then you can tell us one way or the other, whether he is the man or not?—He is in another alteration of dreſs.

But I am ſpeaking when you ſaw him before the Juſtice, was the man you ſaw before the Juſtice the ſame man?—Yes, I am ſure of that.

Then if I underſtand you, your heſitation is whether this is the man you ſaw before the Juſtice, becauſe he has changed his dreſs?——Yes.

Do you know who the woman was that came with the goods?——I never ſaw her before in my life.

Did you diſcover from any converſation that paſſed amongſt them, at the time you was up ſtairs cutting the plate who ſhe was, who ſhe belonged to?—No.

You ſaid that Bill Harding and the woman went away together?—Yes.

Do you know where they went to?——No, I ſaw them croſs to a new opening.

Did you know where they lived?—No.

Did you know whether that woman was a ſingle woman?——I only knew by hearing her called by the name of Mrs. Harding.

Where did you hear her called by that name?——In the kitchen.

ABRAHAM NATHAN ſworn.

Mr. Knowles. Do you remember anybody being at your maſter's houſe on Sunday the 6th of March?——Yes.

Court. How old are you?——Going in eighteen.

How long have you lived with Barrah?——About three years and a half.

In what capacity did you live with him?——A ſervant.

In what buſineſs?——In the butchering way, to carry out meat; on Sunday morning I went out on an errand, I got up about half after ſix or thereabouts; when I came back I was going up ſtairs to deliver my meſſage; I met my fellow ſervant Aaron upon the ſtairs, who told me I could not go up, there was ſome body up ſtairs, I came down and ſtaid in the ſhop, he went below in the cellar, and took a pair of ſhears with him, in a little time after my maſter came in, and went up ſtairs, and he came down with a bundle, then my fellow ſervant came down and went out, and ſent me up, I went up, and there ſat a man, Bill Steward, in a chair by the fire ſide, and a man with a woman in his lap, whom they call Bill Harding.

Have you ſeen that man ſince?—No.

Do you ſee him here now, look about the Court?—I do not know that I do, I cannot ſwear, I never ſaw the man before.

Have you ſeen him ſince that Sunday?—No, I have not, I do not know I ſhould know him again, he had a long tail and a cocked hat, and a drab great coat, and when I came up, Steward gave me half-a-crown, and ſaid here is that for you; I did not ſee theſe people go away, I ſaw nothing particular when I went up ſtairs, only Steward had ſome money in his hand, and he gave me half-a-crown.

Did you ſee any thing on the table?——No, I did not look round, I only went to them, and he gave me half-a-crown.

Do you know where your maſter put the bundle that he brought down ſtairs?——I gave him a bit of black ribbon off my leg, he opened a place in the wainſcot, which is called "a plant," it was a ſecret cupboard.

Mr. Garrow. How long have you lived with Mr. Barrah?—About three years and a half.

Did the other gentleman live there before?—Yes.

How often has Mr. Barrah been in trouble ſince you have been there?—I do not know, he was abroad then.

He was not returned from tranſportation, he is a pretty wholeſale dealer in this fence buſineſs, is not he?—I do not know.

Are not you the ſame witneſs, that upon a croſs-examination before me at Kingſton, confeſſed you had perjured yourſelf before the Magiſtrate at Bow-ſtreet?—I did certainly, I was ſorry I did, I owned it in Court.

Court. You are that witneſs that ſaid your maſter deſired you to perjure yourſelf, and you did perjure yourſelf?—I did, I did ſay things which I did not ſay in Court, before Sir Sampſon, by my maſter's orders, I opened all in Court before the gentlemen, I could not help it, I was obliged to ſay as my maſter told me.

The man that you call by the name of Steward, I believe is a very old offender?—Yes, I have ſeen him ſeveral times.

He has been tried here very often?—I do not know.

He has been charged with breaking out of Newgate?——Yes.

Had you any converſation with your maſter, or with any perſon upon fixing on a new hand, rather than upon Steward?—No Sir, I had not.

MOSES MORANT ſworn.

I am one of the officers in Bow-ſtreet, I went to Barrah's houſe, on Sunday the 6th of March laſt, between ten and eleven o'clock in the morning, and in a cloſet I found a quantity of plate, it was a little cloſet in the wainſcot; the door did not appear to open, there was a little hole, I put in my knife and tried it, and it ſlid up, and there was a concealed cloſet with this plate; ſome leather for breeches, thirty-ſix ſkins, and three bundles of linen.

Have you got the plate here?——Yes, after I went to apprehend the priſoner, and in his houſe was this crow, and two center bits.

Court. Where did you go to apprehend Harding?—At a place called Bowl Yard, St. Giles's, No. 5.

Who did you find in his houſe?——His wife, maid ſervant, and William Steward.

Who did you apprehend?——I apprehended them both, Steward was in bed faſt aſleep; it was about one when we apprehended him.

Was the priſoner in bed or up?—— He was up, ſitting by the fire with his wife.

(The tankard and ſauce boats depoſed to by Waddington.)

Waddington. I am not particular whether there is any coat of arms upon it, I know the tankard by the ſize, I know the butter boats to be my maſter's, by continually uſing them, and cleaning them, I have uſed them at different times, eleven years; I know the candleſtick, and the pan, and this little cup, I remember the mark on this little candleſtick, here is the antelope's head.

Is that your maſter's creſt?——Yes.

Court. Is there any one of the pieces that has got a mark that you know?—— I have never obſerved particularly, they were not uſed conſtantly, the candleſtick and this ſpoon particularly.

(Mrs. Robinſon depoſed to a tea ſpoon by a cruſh, it had got a ſqueeze.)

Is there any creſt upon them?—Yes.

Court to Priſoner. Now this is the time for you to make your defence, you hear you are charged by the two people from Barrahs, with being one of the perſons that brought the plate that morning, in company with Steward, and Steward was afterwards found in your houſe that ſame day.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was a victualler, a publican ſome years, I have let my houſe lately; this Steward about a week or a fortnight before I was apprehended, lodged at my houſe; about one o'clock this gentleman came to my houſe; this Steward was out all the night before, and part of Sunday morning, he came and went up to bed; I know nothing of the affair, nor of the Barrahs, and they cannot ſay with a ſafe conſcience I am the perſon, but they do not care what they ſwear, the Court may plainly ſee that I never was at Barrah's in my life.

Court to Mr. Garrow. Have you any witneſſes for him?—No, my Lord.

Court to Priſoner. Now had you lived as you ought to have done, you muſt have witneſſes to your character.

Priſoner. I did not think about that, I have witneſſes plenty, that know I kept a public houſe ſome years, they talked of putting it off, on account of this Steward, the Court may ſee that I know no more of what is charged againſt me, than a child.

Court to Morant. What became of that Steward?—He was ſent to Tothill-fields, and by ſome means or other he was let out, or got out, they ſay he got over a wall by a rope.

Whereabouts in the houſe did you find the crow and the other things?——The centre bits were in a cloſet in the parlour, where I found the priſoner, the crow was in the kitchen in the chimney.

Priſoner. They were not my apartments.

Where did Steward ſleep?—In Harding's bed, where Harding's wife ſlept, the priſoner's clothes were there, and his ſhoes, and the priſoner's things were there, it was in the back parlour.

Court. Was that room the ſame parlour where the centre bit was found?—No, in the fore parlour the centre bit was found, where the priſoner and his wife were ſitting by the fire.

Mr. Bond Foreman of the Jury to Morant. Did you ever try any of theſe crows, becauſe when you wrench a door open, there may be a mark on the ſide of the crow?—No, I did not try them.

The Jury withdrew a ſhort time, and returned with a verdict

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

442. PATRICK DALEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 27th of February laſt, ſeventeen bars of iron, value

lue 4l. the property of Jukes Coulſon, William Harriman, and Benjamin Bates, then being in a certain lighter, on the navigable river of Thames.

——— FRANKS ſworn.

I am an officer belonging to the cuſtom-houſe; as I and another officer was looking out to ſee whether we could light of any ſmuggled goods, on the 27th of February, about twelve at night, we were on the water, and we ſaw a boat coming from the ſhips lying at Union ſtairs tier, and we rowed along-ſide of her, and found it full of iron; we found ſeventeen bars of iron; then the perſon that was with me ſtepped in and ſaid it was iron; we conſulted a little while, and took the man in cuſtody, and the iron.

Who was the man?—His name is Patrick Daley, that was the priſoner, nobody elſe was in the boat with him; I delivered the iron in charge to one Mr. Hall; officer of the night.

JOSEPH HALL ſworn.

I received in charge ſeventeen bars of iron from Franks, and one Wood; the iron now is in my cuſtody the other ſide the water; Mr. Light ſaw it the next morning.

WILLIAM LIGHT ſworn.

It is the property of Coulſon and Co. there is a bar of it to be produced, part of the ſeventeen, and it is marked with white lead; it is a very particular order we had, and had a mark C. upon it, it was marked in my preſence.

Court. Have you any notion where it was taken from?—I believe it to be taken from Union ſtairs, becauſe the lighter was carried on board a ſhip off Union ſtairs, on the 27th of February, and on the next Monday morning we found the bars had been taken away; it was iron we had ſhipped off to go on board at Union ſtairs.

Where did the ſhip lay that the iron was to go on board of?——Off Union ſtairs.

And where was the lighter on the 27th in the evening?——It was on board the ſhip; I found ſeventeen bars miſſing, and I was obliged to ſend ſeventeen more, and I could not obtain a receipt to my ſatisfaction, becauſe ſeventeen bars were wanting, till I ſent the other ſeventeen bars.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Counſel. When did you miſs it?—Not till Monday morning the 28th.

Was the whole of the foreign order put on board that lighter?——Yes.

Do you know the bar of iron from any other circumſtance than that letter upon it?——Yes, it appeared to be part of a parcel which had been bought by the company a little while before, and it was pitched or tarred, as it was rather ruſty.

Is not it very uſual for iron to be very ruſty, and pitched too?——It is not very common, I have ſeen it once or twice.

Why can you diſtinguiſh one parcel of iron from another by the degree of ruſt?—No, Sir, but from the marks I will.

Is not it uſual for other merchants and dealers to mark their iron and bars with devices as well as yours?——Yes.

For ought you know other iron might be marked with the ſame letter?—Yes.

Then the whole alphabet might be marked?——Yes.

You did not draw that letter yourſelf?—No, but I ſaw it done.

It is not like a hand writing, it is marked with a bruſh?——Yes.

If you ſaw a C upon another bar of iron ſimilar to that, could you diſtinguiſh that from another?——I think I could from the ſize of the letter, and the mode of making that letter.

What part of the bar is the letter upon?——Not quite in the middle.

It might be two or three inches lower or higher for ought you know to the contrary?——It might.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I found this iron in the boat I was in, which was the ſhip's boat.

Court to Franks. Is not it uſual for watermen to borrow each others boats, to take to take them when they are preſſed without permiſſion?—I never did it, I cannot tell what others would do.

The priſoner called one witneſs who gave him a very good character.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

443. PETER O'BERGE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 6th day of March laſt, one pair of cloth breeches, value 2s. a cloth waiſtcoat, value 3s. a coat, value 10s. a pair of ſilk breeches, value 2s. a ſilk waiſtcoat, value 2s. a woollen jacket, value 1s. a linen ſhirt, value 1s. a ſilver watch, value 30s. the property of Nicholas Johnſon, in the dwelling houſe of John Anderſon.

NICHOLAS JOHNSON ſworn.

I live in Old Gravel-lane, at the old three Swediſh crowns; I follow the ſea; my things were under my landlord's care; I was ſick in the hoſpital.

JOHN ANDERSON ſworn.

The proſecutor lodged at my houſe, in Old Gravel-lane, and the priſoner lodged with me; I knew he brought no clothes into the houſe, and I ſaw him one morning carry out a great bundle; I aſked him where he was going; he ſaid to the waſher-woman's; then I ſaw him buy ſhoes and buckles, and I thought all was not right; and I went to overhaul, and I found the proſecutor's cheſt was broke open, and the things gone; the proſecutor was in the hoſpital; I took up the priſoner upon ſuſpicion, and ſent him to the watch-houſe; the officer found the things; the priſoner owned he had broke the cheſt open, and ſold ſome of the clothes, and he would ſhew him where it was; the officer found the watch tied up in his ſhirt, the buckles never were found, he did not own to them.

THOMAS COLE ſworn.

I am an officer, I had a charge brought to me, and the priſoner ſaid he would tell me where the things were; accordingly I went with him to different people's houſes, and according as he told me, I found the property, which are here now to be produced; I went on a good while with him, about two hours, he walked ſomething very comical, ſays I, what makes you walk ſo comical; ſays he, I have got a pain in my leg; I inſiſted on ſeeing, I went into a houſe, and there I ſearched him, and to the tail of his ſhirt I found a watch hanging between his legs, not concealed about him, but hanging as he walked along.

(The watch produced and depoſed to.)

MARY SMITH ſworn.

I produce a waiſtcoat and a pair of breeches; I live at No. 1. Cable-ſtreet, I bought the breeches of the priſoner, and he left the waiſtcoat with me, in order to bring a coat and breeches which belonged to it for ſale.

GEORGE DAVY ſworn.

I live at No. 105, Roſemary-lane, in the ſale buſineſs; I have a coat, a pair of breeches, and a waiſtcoat; I bought them of the priſoner, the latter end of February.

WILLIAM CLARKE ſworn.

I live in Queen-ſtreet, Tower-Hill; I have a jacket and an old ſhirt, I bought them of the priſoner the 7th of March.

(The various things depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

There was a man lodged in the ſame houſe I did, he is a countryman of mine, two or three days before he went away, he told me he had ſome things, if I could do any good with them I might, and he went up ſtairs with me, and ſhewed me his cheſt, and opened it.

Court. Did not you know that the things belonged to Johnſon?—No, I never knew that.

What countryman are you?—A Swede.

Court to Anderſon. How long have you known this man?——He lodged with me ten days, he bears but a very indifferent character.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing to the value of 39s.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

444. ELIZABETH STANLEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 27th day of March laſt, three woollen blankets, value 9s. a cotton counterpane, value 5s. a linen bolſter-caſe, value 1s. three ſheets, value 6s. the property of James Ruſſell.

Mrs. RUSSELL ſworn.

I live in High-ſtreet, Mile-end New-town, we have part of a houſe; I miſſed the things mentioned in the indictment, on Eaſter Sunday; I went up ſtairs between eight and nine to make the bed, and found the bedſtead half up and half down, and propped up with a board, I left it turned up in the morning, I ſaw the things ſome time in the day, the ſheet had a mark of L. M. and I think an I. I know the counterpane, it is very remarkable, I never ſaw one of the pattern before, it is a foreign thing, I ſaw the property at the office, and knew it to be mine.

(The things depoſed to.)

JAMES FAKERY ſworn.

I have been lately a victualler, I live at No. 262, Whitechapel road ſide; on Eaſter Sunday I was ſitting by my fire ſide, I heard the voice of a perſon, aſking will you buy an old blanket of a poor woman come out of the country? and I ſaid to my wife, this has not a good look, I went out to the fore apartment, and inſtead of this blanket it proved to be theſe things; the woman that brought them was the priſoner, ſhe was offering it to the woman that lives in the fore parlour, and ſells apples; I followed the priſoner to the George in Whitechapel road; I believe the priſoner ſaw me follow her, as ſhe ſaid, ſhe would be damned if any body ſhould have any of the things, for the property was her own; and I applied to John Roberts and Forecaſt, and they took her into cuſtody.

JOHN ROBERTS ſworn.

I am an officer, the laſt witneſs applied to me, at the Rotation-office, to take the priſoner into cuſtody, and I took the priſoner with this bundle on her head, theſe are the things that Mrs. Ruſſel ſpeaks to, they were ſealed up.

JOHN FORECAST ſworn.

I am an officer, I aſſiſted to take the priſoner with the bundle.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going along up the new road going to Limehouſe, and I met two men, they had this bundle at their back, and they gave me this bundle and I went with it, I did not know it was ſtolen, I was in liquor the two men were to meet me after I had ſold the things.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped, and confined to hard labour twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

445. JOHN THOMPSON otherwiſe WRINKLE was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling of John M'Farlan about the hour of ten in the night, on the 22d day of March laſt, with intention the goods and chattles of the ſaid John M'Farlan in the ſaid dwelling houſe then and there being, feloniouſly and burglariouſly to ſteal.

(The

(The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoner.)

JOHN M'FARLAN ſworn.

I am a ſilverſmith, I was ſitting in the kitchen backwards, even with my ſhop with my wife, I heard the bell of the door of my one pair of ſtairs floor tinkle, the girl came down ſtairs and went to the door, I ſays to my wife, it is nobody wants us, it is ſomebody wants the lodgers up ſtairs, then the girl came running along the paſſage, and ſays to my wife ſomebody wants you, my wife took up the candle off the table and went out of doors, I heard no talking till I heard the pane of glaſs break, that goes into the ſhop, where my ſilver work lays, the glaſs is to keep peoples hands from the ſhow board, with that I heard a rattling, and a noiſe in the paſſage, I got up out of my chair, and when I came in, and ſaw my wife laying on the ground, with her head towards the partition of the little room, and her feet towards the cellar door, no perſon could go by her, it is a very narrow paſſage, and the priſoner at the bar, as he appeared afterwards to be, was down alſo, he lay behind her, his knees in her back down upon her; I did not think of any thieves, I went to lift my wife up, and I ſaw ſomething puſh at me from under her coat, with two edges to it, and an odd ſort of a point, my wife cried out, keep out of the way my dear, keep out of the way, they will cut you to pieces! I took up an old ſpade, and I tried to ſtrike at him, for fear of ſtriking my wife, I ſtruck at his hat, and ſomething fell from his face, and I ſaw him as plain as I ſee theſe gentlemen now, and his eyes looked ſo monſtrous fierce and ſavage at me, I did not know what to make of it; ſeeing ſome more behind me all diſguiſed I turned myſelf round, and I cried out Harry! Harry! your miſtreſs is murdered and cut to pieces! that is a journeyman of mine, who was at work for me; with that Harry jumped out of the back ſhop, he had a ſilver ſoop ladle in his hand, which weighed four ounces in the bowl, and nine ounces throughout, and he ſtruck the man on the head with the ladle, hearing a noiſe in the ſtreet, I looked to the door, and ſaw it open, and I ſaw two or three men walk out, and the priſoner was left behind, he walked the length of the paſſage, and Harry kept hitting him on the head, and he went out of the houſe, and I ſaw no more of him; and they brought him back and declared he was the man, and the next morning, though they had even changed his clothes in the Compter, I declared that was the man.

Did you ſee him again that night?—Yes, we took him directly, he was not out of ſight, only whilſt turning round three doors.

Jury. Did your wife open the door to let him in?——No.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. How long might you be in the paſſage before all the people went away?——I cannot tell.

You can tell whether you was an hour or five minutes?——I cannot ſay it was an hour, nor half an hour.

Was it five minutes?——My fright was ſo great at the time, it was out of my power, or any body elſe in the agony I lay in.

You was extremely frightened?—I was.

What light had you?——A light commonly in my kitchen, and a light in the back ſhop, there was a candle on the compter.

Where is your compter?—In my ſhop.

Then there was the partition of the ſhop, between the candle and the place where you had this ſcuffle?——No, Sir, it is in the paſſage, I told my Lord.

Does your ſtreet door open into your ſhop immediately?——No, Sir, into a paſſage, the compter joins with a paſſage.

I want you to deſcribe to the Jury, the ſituation of your ſhop and your paſſage, how are they ſeparated from each other?—The ſtreet door comes in, and the compter runs down on one ſide the ſhop, with ſhutters up to it, that joins to the parlour partition, none can come into my ſhop without lifting up the flap of the compter, or breaking through that which was broke.

It

Is there a partition between the ſhop and the paſſage?—I tell you it is a compter.

In the day time a perſon opening the ſtreet door would come to your compter without any paſſage?—Yes.

In the night time you put up ſhutters which forms a paſſage?—Yes.

The ſhop was in the condition it was in the day time?—Yes.

How ſoon after was this man taken and brought back to you?—A few minutes.

How many do you think?—I cannot tell, my flurry was ſo great.

You was very much frightened?—I leave it to any body elſe to judge.

What did you think was paſſing when you firſt came up?—I had no apprehenſion of thieves, the outer ſhutters in the ſtreet were ſhut up.

ELIZABETH M'FARLAN ſworn.

On the 22d of March, about ten at night we heard the bell ring, and our young woman opened the door, and came and called me out, and when I came into the paſſage, that man was about a yard in the paſſage; I was in the back kitchen, I came out with a candle in my hand, and this man ſtood in the paſſage, about a yard in; he ſtood with one hand behind him, and another before him, with a great coat on; and when I looked him full in the face, he looked at me, he never ſpoke a word to me; and I ſaw a ſecond come down one of the ſteps from the ſtreet; I looked then behind me, and I ſaw the ſecond man put his hand into his right hand pocket and pull out ſomething black, and put it all over his face.

Had this firſt man any thing over his face at that time?—I did not ſee any thing at all over his face at that time; when I ſaw that man diſguiſing himſelf I was frightened, and called out Muffles, thinking of the people as I have heard tell of with things over their faces; then the firſt man that is now at the bar drew a ſword from behind him, and held it up ſo, and he turned round to make a chop at me, and I turned round to avoid the blow; and he threw me down, there were two then; one behind, he threw me down on my face, and he kneeled on my back, and I ſqualled out, and I called all the people in the houſe, and then my huſband came out when a pane of glaſs was broke in the door that parts the ſhop in the paſſage; I do not know how that was, then I ſaid to my huſband, my dear, do not come near them, they will chop you all to pieces; I do not know what happened afterwards.

How many did you ſee in all?—I ſaw in all the man that was diſguiſing his face, and one or more behind him, I know there were more than one; I ſtood ſome ſpace with the candle in my hand, looking full at him, expecting he would tell his buſineſs to me, he had a black thing round his neck, his face was uncovered as it may be now.

How near was you to him?—About half the length of this boat.

Mr. Garrow. I take it for granted you was very much frighted?—I was terrified, I did not know but they might ſhoot me; I have not been right well ſince, I ſpit blood for two or three days after, with falling down on the pit of my ſtomach.

How long was all this paſſing?—Not twenty minutes; I do not know how long it was.

You had nothing but your own light you brought up with you?—No, that I put on the compter; I had no ſuſpicion till I ſaw him behind putting on his diſguiſe, then ſaid I, Lord have mercy upon me! muffles, muffles! he hit me on the back of my head.

Do you mean to ſwear that any body touched you at all?—He certainly muſt have drove me down.

Do not tell me what he muſt have done, in point of fact did you feel anybody touch you?—Yes I did, I felt a weight after I was down.

Have you never ſaid that you believed you fell from the fright, and you was not ſure anybody touched you?—I have ſaid that he certainly muſt have hit me on the back of the head.

Have you ever told anybody that you did not know whether you was puſhed down, or drove down?—I ſaid I was drove down.

Have

Have you not ſaid that you was not ſure that anybody touched you, that you rather thought that you fell through fainting, or through fright?—I never ſaid any ſuch thing as that, I do not recollect it.

Did you at the time feel anybody touch you?—I canno recollect that.

Then have not you told ſomebody ſo?—No, I never told anybody ſo.

Nobody ſaid a word to you?—No.

MARY SANDERS ſworn.

I live at Mr. M'Farlan's, I went to the door the night this thing happened, ſomebody rang at the bell, and I came down to the door with a candle in my hand, I opened the door, and the priſoner and another man were at the door; the priſoner ſpoke to me, and he ſaid, my dear, is Mr. M'Farlan at home; I ſaid, Sir I do not know, if you will pleaſe to ſtop two or three minutes I will go in and ſee; I went in and ſpoke to Mrs. M'Farlan, and when I returned up ſtairs from the kitchen door, theſe men came in and followed me along the long paſſage, and after I came out this man was come in, and he had got from the threſhold of the door about five yards, and I went to go up ſtairs, and I ſaw the handle of a cutlaſs under his cloaths, he came in as I went to open the door; as I went up ſtairs I ſaw Mrs. M'Farlan come out; ſhe came to the priſoner, he ſaid nothing; then Mrs, M'Farlan ſcreamed out; when I ſaw the handle of the cutlaſs I ran up ſtairs in the fright, I do not know which way I turned; I went into my miſtreſs's room, and ſaid, Madam, for God's ſake come in, here are two thieves, or two murderers, with that my maſter locked the door, and opened the window, and cried out murder, ſtop thief.

Mr. Garrow. Is there any other maid-ſervant about this buſineſs, but you, a witneſs?——No.

Was you ever examined when John Mowat was in cuſtody?——No, Sir, I never was examined but here, and at Guild-hall.

Court. How was your door faſtened?—Double locked.

HENRY HALL ſworn.

I live at the proſecutor's houſe, I was at work in the back ſhop, making a ſoop ladle, and a little after ten I heard my maſter halloo out, Harry here is thieves, your miſtreſs will be murdered; I ran with the ladle in my hand, and I ſaw my maſter in the paſſage, and I puſhed him out of the way, and I run towards the man, and hit him over the head with the ladle; the man was ſtooping over my miſtreſs, ſhe was upon the ground, I cannot tell whether ſhe was laying upon her face or not; with that he made towards the door, I hit him another blow over the head, before he got out of the door, he took to his heels and ran; I ran after him, and hallooed out ſtop thief! and ſome people coming out of a public houſe, laid hold of his collar, I ran up and laid hold of the other ſide, and he was taken to the watch-houſe; that man was the priſoner.

Was he out of your ſight ever?—No.

Did you ſee any more in the houſe beſides him?—There was, but juſt as I came into the paſſage they were running out; I ſaw nothing black about him, nor upon the ground.

JOHN STONE ſworn.

I was at the public houſe, in St. Martin's Lane; I heard the cry of ſtop thief! I ſaw the priſoner and Hall running up the lane, I run after him, and ſeized him by the collar.

How far was the priſoner from the proſecutor's door, when you ſeized him?——About fifty or ſixty yards.

Was there any thing particular about his perſon or dreſs?——He had a brown great coat on, I ſaw no weapon.

ROBERT WILLIS ſworn.

On the 22d of March, I went where the priſoner was taken, and about ſix yards from Mr. M'Farlan's door, I took up this ſword, ten minutes after the alarm.

JAMES LEE ſworn.

About half paſt ten, or half an hour before ten, I was coming home, and the prisoner came past me, he asked me where the silver-smith lived, the corner of St. Martin's Lane; I could not tell him, and he asked me whether I knew ever a M'Farlan, I could not tell him; I asked what number he lived at, he did not know; about half an hour after, this affair happened.

Look at the prisoner again, are you quite sure he is the man?—I am quite sure, I saw him that night after.

JOHN TATCHFIELD sworn.

I was a watchman in that lane, when the cry of stop thief was, and I run and assisted, and Harry Hall, and John Stone, had the prisoner by the collar, and a pistol droped near the place where he stood, here is the pistol loaded, with ball in it.

Prisoner. Why did not you produce this pistol, the night I was taken into custody?—Because it was out of our ward, he was taken to another watch-house, and I did not go there, I kept the pistol in my pocket, I mentioned it within an hour after, that night; I found the pistol in about five minutes after, just by where he was stopped.

WILLIAM M'KENSEY sworn.

A little after ten, I was at the further end of the ward before this happened, and I had been in about the space of a minute, and I heard a very great noise, and a great mob, and I saw a light at the one pair of stairs, and I ran as fast as I could, and they had got the prisoner in hold, I carried him to the watch house, and searched him, and found nothing upon him, but a small knife.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I never was in the house, I dined that day at Deptford; I was coming home over London Bridge, at ten o'clock, and I saw a parcel of people run, and I run, and they laid hold of me.

What way of life have you been in, you have been at sea I suppose?—I have been at sea some time, since I deal in the marketing way, poultry and fish, and every thing in season.

Court. What is the place of your residence?——I live in Golden Lane, I have lived in that neighbourhood about five or six months, I am an Irishman, I went to Ireland to receive some money my father left me; this woman pitched upon one of Sir Sampson's men at first; as for this Harry Hall, he has been guilty of several foot-pad robberies, and has been once tried for it.

GUILTY Death.

Prisoner. My Lord, I am but a young man, and have a young family, I hope my Lord you will recommend me to mercy.

Court. Prisoner, you stand convicted of this offence, and properly; you appear to be connected with a most dangerous gang, think of your own situation, and think of the duty you owe to God and man, to discover the rest of your confederates; withdraw now and think of what I have said to you.

(N. B. This prisoner was afterwards ordered for execution by himself, on Tuesday the 26th of April.)

Tried by the second London Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

446. JOSEPH KEY, HENRY WOOD, and JAMES ROMAIN were indicted for feloniously assaulting Humphry Stokes, on the navigable river of Thames, being the King's highway, on the 19th day of March last, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniously taking from his person, and against his will, one metal watch, value 4l. one chain, value 10s. one linen handkerchief, value 3s. six china cups, value 3s. six saucers, value 3s. and one wooden box, value 1s. his property.

The witnesses examined apart at the desire of the prisoners.

HUMPHRY

HUMPHRY STOKES ſworn.

I am a lieutenant in the Navy, I was robbed on Saturday, the 19th of laſt month, about ſeven, off Wapping New Stairs; I dropped down in my veſſel to that place, to the veſſel where my brother was commander; I left the brig at ſeven, I called a ſculler to go on ſhore, it ſeemed a common ſculler, the man put me alongſide of a wherry, where there appeared to be five or ſix men, they demanded my money, which I peremptorily refuſed, they ſpoke to me from their own boat; on my refuſing, a piſtol was put to my breaſt, and diſcharged, the ball went by my coat and waiſtcoat, and juſt grazed my neck, they called out fire again, upon which I ſaid, I believe you have done my buſineſs my friends; then my ſculler handed a little box, and a handkerchief, with ſome things I had tied up in it, and at the ſame time took my watch from my fob, and went into their boat; they left me I ſuppoſe expecting I ſhould drop every moment.

What became of them?——They were laying on their oars a little while; on my calling out I was robbed and murdered, there was an alarm on the water, they pulled towards Wapping New Stairs, I know nothing more of them; I was picked up alone, in a boat, by a waterman who found it was his own boat, which had been ſtolen from the ſtairs; I know nothing of the three priſoners, as to the face or voice; one of them, Keys, appeared like the man that was in the ſculler, in his dreſs, and his make, and his jacket, and handkerchief, the other two men I have nothing to ſay againſt.

MATTHEW BECKET ſworn.

I am a waterman, I ply at King Edward Stairs, Wapping; about ſeven, on the 19th of March, I went to ſhut up Mr. Dixon's ſhop, and when I came down the ſtairs, I found my boat was ſtolen away, I borrowed a boat, and ſet off for my boat, and having got about two ſhips length from the ſhore, I heard the cry of murder, and I ſaw a boat, and another boat alongſide, with about five hands, and moſt part ſtanding off; I directly rowed towards where the gentleman called out murder, and perceived the other boat rowed to northward, as faſt as poſſible away from him; when this boat left that gentleman, I rowed up alongſide, and ſhe proved to be my boat, I jumped into the boat, and called out ſtop thieves, they have ſhot the man, look to northward; I took and rowed the gentleman on ſhore as faſt as I could: with my calling out and making ſuch an alarm, they anſwered me, we have got them on Wapping New Stairs; there were many boats coming along, I loſt ſight of them, and when I came on ſhore I found one man, that was Keys, in cuſtody, the other was taken away before I got the gentleman on ſhore, out of my boat; that boat that left the gentleman, rowed away to Wapping New Stairs, it was rather more to northward than to ſouthward.

What ſort of a night was it?—It was a moon light night.

How far could you follow them with your eye?——About half way over the river; I loſt ſight of their boat a good while before they got on ſhore, there were other boats in purſuit of them, I cannot ſay that I ſaw theſe five men, when I got on ſhore.

GEORGE DUFF ſworn.

I belong to Wapping New Stairs, I was ſtanding upon the ſtairs, and I heard an uproar on the river, and could not tell what was the matter, and we pulled the boat's head round, and then we heard the alarm of people calling out ſtop thief! they have killed a man; I heard a piece go off; I ſays to the boy pull back again, here they come; I ſaw a boat with four or five people, I cannot ſay rightly to one; I ſaw three ſtanding up, and two pulling, they were pulling right in for the ſtairs I was at; when I firſt ſaw them it was within twenty yards of the ſhore where I was, the boys pulled round; I ſaw the boats pulling after them as faſt as they could, there were a good many boats about at the ſame time; they were a ſtanding up, and the boys pulled round as I bid them; they came in athwart the head of the boats below, I was above at the ſtern of the boat; with with that I ſays to the boys pull away, and they did; there was a lug boat, that they could not get to the boat they were in, without getting over that boat; I hallooed to the people in that boat, ſtop them! ſtop them! the boy pulled me cloſe againſt the lug boat, right into the lug behind, they puſhed by them, and ruſhed before them, and the people in the lug boat tried to ſtop them; they left their own boat and got into the lug boat, and run over and got on ſhore, I ſeized Harry Wood as I ſtepped in the lug boat, on one ſide, he ſtepped out of the lug boat; I took him by the collar with my left hand, and he put his hand into his pocket, and he took out his knife, I ſaid, ſays I, what are you going to ſtick your knife in me? no ſays he.

Are you ſure Wood was one of them, that was in the boat?——Yes Sir, he was one of them that was ſtanding up, I ſaw him in the boat, and ſaw him come out, I was cloſe athwart the boat, I knew him before; I cannot ſay any thing about the others.

Priſoner Wood. Did not you ſay, that you would make a new boat out of me?—Never, never; ſays I, I knew you was one of the lead merchants, that was what I ſaid.

WILLIAM SMITH ſworn.

I am a waterman, when the out-cry was upon the river, I had been doing ſome buſineſs at Gun Dock; my brother was in the boat, rowing me down to Stone Stairs; I heard a noiſe on the river, and I ſaid there is ſome piece of work upon the river, as ſoon as ever the words were out of my mouth, I heard a piſtol go off, and I heard murder cried; I ſaid to Coleman who ſtood alongſide of me, row over towards Execution Dock, and another boat rowed paſt me, about a quarter of a minute after, with five or ſix people in it, and it pointed towards Wapping New Stairs; I was going to the place where I heard the piſtol fired, and this boat was coming from that place; this boat met me and paſſed me; I was about two hundred yards from the ſhore, I did not ſee the flaſh.

Did the ſound come from that way?—Yes, there were about five or ſix people in the boat.

Was ſhe pulling hard?—Yes, there were two boats beſides her, ſhe pulled pretty faſt by me.

Were they ſitting down or ſtanding up?—There were three ſtanding up and two rowing.

Was there any other boat near them?—Yes.

How near to them?—About thirty feet following them; I aſked them in the boat whereabouts they were, accordingly they ſaid they were juſt aſtern, and the man that was in purſuit of this boat, he ſays there they go, and we pulled our boat round, and went after this boat, and purſued them.

Court. Then upon the people ſaying, there they go, you pulled round and went after this boat that you had ſpoken to?—Yes, I went to jump into the boat, and whether any body knocked me down, or whether I fell, I do not know; there was a lug-boat laying at Mr. Curtis's back door, where the people jumped out of this wherry, this boat ſtopped on the long-ſide of the lug-boat, whether it was the ſame people that jumped out of the lug-boat on ſhore, I cannot ſay, but I ſaw the people that were in the wherry that paſſed me, jump into the lug-boat, I purſued them, and we took Wood.

Was Wood one of them or no?—I cannot tell, they were all higgledy piggledy.

Do you know any thing of the other two?—To ſpeak upon my oath, I think they were not in the boat.

What makes you think ſo?—Becauſe the other man that rowed was a tall thin young fellow, I ſhould know them if I was to ſee them again, I have ſeen Romain before on the river, I cannot ſay I recollect the face of Key, I did not know Key before.

Did you take notice of the people to be able to ſay that Romain was not there?—Yes, he was taken up upon ſuſpicion, I went there, and ſaid, he was not one.

CHARLES COLEMAN ſworn.

On the 19th of March, between ſeven and and eight, another young fellow was rowing Smith and me, ſitting down at the ſculls, we heard the report of the piſtol going off, he bid me take hold of the ſcull, and we heard murder cried out.

Which way did the cry come from?—From towards Ratcliffe Church.

Was that to the ſouthward of you?——Rather to the ſouthward.

How did Wapping New Stairs bear then?——We were almoſt oppoſite to the ſtairs, they were right northward, rowing by the craft; we ſaw a boat with five people in it, they called murder! ſtop thief! as well as we did; the men rowing ſaid there are the people; we immediately turned round, purſued them, and rowed after them, and Smith went to jump into the boat, and whether he was knocked over board, or fell over board, I cannot tell, but he hung to their boat, I got him in; and the other Smith his brother, the boat was almoſt near the ſhore, he ran after and catched hold of one of the men.

Did you ſee the men get out of the boat?—I ſaw three or four get out of the boat, but I ſaw one in particular.

Where did they get out?—At Wapping New Stairs, and they ran towards the water ſide; they got out immediately into a lug boat; ſome went to the right, and ſome went right up from the ſtairs; the boat was left with nobody in it: I ſaw one of them apprehended, and ſtopped at the ſtairs head, that was Wood, I cannot ſay what became of the reſt.

Priſoner Wood. My Lord, Coleman and Smith ſent to us yeſterday, to know if they ſhould go to our friends and get ſome money; this Coleman was taken up for the robbery.

Court. Who was the man that came to you.

Priſoner. His name was Mich. Conklan.

Smith. My Lord, the man he mentions was taken up for the ſame robbery, and diſcharged, I never ſent any perſon, it is a report of his own.

JAMES SMITH ſworn.

Between ſeven and eight, on the 19th of March, we heard an alarm of murder, ſtop them! ſtop them! I took one of the other ſculls, and rowed in this boat.

Whereabouts was you when you met the boat firſt?—About one hundred yards from Wapping New Stairs, or not ſo far.

Which way was the boat going to?——She was pulling in for Wapping New Stairs.

How many were there in her?——Five were in the boat, and two were rowing the boat; the boat came from the middle of the river.

Did you ſpeak to her?—Yes, we aſked them whereabouts they were; and they ſaid yes, there they are aſtern, upon which we turned round immediately, and rowed after them, and ſecured Harry Wood.

Are you ſure Harry Wood was in that boat?—Yes, I ſaw him ſtep out of that boat, by getting hold of him, I could ſwear to him, and nobody elſe.

How long have you known him?—I never knew him before, he was taken cloſe to me; I can be ſure he was in the boat, the reſt, ſome ran one way, and ſome the other; they are all ſtrangers to me.

Are you a waterman?—Yes.

Are not ſome of theſe people watermen?—I do not think they are.

Was not you acquainted with Romain before that time?——No, I was not.

JAMES DUFF ſworn.

On Saturday, the 19 h of March, between the hours of ſeven and eight, I heard an alarm on the water, in Wapping, I went to ſee what was the matter, and I ſaw ſome boats rowing to Wapping New-ſtairs; I ſaw one of the priſoners at the bar run paſt me, that was Keys; they cried ſtop thief to him, I purſued him as faſt as I could; I was at the corner of the ſtairs, at Mr. Curtis's brewhouſe, that is fifty yards or more from the ſtairs, he was going as faſt as he could, I dare ſay; and Mr. Curtis's clerk was purſuing him at the ſame time; the priſoner was the firſt man, and there were other people purſuing after him, crying, ſtop thief; we ſtopped him; I aſked him what he ran away for; he ſaid he had done nothing, he knew nothing of it; ſays he, I ran after the thief; ſays I, there was nobody before you; he ſaid, he knew nothing of it, and he would not tell where he lived; and I gave him in charge to the conſtable.

——— ADAMS ſworn.

On the 19th of March I was at Mr. Curtis's compting-houſe, I am his clerk, I heard a cry of murder and thieves; I thought it was only a parcel of drunken waterman; I was within two roods of the ſtairs, our brewhouſe joins the ſtairs, and I ſaw a boat with five men come on ſhore, and ſaw the priſoner coming up the alley adjoining to the brewhouſe, from the head of the alley to the water-ſide, I imagine to be between five and ſix rods.

How many yards was it?——I do not know, ſeventeen feet and a half are in a rod.

Has a perſon at the bottom of the ſtairs any way up into Wapping, but coming through that alley?——No, unleſs he came through our brewhouſe; I ſaw him come out of the alley into the ſtreet, and paſs me, I told him to ſtop, he did not ſtop, but ran paſt me; it is about as far through the compting-houſe to the ſtreet, as up the alley.

Had anybody run paſt you before him?——Nobody, they took down a place called the orchard, I followed, and caught him the corner of New Market-ſtreet; I ſaw Keys come up the alley as ſoon as I could get out of our compting-houſe, and out of the brewhouſe gates, and the priſoner was then coming out of the alley.

PRISONER KEY's DEFENCE.

I was going to Billingſgate, I belong to the Favourite, Greenland man, at Graveſend; as I was coming paſt Wapping New-ſtairs, I heard a great cry of thieves! I went down and a man came running paſt me with ſomething in his hand, I ſtood off one ſide, when he had got about thirty or forty yards a head of me, I made after him, and loſt ſight of him in New Gravel-lane, and them two gentlemen took me; I told them I was running after the thief, immediately they took me before the proſecutor and aſked him if I was one of the thieves, I was coming back when they ſtopped me; I was drinking about a quarter of an hour before, with an acquaintance, his name is Richard Hughes, he is not here.

Court. How came you not to ſtop, when Mr. Adams bid you ſtop at the bottom of the alley?——Nobody bid me ſtop at all.

SAMUEL NOBLE ſworn.

I am a waterman to Mr. Curtis's brewhouſe, I was getting ſome empty caſks out of my boat, which was under the key, at Mr. Curtis's brewhouſe, that is cloſe to the ſtairs, and I ſaw five people come and ruſh into the boat, and I was ſhoved down, but by who I cannot tell, mine was the leg-boat, the people were all cloſe together, they ruſhed into my boat out of a wherry, I heard the cry of ſtop thief! and in about five minutes after, I ſaw the wherry, ſhe was within three boats length of the boat I was in; I could not ſee any thing of the boat, ſhe came from under the craf, the coal craft hid her, they ruſhed into my boat, and from thence they jumped overboard upon the ſtairs; I ſaw one or two get up ſtairs, but there was ſuch a crowd and mob, I cannot tell who they were.

Do you or do you not know any of thoſe men?——There is a young fellow that I know, Romain, but he was not there at the time.

Did you or did you not know any one of the men that ruſhed in upon you?—I cannot ſay I do, I followed one of the men that went up the ſtairs, part of the way to the watch-houſe.

What became of him?——He was in cuſtody then, and going to be carried to the watch-houſe.

Which of the men was that?—I cannot ſwear what man it was, I could not cleverly look at him, I picked up an oil-ſkin hat of his, and put it on his head.

And do not you know whether either of theſe men is that man?——I cannot ſay indeed.

Court.

Court to Keys. Is there any body here to ſatisfy the Jury, that you was not on the river that night?——Only that young fellow, I have very few friends in London, I belong to Ireland.

PRISONER WOOD's DEFENCE.

I had been that night on board the Fortitude, Captain King, which ſhip I belong to; I was coming up to get ſome clean things, I heard the cry of ſtop thief, I jumped over the boat to ſee what was the matter, directly Duff came and caught hold of me, ſays he, you have ſhot a man, and I will make a new boat of you; I do not know whoſe boat it was, I paid two pence for my paſſage, my boat came from King-ſtairs, almoſt facing Wapping new ſtairs on the other ſide of the water.

What became of the waterman?—I do not know.

You all came in together to the ſtairs?—Yes, and I jumped out to ſee what was the matter when they took me; I came out of Exeter, I belong to a ſhip in the river, the Fortitude, Captain King, I have no acquaintance at all in London.

Where was you that evening?—I came from on board of the ſhip that evening at Deptford, the ſhip has ſince ſailed on her voyage.

Court to Jury. There is no evidence againſt Romain.

HENRY WOOD, GUILTY Death.

JOSEPH KEY, JAMES ROMAIN, } NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

447. JOHN WATKINS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 19th day of March laſt, one plate looking glaſs, value 5s. the property of Richard Upton.

Richard Upton was called on his recognizance, but not appearing, the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

448. JOHN TRAYNER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 16th day of March laſt, one check linen ſhirt, value 4s. the property of Philip Raby.

PHILIP RABY ſworn.

I am a ſlop-ſeller, on the 16th of March laſt, the priſoner and a woman came in to buy ſomething; I did not obſerve them at the firſt; there were ſome looſe jackets laying on the counter, and the priſoner ſaid to me, what is the price of them great coats, I ſaid, they are jackets; I ſhewed him the jackets, and he agreed to give me nine ſhillings for one, and the woman ſaid, he wanted ſome trowſers and ſhirts, I ſhewed them ſome different ſorts of ſhirts, and they laid out three, one of each ſort, and agreed for the price; the priſoner ſaid, he had no money, but would fetch it; I went after him in about a minute, and found him and kept at a diſtance, and when he came to the top of the ſtreet, he pulled out this ſhirt from under his great coat; it was not in paper, the ſame woman was with him, but ſhe run away.

(Produced and depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I bought the ſhirt of a woman, and gave her four ſhillings for it, and a pot of beer.

GUILTY.

To be confined to hard labour ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

449. JAMES

449. JAMES BRYAN CULLIEN was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 12th day of March laſt, one pair of thick-ſet breeches, value 1s. 6d. two cloth coats, value 18s. one fuſtian waiſtcoat, value 2s. 6d. one pair of leather boots, value 6s. one pair of leather breeches, value 10s. 6d. one pair of cotton ſtockings, value 2s. one linen ſhirt, value 1s. one pair of leather ſhoes, value 5s. one pair of worſted ſtockings, value 3s. and three muſlin neckcloths, value 3s. the property of John Crandell; two cotton caps, value 2s. one woollen cloth, value 1s. one ſilk and cotton waiſtcoat, value 12s. three cotton waiſtcoats, value 19s. three pair of worſted ſtockings, value 7s. three pair of worſted ſtockings, value 6s. one pair of breeches, value 17s. one linen ſhirt, value 6s. two handkerchiefs, value 1s. one pair of ſilver knee buckles, value 5s. one pair of leather ſhoes, value 5s. and one ſilk handkerchief, value 2s. the property of John Shingler.

And ELEANOR WELCH was indicted for feloniouſly receiving, on the 14th of March laſt, part of the ſaid goods, knowing them to have been ſtolen.

(The witneſſes examined apart.)

JOHN CRANDELL ſworn.

I am coachman to Mr. Milbank, on the 12th of March laſt, the priſoner called on me in the forenoon, as an acquaintance, I had ſeen him ſeveral times in Northamptonſhire, he ſaid he was going to a ſervice at Woolwich on Monday; this was on Saturday about four in the afternoon, I left him in the ſtable; afterwards I was coming out with my fellow ſervant Shingler, and I went to the back door of the ſtable, which communicates with the houſe, and I found it faſtened, it faſtens on the inſide: I thought my fellow ſervant had faſtened it, I went to the other door, and found that was alſo faſt, I ſtill thought it was my fellow ſervant: I found the ſtreet door open, and when I went in, I miſſed the things mentioned in the indictment.

PETER THOMAS ſworn.

I am one of the patrols belonging to Sir Sampſon Wright, ſome of theſe were given me, and I found great part of the things; I had the things from King-ſtreet, Wapping, from one Mrs. Barry, who is in Court: the priſoner was taken on Sunday night, the 13th of March.

Crandell. The priſoner had a pair of ſhoes of mine on.

(Depoſed to.)

The remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be publiſhed in a few Days.

E R R A T A.

In No. IV. Part I. page 541, lines 4, and 5, leave out the words "which was "parted from the ſkull underneath."—Line 15, for "maladies of membranes," read "me-"ninges or membranes."—Line 40, for "os bregnitis," read "os bregmatis."—In page 542, lines 23, and following, leave out the words "I believe that is the caſe of all wounds "by the removal of the ſcalp, where it is in a ſtate of putrefaction, the blood may come "down from that aperture."—Line 28, for "not externally," read "externally," and omit "not."—Line 4, ſecond column, for "but," read "when."

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 6th of APRIL 1785, and the following Days;
Being the FOURTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER IV. PART IV.

LONDON:
Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)
And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and
S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.
M.DCC.LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of James Bryan Cullien.

JOHN SHINGLER ſworn.

The priſoner gave me this note, it is his hand writing, I knew him before, I left him in the ſtable that night, he ſaid, he wanted to ſpeak to Crandell, he would ſtay till he came.

(The note read.)

"Call at William Barry's, next door to "the ſign of the White Swan, King-ſtreet, "Wapping; there you will find the flan-"nel cloth, a pair of boots, and a pair of "ſhoes."

Crandell. The priſoner was taken to the watch-houſe, and there he wrote down an account of where the things were. (Read.) "Aſk Mrs. Barry for Lilly Welch, and "deſire her to come to me directly; aſk "for thoſe things in the name of James "Brown."—we all three called at Barry's and found a great coat, and boots, and a thickſet pair of breeches; they were in two different bundles.

Priſoner. This gentleman ſaid, I was the perſon that locked the door of the ſtable inſide?——I cannot tell, I can tell the door was faſtened, and the outer door was not, at the ſame time you confeſſed yourſelf, Sir, that you was doing the buſineſs.

Priſoner. Did Mr. Milbank give you warning, or you give him warning?—Mr. Milbank gave the warning.

When you met me, did I offer to go away?——I took better care of you than that, for your ingratitude.

Priſoner. I gave him the note, he told me to get ſuch and ſuch things waſhed, he was going to Greenland along with me, and I took them to my wife, this priſoner is my wife.

Proſecutor. I never propoſed any ſuch thing, I have not left my ſervice yet, and my wife lives in High-ſtreet, Marybone; it is not likely.

HENRY TURNER ſworn.

I am a pawnbroker, I received a white waiſtcoat, a ſhirt, two neckcloths, and three pair of ſtockings, I received them of one Catherine Kelly.

(Depoſed to.)

CATHERINE KELLY ſworn.

I had thoſe things from the woman priſoner, ſhe lodged with me, I took her to be a very honeſt woman; ſhe told me ſhe was married, I uſed to call her Mrs. Briant, but I pawned the things with Mr. Turner, in the name of Eleanor Welch.

Court. Was that the man you always took to be her husband?——Yes.

MARGARET BARRY sworn.

I know the prisoners, the man lay one night at my house, the woman was not with him; I never saw her till the Sunday night after, the prisoner had a bundle that night, he said, he was too late, he asked me for a bed, and he got up in the morning, he got up and went on board a Greenland ship, the William and Ann.

Prisoner Cullien. I have nothing further to say, I have lived with Captain Frederick and Lady Harris at the King's Palace.

JACOB BRIANT CULLIEN, GUILTY.

Transported to Africa for seven years.

ELEANOR WELCH, NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice NARES.

---

450. ELIZABETH BARRY was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 13th day of March last, one linen shirt, value 7s. one apron, value 12d. the property of John Moriarte.

The prosecutor and witnesses were called on their recognizances, and not appearing, the prisoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

451. SAMUEL TOOME was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 6th day of March last, forty-two pounds weight of lead, value 5s. belonging to Christopher Lance, and then and there affixed to a certain building, there situate against the statute.

The prisoner was taken some distance from the house at an unseasonable time, and the lead was very near him:—he had a good character.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

452. FRANCIS COOK and ABRAHAM SLATER were indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 23d day of March last, two live fowls, value 2s. and one leather saddle, value 1s. the property of William Murrell.

WILLIAM MURRELL sworn.

I keep the Castle, at Kentish town, I missed my fowls out of my stable; about five in the morning I was called up, and I overtook the prisoners with the things on them: Slater had the saddle, Cook had a bag with a cock and a hen, which belonged to me, they were speckled fowls, I had them from chickens, they were a year old, I can swear to them; the saddle was mine, I imagine they got over the gates.

WILLIAM CHALKLEY sworn.

I was going to milking, and I saw two men go towards this stable, and I saw another come with a sack on his back as I thought, the other came from towards the stables, I gave information to the prosecutor, seeing the door open; I do not know that the prisoners were the two men.

PRISONER COOK's DEFENCE.

I went out early this morning with my brother, who was going to Liverpool, and I parted with him at the one mile-stone, and this man overtook him with the things mentioned in the indictment, and he asked me to carry the bag, I did not think any harm in it, and in a hundred yards they stopped me.

PRI-

PRISONER SLATER's DEFENCE.

About a quarter of a mile from the place I found the bag and the ſaddle, and I overtook this young man, and aſked him to carry the bag for me, I have no friends within three hundred miles, I came out of Lancaſhire.

Proſecutor. Upon Slater, I found a tinder box and ſteel, and a knife.

BOTH GUILTY.

Each to be tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

453. GEORGE CHANDLER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 11th of March laſt, one pound and two ounces weight of green tea, value 4s. the property of the United Company of Merchants, trading to the Eaſt Indies.

JOHN GRIFFITHS ſworn.

I am a Cuſtom-houſe-officer, at Parker's garden and warehouſes, belonging to the Eaſt India Houſe, on the 11th of March, I took a parcel of Hyſon tea, one pound and two ounces, out of the pocket of the priſoner, it was looſe; he is a Company's labourer.

JAMES BISHOP ſworn.

I am one of the Company's labourers, I was in the warehouſes, and I ſaw the priſoner take the tea out of the cheſt, and put it in his pocket, there were four or five people on the ſame floor: we were going up to work, we had not begun, I gave notice firſt to Mr. Butcher, and then to Mr. Griffiths, I ſaw the tea taken out of his pocket, it belongs to the Company, it was unſold tea.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council. How many people were in the warehouſe at this time?—Four, five, or ſix.

Did they ſtand near the priſoner?—Not very near, they were on the ſame floor.

How near?—As far again as I may be from you.

WILLIAM FELTSTREAD ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner take the tea out of the cheſt, and put it into his pocket.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I gathered the tea about the place, I did not take it out of the cheſt.

Court. You as a labourer about there, knew very well you had no right to take any tea that was there.

The priſoner called four witneſſes, who gave him a very good character.

GUILTY.

Upon the recommendation of the Jury, to be privately whipped and confined to hard labour ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

454. SAMUEL LYON and ANN JONES were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 22d day of March laſt, one gold ring, value 2s. 6d. the property of James Gaunt.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

455. MARGARET COLLINS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 14th day of February, one woollen blanket, value, 2s. one tin ſaucepan, value 4d. one bolſter, value 18d. one looking-glaſs, value 5s. twenty pounds weight of bed feathers, value 5s. the property of Mary Lewis, ſpinſter, being in a certain lodging room, let to the ſaid Margaret, by the ſaid Mary, and and to be uſed by her with the ſaid lodging room, againſt the ſtatute.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

456. DAVID BATTY was indicted for that he, on the 1ſt day of December laſt, feloniouſly and falſly did make, forge, and counterfeit, and cauſe and procure to be falſly made, forged, and counterfeited, and did willingly act and aſſiſt in the falſe making, forging, and counterfeiting, a certain paper writing, partly printed and partly written, purporting to be an Inland Bill of Exchange, for the payment of money, bearing date, Norwich, November 3d, 1784; and to have been drawn by Charles Davis for payment of the ſum of ſix pounds ſix ſhillings to Charles Readhead, or order, at two month after date, directed to Mr. J. Dicknor, and Co. No. 21, Duke-ſtreet, Mancheſter-ſquare, London; accepted J. D. and Co. with intent to defraud John Dutton.

A ſecond count, for uttering the ſame knowing it to be forged.

The Proſecutor and witneſſes not appearing the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

457. GEORGE GILLING was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 19th of March laſt, one ſilver ſnuffer ſtand, value 3s. the property of Joſeph Fakeney, Eſq.

JOSEPH FAKENEY, Eſq; ſworn.

On Saturday the 19th of March, I loſt a ſilver ſnuffer ſtand, but how it was conveyed out of the houſe, I only know by hearſay; I believe it will be neceſſary for me to mention the manner in which the priſoner was apprehended; I ſhould not have taken ſo much notice of this trifling matter, but on the Wedneſday following, I loſt a conſiderable quantity of plate in the ſame manner, and I did not know, but it might be the ſame man in a different garb: I ſaw the priſoner on the Monday following, one John Lee, a conſtable, ſaw the priſoner before the Juſtice upon another charge, and ſent for me; the priſoner at firſt denied it, but afterwards he ſaid, it did not ſignify, I did take it; and immediately after that I had it conveyed to a perſon whom I do not know whether I ſhould name, it is a common receiver, and ſays he, I received fifteen and ſixpence for it; there were no promiſes or threats made to him in the leaſt.

MARY COOK ſworn.

I am cook to Mr. Fakeney, I know the priſoner, I am ſure of him, I ſaw him in my maſter's paſſage the 19th of January, he came there with a fooliſh excuſe, and ſaid my maſter had ordered in ſome coals, it was ſeven in the evening; he rang at the bell, I opened the door, he ſaid, he came from Mr. Steel, I told him Mr. Wilks ſerved us with coals; he ſaid, Mr. Wilks and Mr. Steel were partners; I ſaid, I could ſay nothing at all to it, as my maſter was not at home; he ſaid, he was going a little further and would call again preſently, he returned in ten minutes, I told him my maſter was not come in, he then ſaid, it was a very cold night, and he was very dry, would I give him a little ſmall beer, which I went to draw; when I came up, he was gone, and the ſtreet door left open; the parlour door was open, as it was when he came.

JOHN LEE ſworn.

I took a deſcription of the priſoner, and I took him, and as ſoon as Mary Cook ſaw him, ſhe declared he was the very perſon.

JOHN EDWARDS ſworn.

I was at the Caſtle, in Cow-croſs, on Saturday night, eating ſome ſupper with my father; and the priſoner came and called me out, he ſaid, Jack, I have got a piece of plate here, he ſhewed it me, it was a ſilver ſnuffer ſtand, he aſked me to ſell it; I aſked him where he got it, he ſaid at firſt he found it; I took and ſold it to one Votier, who is not in cuſtody.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I did take it, and I went down to Cowcroſs, and this man ſaid, he would ſell it for me, and he went and ſold it in Sharp's-alley, to one Iſaac Votier, and he came again, and ſaid, ſtop a little.

Court. Did any body ſet you on doing this before hand?—No, pleaſe your Lordſhip, I did it for want; I never did ſuch a thing before, I have been out of work a long while, I work in the coal work.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

458. JOSEPH INGRAM was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 23d day of March laſt, one iron bar, value 5s. belonging to Richard Ruſſell and Edward Slater, and then and there fixed to a certain building, called a glaſs-houſe, there ſituate.

The watchman ſtopped the priſoner with the bar, which was hot.

GUILTY.

Privately whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

459. HENRY JAMES was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 5th of April, one hundred and one pounds weight of mutton, value 39s. the property of Thomas Cator.

The priſoner was taken offering the carcaſe to ſale to Nathaniel Cooper.

GUILTY.

To be whipped and confined to hard labour twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

460. DANIEL HUGGINS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 29th day of March, one wooden till, value 6d. and five ſhillings and ſix pence in money numbered, the property of John Daviſon.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

461. The ſaid DANIEL HUGGINS was again indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 29th day of March laſt, one cat-block, made of wood and iron, value 20s. the property of William Gaſton.

JANE HUNT ſworn.

I was in the compting-houſe of Mr. Gaſton, on the 29th of March, in the afternoon, while the men were gone to dinner; and whilſt I was there, ſomebody called out, that a man had ſtole one of the blocks that hung at the door; I ran and ſaw the priſoner taken with the block on his ſhoulder; it was my maſter's, it hung at the door, and there was a block miſſing from the door; I went in danger of my life, and the priſoner was very rude; I ſtopped him, and ſhut him up in the compting-houſe, and kept him there till Francis came.

——— FRANCIS ſworn.

I aſſiſted in taking the priſoner.

Priſoner.

Prisoner. I was asked to carry a load.

GUILTY.

Whipped and confined twelve months in the House of Correction.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

462. GEORGE WILKINSON was indicted for feloniously assaulting John Clark, on the King's highway, on the 9th of March last, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniously taking from his person, and against his will, four linen shirts, value 20s. and one linen stock, value 1s. a pair of worsted stockings, value 3s. and six linen handkerchiefs, value 6s. the property of James Grant.

(The witnesses examined apart at the request of the prisoner.)

JOHN CLARK.

Court. How old are you?——Ten.

What is your name?——John Clark.

Do you know what you came here for?——I do not know.

Who has done you any harm?—George Wilkinson.

Where do you live?—In Swallow-street, St. James's, Piccadilly.

What friends have you?—An uncle and aunt.

No father or mother?——No.

Have you been to school?——No.

Have you been learned to read?——I have learned to read at home.

To whom?—To my uncle and aunt.

Can you say your catechism?——No.

Jury. Do you say your prayers of a night?——Yes.

Court. Will you be sure to speak the truth?—Yes.

Remember that you are to speak the truth, and nothing but the truth?—Yes.

Court. Swear him.

JOHN CLARK sworn.

Court. What is your uncle?——A hair-dresser and peruke-maker.

Had you any thing taken from you?—Yes.

When was it?—The 9th of March.

What part of the day?——Between six and seven.

In the morning or evening?——In the evening.

What day of the week was that?——A Wednesday.

Where was you going?——Into Swallow-street.

From where?—From Catherine-street.

Was you going home?——Yes.

Whereabouts was you attacked?—Just in Bridge's-street.

What had you with you?—A bundle of clothes.

Where had you brought them from?—From Mr. English's.

Where did he live?—The bottom of Catherine-street.

Had you been sent for the clothes?——Yes.

Who sent you?——My aunt.

What orders had you from your aunt?—I was told to go and fetch them, and take care of the things.

What things?—The things to wash.

For who?——For the gentleman.

What gentleman?——The gentleman that lost the things, that lives at Mr. English's, his name is Grant.

How came you to be sent for them?——Because my aunt wanted to wash the next day.

Was you by yourself?——Yes.

What happened to you in Bridge's-street?—A man threw down a penny, and snatched the bundle.

Did he meet you, or come behind you?——He met me.

Which side of the way was you going?——The left hand.

Did he speak to you first?——No.

Did he speak to you when he threw down the penny?——No.

Where

Where did he throw the penny?—Juſt facing of what-do-ye-call-it court.

In the foot-way, or in the road?——In the path-way.

How was you carrying the bundle when he ſnatched it?—I was carrying it in my hand.

Which hand?—In my left hand.

Did you pick up the penny?—Yes.

What became of the man?—I purſued him.

But you ſtaid to pick up the penny firſt?——Yes.

Which way did the man go?——Acroſs the way.

Which way did he go then?—He ran into Ruſſel-court.

Did you overtake him, or did you loſe him?—I overtook him.

Where did you overtake him?——In the court.

In Ruſſel-court?——Yes.

Where was your bundle when you overtook him?——I do not know.

Had he your bundle?—No, Sir, he had not it then.

When you overtook him, what did you do then?—Why he was taken, Sir.

Did you cry out?—Yes, Sir.

What did you ſay?—I cried out, ſtop thief!

What became of the bundle, can you tell?——No, Sir.

Did you ever get your bundle again?—No, Sir; we heard it was ſold for ſeven ſhillings and ſix-pence.

By whom?——By another man.

Did you ſee more than one man?—Yes, there were three men.

Did they all three come up at once to you?—Yes.

Did either of them talk to you?—No.

Did they bid you take the penny?——No.

How came you then to ſtoop to take it up?——I took it.

Did you give them your bundle, or did they take it?——They took it.

Do you mean againſt your will?——Yes.

What was in the bundle?—Four ſhirts, one ſtock, a pair of ſtockings, and ſix handkerchiefs.

Did you ſee the bundle tied up?—Yes.

Who do the things belong to?—To Mr. Grant.

Had you ever ſeen Mr. Grant before?—Yes.

Who was the man that was ſtopped that you purſued?—George Wilkinſon.

Do you know him?—Yes, that is the man.

Do you know that he was one of the three men that ſtopped you?—Yes, he was one of them, he threw down the penny.

You are quite ſure he was one of the men?——Yes.

Who was it ſnatched the bundle?—That man.

How came you to know which way he was gone?—Becauſe I kept ſight of him.

What when you was ſtooping down to pick up the penny?—Yes, I kept ſight of him.

You was going from Ruſſel-court?——Yes.

You was in your way home?——Yes.

Which way was you turned when you ſtooped to pick up the penny?—Towards Ruſſel-court.

Then you could ſee him at the ſame time you picked up the penny?—Yes.

Was he never out of your ſight?—No.

Was not he out of your ſight when he got into the court?——No.

In what ſtreet is Ruſſel-court?——In Bridge's-ſtreet.

How far from the court was it that the penny was thrown down?——Juſt facing the court.

JAMES GRANT ſworn.

I remember this child coming to Mr. Engliſh's for ſome linen; I delivered to him the things mentioned in the indictment; I knew nothing of the fact till I was ſent for the next morning up to Bow-ſtreet; I never ſaw my property any more.

WIL-

WILLIAM MARTIN ſworn.

On Wedneſday, the 9th of March, I was ſtanding in Drury-lane, talking with an acquaintance, oppoſite White Hart-yard, between ſix and ſeven, and that gentleman came out running.

Who do you mean by that gentleman?—The priſoner; he came out of Ruſſel-court, and they cried out, ſtop thief; and the boy he came crying, and ſaid, that man has got my bundle; I ſuppoſe there were twenty or thirty people after him; the boy was about twenty or thirty yards behind him; I followed him down White Hart-yard, and caught hold of him in Clare-court.

What pace did he go?——He ran as hard as he could run; we took him to Mr. Young's, a tobacconiſt, and brought the boy to him, the boy had a penny in his hand; ſays the boy, take your penny, and give me my bundle; the priſoner ſaid, he had not his bundle; ſays he, you have given it to one of the two men that was with you; no, ſays the boy, you took it from me. The priſoner ſaid, at Sir Sampſon Wright's, that the boy ſaid he was going to fetch a penny-worth of butter for his mother; and the boy ſaid, he did not ſay any ſuch thing, for, he ſaid, his mother lived at No. 20, in Swallow-ſtreet.

Court. His mother?——He called her his mother at that time, but it is his aunt.

Priſoner. The boy was quite in a different ſtory before, at Sir Sampſon Wright's, they have had him this month, and been training him up; I am as innocent of it as a child unborn; I know nothing of it.

Court. Have you anybody to ſpeak for you?——I had a perſon juſt now in the Bail-dock, and I have ſent him for my maſter.

What trade are you?—A coach-wheel-wright; I work in Swallow-ſtreet, where the boy ſays he lives.

Then you have nobody here?——Not a ſoul, to my knowledge.

How came you to be running?—I was not running; that is not the gentleman that ſtopped me.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing, but not violently.

Tranſported for ſeven Years to Africa.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

463. SARAH WHITEHEAD, HANNAH TAYLOR, and MARGARET GARDENER were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 24th of March laſt, two pieces of printed cotton, containing thirteen yards, value 20s. the property of John Fieldſend, privily in his ſhop.

WILLIAM WOOD ſworn.

I am ſhopman to the proſecutor, he is a linen-draper, No. 25, Oxford-ſtreet; I remember the three priſoners very well, I have frequently ſee them come to our ſhop, ſometimes two came together, and ſomerimes three; they came to deal, and did deal, on the 24th of March they came into our ſhop, and wanted to buy a little printed cotton for a bedgown; I ſhewed them two pieces, and they did not approve of them; I then ſhewed them four pieces more, and we ſoon bargained for three yards; that is a pattern for a bedgown; they paid for that, and went away; I looked over my patterns, and as ſoon as they were gone I miſſed two pieces of prints, I told my fellow ſhopman to go after them, and they were brought back, and one of them dropped one piece, and the other dropped another piece; I ſaw Gardener drop one piece, and Whitehead another.

Court. Are you ſure the other woman was with them?——I am ſure of it, ſhe bought the bedgown; the other two ſaid they came along with her; they did not aſk to buy anything; theſe were the firſt two pieces I ſhewed them, here is my maſter's mark on one of them, in my maſter's own hand writing.

(Depoſed to.)

What is the value of thoſe two pieces? ——Twenty ſhillings both; one 9s. 6d. and the other 10s. 6d.

WILLIAM GOLDSMITH ſworn.

I was going down Oxford-ſtreet, and juſt as I came to the proſecutor's I ſaw theſe three women coming out of the ſhop; I did not know them before, but I am poſitive theſe are the women; I followed them, and at the corner of Rathbone-place I ſaw Margaret Gardener drop a piece of cotton, that was one door from the ſhop, it dropped from under her petticoats, and I ſaw the priſoner Sarah Whitehead picked it up; ſhe put it under her apron, and walked off till ſhe came to the next turning, then ſhe ſet a running as faſt as ſhe could run; the other two followed her very ſlowly till they came to the turning, then they mended their pace after her; I told the proſecutor, and he ſaid they had robbed him of a piece of cotton; the young man had overtaken them while I went into the ſhop; I did not ſee the young man at all, till he was coming back; I ſaw them brought back, and Margaret Gardener who dropped the piece before, dropped another piece; and I ſaid, you have dropped another piece from under your clothes; and ſhe ſaid, what I? I ſaid, yes, you have; the piece was taken up, it laid under the compter; I did not ſay any thing to her about dropping a piece before.

Priſoner. He ſaid before the Juſtice, he ſaw the other woman drop it, and pick it up.——I did not.

THOMAS KING ſworn.

I was going of an errand to Well-ſtreet, and ſtanding oppoſite to Rathbone-place, I ſaw Whitehead drop a piece of linen or cotton, and ſhe took it up herſelf; I informed Mr. Wood of it; the young man went after them directly, I did not ſee him overtake them; I was in the ſhop, I ſaw them come back, we met the young man and the three priſoners coming back, I am ſure thoſe are the three; ſhe dropped it in the croſſing Rathbone-place.

Court to Goldſmith. When did you ſee her drop it?—At the ſame time, but there were two pieces dropped ſeparate.

PRISONER TAYLOR's DEFENCE.

I was out ſelling apples and things, and I ſaw this young woman; I told her I was going to buy a bit of cotton for a bedgown, I knew the priſoners before, as we all deal at market; they both went in with me, and I bought this for a bedgown; after I paid him we all three came out of the ſhop together; I ſaw no cotton, nor any thing; walking together in Hanover-yard, a gentleman came after me, and I went back with him readily.

SARAH WHITEHEAD's DEFENCE.

I had nothing about me, I went with this young woman to buy the cotton, and lent her three ſhillings to pay for it; I went back, knowing myſelf innocent.

MARGARET GARDENER's DEFENCE.

We met Taylor, and went with her, and each bought ſome, and ſhe dropped her piece of cotton out of her hand, and this young woman picked it up, and gave it to her; I never ſaw any other cotton; the piece of cotton the gentleman ſays I had, he ſaid before the Juſtice he picked it up between two women in black cloaks in his ſhop.

S. WHITEHEAD, M. GARDENER, } GUILTY, Death.

H. TAYLOR, NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

464. THOMAS SIMMS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 26th day of March laſt, two yards of painted floor-cloth, cloth, value 9s. the property of John Barnes.

The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoner.

JOHN BARNES ſworn.

I live the corner of Bow-ſtreet, Bloomſbury; I only ſpeak to the property; I loſt two yards of floor-cloth; Edward Wallis brought it in.

EDWARD WALLIS ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Barnes; a perſon came into the ſhop and ſaid, there is a piece of cloth of yours ſtolen; I immediately made after the priſoner, and took him the corner of Bloomſbury, with the property upon him, he had it under his arm; I told him, that is my maſter's; he ſaid it is not; I ſaid, it is, I immediately took him to the Juſtice's.

Who has had the care of it?—It was two days in the public-houſe, in the cellar, I wrote my name at the top of it when I took it from him; it is written in ink on the cloth, it has been in my cuſtody all but thoſe two days; I ſaw it in the ſhop ſome days before; I ſaw it the day it was loſt.

Mr. Silveſter, Priſoner's Counſel. Mr. Wallis, that cloth you marked, is the cloth you took from the priſoner?—Yes.

But before that, was there any mark upon it?——All the mark was, that there was a piece cut out of it, no particular mark beſides.

It is a remnant, is it not?—Yes.

You had a remnant in your ſhop?——Yes.

Do not you ſell floor-cloths for any room?——Yes.

Then they are cut to any ſhape that is wanted?——Yes.

Was there any ſhop mark, or any writing upon that cloth that you loſt out of your ſhop?——There is the King's ſtamp.

Then you know it by the King's ſtamp?——Yes.

Did you ever ſee any floor-cloth without the King's ſtamp?——No.

ALICE NEWTON ſworn.

I know this to be my maſter's cloth, by this bit being cut out of it; I ſaw it about an hour before it was miſſed; I do not know any thing about cutting out the piece, but I obſerved it was cut out before it was loſt.

Do you ever ſerve in the ſhop?——Yes, ſometimes.

You particularly obſerved that piece had been cut out ſo?——It was cut out for the paſſage where it was laid down.

Mr. Silveſter. You went to the gentleman's houſe where it was cut off?——No, Sir.

How do you know it was cut off for the paſſage?—The man ſaid ſo.

Where is the man that laid down the floor-cloth?—He is not here, he is a carpenter, he worked for my maſter, and he cut it off; I do not know his name.

Do you know every piece of cloth in your maſter's ſhop?——Yes, I do.

How many pieces are there?——I cannot ſay, there are a great many pieces.

Do you know how any other of them are cut?—They are generally cut ſtraight.

Court to Wallis. Who cut that piece off?——A man that worked for me, a carpenter, I ſaw the piece when he brought it back, he took the piece out with him, and the piece was cut ſo, I painted it.

How much of this kind had you painted before?—Many thouſand yards.

And how many thouſand yards of this kind are there about town, of your painting?—I cannot ſay.

Court. Are you certain you painted that?——Yes.

Court to Wallis. Do you remember that piece going out of your ſhop to be fitted any where?——No.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going up Broker's-alley, to Drury-lane, there was a broker who ſtood at the door, and a man was ſelling a piece of floor-cloth, it meaſured two yards and almoſt a quarter; the broker offered the man man ſix ſhillings for it; I ſtood by when the man was coming away, I offered ſeven ſhillings; he ſaid, you ſhall have it; I gave him two half crown pieces, and two ſhillings; he ſaid his name was John Harris, and was to be found at the Feathers, in Holborn; I took it under my arm, and the witneſs ſtopped me; the proſecutor ſaid at the Juſtice's, he did not know how many yards there were; they none of them knew the contents of the piece; then I was brought out of the Juſtice's again, and Mr. Barnes inſiſted upon taking it from the conſtable, into his poſſeſſion; then he took it home, and kept it two days and two nights, and brought it back to the Juſtice's; then he ſwore to it; then the Juſtice aſked the girl, and the man, whether I was running or walking; they ſaid, walking, very gentle.

Mr. Barnes. When I was before the Juſtice, I knew it to be my property and work, but I could not tell what was left of it.

Court to Wallis. Where was this kept?

Proſecutor. I took it from the conſtable, who had no buſineſs with it; and I gave it to Wallis.

Did he ſay then how he came by it?—Not to me he did not.

Did you hear him ſay it to anybody?—I heard him ſay it before the Juſtice, that he bought it.

Did he ſay of whom?—No, I did not hear in particular who he ſaid he bought it of.

Proſecutor. I was not there before Monday.

Did he ſay what he had given for it?—I think he ſaid three ſhillings and ſix-pence for it.

For the whole of it?—Yes.

Are you ſure of that?—Yes.

How near was it to the proſecutor's where you took him?——About a hundred yards.

Mr. Silveſter. What ſtreet was it in?—In Hart-ſtreet.

Priſoner. It is above a quarter of a mile from the place.

Court to Priſoner. Then you know the proſecutor's ſhop, do you?——I have ſeen the ſhop before, I have been paſt it a hundred times.

Court to Proſecutor. How far was it from your ſhop?——Between one hundred and two hundred yards.

Court to Wallis. How came you to go in purſuit of him?—I was told of it by a young woman, that came into the houſe; I followed in about five minutes, I ſaw it about a day or two before.

Priſoner. Here was a man here that ſaw me buy the cloth, his name is George Trotter.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

465. WILLIAM ANDERSON and THOMAS SAMS (a child between eleven and twelve) were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 2d of March laſt, eighty-four pounds weight of lead, value 10s. the property of Thomas Humſton, then and there affixed to a certain building belonging to the ſaid Thomas, againſt the ſtatute.

THOMAS HUMSTON ſworn.

I live in Tufton-ſtreet, Weſtminſter, the building where the lead was taken from, is in Baker-ſtreet, Enfield town; it is a houſe of mine: I went down to Enfield on Wedneſday the 2d of March, being informed that two boys were taken up, on ſuſpicion of ſtealing ſome lead at Edmonton, by Mr. Brown and Mr. Erwood; on the Thurſday morning I went there, the perſon had quitted the houſe, and left the priſoner Anderſon in care of it, my tenant had failed; I went on the outſide, for I could could not get into it, but I was informed the boys were both to be examined at Mr. Wilmot's; on the Saturday following I went there, and the father and mother both were there, and the father had got the key of the house from the big boy, who had been left in possession of it; on the Sunday following I went down with Mr. Brown, and we went up in the house, we got out of the garret window, there are seven dormer windows, with flat caps of lead going to the south parapet wall; I missed a great deal of lead, that was all gone, likewise some more lead at the end of the gutter; one of the dormer windows was totally stripped, we measured that window, and tried the measure by the lead, and it corresponded exactly, it fitted the nail holes, and every thing.

JOHN BROWN sworn.

I live at Edmonton, I am a plumber and glazier, and I happened to be the constable; the prisoner Sams came to my house, to know if I would buy some lead, that was the 2d of March, he said a gentleman had failed in the house, and his mother had wanted for him, and the gentleman had given them lead out of a cooler, he said the plumber at Endfield would not give them money enough, and his father was at the Rose and Crown, I told him to bring it, and he brought it the same morning; I informed Mr. Erwood, the Churchwarden; I opened the lead, and saw what it was, and in going out of the house, along with the prisoner Sams, he pointed to the other prisoner, says he, that is my brother, he was waiting at the corner of the street for Sams, the lead was three quarters weight, he brought it to me wrapped up in a garden matt; Anderson directly as soon as he saw Mr. Erwood and me coming, ran up the street, he was stopped; I examined it afterwards, and it is the lead that came off that dormer window, which the prosecutor mentioned; I have the particular marks of the dots of the solder, which I can mention, the nails in taking it off, are drawn out, here are the nails that answer to the solder.

JOHN ERWOOD sworn.

On the 2d of March last, Mr. Brown the plumber came to my house, and informed me as he has told you; I went with him to his shop, and there I saw the prisoner Sams, I asked him where he got that lead, he said it was his father's, and his father got it out of a cooler, I saw it was never in a cooler, says I, you rogue you have stole it, he made no answer, he said his father was at the ale-house; we went to take the father, coming out I saw a man begin to run away, says the young one there is my father, that is he that is running, when I took him, he said he was no father to him, says he, it is my brother, however since I find they are no kin at all: I brought them to my house, and the prisoner Anderson confessed he had stole this lead, and told me where he had taken it from, I promised him no favour, I told him I was sure he had stole it, he said he took it from the back front of the house, he did not say whether it was a door or window; I know nothing of the two boys, the livery at Endfield.

How old is the oldest?——I do not know.

PRISONER ANDERSON'S DEFENCE.

The gentleman that I lived with had a misfortune, he failed in his business, he had his goods sold, and he made over the lease of his house, which had five years to come, to one Mr. Thorley; I went to Waltham Stow, and when I returned, several people told me not to go in, for they had seen a man about the premises; I saw the lead lay there, I brought the lead and laid it in the garden, and two or three days after I took it to sell.

PRISONER SAM's DEFENCE.

This gentleman came up from out of the country, the day the trial was coming on; one morning as I was going by, he called me to go into the houſe with him, and we found the lead in the houſe; we ſaw three foot ſteps of a man in the garden, then we took it to Mr. Brown to ſell.

WILLIAM ANDERSON, GUILTY.

Whipped, and confined twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

THOMAS SAMS, GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

466. JOSEPH BOWLAS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 28th of February, one cloth great coat, value 10s. the goods of the Right Honourable Welbore Ellis, privily in his ſtable.

EDWARD WELLER ſworn.

I am coachman to the Honourable Welbore Ellis; between the 28th of February, and the 1ſt of March, a great coat belonging to him was loſt out of my ſtable; I came in about half paſt eight, on the 28th of February, and hung up my great coat, and I miſſed it the next day; in the courſe of three or four days, I was ſent for to the Juſtice's, there I found it; it was very much broke, and wore under the arm, I can ſwear to the coat; I never ſaw the priſoner till I ſaw him at the Juſtice's.

Was your ſtable door locked or opened? —It is always open when we clean the carriage, but locked when we are not there, I received it from Blacketer.

WILLIAM BLACKETER ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner ſtanding with two more, with the great coat under his arm, that was the 28th of February, beteen eight and nine in the evening, after the office was over, he was ſtanding in the paſſage, joining to the watering houſe in St. Giles's, I went up to look who it was, I was not certain whether it was the priſoner, and as ſoon as he ſaw me come up to him, he run away, and he flung the box coat at the back of the water tub, and I purſued him, and I fell down, it was very ſlippy, he got up, I told him, ſays I, I know you perfectly well, and if I do not take you now, I ſhall take you at another time; he was taken about a week or a fortnight after by Dixon and Mumford, I am quite ſure of the man, I took the coat.

Mr. Peatt Priſoner's Council. How long have you known the priſoner?——This twelve month.

How came you there?——I go by frequently.

By whoſe deſire was you there?——By my own deſire, going along about my buſineſs.

Do you know where the priſoner lives? ——I know he works there, but I do not know where he lives.

Is not his maſter's houſe near there?—— Yes.

Are you connected at all with the gentlemen at the Public Office, in Litchfield-ſtreet?—I know them all, I met him promiſcuouſly.

Do you know Mr. Meſſenger?—Yes.

What is the priſoner?—I always looked upon him to be a waterman.

Is it uſual for ſuch men to take care of great coats?—I believe it is.

What converſation paſſed between you and Meſſenger, concerning this man?—— None at all.

He did not deſire you to fix this man with this property?——Never.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

Two men came by on the Monday night, and called me out of the public houſe, and aſked me to buy a great coat, yes, ſays I if it is worth my money, I gave him half-a-crown directly, and he pulled it off his back; Blacketer ſaid you have been on this rigg a good while, and Mr. Meſſenger ſhall do for you, if it coſt him thirty pounds; I have witneſſes that Mrs. Meſſenger ſent for for me, and ſaid I will learn you to falſe ſwear againſt my huſband; theſe two men came innocently to me, and called me out, and in a minute or two after Blacketer was behind.

(The priſoner's witneſſes ordered to be examined apart.)

THOMAS HART ſworn.

I am a coachman.

Mr. Peatt. Where do you live?——At preſent at St. Giles's, with Mr. Monk; I have been waterman there lately.

Do you know Meſſenger?—Yes.

A gentleman of Litchfield Office?——Yes Sir, I believe he is Uſually called a runner?—Yes.

Court. Were you preſent when the priſoner was taken up by Blacketer?—No.

THOMAS LEWIS ſworn.

I am a coach joiner, I live in St. Giles's, at the Roſe and Crown, I work for Mr. M'Dougal, I know ſo far as this, I was in the public houſe, drinking a pint of beer, two men came in and called the priſoner out, that was on the 28th of March, about eight at night.

Court. What day of the week was it?—I cannot ſay.

How do you know it was on the 28th of March?—I took notice of it when he was taken up.

How long was this night before the priſoner was taken up?——I do not know, I remember hearing he was taken up.

How do you know what day of the month it was?—I heard ſay it was the 28th of March.

Who had you heard ſay ſo?—I remember the word being ſpoke.

When?—A week ago.

Who ſpoke it?—I heard it ſpoke in the room, nobody told me to ſpeak about it, I heard it in his maſter's room, where the priſoner worked.

Who were preſent when the 28th of March was talked of?——Several people were preſent.

Name ſome of them?——They are not here now.

Who were they?——They were ſtrange people to me.

What was they ſaying about the 28th of March?—They were talking about Bowlas, about his being taken up, I do not know any otherways, only by that.

Then it might be a twelvemonth ago for anything you know?—Yes.

Be careful of what you ſay, if you ſwear falſe, I ſhall order you to be committed?—I was at the Roſe and Crown, in Broad Saint Giles's, and a man opened the tap room door, and called Bowlas out, he was ſitting by the fire in a chair, drinking, he was a waterman; we had done work, he had not been out five minutes before he came in again by himſelf, he brought nothing in with him, I did not go out with him at all, I ſaw nothing afterwards.

—— MONK ſworn.

I keep the watering houſe, I have known the priſoner ſeven or eight months, I am his maſter, he always behaved very well ſince he worked for me, he was very ſober and diligent.

Court. What character does he bear as to honeſty?——I cannot ſay I ever found him guilty of any miſdemeanor in my life, he might have robbed me, he has carried forty and fifty pounds of mine at a time.

JOHN BURGESS ſworn.

I have known him theſe twelve months, never heaid any thing but an honeſt character, he has watered my horſes, and taken care of my coach, I never heard any harm of him in my life.

CHARLES DRURY ſworn.

I am a coach maſter, have known him a twelvemonth, never knew any thing but an honeſt character of him.

Priſoner. At the time the men brought the coat to me for ſale, my maſter was preſent, and Mr. Blacketer declared the ſame before the Juſtice.

Blacketer

Blacketer. I ſaw the priſoner ſtanding with two men, but I heard no converſation.

GUILTY 10d.

Whipped.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

467. GEORGE PIDGEON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 18th day of March laſt, one mare of a brown colour, price 4l. the property of John Carter.

JOHN CARTER ſworn.

I live in Park-ſtreet, Groveſnor-ſquare, I am a cow-keeper; I loſt my mare out of my cow-yard, near where Tyburn uſed to be; I miſſed her between three and four in the morning.

Was ſhe ſuffered to run looſe in the yard?——No, ſhe was in the ſtable.

Was the ſtable locked?——Yes, they took off the pantiles as I believe, and forced open the door when they were within ſide; I loſt a bridle, ſaddle, and whip, I ſaw her about ſix on the 18th, ſhe was a brown mare, ſeven years old, I have had her four years; I found her on the Saturday, in the hands of a watchman at Whitechapel turnpike, I firſt ſaw her at Mr. Glenton's, the Three Mackrell, at Mile-End.

—— GLENTON ſworn.

How came you by that mare?—Between five and ſix or a little after ſix, William Thornlow, one of our watchmen, brought the mare down to my houſe; I ordered him to detain the party, and put the mare into my ſtables; I am night conſtable.

WILLIAM THORNLOW ſworn.

I am watchman, on Saturday morning the 19th of March, I ſaw the priſoner ſtanding at the turnpike gate, at Mile End, Old-town, putting on a bit of a thong upon a whip, it was a little before five, I went and called the hour of five, the ſame time; the priſoner rode off, he had a horſe with him, then he came back again for ſome tools which he left: he ſaid, he was going to ſweep a chimney, and while I went my rounds, he was gone off with the mare; I ſtopped the tools, and about ten minutes after ſix, he came back on the mare, and ſaid, he wanted his tools; he came to Mile End watch-houſe for his tools.

What tools?—A ſack, a chimney-cloth, and ſhovel, I had ſtopped them at the turnpike houſe, he had left them there, and he came to enquire for me, to know what was become of them, he wanted to go and do the job he was going about [illegible] took him in cuſtody, he was upon the mare's back, and I took him to the watch-houſe, whip, bridle, ſaddle and all; I diſmounted him and took him to Mr. Glentons.

JOHN M'GUIRE ſworn.

I am another watchman, I was with the laſt witneſs when he took the mare and the man, he told me he brought the mare from Wyſbeach, in Cambridgeſhire, and that he bought her two years ago of one Smith, a ſaddler in the town, and paid nine guineas for her; I know Cambridge, and I know there is ſuch a man as Smith, a ſaddler; that is the mare that was carried down to Mr. Glenton's.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

The mare was brought to me in the morning, I was walking up the ſtreet, and a man met me, and ſaid, take this to Whitechapel, and ſtay till I come, and I will give you a ſhilling.

Court. How came you then to tell this man, that you had bought her at Wiſbeach two years ago, for nine guineas?—No anſwer.

Have you any body to ſpeak for you?—No, Sir, I have no friends.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

467, WILLIAM CHESHIRE, SOLOMON LEACH and ANN STEVENSON otherwiſe LEACH were indicted for that they, on the 28th day of March laſt, one piece of falſe, feigned, and counterfeit copper money, to the likeneſs and ſimilitude of the good legal copper money of this realm, called a farthing, did make, coin and counterfeit, againſt the ſtatute.

THOMAS CARPMEAL ſworn.

Between twelve and one, I went in conſequence of an information, to Craven-hill, near Bayſwater, I got in at the back parlour, with Bowyer and Tring; I ſaw a place dug up, it was two feet deep, there were two preſſes in it, we went into the fore parlour, and there we found the two priſoners, ſitting at a table, and eating bread and cheeſe, I ſearched Cheſhire, and in his pocket I found this piece of cecil; I then went back to the hole where the two preſſes were fixed, and there by the large preſs were two dies fixed, and two farthings within the dies; they had received the impreſſion.

Court. Did you examine the farthings with the dies?—No, I did not; round the preſs were a great quantity of farthings, and in the cutting preſs was a great quantity of cecil in blanks, here are ſome of the blanks: in the place was a hat hung up, which the priſoner Cheſhire owned; the priſoners were very dirtily dreſſed, and their hands were very dirty.

Mr. Brown, Priſoner's Council. Was not this a kind of double houſe?—It is all under one roof.

Are they not two diſtinct habitations?—They communicate with each other, by a door which opens into the garden.

——— BOWYER ſworn.

I went into this houſe, I remained with the two priſoners, while the reſt went into the other houſe; I was preſent when Cheſhire owned the hat, which was in the place where the preſs was, he put it on his head: I was told a woman had been at the houſe, I went to a public houſe, and there found her, ſhe had theſe farthings upon her.

——— TRING ſworn.

I ſearched the priſoner Leach, and in his breeches pocket, I found theſe two halfpence and farthings.

(Produced.)

JOHN CLARKE ſworn.

I went to this houſe, there were two preſſes fixed, one with blanks and cecil, the other with a pair of dies; one was to cut the blanks, the other to give the impreſſion; theſe farthings were taken out of Leach's pocket, that is all I know about that part of the houſe.

Court. Is there any body that can tell that theſe preſſes had been for a certain time worked.

Carpmeal. There is no doubt, from the appearance of what lay round the preſſes, there was a candle hung under the man's hat, and there were droppings of candle greaſe under the hat; they had the appearance of juſt coming from dirty work.

——— DAVIS ſworn.

This houſe at Bayſwater belonged to me, I was preſent there when the officers came, there are two houſes which are ſeparate one from the other; the ſmall apartment conſiſting of ſix rooms; I let them to one tenant: on the 3d of February, I went into the houſe and not ſeeing any body there I went into the back apartment of the two rooms where the hole was dug, and I ſaw theſe preſſes then ſtanding: the day the officers came, I heard thumping and noiſe, about half paſt eleven, then they left off: Cheſhire had been there ever ſince before Chriſtmas; Leach and the woman I never ſaw till the Saturday before they were taken.

Mr. Franklyn, one of the moniers of the mint, proved the farthings to be counterfeits.

Court to Cheſhire. How came your hat in that hole?——I lent my hat to a man that was in the place, he ſaid, he would bring it again in two minutes; I am a ſmith.

THOMAS FLETCHER ſworn.

I live oppoſite the Old Bailey, I am a ſmith, the priſoner Cheſhire worked with me two or three times, for two or three months at a time, he is a handy fellow, I truſted him.

Court. How has your buſineſs been in general theſe laſt three months?——Very dead; I had ſeven or eight men at a time, I have ſcarcely enough for two now.

Mr. Silveſter. Did you know Cheſhire about Chriſtmas?—I was in Worceſterſhire then.

Have you heard where he was in December?——I have not, I do not know.

The priſoner Cheſhire called two witneſſes to his character; one of whom ſaid, he heard he was in trouble, on a ſuſpicion of making half-pence.

PRISONER LEACH'S DEFENCE.

My Lord, the priſoner employed me to make him ſome ſaddle nails for coach harneſſes, laſt Saturday ſe'nnight, and he gave me a ſhilling in ſilver, and ſome farthings and halfpence, the farthings they took from me, were not all alike; the woman priſoner is mywife.

WILLIAM CHESHIRE, SOLOMON LEACH, } GUILTY.

Each ſo be fined 1s. and impriſoned twelve months, in Newgate.

ANN LEACH, NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

468 JOHN ETHERTON was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Richard Lanceman, about the hour of nine in the night, in the 23d day of March laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, one feather bed, value 3s. his property.

RICHARD LANCEMAN ſworn.

I live in Roſemary-lane, the window of my houſe was open the 23d of March, between eight and nine in the evening; I was ſitting by the fire, I heard a noiſe in the chamber, I went to the back door, and ſaw a man in the ſtreet, with his face towards the window, I ſaw my window open which was faſtened before; I left a friend to watch and went up ſtairs, and he cried out, here he is! I found my drawers open and the bed and bed clothes in the front garret, rolled up in the middle of the floor; I came down, and the priſoner was in hold by my friend, I took him in doors and ſearched him, I found nothing on him: there was great appearance of his having got in at the window; he did not ſlip into the houſe, the ſtreet door was never open: there is a back door that goes into Saltpetre-bank, I cannot ſay, whether that was open or ſhut in the day time.

CHRISTOPHER TUCKER ſworn.

I ſtood to watch the window, and I ſaw the priſoner put out his leg, to come out of the window, he dropped, and I ſecured him.

Priſoner. I never was in the houſe, I was coming by; I never was a thief.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing, but not of the burglary.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr Baron EYRE.

---

469. JOHN BANDEBUS and JOHN COX were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 7th day of April, one gown, value 6s. the property of John Bartlett.

BOTH GUILTY.

Privately whipped.

470. JOHN

470. JOHN ASQUITH otherwiſe GILLET was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 20th day of March laſt, one cuſhion made of woollen cloth and canvas ſtuffed with feathers, value 9s. the property of John Hughes and Stephen Brunſdon.

JOHN HUGHES ſworn.

I live in Groſvenor Mews, my partner's name is Stephen Brunſdon, the chair belongs to us both. on the 20th of March, between ſeven and nine in the evening, we loſt a cuſhion belonging to our chair, it was taken out of the chair; I ſaw it a little after ſeven, it was afterwards found by Mr. Ryland, it is here now.

(Produced and depoſed to.)

—— RYLAND ſworn.

On the 20th of March, between eight and nine, I took this cuſhion from the priſoner, in Fleet-lane, he had it under his arm, I took him into cuſtody, he ſaid, he bought it, and gave two ſhillings for it; I did not aſk him of whom.

Priſoner. Did not I tell you it was a pillow?——He did.

Priſoner. I thought it was a pillow.

Court to Proſecutor. How near is that to where your chair was?——Near two miles.

SAMUEL ROBERTS ſworn.

I have had it in my cuſtody ever ſince, I am a conſtable, it was delivered to me at the watch-houſe, and there the priſoner ſaid, he gave two ſhillings for it; when I came to turn it down, I ſaw written upon it, Sir Henry Bridgman, then I ſuſpected it had been ſtolen from ſome chair.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I had been up to Piccadilly in the evening about eight, to a ſon I have apprentice there; I met one Joſeph Harriſon, who is a waiter at Vauxhall, where I wait for the Summer ſeaſon; I have been out of buſineſs ſince the beginning of December, I have a family of ſix children, and I told him I was in diſtreſs, and obliged to make away with the neceſſaries I had, and I begged him to give me any relief, if he was in buſineſs; he had that cuſhion, as it now appears to be, under his arm, we came together as far as Temple-bar, then he ſaid, he was going to call of an acquaintance, a waiter ſomewhere near Butcher-row, and deſired me to wait for him at a public houſe in Fleet-lane, and if he ſucceeded, he would lend me a ſhilling or two, when the man ſtopped me, I was ſtanding looking about for the houſe, and I did not know what I had till it was opened at the watch-houſe, I gave Ryland directions where to go.

Mr. Ryland. He gave me directions to this man, and I went there, but could not find any ſuch perſon.

ANTHONY MUSSARD ſworn.

I am a broker, I know the priſoner two years, he ſerved me in my ſhop, after he had done in the ſhop, he uſed to go to be waiter at Vauxhall and Bagnigge-wells I truſted him, and he always behaved very well to me.

ANN CLARK ſworn.

I have known him thirty-two years, when he was a child, he is about thirty-five years old, he was in the woollen manufactory, but when Fordyce failed, he owed him ſeven hundred pounds, that was the downfall of him; I uſed to go to ſee them when they lived in ſplendor; and he came to me, and told me that the American affairs hurt him, his buſineſs being dead; I can ſay no more, he had always a good character; he has dealt for thouſands of pounds; there were gentlemen on Saturday who waited till ten, but they could not come to-day to ſpeak for him.

BELLA HIGHLAND ſworn.

I have known the priſoner eight years, a very honeſt man in every thing; we employed him in the coal-way, he always brought change very honeſt and juſt; my huſband would have been here, but he could not come; he was very much reduced duced when we employed him; he has now a wife, and ſix children, in the workhouſe, in very great diſtreſs.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

471. SAMUEL DUNBAR was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 20th day of February laſt, two heads of raw hair, value 5s. the property of Thomas Rowney.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

472. WILLIAM BROWN (aged fourteen) was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 26th of March laſt, one pair of ſtockings made of ſilk and worſted mixed, value 5s. one pair of ſilk and cotton, value 5s. three pair of mixed cotton, value 10s. and one ſtocking, value 2s. 6d. the property of John Butler.

JOHN ROGERS ſworn.

On Saturday the 26th of March, between ſeven and eight in the morning, the priſoner came into Mr. Butler's ſhop and aſked for a half-pennyworth of worſtead, and gave me a ſhilling to change; and then aſked me what a pair of ſtockings would come to that would fit him; I told him a pair of wove hoſe would coſt twenty-pence; I ſhewed him ſome; he ſaid they were too narrow ribbed; then I ſhewed him a ſecond parcel, and he ſaid, they were too large ſtockings; I went to the bottom of the ſhop, and as I returned, I thought his apron looked rather bigger than it was; I aſked him to let me look at his leg, and when he held out his leg, I looked over the compter, and ſaw the top of one of the blue and white random cotton ſtockings under his apron; I laid down the parcels, and was coming from behind to ſhut the door; he immediately ſeeing that ran out of the ſhop as faſt as he could; I followed him, and cried ſtop him! ſtop him! he was ſtopped in my ſight, he was not out of my ſight hardly; he dropped the ſtockings in three different places; I ſaw him drop them all; he was the ſame boy, I have no doubt; I took the ſtockings home, and put them in this paper; and I have kept them in my own poſſeſſion ever ſince.

(The ſtockings produced and depoſed to.)

EDWARD JOLLY ſworn.

I was coming by Biſhopſgate church, and I heard the cry of ſtop him! I let the boy go by; I turned round and ſaw him throw down ſome ſtockings; then I returned after him, and when I got to the corner of the church-yard, I ſaw him throw down ſome more; another man croſſed to him, and ſtopped him; he was out of my ſight, juſt turning off the ſtone the corner of the church-yard.

The priſoner called four witneſſes who gave him a very good character.

GUILTY.

To be twice whipped.

He was humbly recommended to mercy by the Proſecutor and Jury.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 6th of APRIL 1785, and the following Days;

Being the FOURTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER IV. PART V.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

473. WILLIAM BOLTON, otherwiſe RICHARD BOLTON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 1ſt day of March laſt, twenty-ſix pounds of butter, value 12s. and one wooden caſk, value 4d. the property of William Brown.

The priſoner was taken with the butter on his back.

GUILTY.

To be whipped and confined twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

474. GEORGE WARD and THOMAS CONNOR were indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Alice, wife of Thomas Weldon, on the 4th of April, on the King's highway, and putting her in corporal fear and danger of her life, and feloniouſly taking from her perſon, and againſt her will, one pair of linen ſheets, value 10s. eleven linen napkins, value 11s. one table cloth, value 3s. a Marſeilles petticoat, value 2s. a dimity petticoat, value 2s. a flannel petticoat, value 1s. a dimity petticoat, value 1s. two frocks, value 2s. four ſhifts, value 6s. ſix cambrick handkerchiefs, value 6s. two pair of pockets, value 6d. eighteen towels, value 9s. one apron, value 6d. and one pair of cotton ſtockings, value 6d. the property of George Franklin, Eſq.

ALICE WELDON ſworn.

I was robbed between eight and nine, on laſt Monday night; I was ſtanding with my baſket of clothes waiting for a perſon, and the two priſoners came up to me, and Connor demanded my baſket; I told him no; he put his hand upon my baſket, and aſked me to deliver it.

Court. Tell me exactly what he ſaid? ——He ſaid to me, deliver the baſket, that was all; I told him no, I would not part with my baſket, it did not belong to me; with that the other priſoner, Ward, ſtruck me down, and the other priſoner ran away with my baſket; I ſcreamed out murder! ſtop thief! I kept crying ſtill the ſame, and I ran after Connor, and the priſoner Ward followed me, he ſwore a blaſphemous oath, and ſaid, you bitch, I will ſoon ſtop you from following him; he catched me by the throat, and attempted to throttle me; I got his hand from my throat, and then he gave me another knock, and knocked me down under a coach wheel, and then he left me; the other man was caught with the linen, and brought to me in five minutes after.

ed

Did you know theſe people before?——No.

What opportunity had you to obſerve them;——They ſtopped ſeveral minutes, and I looked very hard at them; they ſtood within a yard of me, they ſtood cloſe by me; I ſaid nothing more than what I have told you; they ſtood the ſpace of three minutes.

What light had you to ſee them by?—The corner lamp.

Can you ſwear you had an opportunity of obſerving them, ſo as to know them again?——Yes, I can ſwear it.

Are you very ſure of them both?—Yes, I am very ſure of them both.

When was Ward taken?——Not till the other was at the watch-houſe.

How long after?——It might be the value of ten minutes.

In whoſe poſſeſſion has the linen been ſince?——In the poſſeſſion of Margaret Innis.

Who delivered them to her?——One Mr. Franklin.

Priſoner Ward. That woman has ſworn very falſe in what ſhe has ſaid, therefore let them be examined one by one.

MARGARET INNIS ſworn.

About eight in the evening, I went to the houſe of Mr. Franklin, where I received that linen in the indictment, from the houſekeeper, I gave it to Mrs. Weldon; I had to call at a gentleman's houſe in Portman-ſquare; and told her either to ſtop at a corner of a ſtreet, or to go home to my houſe; when I came back to the corner of the place ſhe was gone, I went ſtraight home, and before I got home, a gentleman came to me to come to Mary-le-bon watch-houſe, for the woman was knocked down and robbed, but ſhe was taken there, and the linen and all was ſafe; I went there that night between nine and ten, and ſaw the linen; I ſaw no perſons in cuſtody that night; I was told to go there at ten in the morning; then I went to the office in Litchfield-ſtreet, there I ſwore to the property, and it was delivered to me at Litchfield-ſtreet; I took home the linen; it has been in my poſſeſſion till I brought it here; this is the ſame that was delivered to me at the office; it is the property of Mr. Franklin.

(The linen produced and depoſed to.)

RICHARD BARON ſworn.

My brother lives at Lord Foley's, I had been to Seymour Mews, and I heard a woman crying out murder! ſtop thief! and I went up, and I ſaw the priſoner Ward in the light colour coat knock this woman down; and the other priſoner was running in the ſtreet with a baſket of linen in his arms; I caught hold of the flap of his coat, and I fell down, and another young man that is here, came and caught him, and he flung down the baſket of linen; and that young man, when he ſaw he was near being taken, he ran into Mary-le-bon lane, and another young man ſtopped him.

Was he never out of your ſight after he dropped the baſket?——No, he was not, I was within a yard of him all the way he went; the other priſoner, Ward, came up, and ſaid to the man that caught him, what are you going to do to him? and he called him a raſcal, and ſaid, why do not you take him to the Juſtice's, and he ſtruck him; and Ward came up to the watch-houſe, and he was very buſy there, and ſaid, they had no buſineſs to uſe him ſo, and damned his eyes, and ſaid why did not they carry him there; he ſtood at the door, ſaying a good deal to ſeveral people, and a man was ſaying to him, what buſineſs have you to buſy yourſelf with it? and I came up and ſaid, this is the man that I ſaw knock the woman down; ſo then he was taken.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner Ward's Counſel. At what time did the priſoner Ward come up?——As ſoon as ever we laid hold of him, it might be ten minutes.

What did Ward ſay when he came up?—He damned him, and ſaid he had no buſineſs to ſtrike him.

What

What did Ward ſay when he was taken?—I do not know.

Did he attempt to eſcape?——No, not in the leaſt.

THOMAS SWENDELL ſworn.

I was coming from Portman-ſquare, towards Cavendiſh-ſquare; I heard the cry of ſtop thief! and I ſaw a man running with a baſket towards us, and Richard James that was with me catched at the baſket, and he flung it down, and we gave it to the woman; I did not ſee him taken.

Should you know the perſon that you ſaw throw down the baſket?——Yes.

Is he in court now?—That is the man, the ſhorteſt of the two.

Are you ſure of it?——Yes, Richard James that was with me picked up the baſket, this all that I know.

RICHARD JAMES ſworn.

As I was coming from Portman-ſquare to Cavendiſh-ſquare, as I paſſed Mary-le-bon lane, in Wigmore-ſtreet, I heard the noiſe of halloo! and ſtop thief! I croſſed the way, and met Connor with the baſket of linen, I tried to catch him, and he made a ſhift, and he threw it down, I immediately gave it to Weldon, and when I had ſo done, ſhe ſaid, my cloak lays under the wheel; there was a carriage juſt by, I gave it to her; as ſoon as ever the man dropped the baſket he ran off; I did not ſee him taken; the priſoner Connor is the man that dropped the baſket; then a perſon ſaid he was taken; then I went to ſee him, and it was the ſame man, they ſaid they would take him to the watch-houſe; I ſaid no, bring him to the woman.

HARRIOT SPENCER ſworn.

I was out a little after eight, and coming along Wigmore-ſtreet, I heard a woman crying out murder! I looked on the other ſide of the way, and I ſaw a man running with a baſket, and he croſſed the way, I ſaw the man throw down the baſket, I did not ſee him taken.

Should you know the man again, whom you ſaw with the baſket?——Yes, I knew him when I ſaw him in the watch-houſe.

Is he here now?—Yes, the man in the brown coat, Connor.

THOMAS DAVIS ſworn.

I was coming along Wigmore-ſtreet on this night, and croſſing Welbeck-ſtreet, the two priſoners came down Welbeck-ſtreet, and the woman with the clothes was ſtanding by the ſide of the rails, and as they came to the woman, they made a full ſtop, and let me come by; I paſſed them; when I came to Mary-le-bon-lane, I heard a cry, and there was a coach coming along which drowned the noiſe, I heard the cry again, I run acroſs, and Connor came running down down on the other ſide of the way, I ſtruck at him, he run as far as Marybone-lane, and ſtruck againſt a butcher's ſhop, and I caught him in my arms, tumbling in the kennel; I ſaw him do nothing, I am poſitive he was one of the perſons that I ſaw near the woman.

PRISONER WARD's DEFENCE.

There is a gentleman come to the bail-dock, and he ſaid, he was there at the firſt beginning and there at the end of it, and it is a pity that innocence ſhould ſuffer; he ſays, his name is William Lare.

Mr. Peatt. Do you wiſh to have him called?—Yes.

WILLIAM LARE ſworn.

I am a journeyman plaiſterer; between the hours of ſeven and eight on Monday night, I was coming from Well-ſtreet, with a pot of colour in one hand, and ſome oil in the other, I ſaw a woman ſitting upon a baſket of clothes, and I heard the cry of ſtop thief! and I went and ſaw a man kicking and ſtruggling on the ground, I gave him two or three good kicks, I came up to a man in a darkiſh dreſs, and there was a man holding him, and he was looking at him, they took up the man and brought him to the women, with the clothes and they ordered the people to clear the way, and ſhe ſaid, ſhe was knocked down by a man in a white coat, and the woman ſaid, that man was not there.

Who was that man in the darkiſh dreſs? ——I cannot tell, ſhe ſaid, the man in the darkiſh dreſs was the man that took the bundle, and the man in the whitiſh coat, was the man that knocked her down; there were ſeveral people ſhewn her, ſhe ſaid the man was not there, but the priſoner Ward was there the lateſt of the two.

Court. Did ſhe ſee the two priſoners? ——No, ſhe ſaw one of them.

Did ſhe ſee either of the priſoners?—I do not know that ſhe did.

But you ſay Ward was there, you ſaid juſt now, that the talleſt of the two was there?—Yes.

Court. Did ſhe look at either of the priſoners?—Yes.

Priſoner Connor. I have nothing to ſay, I have no witneſſes.

BOTH GUILTY Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

475. THOMAS BATEMAN otherwiſe PARKER was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Hannah Smith, ſpinſter, on the 4th of April, on the King's highway, and putting her in corporal fear and danger of her life, and taking from her perſon and againſt her will, one miniature picture with plaited hair, ſet in gold, value 10s. her property.

(The witneſſes examined apart.)

HANNAH SMITH ſworn.

I live in Fleet-ſtreet, I was robbed on Monday the 4th of April, about nine in the evening, about thirty yards below Johnſon's-court, to the beſt of my knowledge.

Where was you going?——To Fleet-market.

Which ſide of the way is Johnſon's-court?—The Shoe-lane ſide, I was walking down, and the priſoner and another young man taller than himſelf, ſtopped me; they rather paſt on about three yards behind me, and caught hold of me, and this priſoner took hold of my locket, which I had round my neck, and held it while the other attempted to cut my cloak off, I caught hold of his collar and held him, this picture hung in a locket to my neck, the ſtring of the locket was broke, and he held the locket in his hand; I held him by the collar with one hand, and the ſtring that hung to the locket by the other; I cried murder! ſtop thief! and about ſeven yards behind me, the conſtable got hold of him; I never looſed him out of my hand till the conſtable had him, and he was taken to the Compter; I kept the locket in my poſſeſſion till the morning, and the conſtable has had it in his poſſeſſion ever ſince.

What kind of a locket was it?—It was a miniature picture ſet in gold, a gentleman's picture with plaited hair at the back.

Who do you live with in Fleet-ſtreet?—I lodge in Johnſon's-court.

Had you any converſation with theſe two young men?——I never ſpoke a word to them, till they were taken; I did not know them before.

Who do you lodge with in Johnſon's-court?——One Mrs. Parker, at No. 2, ſhe is a mantua-maker, I am a mantua-maker.

Do you work at your buſineſs?—Yes.

What was you going for?—I was going to buy ſome fiſh for ſupper.

How long had you been out?—I came directly from the place where I lodge to the market.

Had you ſpoke to any body before?—— No, I never ſtopped nor ſpoke to any body.

Did they ſay nothing to you?—Nothing at all.

Priſoner. Sir, this woman that ſhe talks of, keeps a houſe for theſe ſort of girls to be in, an houſe of ill fame.

Court to Proſecutrix. How many people are there that lodge in the houſe beſides you?—There is a married lady lives in the houſe, and the landlady, and myſelf, nobody elſe, and ſhe is a married woman, and her huſband follows his buſineſs.

WILLIAM FORSYTH ſworn.

I am an officer, I remember an out-cry on Monday night, I was in Fleet-ſtreet, I am one of the City patrols, between nine and ten, coming down Fleet-ſtreet, I ſaw the priſoner at the bar go up to this young woman, and ſnatched a gold picture from off her neck, he made two or three pulls at it, and before he got it off, ſhe cried out murder! There was another in company with him, and the ſame time I ran up and ſeized the priſoner, he opened his hand, and the proſecutrix took the picture out, and one of them ſtruck her on the breaſt; as ſoon as I took the priſoner in cuſtody, the other made his eſcape, I took the priſoner to the Compter, and deſired the young lady to give me her addreſs; ſhe was ſcarce able to walk at the time, and two gentlemen aſſiſted her; here is the picture, I ſaw him ſnatch it.

(The locket ſhewn to the proſecutrix and depoſed to)

Priſoner. Pleaſe to aſk her, whether ſhe is not a common ſtreet walker.

Court. If ſhe was you have no right to rob her.

Court to Forſyth. Do you know the young woman?—I cannot ſay I do, I have ſeen her in the city or Norwich, but I have not ſeen her for three years.

Is ſhe a perſon of character or no?——I cannot ſay.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going down Fleet-ſtreet with a young man, I ſell greens and potatoes with a jack-aſs, as I was coming home walking down Fleet-ſtreet towards the market, this young woman immediately ran after me, ſhe was talking to this gentleman, ſhe immediately ran after me, ſays ſhe, this is the perſon that robbed me; and this gentleman took me, I had a perſon here, but I do not ſee him now, his name is Badcock, a leather-cutter, the corner of Weſtmoreland-buildings; when I was in the Compter, a perſon came and ſaid, that woman had ſerved him ſo, and the conſtable had ſerved him with a warrant, that he ſhould not appear.

Forſyth. His name is Simons, the warrant has been out againſt him this month, I do not know who he is, I imagine he was the ſame man that was with this priſoner.

Do you know any thing of this woman having ſerved him ſo?—No.

Priſoner. This man promiſed to come and appear for me, ſhe ſwore he drew a bayonet upon her, and would take her life away.

Court to Proſecutrix. Do you know any thing of this?——It is a thing that does not concern me at all, it is a young man that gave this gentleman the warrant, it was ſome time ago he met this young man, whoſe name is William Denniſon, and beat him, he was going home to the other end of the town.

Court to Proſecutrix. Did you ever charge that man with meddling with your locket? No, my Lord, I never did, he went to Guildhall to ſpeak for the priſoner, and he was taken into cuſtody.

What was he to have ſaid for this young man?——Whatever he thought proper I ſuppoſe.

Upon your oath, did you ever charge that man with having taken your locket, or attempting to take your locket?——On my oath I never did attempt to charge him with it.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

476. WILLIAM BAKER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 14th day of March laſt, twenty five calf ſkins, tanned, value 40s. the property of Lawrence Veiffiere and John Oſborn.

The priſoner and another man were taken in Duke's-place, with the ſkins, they were were offering them to ſale; the other man eſcaped.

GUILTY.

To be whipped and confined twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

477. SAMUEL HOLT was indicted for that he, on the 22d of November laſt, feloniouſly did receive twelve deal boards, of the thickneſs of two inches, and the length of ten feet each, value 20s. the property of Joſeph Waring; whereof Richard Gardener was at the laſt aſſizes for Surry, tried and convicted of ſtealing, knowing them to be ſtolen.

(The caſe opened by Mr. Garrow.)

(Mr. Silveſter, and Mr. Fielding, Council for the Priſoner.)

SAMUEL WELCH ſworn.

This is a copy of the record of the conviction of Richard Gardner, I examined it with the record, it is a correct copy.

(Read and examined by Mr. Silveſter and Mr. Fielding.)

Mr. Fielding. Your Lordſhip will order the accomplice to be ſent out of Court.

JOSEPH WARING ſworn.

I am a timber merchant, I loſt ſome deals, there are marks on the edges to diſtinguiſh the Dram deals from other deals; Dram is a port in Norway; in conſequence of an information from Marlow, I went to Chelſea, about the middle of December, they were loſt about the latter end of October, I miſſed them before I went to the priſoner's, and I found ſuch deals that I had not the leaſt doubt they were my property; they were in a ſhed that the priſoner's wife told me belonged to the priſoner, I applied to the priſoner's houſe for ſuch deals.

Court. How many deals did you find?——I did not count them, but there were I ſuppoſe ten or a dozen, that was about the number I loſt; I am ſure there was not more than what I loſt, they were two inch yellow deals, called Dram deals; I think they are the ſame deals from the freſhneſs of the deals in the firſt place, I am confident they have not been piled; deals that have been piled acroſs each others, contract a mark, they had the Dram mark on the edge, and they were yellow deals, which is another particular circumſtance, I and not only yellow deals, but of that quality of yellow deals which is very remarkable; there are what we term beſt deals and laſt deals, theſe appear to me to be laſt deals.

Court. What is the ſpecific difference between beſt and laſt?—The beſt has more of the heart of the wood, the laſt are more diſcoloured with the ſap; I knew I had loſt ſome deals, from a circumſtance that we always make our obſervations upon, when a barge has lain at a wharf two or three days, the deals get a different complection, the top deals have a very different complection from thoſe that immediately follow them, and the morning following the night the deals were taken out, there was the appearance of quite a difference in the barge, which ſhewed there muſt have been deals upon them the day preceding.

Mr. Garrow. Were thoſe that were miſſing, taken up from the whole face of the barge, or taken from the top?——Taken from the whole face.

What was the value of thoſe deals you found at the priſoner's?——I ſuppoſe a guinea.

How much apiece?——I value them at eighteen pence each.

Court. Are you the importer?——No, we buy of an agent, there are agents employed to ſell to the yard keepers.

What was the priſoner, a carpenter?—No, he cuts up fire wood, and theſe were too good for that; the priſoner keeps a coal ſhed, and ſells fire wood, and keeps a chandler's chandler's ſhop, he is an entire ſtranger to me, I never ſaw him till he appeared at Juſtice Hyde's.

To a carpenter at his ſhop, laid into him, what would the worth of theſe deals be?—At leaſt a guinea, towards two ſhillings apiece.

Mr. Silveſter. You are not the importer then of theſe deals?——I am not, they are imported from Dram.

What quantity of deals are imported from Dram, you do not know?——That is impoſſible to ſay, without we were to look at the entries at the Cuſtom-houſe.

Therefore it is impoſſible for you to ſay what quantities come into this kingdom?—Yes.

Moſt of your deals, I believe, do come from Norway?—Yes.

They are not all aſſigned to you?——O dear! no.

Upon theſe deals there was no mark of yours?——No, only the mark of Dram, I cannot tell what quantity of thoſe deals were on the river at that time, thoſe that I loſt were on board a barge, I had the care of them, the ſhip's crew loaded them.

When did you ſee the barge with deals upon it firſt?—Several times, it lay ſeveral days, I cannot tell when I firſt ſaw it, I remember the circumſtance of loſing the deals.

Are thoſe the deals that Gardner was convicted of ſtealing?—Yes.

Mr. Silveſter. Have you them here?——No.

Nor an end of one?—No; what I ſaw, I left there, I did not attempt to remove them.

Court. Did Gardener plead guilty?—No.

Mr. Silveſter. None were produced at Kingſton?—No.

There was a confeſſion of Gardner's?—Yes.

EDWARD MARLOW ſworn.

Mr. Silveſter. Have you not been tried before?——No, I know Gardner, and I know the priſoner, I believe it was about the firſt of laſt November, there were four of us, William Ellington, Richard Gardner, William Brown, and myſelf, we rowed away with one of the waterman's boats from the Ferry at Chelſea about eleven at night, we rowed down to Mr. Waring's wharf, at Lambeth Marſh, I know it is his, becauſe I have been there ſince, in company with Mr. Waring, we ſaw a barge loaded with deals, we went there and handed out eleven deals, we lifted them up to the boat, and rowed away to Mr. Holt's yard; we left them in the yard till next morning, and the next morning I ſaw the priſoner about ſeven in the morning in the ſhed, I aſked him if he would have ſuch a thing as ſome deals, he ſaid, yes, he wanted ſome, ſo he aſked me what they were apiece, ſays I, you know as well as I do, ſays he, here are ſeveral that I had for nine pence apiece, ſo then ſays I, I muſt have the ſame I ſuppoſe, ſo I went up with him to his houſe, and he looked out nine ſhillings, ſix ſhillings in ſilver, and three ſhillings in halfpence, and gave me them for the deals; ſometime after this I told this ſtory to Mr. Collinſon, and he carried me to Mr. Waring, I went to Mr. Holt's afterwards, and ſaw ſome of the ſame deals that I carried from the wharf there, I am ſure they were the ſame.

Did any other converſation paſs between you and the priſoner about deals?——No, Sir, I had no other converſation with him.

Mr. Fielding. Theſe deals were left in the priſoner's yard firſt, without his knowing any thing about the matter?—Yes.

Then he aſked you what theſe deals were worth?——He uſed to have them very often.

Did not you live with Mr. Holt?—No.

Did not you work with him?—A little.

How long?—I believe a week at times.

How came you to part with him?—Becauſe he had no more work for me to do.

Did not he diſcharge you, having objections to ſomething you had done?—No.

Was not he obliged to take you up with a warrant, and carry you before a Magiſtrate?—That was afterwards.

How did that affair end?——I ſerved a warrant upon this gentleman here, Mr. Holt,

Holt, and he ſerved one on me, and ſo we ſettled the matter.

Who is this Mr. Collinſon you have mentioned?——A gentleman that lives at Chelſea.

How came you to apply to Mr. Collinſon?—Becauſe that there day, as Mr. Holt and I had a few words, it was mentioned concerning theſe deals; Collinſon was at the ſign of the flaſk, he is a maſter tradeſman at Chelſea, a vinegar merchant I believe.

How came you to apply to Mr. Waring?—I went with Mr. Collinſon, becauſe I was afraid that there would be ſome noiſe about the deals; I had left off thieving with them.

How many thefts have you been concerned in with them?——I do not know rightly.

You never was tried?—No.

You gave evidence did not you?—Yes.

What is Collinſon to give you?——Nothing.

Has not he promiſed you ſomething?—No.

Did Currie offer you anything?—Never.

Had you any converſation with any other gentleman reſpecting this buſineſs?—No.

Did you ever tell Mr. Roſe, or Mr. Gardner, or Mr. Faulkner, or Mr. Groves?—No.

Did not you tell them you ſhould never have thought of this, if you had not been urged to it?——I never ſaid ſo to either of theſe gentlemen in my life, nor anything leading towards it.

Mr. Garrow. Theſe perſons I believe came to you in the gaol?—Yes.

One of them is the brother of that Gardner that was convicted?—Yes.

They were all examined at Kingſton were not they?—Yes.

Court to Priſoner. Now Sir, do you leave your defence to your council, or do you deſire to ſpeak your ſelf to the Jury.

Priſoner. I leave my defence to my council and your Lordſhip.

Mr. Silveſter objected that the property was not produced.

Court. Property is never neceſſary to be produced, it is always convenient by way of aſcertaining the property, and the beſt means of aſcertaining it very often is by producing it in open Court; there is no technical rule that requires the production, the queſtion will be, whether the Jury are ſatisfied, that theſe deals were Mr. Waring's property; there is no technical neceſſity for the production of the property.

Mr. Silveſter. My Lord, it is incumbent upon the proſecutor always to give the beſt evidence he can.

Court. Certainly, but with reſpect to property, ſometimes it is ſo dirty it cannot be produced.

Mr. Garrow. It happens every day my Lord, for inſtance, a horſe or a cow, they do not bring them into Court.

JOHN CARTER ſworn.

I am a maſon, I live at Chelſea, and am a near neighbour to Mr. Holt, he keeps a chandler's ſhop, and is a coal merchant; I have known him four or five years, I never heard any thing againſt him, he is a houſe keeper.

Mr. Garrow. Did you know the priſoner, when he had an appointment in the Cuſtom Houſe?—I cannot ſay I did.

Is he a timber merchant?——I ſuppoſe he ſells ſome little trifle to light fires with.

THOMAS TAYLOR ſworn.

I am a carpenter, and live at Chelſea, about one hundred yards from the priſoner, I have known him four or five years; he has a very good character as far as I have heard.

Mr. Garrow. Perhaps as you are a carpenter, if you have an opportunity you purchaſe deals of him?——Never in my life.

Does he deal in them?——Not as I heard.

Cannot you put deal planks to a better uſe, than cutting them up for fire wood?—

I do not know, that is according to the quality.

Mr. Silveſter. No perſon in the world can ſwear to deals?—No.

——— RENNEY ſworn.

I live in Litchfield-ſtreet, St. Ann's, Soho; I have known him upwards of twenty-five years, I can give him the beſt of characters, I knew him when he lived with the Princeſs Dowager of Wales, as chairman; he has a penſion of forty pounds a year, General Maitland can give him a good character, I always knew him to be an honeſt man, here is a letter from General Maitland to ſhew his character.

Court. That cannot be admitted.

WILLIAM ROBERTS ſworn.

I live at Kenſington, I have known him ten years, I have been in company with him ſeveral times, his general character has been very good, a very honeſt man as ever I heard of.

RICHARD HUGHES ſworn.

I live in King-ſtreet, Holborn, have known him four or five years, he bears a very good character.

JOHN BEACH ſworn.

I am a coal merchant, at Chelſea, I have ſerved him ever ſince he has dealt in coals; I have known him near five years, I never heard any thing amiſs of him, till this affair now before you; he always paid me very well; he is a man of credit, and honor, and of a general good character.

RICHARD MURREL ſworn.

I have lived at Chelſea near five years, I have known him that time, an honeſt induſtrious man, his general charcter, to my knowledge, has been generally good.

——— MUNDAY ſworn.

I have know him about five years, and ſerved him with beer, I never knew any reproach in his character, except a few diſputes.

WILLIAM SMEYD ſworn.

I live at Chelſea, I am of no buſineſs, I have known him five years, or rather more, I never heard but he was an honeſt fair dealing man.

CAPTAIN READ ſworn.

I have known him between four and five years, I knew nothing amiſs of him; I am overſeer of the poor this laſt year, and we employed him to ſerve the work-houſe, he ſerved us very well.

Court to Priſoner. You have a very good character, a great number of people appear for you, do you give the Jury no ſatisfaction how you came by theſe deals?

Priſoner. My Lord, I have none to offer now, I know it is a ſpiteful proſecution, by Collinſon, Currie, and another, they have ſought out this wicked fellow that lives by thieving.

Court to Proſecutor. Whereabouts was it you found theſe deals, in Holt's ſhed?—I went to his houſe, and found his wife; his premiſes conſiſt of a ſmall houſe, this ſhed is detached from the houſe, it is the ſame ſide of the way, to the beſt of my recollection; there are other houſes, but the key I had delivered me by the woman, who ſtiles herſelf his wife, and there we found theſe deals, and others more valuable, and coals.

